

In the beginning, God created the heavens and the earth.
And the earth was formless and empty, and darkness was over the face of the deep, and the Spirit of God was hovering over the waters.
And God said, "Let there be light," and there was light.
And God saw that the light was good; and God separated the light from the darkness.
And God called the light Day, and the darkness Night. And there was evening, and there was morning—the first day.
Then God said, "Let there be an expanse in the midst of the waters, and let it separate the waters from the waters."
So God made the expanse, and separated the waters that were under the expanse from those that were above the expanse, and it was so.
And God called the expanse Heaven. And there was evening, and there was morning, the second day.
Then God said, "Let the waters under the heavens be gathered together into one place, and let the dry land appear." And it was so.
And God called the dry land Earth, and the gathering of the waters he called Seas; and God saw that it was good.
Then God said, "Let the earth send forth its shoot, plants yielding seed, and fruit trees bearing fruit according to their kinds, in which is their seed, on the earth." And it was so.
So the earth brought forth its shoot, [namely] grass bearing seed according to its kind, and trees bearing fruit, which had their seed in themselves, according to their kind; and God saw that it was good.
And so it was evening, and so it was morning; [this was] the third day.
Then God said, "Let there be lights in the expanse of the heavens to separate the night from the day, and let them serve as signs for seasons, and for days, and for years;
And that they may be for lights in the expanse of the heavens, to give light on the earth; and it was so.
So God made two great lights, the greater light to rule the day, and the lesser light to rule the night; [he made] also the stars.
And God placed them in the expanse of the heavens to give light on the earth, And to have dominion over the day and over the night, and to separate the light from the darkness; and God saw that it was good.
And so it was evening, and so it was morning; [this was] the fourth day.
Then God said, "Let the waters swarm with living creatures, and let birds fly above the earth across the expanse of the heavens."
So God created the great whales and every moving animal, with which the waters swarmed, according to their kinds; [he created] also every winged bird, according to its kind; and God saw that it was good.
And God blessed them, saying, "Be fruitful and multiply, and fill the waters in the seas, and let birds multiply on the earth."
And there was evening, and there was morning; [it was] the fifth day.
Then God said, "Let the earth bring forth animals according to their kinds: livestock, creeping things, and beasts of the earth according to their kinds." And it was so.
So God made the beasts of the earth according to their kinds, and the livestock according to their kinds, and the creeping things of the earth according to their kinds; and God saw that it was good.
Then God said, "Let us make mankind in our image, in our likeness, so that they may rule over the fish in the sea and the birds in the sky, over the livestock and all the wild animals, and over every creeping thing that creeps on the earth."
So God created man in his own image, in the image of God he created them; male and female he created them.
And God blessed them, and said unto them, Be fruitful, and multiply, and fill the earth; and subdue it, and have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the birds of the heavens, and over every beast which creepeth upon the earth.

And God said, "Behold, I have given you every herb yielding seed which is upon all the earth, and every tree which has in itself the fruit of a tree yielding seed, [and they] shall be for you food.

But [I gave] to all the beasts of the earth, and to all the birds of the air, and to everything that creeps on the earth, having life in itself, every green herb to eat; and it was so.

And God saw all that he had made, and behold, he was very good; and there was evening, and there was morning, the sixth day.

So the heavens and the earth were completed, with all their host.

And God had finished on the seventh day his work that he had done, and he rested on the seventh day from all his work that he had done.

And God blessed the seventh day and made it holy, because on it he rested from all his work that he had created to be done.

These are the origins of the heavens and the earth when they were created; when the Lord God made the earth and the heavens,

And all the plants of the field, before they were in the earth, and all the herbs of the field, before they sprouted; for the Lord God had not caused it to rain on the earth, and there was no man to till the earth.

And no vapor rose from the earth to water the whole surface of the earth.

Now the Lord God had formed man from the dust of the ground, and had breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man was made a living soul.

So the Lord God had planted a garden in Eden, in the east, and there he put the man he had formed.

And the Lord God made to grow out of the earth every tree that was pleasing to the eye and good for food, and the tree of life in the middle of the garden, and the tree of the knowledge of good and evil.

And a river flowed out of Eden to water the garden; and from there it divided into four branches.

The name of the first is Pison; it is the river which flows winding through all the land of Havilah, where there is gold.

And the gold of that country is good; bdellion and onyx stone are also found there.

And the name of the second river is Gihon; it is the one that flows winding through the whole land of Cush.

And the name of the third river is the Hiddekel, which flows towards Assyria; and the fourth river is the Euphrates.

The Lord God took the man and put him in the garden of Eden to work it and take care of it.

Then the Lord God commanded the man, saying, "You may freely eat from every tree of the garden."

But as for the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, you shall not eat of it; for in the day that you eat of it you shall surely die.

But the Lord God had said: It is not good for the man to be alone; I will make a helper suitable for him.

For the Lord God had formed out of the earth all the beasts of the field and all the birds of the heavens, and brought them to Adam to see what he would name them; and whatever Adam called each animal, that was its name.

And Adam gave names to all the cattle, and to the birds of the air, and to all the beasts of the field, but no helper was found for Adam, who was like him.

And the Lord God caused a deep sleep to fall upon Adam, and he slept; and [God] took one of his ribs, and tightened the flesh in the place [of that rib].

And the Lord God made a woman from the rib he had taken out of Adam, and brought her to Adam.

Then Adam said, "This is now bone of my bones and flesh of my flesh; she shall be called 'woman,' because she was taken out of man."

That is why a man shall leave his father and his mother, and shall be joined to his wife, and they shall be one flesh.

Now Adam and his wife were both naked, and they were not ashamed.

Now the serpent was the most crafty of all the wild animals the Lord God had made. He said to the woman, "What! Did God say, 'You shall not eat from any tree in the garden'?"

And the woman answered the serpent, "We eat fruit from the trees in the garden; But as for the fruit of the tree which is in the middle of the garden, God said: You shall not eat of it, nor shall you touch it, lest you die.

Then the serpent said to the woman: You will not certainly die;

But God knows that on the day you eat of it your eyes will be opened, and you will be like God, knowing good and evil.

So the woman, seeing that the fruit of the tree was good for food and pleasing to the eye, and also desirable for gaining knowledge, took some of its fruit and ate it. She also gave some to her husband, who was with her, and he ate it.

Then the eyes of both were opened; they realized they were naked, and they sewed fig leaves together and made coverings for themselves.

Then they heard in the cool of the day the sound of the Lord God walking in the garden; and Adam and his wife hid from the presence of the Lord God among the trees of the garden.

But the Lord God called to Adam, and said to him, "Where are you?"

And he answered, "I heard your voice in the garden, and I was afraid because I was naked, and I hid."

And [God] said: Who showed you that you were naked? Did you not eat from the tree of which I commanded you not to eat?

And Adam answered, "The woman whom you gave me to be with me, she gave me some fruit from the tree, and I ate it."

And the Lord God said to the woman, "Why have you done this?" And the woman answered, "The serpent deceived me, and I ate."

Then the Lord God said to the serpent, "Because you have done this, you are cursed more than all cattle, and more than every beast of the field; you shall go on your belly, and you shall eat dust all the days of your life."

And I will put enmity between you and the woman, and between your offspring and the offspring of the woman; this [offspring] will crush your head, and you will strike his heel.

[And] he said to the woman, "I will greatly increase your labor and your pregnancy; with pain you will give birth to children; your desire will be for your husband, and he will rule over you."

Then he said to Adam, "Because you have obeyed your wife's word and have eaten from the tree of which I commanded you, saying, 'You shall not eat of it,' cursed is the ground because of you; you shall eat of its fruit in toil all the days of your life."

And it will produce thorns and thistles for you, and you will eat the plants of the field.

You will eat your bread by the sweat of your brow, until you return to the ground, for from it you were taken; because you are dust, and to dust you shall return.

And Adam called his wife Eve, because she was the mother of all the living.

And the Lord God made robes of skin for Adam and his wife, and clothed them.

And the Lord God said, "Behold, the man has become like one of us, knowing good and evil; but now [take care] that he does not put out his hand and take also from the tree of life and eat, and live forever."

And the Lord God put him out of the garden of Eden, to till the ground from which he had been taken.

So he drove out the man, and placed Cherubim toward the east of the garden of Eden, and a sword which turned back and forth, to guard the way to the tree of life. Now Adam knew Eve his wife, and she conceived and bore Cain; and she said, I have acquired a man from the Lord. She also gave birth to Abel, his brother; and Abel was a shepherd, and Cain a plowman. Now it came to pass, after some time, that Cain offered to the Lord an offering of the fruits of the earth; And Abel also offered some of the firstborn of his flock, and of their fat; and the Lord had regard for Abel and for his offering. But he did not regard Cain or his offering; and Cain was very angry, and his face fell. And the Lord said to Cain, "Why are you angry, and why is your face downcast?" If you do well, will he not be received? But if you do not do well, sin is at the door; and its desires are for you, and you have lordship over it. Now Cain spoke with his brother Abel, and while they were in the field, Cain rose up against his brother Abel and killed him. And the Lord said to Cain, "Where is Abel your brother?" And he answered him, "I do not know; am I my brother's keeper?" And God said: What have you done? The voice of your brother's blood cries out to me from the ground. Now therefore you [will be] cursed, [even] from the earth, which opened its mouth to receive from your hand the blood of your brother. When you plow the land, it will no longer yield its fruit for you, and you will be a wanderer and a fugitive on the earth. And Cain said to the Lord, "My pain is greater than I can bear." Behold, you have driven me today from this land, and I shall be hidden from your face, and shall be a wanderer and a fugitive on the earth, and it shall come to pass that whoever finds me, shall kill me. And the Lord said to him, "Therefore whoever kills Cain shall be punished seven times more." So the Lord put a mark on Cain, so that no one who found him would kill him. Then Cain went out from the presence of the Lord and lived in the land of Nod, east of Heden. Then Cain knew his wife, and she conceived and gave birth to Enoch; and he built a city, and called the city Enoch, after his son. Then Hiram was born to Enoch, and Hiram fathered Mehujael, and Mehujael fathered Methusel, and Methusel fathered Lamech. And Lamech took two wives; the name of the one was Hadah, and the name of the other, Zillah. And Hadah gave birth to Jabal, who was the father of those who dwell in tents, and of the shepherds. And the name of his brother was Jubal, who was the father of all those who play the violin and the organ. And Zillah also gave birth to Tubal-Cain, who was a forger of all kinds of bronze and iron tools; and Tubal-Cain's sister was Nahama. And Lamech said to Hadah and Zillah his wives, "Wives of Lamech, hear my voice, listen to my word; I will kill a man, even if I am wounded, even a young man, even if I am injured." For if Cain is avenged seven times more, Lamech will be avenged seventy-seven times. And Adam knew his wife again, and she bore a son, and he named him Seth, for God has, [he said], given me another son instead of Abel, whom Cain killed. A son was also born to Seth, and he named him Enos. Then people began to call on the name of the Lord. This is the census of Adam's descendants from the day God created man, [and] made him in his own image.

He created them male and female, and blessed them, and named them man on the day they were created.

And Adam lived one hundred and thirty years, and fathered [a son] in his own likeness, after his image, and named him Seth.

And the days of Adam, after he had fathered Seth, were eight hundred years, and he fathered sons and daughters.

So all the time that Adam lived was nine hundred and thirty years; then he died.

Seth also lived one hundred and five years, and fathered Enos.

And Seth, after he had fathered Enos, lived eight hundred and seven years; and he fathered sons and daughters.

So all the time that Seth lived was nine hundred and twelve years; then he died.

And Enos, having lived ninety years, fathered Kenan.

And Enos, after he had fathered Kenan, lived eight hundred and fifteen years, and he fathered sons and daughters.

All the time Enos lived, therefore, was nine hundred and five years; then he died.

And Kenan, having lived seventy years, fathered Mahalaleel.

And Kenan, after he had fathered Mahalaleel, lived eight hundred and forty years; and he fathered sons and daughters.

Therefore, the entire time that Kenan lived was nine hundred and ten years; then he died.

And Mahalaleel lived sixty-five years; and he fathered Jered.

And Mahalaleel, after he had fathered Jared, lived eight hundred and thirty years, and he fathered sons and daughters.

So all the time that Mahalaleel lived was eight hundred and ninety-five years; then he died.

And Jered, having lived one hundred and sixty-two years, fathered Enoch.

And Jered, after fathering Enoch, lived eight hundred years, and he fathered sons and daughters.

So all the time that Jered lived was nine hundred and sixty-two years; then he died.

And Enoch lived sixty-five years, and fathered Methuselah.

And Enoch, after he had fathered Methuselah, walked with God three hundred years; and he fathered sons and daughters.

All the time that Enoch lived, therefore, was three hundred and sixty-five years.

Enoch walked with God; but he [appeared] no more, because God took him.

And Methuselah, having lived one hundred and eighty-seven years, gave birth to Lamech.

And Methuselah, after he had fathered Lamech, lived seven hundred and eighty-two years; and he fathered sons and daughters.

So all the time that Methuselah lived was nine hundred and sixty-nine years; then he died.

Lamech also lived one hundred and eighty-two years, and he fathered a son.

And he named him Noah, saying, "This one will relieve us of our work and of the labor of our hands in the land that the Lord has cursed."

And Lamech, after he had fathered Noah, lived five hundred and ninety-five years; and he fathered sons and daughters.

So all the time that Lamech lived was seven hundred and seventy-seven years; then he died.

And Noah, at the age of five hundred years, fathered Shem, Ham, and Japheth.

Now it came to pass that when men began to multiply on the earth, and had daughters,

The sons of God, seeing that the daughters of men were beautiful, took wives for themselves from among all those they chose.

And the Lord said: My Spirit will not contend with men forever, for they are but flesh; but their days shall be six twenty years.

There were giants on the earth in those days, when, I say, the sons of God came in to the daughters of men, and they bore children to them. These are the powerful men who have always been people of renown.

And the Lord, seeing that the wickedness of men was very great in the earth, and that every imagination of the thoughts of their hearts was only evil continually;

He regretted having made man on earth, and felt displeasure in his heart.

And the Lord said, "I will wipe from the face of the earth the men I have created, both men and cattle, creeping things and birds of the air, for I regret that I have made them."

But Noah found favor in the sight of the Lord.

These are the generations of Noah. Noah was a righteous man [and] blameless in his time, walking with God.

And Noah fathered three sons, Shem, Ham, and Japheth.

And the earth was corrupt in God's sight, and filled with oppression.

So God looked at the earth, and behold, it was corrupt; for all flesh had corrupted its way on the earth.

And God said to Noah, "The end of all flesh has come before me; for they have filled the earth with oppression, and behold, I will destroy them with the earth."

Make yourself an ark of gopher wood; you shall make the ark in sections, and seal it with bitumen inside and out.

And you shall make it in this way; the length of the ark shall be three hundred cubits; its width fifty cubits, and its height thirty cubits.

You shall make light in the ark, and make its roof a cubit high, and you shall put the door of the ark in its side, and you shall make it with a lower, a second, and a third story.

And behold, I will bring a flood of water upon the earth, to destroy all flesh in which there is spirit of life under heaven; and all that is on the earth shall perish.

But I will establish my covenant with you; and you will enter the ark, you and your sons, and your wife, and your sons' wives with you.

And of every living thing of all flesh you shall bring two [of each kind] into the ark, to keep them alive with you, namely the male and the female;

Birds, according to their kinds; four-legged animals, according to their kinds; and all reptiles, according to their kinds. They will enter in pairs with you, so that you may keep them alive.

Take with you all that is eaten, and set it aside for yourself, so that it may serve as food for you and for the animals.

And Noah did according to all that God had commanded him; he did it thus.

And the Lord said to Noah, "Go into the ark, you and all your household, for I have seen you righteous before me at this time."

You shall take from all the clean animals seven of each kind, the male and its female; but from the animals that are not clean, one pair, the male and the female; [You shall] also take seven birds of every kind from the heavens, the male and its female, in order to preserve their breed throughout the earth.

For in seven days I will cause it to rain on the earth for forty days and forty nights; and I will destroy from the earth every living thing that I have made.

And Noah did according to all that the Lord had commanded him.

Now Noah was six hundred years old when the flood of waters came upon the earth.

Noah then entered the ark, and with him his sons, his wife, and his sons' wives, because of the waters of the flood.

Clean animals, and unclean animals, and birds, and everything that moves on the earth.

They entered the ark two by two to Noah, the male and the female, as God had commanded Noah.

And it came to pass that on the seventh day the waters of the flood were upon the earth.

In the six hundredth year of Noah's life, in the second month, on the seventeenth day of the month, on that day all the fountains of the great deep were broken up, and the floodgates of the heavens were opened.

And the rain fell on the earth for forty days and forty nights.

On that same day Noah, and Shem, Ham, and Japheth, Noah's sons, entered the ark, with Noah's wife, and the three wives of his sons with them.

They, and all beasts according to their kind, and all cattle according to their kind, and all reptiles that move on the earth, according to their kind, and all birds, according to their kind; [and] every small bird having wings, of every kind.

So they came from all flesh which has in itself the spirit of life, in pairs to Noah, in the ark.

The male, I say, and the female of all flesh came there, as God had commanded him; then the Lord closed the ark over him.

And the flood came for forty days upon the earth; and the waters rose, and lifted up the ark, and it was lifted above the earth.

And the waters grew stronger and increased greatly on the earth, and the ark floated above the waters.

So the waters rose exceedingly on the earth, and all the highest mountains under the heavens were covered.

The waters rose fifteen cubits above, and the mountains were covered.

And all flesh that moved on the earth perished, both birds and cattle, four-footed beasts, and all reptiles that creep on the earth, and all men.

All things that were on the dry land, having the breath of life in their nostrils, died.

Therefore everything that remained on the earth was exterminated, from men to beasts, to reptiles, and to birds of the heavens; they were, I say, exterminated from the face of the earth; but only Noah, and those who were with him in the ark, remained.

And the waters remained on the earth for one hundred and fifty days.

Then God remembered Noah, and all the beasts, and all the livestock that were with him in the ark; and God caused a wind to pass over the earth, and the waters stood still.

For the springs of the deep and the floodgates of the heavens were closed, and the rain from heaven was withheld.

And after one hundred and fifty days the waters receded without interruption from the earth, and diminished.

And on the seventeenth day of the seventh month the ark came to rest on the mountains of Ararat.

And the waters continued to recede until the tenth month; and on the first day of the tenth month the mountain peaks appeared.

And it came to pass that at the end of forty days Noah opened the window of the ark which he had made.

And he released the raven, which went out and came back, until the waters had dried up on the earth.

He also released a pigeon from him, to see if the waters had receded on the land.

But the dove, finding nowhere to set its foot, returned to him in the ark; for the waters were over all the earth; [and Noah] reached out his hand and took it back, and brought it back to himself into the ark.

And when he had waited another seven days, he released the pigeon out of the ark again.

And in the evening the dove came to; and behold, in its beak was an olive leaf which it had plucked; and Noah knew that the waters had receded from the earth.

And he waited another seven days, then he released the pigeon, which never returned to him.

And it came to pass that in the year six hundred and one [of the age of Noah], on the first day of the first month the waters had dried up from the earth; and Noah took off the covering of the ark, and looked, and behold, the face of the earth was drying up.

And on the twenty-seventh day of the second month the land was dry.

Then God spoke to Noah, saying:

Get out of the ark, you and your wife, your sons, and your sons' wives with you. Bring out with you every living creature that is with you, of every kind of flesh, both birds and four-footed beasts, and every creeping thing that creeps on the earth; let them swarm over the earth, and let them multiply and increase in number on the earth.

So Noah went out, [and] with him his sons, his wife, and his sons' wives.

Every four-footed beast, every reptile, every bird, everything that moves on the earth, according to their kinds, came out of the ark.

And Noah built an altar to the Lord, and took of every clean animal and of every clean bird, and offered burnt offerings of them on the altar.

And the Lord smelled the pleasing aroma, and said in his heart, I will no longer curse the ground because of men, although the inclination of men's hearts is evil from their youth; and I will no longer strike every living thing, as I have done. [But] as long as the earth exists, sowing and reaping, cold and heat, summer and winter, day and night will not cease.

And God blessed Noah and his sons, and said to them, "Be fruitful and multiply and fill the earth."

And let all the beasts of the earth, all the birds of the heavens, with all that creeps upon the earth, and all the fish of the sea fear and dread you; they are placed in your hand.

Everything that moves and lives will be food for you; I have given you all these things, just as I gave them green grass.

However, you shall not eat flesh with its life, [that is], its blood.

And indeed I will demand your blood, [the blood] of your souls, I will demand it from the hand of all the beasts, and from the hand of man, even from the hand of each of his brothers I will demand the soul of man.

Whoever sheds man's blood on man, his blood shall be shed; for God made man in his own image.

Therefore, be fruitful and multiply, and increase abundantly on the earth and multiply on it.

God also spoke to Noah and to his sons who were with him, saying:

And as for me, behold, I establish my covenant with you, and with your descendants after you.

And with every living animal that is with you, both birds, livestock, and all the beasts of the earth that are with you, all those that came out of the ark, even all the beasts of the earth.

Therefore I establish my covenant with you, and no more flesh will be destroyed by the waters of a flood, and there will never again be a flood to destroy the earth.

Then God said: This is the sign I give of the covenant between me and you and between every living creature with you, to last forever;

I will set my bow in the cloud, and it will be a sign of the covenant between me and the earth.

And when it comes to pass that I have covered the earth with clouds, the bow will appear in the cloud.

And I will remember my covenant that is between me and you, between every animal that lives in any flesh; and the waters will no longer make a flood to destroy all flesh.

The bow will therefore be in the cloud, and I will look at it, so that I may remember the everlasting covenant between God and every living animal, in all flesh that is on the earth.

So God said to Noah, "This is the sign of the covenant I have established between me and all flesh that is on the earth."

And the sons of Noah who came out of the ark were Shem, Ham, and Japheth. And Ham was the father of Canaan.

These were the three sons of Noah, from whom the whole earth was populated.

And Noah, a farmer of the earth, began to plant the vineyard.

And he drank some of the wine, and became drunk, and uncovered himself in the middle of his tent.

And Cam, the father of Canaan, having seen his father's nakedness, declared it outside to his two brothers.

And Shem and Japheth took a cloak and put it over their two shoulders, and walking backwards, they covered their father's nakedness; and their faces were turned backwards, so that they did not see their father's nakedness.

And Noah, awakened from his wine, knew what his youngest son had done to him.

That is why he said: Cursed be Canaan; he shall be a servant of the servants of his brothers.

He also said: Blessed be the Lord, the God of Shem; and may Canaan be made servant to them.

May God gently draw Japheth, and may [Japheth] dwell in the tabernacles of Shem; and may Canaan be made servant to them.

And Noah lived after the flood for three hundred and fifty years.

So all the time that Noah lived was nine hundred and fifty years; then he died.

These are the generations of the children of Noah, Shem, Ham, and Japheth; to whom children were born after the flood.

The children of Japheth are Gomer, Magog, Madai, Javan, Tubal, Meshech, and Tiras.

And the children of Gomer, Ashkenaz, Riphath, and Togarmah.

And the children of Javan, Elisa, Tarsis, Kittim, and Dodanim.

From these, the islands of the nations were divided according to their lands, each according to their language, according to their families, among their nations.

And the children of Ham are Cush, Mizraim, Put, and Canaan.

And the children of Cush: Sheba, Havilah, Sabtah, Rahma, and Sebtaca. And the children of Rahma: Sheba and Dedan.

Cush also fathered Nimrod, who began to be powerful on earth.

He was a mighty hunter before the Lord; therefore it was said: Like Nimrod, the mighty hunter before the Lord.

And the beginning of his reign was Babel, Erec, Accad, and Calneh in the land of Sinhar.

From that land went Asshur, and he built Nineveh, and the streets of the city, and Calah,

And Resen, between Nineveh and Calah, which is a large city.

Mizraim begat Ludim, Hananim, Lehabim, Naphtuhim.

Pathrusim, Chasluhim, from whom the Philistines came, and Caphtorim.

And Canaan begat Sidon, his firstborn son, and Heth,

The Jebusites, the Amorites, the Girgashites,

The Hevians, the Harkians, and the Sinians,

The Arvadites, the Tsemarites, and the Hamathites. And then the families of the Canaanites dispersed.

And the boundaries of the Canaanites were from Sidon, when one comes to Gerar, as far as Gaza, extending towards Sodom and Gomorrah, Admah, and Zeboiim, as far as Laza.

These are the children of Ham according to their families [and their] languages, in their countries, and in [their] nations.

And children were born to Shem, the father of all the children of Eber, and brother of Japheth, [who was] the greatest.

And the children of Shem are Helam, Asshur, Arpachsad, Lud, and Aram.

And the children of Aram, Hus, Hul, Gether, and Mas.

And Arpachsad begat Selah, and Selah begat Heber.
 And to Eber were born two sons: the name of the one was Peleg, because in his days the earth was divided; and the name of his brother was Joktan.
 And Joktan begat Almodad, Seleph, Hatsarmaveth, and Jerah.
 Hadoram, Uzal, Dikla,
 Hobal, Abimael, Sheba,
 Ophir, Havilah, and Jobab. All these are the sons of Joktan.
 And their dwelling was from Mesha, when one comes to Sephar, the mountain of the East.
 These are the children of Shem, according to their families [and] their languages, in their countries, and in [their] nations.
 These are the families of the children of Noah, according to their lineages in their nations; and from these the nations were divided on the earth after the flood.
 Then the whole earth had one language and one speech.
 But it happened that, having left the East, they found a countryside in the land of Sinhar, where they settled.
 And they said to one another, "Now let us make bricks, and bake them thoroughly in the fire." So they had bricks instead of stones, and bitumen instead of mortar.
 Then they said, "Now then, let us build ourselves a city and a tower with its top in the heavens, so that we may gain a name for ourselves, lest we be scattered over the face of the whole earth."
 Then the Lord came down to see the city and the tower that the sons of men were building.
 And the Lord said, "Behold, they are but one people, they have one language, and they begin to work; and now nothing will prevent them from carrying out what they have planned."
 Now let us go down and confuse their language there, so that they will not understand one another's speech.
 So the Lord scattered them from there over all the earth, and they stopped building the city.
 That is why its name was called Babel; for there the Lord confused the language of all the earth, and from there he scattered them over all the earth.
 This is the posterity of Shem: Shem, at the age of one hundred years, fathered Arpachsad, two years after the flood.
 And Shem, after he had fathered Arpachsad, lived five hundred years, and fathered sons and daughters.
 And Arpachsad lived thirty-five years, and fathered Selah.
 And Arpachhad, after he had fathered Selah, lived four hundred and three years, and fathered sons and daughters.
 And Selah, having lived thirty years, fathered Heber.
 And Selah, after he had fathered Eber, lived 403 years, and fathered sons and daughters.
 And Heber, having lived thirty-four years, fathered Peleg.
 And Heber, after he had fathered Peleg, lived four hundred and thirty years, and fathered sons and daughters.
 And Peleg, having lived for thirty years, fathered Rehu.
 And Peleg, after he had fathered Rehu, lived two hundred and nine years, and fathered sons and daughters.
 And Rehu, having lived thirty-two years, fathered Serug.
 And Rehu, after he had fathered Serug, lived two hundred and seven years, and fathered sons and daughters.
 And Sérug, having lived for thirty years, fathered Nacor.
 And Sérug, after he had fathered Nacor, lived two hundred years, and fathered sons and daughters.
 And Nacor, having lived for twenty-nine years, fathered Taré.

And Nacor, after he had fathered Taré, lived one hundred and nineteen years, and fathered sons and daughters.

And Taré, having lived seventy years, fathered Abram, Nahor, and Haran.

And this is the posterity of Tarah: Tarah fathered Abram, Nahor, and Haran; and Haran fathered Lot.

And Haran died in the presence of his father, in the land of his birth, in Ur of the Chaldeans.

And Abram and Nahor each took a wife. The name of Abram's wife was Sarai; and the name of Nahor's wife was Milcah, daughter of Haran, father of Milcah and Ishcah.

And Sarai was barren, [and] had no children.

And Tare took his son Abram, and Lot his son, [who was] the son of Haran, and Sarai his daughter-in-law, the wife of Abram his son, and they went out together from Ur of the Chaldeans to go to the land of Canaan, and they came to Haran, and dwelt there.

And Taré lived two hundred and five years; then he died at Caran.

But the Lord had said to Abram, "Go out from your country, from your relatives, and from your father's house, [and come] to the land that I will show you."

And I will make you into a great nation, and I will bless you, and I will make your name great, and you will be blessed.

I will bless those who bless you, and I will curse those who curse you; and all the families of the earth will be blessed in you.

So Abram went, as the Lord had told him, and Lot went with him; and Abram was seventy-five years old when he left Haran.

Abram also took Sarai his wife, and Lot his brother's son, and all their possessions which they had acquired, and the people whom they had had in Haran; and they set out to come to the land of Canaan, into which they entered.

And Abram passed through that land as far as the place of Shechem, [and] as far as the plain of Moreh; and the Canaanites were then in that land.

And the Lord appeared to Abram and said to him, "To your offspring I will give this land." So Abram built an altar there to the Lord who had appeared to him.

And he moved from there to the mountain, which is east of Bethel, and pitched his tents there, with Bethel on the west and Ai on the east; and there he built an altar to the Lord, and called on the name of the Lord.

Then Abram departed [from there], walking and advancing towards the South.

But when famine struck the land, Abram went down to Egypt to settle there, for the famine was severe in the land.

And it came to pass, as he was about to enter Egypt, that he said to Sarai, his wife: Behold, I know that you are a very beautiful woman;

That is why it will happen that when the Egyptians see you, they will say, "This is the wife of this man," and they will kill me, but they will let you live.

[Tell me], I beg you, that you are my sister, so that I may be well treated because of you, and that through you my life may be preserved.

So it happened that as soon as Abram came to Egypt, the Egyptians saw that this woman was very beautiful.

The principal officials of Pharaoh's court also saw her, and praised her before him, and she was taken [to be brought] into Pharaoh's house.

Who did good to Abram, because of her; so that he had sheep, oxen, donkeys, male servants, female servants, female donkeys, and camels.

But the Lord struck Pharaoh and his house with great plagues because of Sarai, Abram's wife.

Then Pharaoh summoned Abram and said to him, "What have you done to me? Why didn't you tell me that she was your wife?"

Why did you say, 'She is my sister'? For I had taken her for my wife; but now, here is your wife, take her, and go.

And Pharaoh gave orders to his people, and they led him, his wife, and all that belonged to him.

So Abram went up from Egypt to the South, he, his wife, and all that belonged to him, and Lot with him.

And Abram was very rich in livestock, silver, and gold.

And he returned, following the route he had taken from the South to Bethel, to the place where he had first pitched his tents, between Bethel and Hai,

In the same place where the altar had been, which he had built there at the beginning, Abram called on the name of the Lord.

Lot, who walked with Abram, also had sheep, oxen, and tents.

And the earth could not bear them to dwell together; for their possessions were so great that they could not dwell with one another.

So there was a quarrel between the herdsmen of Abram's livestock and the herdsmen of Lot's livestock; and at that time the Canaanites and the Perizzites were still living in the land.

And Abram said to Lot, "I beg you, let there be no quarrel between you and me, nor between your herdsmen and my herdsmen, for we are brothers."

Is not the whole country at your disposal? Separate yourself, I beg you, from me. If you choose the left, I will take the right; and if you choose the right, I will go to the left.

And Lot lifted up his eyes and saw the whole plain of the Jordan, which, before the Lord destroyed Sodom and Gomorrah, was watered everywhere, until they came to Zohar, like the garden of the Lord, [and] like the land of Egypt.

And Abram was very rich in livestock, silver, and gold.

And Lot chose for himself all the plain of the Jordan, and went toward the east; thus they separated from one another.

Abram remained in the land of Canaan, and Lot remained in the cities of the plain, and pitched his tents as far as Sodom.

But the inhabitants of Sodom were wicked, and great sinners against the Lord.

And the Lord said to Abram, after Lot had separated from him, "Now lift up your eyes and look from the place where you are, toward the north, the south, the east, and the west. For I will give to you and to your descendants forever all the land that you see."

And I will make your offspring like the dust of the earth; if someone can count the dust of the earth, he will also count your offspring.

Arise, then, [and] walk throughout the land, its length and its breadth; for I will give it to you.

So Abram moved his tents and went to live in the plains of Mamre, which is in Hebron, and there he built an altar to the Lord.

Now it happened in the days of Amraphel king of Sinhar, and Ajoch king of Ellasar, and Chedor-lahomer king of Helam, and Tidal king of nations;

They waged war against Berah King of Sodom, and against Birsah King of Gomorrah, and against Sinab King of Admah, and against Shemeber King of Zeboiim, and against the King of Belah, who is Zohar.

All these gathered together in the valley of Siddim, which is the salt sea.

They had been enslaved for twelve years in Kédor-Lahomer, but on the thirteenth they had revolted.

In the fourteenth year, therefore, Chedorlaomer came, [and] the kings who were with him, and they defeated the Rephaim in Hasteroth of Carnaim, and the Zuzins in Ham, and the Emins in the plain of Kiriathaim,

And the Horites in their mountain of Sehir, as far as the fields of Paran, above the desert.

Then they returned, and came to Hen of Mispat, which is Kadesh; and they struck down all the land of the Hamaleites and the Amorites who lived in Hazazon-Tamar.

Then the King of Sodom, the King of Gomorrah, the King of Admah, the King of Zeboiim, and the King of Belah, which is Zohar, came out and arrayed their troops against them in the valley of Siddim.

[That is] against Kedor-Lahomer King of Helam, and against Tidal King of the nations, and against Amraphel King of Sinhar, and against Arioch King of Ellasar, four Kings against five.

Now the valley of Siddim was full of bitumen pits; and the kings of Sodom and Gomorrah fled and fell into them, and those who remained fled to the mountains. So they took all the wealth of Sodom and Gomorrah, and all their provisions; then they departed.

They also took Lot, the son of Abram's brother, who lived in Sodom, and all his possessions; then they departed.

And someone who had escaped came and warned Abram the Hebrew, who lived in the plains of Mamre the Amorite, brother of Escol, and brother of Haner, who had made an alliance with Abram.

So when Abram heard that his brother had been taken captive, he armed three hundred and eighteen of his servants, born in his house, and pursued [these kings] as far as Dan.

And [having] divided [his troops, he and his servants rushed] upon them by night, and defeated them, and pursued them as far as Hobar, which is to the left of Damascus.

And he brought back all the possessions [they had taken]; he also brought back Lot his brother, his possessions, the women, and the people.

And the King of Sodom went to meet him, as he was returning from the defeat of Chedorlaomer and the kings who were with him, to the valley of the plain, which is the royal valley.

Melchizedek, King of Salem, also brought out bread and wine (and he was Priest of the Mighty, Sovereign God).

And he blessed him, saying: Blessed be Abram by the Mighty God, Sovereign, possessor of heaven and earth.

And praised be the Mighty, Sovereign [God], who has delivered your enemies into your hand. And [Abram] gave him a tenth of everything.

And the King of Sodom said to Abram, "Give me the people, and take the possessions for yourself."

And Abram said to the King of Sodom, "I have raised my hand to the Lord, the Mighty One, Sovereign, Possessor of heaven and earth, [saying]:

If I take nothing of all that is yours, from a thread to a shoelace strap, so that you may not say: I have made Abram rich.

I only exclude what the young men ate, and the share of the men who came with me, Haner, Escol, and Mamré, who will take their share.

After these things, the word of the Lord came to Abram in a vision, saying, "Do not be afraid, Abram; I am your shield and your great reward."

And Abram answered, "Sovereign Lord, what will you give me? I am going away without [leaving] children [after me], and the one who has charge of my house is this Dammesek Eliezer."

Abram also said: Behold, you have given me no children; and behold, the servant born in my house shall be my heir.

And behold, the word of the Lord came to him, saying, "This one shall not be your heir, but one who shall come from your own body shall be your heir."

Then he brought him outside and said to him, "Now lift up your eyes to the sky and count the stars, if you are able to count them." And he said to him, "So shall your offspring be."

And [Abram] believed the Lord, who credited it to him as righteousness.

And he said to him, "I am the Lord who brought you out of Ur of the Chaldeans to give you this land to possess."

And he said, "Sovereign Lord, how shall I know that I shall possess it?"

And he answered him: Take a three-year-old heifer, a three-year-old female goat, a three-year-old ram, a turtledove, and a pigeon.

So he took all these things, and divided them in half, and placed each half opposite the other; but he did not divide the birds.

And a flock of birds descended upon the dead animals, but Abram drove them away.

And it came to pass as the sun was setting, that a deep sleep fell upon Abram, and behold, a terror of great darkness fell upon him.

And [the Lord] said to Abram, "Know for certain that your descendants will live as strangers in a land not their own for four hundred years, and will be enslaved to the inhabitants [of the land], and will be afflicted;

But I will also judge the nation to which they will be enslaved, and after that they will come out with great possessions.

And you will go to your fathers in peace, and be buried at a good old age.

And in the fourth generation they will return here; for the iniquity of the Amorites has not yet reached its full measure.

It also happened that, when the sun had set, there was a complete blackness, and behold, a smoking furnace, and a burning brand that passed between these things which had been divided.

On that day the Lord made a covenant with Abram, saying, "To your descendants I have given this land, from the river of Egypt to the great river, the river Euphrates;

The Kenians, the Kenizians, the Kadmonians,

The Hittites, the Perizzites, the Rephaim,

The Amorites, the Canaanites, the Girgashites, and the Jebusites.

Now Sarai, Abram's wife, had borne him no children, but she had an Egyptian servant named Hagar.

And she said to Abram, "Now the Lord has prevented me from bearing children. Come, I pray you, in to my servant; perhaps I can have children through her." And Abram agreed to Sarai's words.

Then Sarai, Abram's wife, took Hagar her Egyptian servant, and gave her to Abram her husband as a wife, after he had stayed ten years in the land of Canaan.

So he went to Hagar, and she conceived. And [Hagar], seeing that she had conceived, despised her mistress.

And Sarai said to Abram, "The wrong done to me is upon you; I gave you my servant in your womb, but when she saw that she had conceived, she despised me; may the Lord judge between you and me."

Then Abram answered Sarai, "Here is your servant in your hands; do to her as you please." So Sarai mistreated her, and [Hagar] fled from her.

But the Angel of the Lord found her by a spring of water in the desert, by the spring that is on the road to Sur.

And he said to her, "Hagar, servant of Sarai, where have you come from? And where are you going?" And she answered, "I am running away from Sarai my mistress."

And the Angel of the Lord said to him, "Go back to your mistress and submit to her."

Furthermore, the Angel of the Lord said to him, "I will greatly multiply your offspring, so that they cannot be numbered, because they will be so numerous."

The Angel of the Lord also said to her, "Behold, you have conceived, and you shall bear a son, and you shall call his name Ishmael, for the Lord has heard your affliction."

And he will be a man [fierce as] a wild donkey; his hand will be against everyone, and everyone's hand against him; and he will live in the sight of all his brothers.

Then she called on the name of the Lord who spoke to her, "You are the [God] strong of vision," for she said, "Have I not also seen here after him who saw me?"

That is why this well was called the well of the living who sees me; which is between Kadesh and Bered.

Hagar therefore bore Abram a son; and Abram named the name of his son, whom Hagar had borne him, Ishmael.

Now Abram was eighty-six years old when Hagar bore him Ishmael.

Then Abram, when he was ninety-nine years old, the Lord appeared to him and said, "I am the Mighty One, the Almighty; walk before me and be blameless.”

And I will put my covenant between me and you, and I will multiply you very abundantly.

Then Abram fell on his face; and God spoke to him, and said to him:

As for me, behold, my covenant is with you, and you shall become the father of a multitude of nations.

And your name will no longer be called Abram, but your name will be Abraham; for I have made you the father of a multitude of nations.

And I will make you increase very abundantly; and I will make you into nations; even kings will come from you.

I will therefore establish my covenant between me and you, and between your descendants after you throughout their generations, to be an everlasting covenant; so that I may be God to you, and to your descendants after you.

And I will give to you and to your descendants after you the land where you are residing as a foreigner, namely all the land of Canaan, as a perpetual possession, and I will be God to them.

God also said to Abraham: You shall therefore keep my covenant, you and your descendants after you throughout their generations.

And this is my covenant between me and you, and between your descendants after you, which you shall keep, [namely] that every male among you shall be circumcised.

And you shall circumcise the flesh of your foreskin; and this shall be for a sign of the covenant between me and you.

Every male child eight days old shall be circumcised among you throughout your generations, whether born in the house or bought with money from any foreigner who is not of your race.

Therefore, you must not fail to circumcise him who is born in your house, and him who is bought with your money, and my covenant shall be in your flesh, to be an everlasting covenant.

And the uncircumcised male, whose foreskin flesh has not been circumcised, shall be cut off from among his people, [because he] has violated my covenant.

God also said to Abraham: As for Sarai your wife, you shall no longer call her name Sarai, but her name shall be Sarah.

And I will bless her, and I will even give you a son by her. I will bless her, and she will become nations: And kings, leaders of peoples, will come from her.

Then Abraham bowed down with his face to the ground and smiled, saying in his heart, “Can a son be born to a man who is a hundred years old? And can Sarah, who is ninety years old, bear a child?”

And Abraham said to God, “I pray you, let Ishmael live before you.”

And God said, “Surely Sarah your wife will bear you a son, and you shall call his name Isaac; and I will establish my covenant with him to be an everlasting covenant for his offspring after him.”

I have also answered your prayer concerning Ishmael: behold, I have blessed him, and I will make him increase and multiply very abundantly. He will father twelve princes, and I will make him into a great nation.

But I will establish my covenant with Isaac, whom Sarah will bear to you in the coming year, at this same time.

And God, having finished speaking, went up from before Abraham.

And Abraham took his son Ishmael, with all those who were born in his house, and all those whom he had bought with his money, all the males who were men of his house, and he circumcised the flesh of their foreskins that same day, as God had told him.

And Abraham was ninety-nine years old when he circumcised the flesh of his foreskin;

And Ishmael, his son, was thirteen years old when he was circumcised in the flesh of his foreskin.

On that same day Abraham was circumcised, and also his son Ishmael.

And all the people of his household, both those who were born in the household and those who had been bought from foreigners with money, were circumcised with him. Then the Lord appeared to him in the plains of Mamre, as he sat at the door of [his] tent in the heat of the day.

For lifting his eyes, he looked: and behold, three men appeared before him, and having seen them, he ran to meet them from the door of his tent, and bowed down to the ground;

And he said, "My Lord, I beseech you, if I have found favor in your sight, do not pass by, I beseech you, [and stay with] your servant."

Please take some water, wash your feet, and rest under a tree;

And I will bring a morsel of bread to strengthen your hearts, after which you may go on your way; for this is why you have come to your servant. And they said, "Do as you have said."

Abraham then went quickly into the tent to Sarah and said to her, "Hurry, take three measures of fine flour, knead it, and make cakes."

Then Abraham ran to the herd, and took a tender and good calf, which he gave to a servant, who hastened to prepare it.

Then he took butter and milk, and the calf that had been prepared, and put it before them; and he stood with them under the tree, and they ate.

And they said to him, "Where is Sarah your wife?" And he answered, "Here she is in the tent."

And [one of them] said, "I will certainly return to you at this time, and behold, Sarah your wife will have a son." And Sarah was listening to him at the tent door behind him.

Now Abraham and Sarah were old, very advanced in years; and Sarah no longer had what women are accustomed to having.

And Sarah laughed to herself, and said: Being old, and my Lord being very old, shall I have [this] satisfaction?

And the Lord said to Abraham, "Why did Sarah laugh and say, 'Will I really have a child, being as old as I am?'"

Is anything too difficult for the Lord? I will return to you at this time of year, at this very moment, and Sarah will have a son.

And Sarah denied it, saying, "I did not laugh," for she was afraid. [But] he said, "That is not so; for you did laugh."

And these men rose from there and looked towards Sodom; and Abraham walked with them to lead them.

And the Lord said, "Shall I hide from Abraham what I am about to do?"

Since Abraham is surely to become a great and powerful nation, and all the nations of the earth will be blessed in him?

For I know him, and [I know] that he will command his children and his household after him to keep the way of the Lord, to do what is just and right; so that the Lord may bring upon Abraham all that he has spoken to him.

And the Lord said: Because the outcry of Sodom and Gomorrah is increased, and their sin is greatly aggravated;

I will now go down and see whether they have done entirely according to the cry that came to me; and if not, I will know.

So these men set out from there and went towards Sodom; but Abraham stood still before the Lord.

And Abraham approached and said, "Will you destroy the righteous with the wicked?"

Perhaps there are fifty righteous people in the city; will you destroy them also?

Will you not spare the city for the sake of the fifty righteous people who are in it?

No, you will never do such a thing, putting the righteous to death with the wicked, and treating the righteous like the wicked! No, you will never do it. Will not the Judge of all the earth do justice?

And the Lord said, "If I find fifty righteous people in the city of Sodom, I will spare the whole place for their sake."

And Abraham answered, saying, "Behold, I have now taken the boldness to speak to the Lord, though I am but dust and ashes."

Perhaps five of the fifty righteous will be missing; will you destroy the whole city for those five? And he answered him, I will not destroy it if I find forty-five there.

And [Abraham] continued to speak to him, saying, "Perhaps forty will be found there?" And he said, "I will not destroy it for the sake of the forty."

And Abraham said, "I pray the Lord not to be angry if I speak [again]; perhaps thirty will be found there?" And he said, "I will not destroy it if I find thirty there."

And Abraham said, "Now I have taken the bold step of speaking to the Lord: perhaps twenty will be found?" And he said, "I will not destroy it for the sake of the twenty."

And [Abraham] said, "I pray the Lord not to be angry; I will speak just once more; perhaps ten will be found there." And he said, "I will not destroy it for the sake of ten."

And the Lord departed when he had finished speaking with Abraham; and Abraham returned to his place.

Now, in the evening the two angels came to Sodom, and Lot was sitting at the gate of Sodom, and when he saw them, he got up to meet them, and bowed down with his face to the ground.

And he said to them, "Behold, I beg you, gentlemen, now depart into the house of your servant, and stay there this night, and wash your feet; then you shall rise in the morning, and continue on your way." And they said, "No, but we shall spend this night in the street."

But he urged them so strongly that they withdrew to his house; and when they had entered his house, he made a feast for them, and baked unleavened bread, and they ate.

But before they went to bed, the men of the city, the men of Sodom, surrounded the house, from the youngest to the old, all the people from one end [to the other].

And calling to Lot, they said to him, "Where are the men who came to you last night? Bring them out so that we may know them."

But Lot went out of [his house] to [speak] to them at the door, and having closed the door behind him,

He said to them, "Please, my brothers, do not harm them."

Behold, I have two daughters who have not yet known a man; I will bring them to you, and you may do to them as you please, provided that you do not harm these men; for they have come under the protection of my roof.

And they said to him, "Get out of here." They also said, "This man has come here alone to live as a foreigner, and he wants to rule over us? Now we will treat you worse than them." And they were forcing Lot; and they came near to break down the door.

But these men reached out their hands, pulled Lot into the house, and shut the door.

And they so amazed the men who were at the door of the house, from the least to the greatest, that they grew weary of seeking the door.

Then these men said to Lot, "Who else do you have here who belongs to you, whether son-in-law, sons, daughters, or anyone else who belongs to you in the city? Bring them out of this place."

For we are going to destroy this place, because their cry has become great before the Lord, and he has sent us to destroy it.

So Lot went out and spoke to his sons-in-law, who were to take his daughters, and said to them, "Get up, leave this place, for the Lord is about to destroy the city."

But it seemed to his sons-in-law that he was mocking him.

And as soon as the dawn broke, the angels urged Lot, saying, "Get up, take your wife and your two daughters who are here, lest you perish in the punishment of the city."

And as he delayed, these men took him by the hand, and they also took his wife and his two daughters by the hand, because the Lord was sparing him; and they led him out of the city.

But as soon as they had brought them out, [one] said: Save your life, do not look behind you, and do not stop anywhere in the plain; save yourself on the mountain, lest you perish.

And Lot answered them, "No, Lord, I beg you."

Behold, your servant has now found favor in your sight, and the grace you have shown me to preserve my life is wonderfully great; but I cannot escape to the mountain, lest evil overtake me, and I die.

Behold, I pray you, that city is near; I can flee there, and it is small; I pray you, let me escape there; is it not small? And my soul shall live.

And he said to him, "Behold, I have granted your request also in this matter, not to destroy the city of which you spoke."

Hurry, escape there, for I cannot do anything until you have entered; therefore this city was called Zohar.

As the sun rose over the earth, Lot entered Zohar.

Then the Lord rained down burning sulfur on Sodom and Gomorrah from the Lord; and he destroyed those cities, and all the plain, and all the inhabitants of the cities, and the seed of the earth.

But Lot's wife looked back, and she became a pillar of salt.

And Abraham, rising early in the morning, came to the place where he had stood before the Lord;

And looking towards Sodom and Gomorrah, and towards all the land of that plain, he saw smoke rising from the land like the smoke of a furnace.

But it had come to pass, when God destroyed the cities of the plain, that he remembered Abraham, and sent Lot out of the subversion, when he destroyed the cities where Lot lived.

And Lot went up from Zohar, and dwelt on the mountain with his two daughters, for he was afraid to dwell in Zohar, and he withdrew to a cave with his two daughters.

And the older one said to the younger one: Our father is old, and there is no one on earth to come to us, according to the custom of all countries.

Come, let us give our father wine, and lie with him, so that we may preserve our father's race.

So they gave their father wine to drink that night; and the older daughter came and lay with her father, but he did not know when she lay down or when she got up.

And the next day the older daughter said to the younger, "Last night I lay with my father; let us give him wine to drink again tonight, and then go and lie with him, and we shall preserve our father's race."

That night they gave their father more wine to drink, and the younger one got up and lay with him; but he was not aware of it when she lay down or when she got up.

Thus Lot's two daughters conceived by their father.

And the firstborn gave birth to a son, and named him Moab; he is the father of the Moabites to this day.

And the younger one also gave birth to a son, and named him Ben-Hammi; he is the father of the children of Hammon to this day.

And Abraham went from there to the land of the South, and dwelt between Kadesh and Shur, and he lived as a stranger in Gerar.

Now Abraham said of Sarah his wife, "She is my sister"; and Abimelech, king of Gerar, sent and took Sarah.

But God appeared in a dream at night to Abimelech, and said to him, "Behold, you are dead because of the woman whom you took, for she has a husband."

But Abimelech had not approached her. And he said, "Lord, will you then put to death a righteous nation?"

Didn't he say to me, 'She is my sister'? And didn't she herself say, 'He is my brother'? I did this with the integrity of my heart and the purity of my hands. And God said to him in a dream: I know that you did it in the integrity of your heart, and also I prevented you from sinning against me; therefore I did not allow you to touch her.

Now therefore, return the wife to this man, for he is a prophet; and he will pray for you, and you will live. But if you do not return her, know that you will surely die, along with all that you have.

And Abimelech got up early in the morning, and called all his servants, and told them all these things, and they listened to him; and they were filled with fear.

Then Abimelech called Abraham and said to him, "What have you done to us? How have I offended you, that you have brought such great sin upon me and upon my kingdom? You have done to me things which should not have been done."

Abimelech also said to Abraham, "What did you see [that compelled you] to do this?"

And Abraham answered, "It is because I said, 'Surely there is no fear of God in this place, and they will kill me because of my wife.'"

And also, in truth, she is my sister, the daughter of my father; but she is not the daughter of my mother; and she was given to me as a wife.

And it came to pass that I said to him, when God led me here and there, out of my father's house; this is the grace that you shall do me, say of me in all the places where we go: He is my brother.

Then Abimelech took sheep, oxen, male servants, and female servants, and gave them to Abraham, and restored Sarah his wife to him.

And [he] said: Here is my country, which is at your disposal; stay wherever you please.

And he said to Sarah, "See, I have given your brother a thousand pieces of silver; see, he is a covering for your eyes from all those who are with you, and from all [others]." And so she was rebuked.

And Abraham prayed to God; and God healed Abimelech, his wife, and his maids; and they had children.

For the Lord had completely closed up all the wombs of the house of Abimelech, because of Sarah, Abraham's wife.

And the Lord visited Sarah, as he had said; and did to her as he had spoken.

Sarah therefore conceived, and bore Abraham a son in his old age, at the very time that God had told her.

And Abraham named the name of his son, who was born to him, whom Sarah had borne him, Isaac.

And Abraham circumcised his son Isaac when he was eight days old, as God had commanded him.

Now Abraham was a hundred years old when his son Isaac was born to him.

And Sarah said: God has given me something to laugh about; all who hear about it will laugh with me.

She also said: Who would have said to Abraham that Sarah would nurse children? For I bore him a son in his old age.

And the child grew and was weaned; and Abraham held a great feast on the day Isaac was weaned.

And Sarah saw the son of Hagar the Egyptian, whom she had borne to Abraham, mocking him.

And she said to Abraham, "Drive out this slave woman and her son, for the son of this slave woman shall not inherit with my son, with Isaac."

And this greatly displeased Abraham concerning his son.

But God said to Abraham, "Do not grieve over the child, nor over your servant; in all things that Sarah tells you, agree to her word; for in Isaac you shall be called seed.”

And yet I will also make the son of the slave girl into a nation, because he is your offspring.

Then Abraham got up early in the morning, and took some bread and a bottle of water, and gave them to Hagar, placing them on her shoulder. He also gave her the child and sent her away. She set out on her journey and wandered in the desert of Beersheba.

But when the water in the bottle ran out, she threw the child under a bush, and she went away to within arrow's range, and sat down opposite him; for she said, 'Let me not see the child die.' So she sat down opposite him, and lifted up her voice and wept.

And God heard the voice of the child, and the Angel of God called to Hagar from heaven, and said to her, "What is the matter with you, Hagar? Do not be afraid, for God has heard the voice of the child from where he is."

Arise, lift up the child, and take him by the hand; for I will make him into a great nation.

And God opened her eyes, and she saw a well of water, and, having gone there, she filled the bottle with water, and gave the child a drink.

And God was with the child, who grew up and lived in the desert; and became an archer.

He remained, I say, in the desert of Paran; and his mother took a wife for him from the land of Egypt.

And it came to pass at that time that Abimelech, and Phicol, the commander of his army, spoke to Abraham, saying, God is with you in all things that you do.

Now therefore, swear to me here by [the name of] God that you will not lie to me, nor to my children, nor to my children's children, and that according to the favor that I have shown you, you will act towards me, and towards the country in which you have resided as a stranger.

And Abraham replied, "I swear to you."

But Abraham complained to Abimelech about a well of water, which Abimelech's servants had seized by force.

And Abimelech said: I did not know who did this, nor did you tell me about it, nor have I heard of it until this day.

Then Abraham took sheep and oxen and gave them to Abimelech, and they made a covenant together.

And Abraham set apart seven young ewes from his flock.

And Abimelech said to Abraham, "What do these seven young ewes that you have set apart mean?"

And he answered: You will take these seven young ewes from my hand, as a testimony to me that I dug this well.

That is why that place was called Beer-Sebah, because they both swore an oath there.

So they made an alliance in Beersheba, then Abimelech arose with Phicol, the commander of his army, and they returned to the land of the Philistines.

And [Abraham] planted a grove of oaks in Beersheba, and there called on the name of the Lord, the [God] Mighty Eternal.

And Abraham remained as a stranger in the land of the Philistines for a long time.

Now it came to pass after these things that God tested Abraham, and said to him, "Abraham!" And he answered, "Here I am."

And God said to him, "Now take your son, your only son, whom you love—Isaac—and go to the land of Moriah, and offer him there as a burnt offering on one of the mountains that I shall tell you about."

Abraham, therefore, having risen early in the morning, put the saddle upon his donkey, and took two of his servants with him, and Isaac his son; and having split the wood for the burnt offering, he set out on the way, and went to the place which God had told him.

On the third day Abraham raised his eyes and saw the place from afar.
And he said to his servants, "Stay here with the donkey; I and the child will walk over there and worship, and after that we will return to you."
And Abraham took the wood of the burnt offering, and put it on Isaac his son, and took the fire in his hand, and a knife; and the two of them went away together.
Then Isaac spoke to Abraham his father, and said, "My father!" Abraham answered, "Here I am, my son." And he said, "Here are the fire and the wood, but where is the animal for the burnt offering?"
And Abraham answered, "My son, God will provide himself an animal for the burnt offering." And the two of them walked on together.
And having arrived at the place which God had told him about, Abraham built an altar there, and arranged the wood, and then he bound Isaac his son, and laid him on the altar, on top of the wood.
Then Abraham reached out his hand and seized the knife to slit his son's throat. But the Angel of the Lord called to him from heaven, saying, "Abraham, Abraham!" He answered, "Here I am."
And he said to her, "Do not lay your hand on the child or do anything to him; for now I know that you fear God, since you have not spared your son, your only son, for me."

And Abraham lifted up his eyes and looked, and behold, behind him was a ram, caught on a bush by its horns; and Abraham went and took the ram, and offered it as a burnt offering in place of his son.
And Abraham called the name of that place, "The Lord will provide for it"; therefore it is said to this day, "In the mountain of the Lord it will be provided."
And the Angel of the Lord called out from heaven to Abraham a second time, Saying, "I have sworn by myself," declares the Lord, "because you have done this thing, and have not spared your son, your only son,"
Surely I will bless you, and I will multiply your descendants very abundantly as the stars of heaven, and as the sand that is on the seashore; and your descendants will possess the gate of their enemies.
And all nations of the earth will be blessed through your offspring, because you have obeyed my voice.
So Abraham returned to his servants, and they arose and went together to Beersheba; for Abraham was staying in Beersheba.
Now it came to pass after these things that someone brought news to Abraham, saying, Behold, Milcah has also borne children to Nahor your brother.
[Knowledge] Huts his firstborn, and Buz his brother, and Cemuel father of Aram, And Kesed, and Hazo, and Pildas, and Jidlaph, and Bethuel;
And Bethuel bore Rebekah. Milcah bore these eight to Nahor, Abraham's brother.
And his concubine named Reuma also gave birth to Tebah, Gaham, Tahas, and Mahaca.
Now Sarah lived one hundred and twenty-seven years; these were the years of her life.

And she died in Kiriath-Arbah, which is Hebron, in the land of Canaan; and Abraham came to grieve for Sarah, and to mourn for her.
And having risen from before his dead man, he spoke to the Hittites, saying:
I am a stranger and a foreigner among you; give me a burial plot among you, so that I may bury my dead, [and remove him] from my sight.
And the Hittites answered Abraham, and said to him:
My Lord, listen to us; you are among us an excellent Prince, bury your dead in the most distinguished of our sepulchers; none of us will refuse you his sepulcher, so that you may bury your dead there.
Then Abraham arose and bowed down before the people of the land; [that is], before the Hittites.
And he spoke to them, and said: If you please let me bury my dead, [and remove him] from before me, listen to me, and intercede for me with Hephron, son of Zohar;

So that he may give me his cave of Machpelah, which is at the end of his field; that he may give it to me in the midst of you, for the price it is worth, and that I may possess it to make it a sepulcher.

Now Hephron was sitting among the Hittites. Hephron the Hittite answered Abraham in the presence of the Hittites, who were listening to him—that is, all who entered the gate of his city—saying:

No, my Lord, listen to me: I give you the field, I also give you the cave that is in it, I give it to you in the presence of the children of my people; bury your dead there.

And Abraham bowed down before the people of the land.

And he spoke to Hephron, with all the people of the land hearing him, and said to him, "Please, I beg you, listen to me: I will give you the money for the field; receive it from me, and I will bury my dead there."

And Hephron answered Abraham, saying:

My Lord, listen to me: The land is worth four hundred shekels of silver between you and me; but what is that? Bury your dead then.

And Abraham, having heard Hephron, paid him the money of which he had spoken, the Hittites hearing him, [namely] four hundred shekels of silver, which was current among the merchants.

And the field of Hephron, which was in Machpelah before Mamre, both the field and the cave that was in it, and all the trees that were in the field, and in all its surrounding borders,

Everything was acquired as property by Abraham in the presence of the Hittites, [namely] of all those who entered by the gate of the city.

And after this Abraham buried Sarah his wife in the cave of the field of Machpelah, before Mamre, which is Hebron, in the land of Canaan.

The field, therefore, and the cave that is in it, was given by the Hittites to Abraham, so that he might possess it to make his tomb there.

Now Abraham grew old and very advanced in years, and the Lord had blessed Abraham in all things.

And Abraham said to the oldest of the servants in his house, who had authority over all that belonged to him, "Put your hand under my thigh."

And I will make you swear by the Lord, the God of heaven, and the God of earth, that you will not take a wife for my son from among the daughters of the Canaanites, among whom I dwell.

But you will go to my country and to my relatives, and you will take a wife for my son Isaac there.

And this servant [answered] him: Perhaps the woman will not want to follow me to this country; will I necessarily have to bring your son back to the country from which you came?

Abraham said to him, "Be careful not to bring my son back there."

The Lord, the God of heaven, who took me from my father's house and from the land of my relatives, and who spoke to me and swore, saying, "To your offspring I will give this land," will himself send his angel before you, and you shall take a wife for my son from there.

If the woman refuses to go with you, you will be released from this oath I am making you swear. In any case, do not bring my son back there.

And the servant put his hand under the thigh of Abraham his Lord, and swore to him according to these things.

So the servant took ten camels from among his master's camels and went away, for he had all his master's possessions in his power. He departed, therefore, and went to Mesopotamia, to the city of Nachor.

And he made the camels rest on their knees outside the city, near a well of water, in the evening, at the time when those who go out to draw [water].

And he said, "O Lord! God of my Lord Abraham; grant me [a happy] encounter today; and be favorable to my Lord Abraham."

Behold, I will stand by the fountain of water, and the daughters of the people of the city shall come out to draw water.

So let the young woman to whom I say, 'Please lower your pitcher so I may drink,' and who answers me, 'Drink, and I will also give your camels water to drink,' be the one you have chosen for your servant Isaac, and I will know by this that you have been favorable to my Lord.

And it came to pass that before he had finished speaking, behold, Rebekah, daughter of Bethuel, son of Milcah, wife of Nahor, Abraham's brother, came out with her pitcher on her shoulder.

And the young girl was very beautiful to behold, and a virgin, and no man had known her. So she went down to the fountain, and as she was coming back up after filling her jug,

The servant ran to meet her and said, "Please give me a little water to drink from your jug."

And she said to him, "My lord, drink." And immediately lowering her pitcher onto his hand, she gave him a drink.

And after she had finished giving him a drink, she said: I will draw some more for your camels also, until they have finished drinking.

And having quickly emptied her jug into the trough, she ran again to the well to draw [water], and she drew some for all her camels.

And this man wondered at her, [considering], without saying a word, whether the Lord had made his journey prosperous or not.

And when the camels had finished drinking, this man took a gold ring, weighing half a shekel, and two bracelets [to put] on the hands of this [girl], weighing ten [shekels] of gold.

And he said to her, "Whose daughter are you? Please tell me; is there no place in your father's house where we can stay?"

And she answered him: I am the daughter of Bethuel, son of Milcah, whom she bore to Nahor.

And she also said to him: We have plenty of straw and fodder, and room to live.

And this man bowed down and prostrated himself before the Lord:

And he said: Blessed be the Lord, the God of my master Abraham, who has not ceased to show his grace and his truth to my master: and as I was on my way, the Lord led me to the house of my master's brothers.

And the girl ran, and brought all these things back to her mother's house.

Now Rebecca had a brother named Laban, who ran outside to this man near the fountain.

For as soon as he saw the ring and the bracelets on his sister's hands, and heard the words of his sister Rebekah, who had said, "This man spoke to me thus," he went to him; and behold, he was near the camels by the fountain.

And he said to him, "Come in, you who are blessed by the Lord; why are you standing outside? I have prepared the house, and a place for your camels."

So the man entered the house, and they unharnessed the camels and gave them straw and fodder; and they brought water, both to wash his feet and the feet of those who were with him:

And they presented him with food. But he said, "I will not eat until I have said what I have to say." And [Laban] said, "Speak."

He therefore said, "I am Abraham's servant."

But the Lord has richly blessed my Lord, and he has become great; for he has given him sheep, oxen, silver, gold, male and female servants, camels, and donkeys.

And Sarah, the wife of my Lord, bore my Lord a son in her old age, to whom he gave all that he had.

And my Lord made me swear an oath, saying: You shall not take a wife for my son from among the daughters of the Canaanites in whose land I dwell,

But you will go to my father's house and to my relatives, and you will take a wife for my son there.

And I said to my Lord: Perhaps the woman will not follow me.

And he answered me, "The Lord, before whose face I have lived, will send his angel with you and will make your journey prosperous, and you shall take for your son a wife from my relatives and from my father's house."

If you go to my relatives, you will then be free from the execration of the oath that I make you take: and if they do not give it to you, you will be free from the execration of the oath that I make you take.

So I came to the fountain today, and I said: O Eternal One! God of my Lord Abraham, if now you will grant success to the journey I have undertaken:

Behold, I will stand by the fountain of water. Let it happen then that the girl who comes out to draw water from it, and to whom I say, 'Please give me a little water to drink from your jug;

And who will answer me, "Drink, and I will also draw water for your camels," let that woman be the one whom the Lord has destined for the son of my Lord.

But before I had finished speaking in my heart, behold, Rebekah came out, with her pitcher on her shoulder, and went down to the fountain, and drew some water; and I said to her, Give me, I pray you, a drink.

And immediately she lowered her jug from [her shoulder], and said to me: Drink, and I will also give your camels a drink. So I drank, and she also gave the camels a drink.

Then I questioned her, saying, "Whose daughter are you?" She answered, "I am the daughter of Bethuel, son of Nahor, whom Milca bore to him." So I put a ring on her forehead and bracelets on her hands.

I bowed down and prostrated myself before the Lord, and I blessed the Lord, the God of my Master Abraham, who led me in the right way, so that I should take the daughter of my Master's brother for his son.

Now then, if you want to act freely and truthfully towards my Lord, tell me; if not, tell me also; and I will turn to the right or to the left.

And Laban and Bethuel answered, saying, "This matter is from the Lord; we cannot tell you either good or bad."

Behold, Rebekah is in your hands; take her and go; and let her be the wife of the son of your Lord, as the Lord has spoken.

And it came to pass that as soon as Abraham's servant heard their words, he bowed down to the ground before the Lord.

And the servant took out silver and gold rings and clothes and gave them to Rebecca. He also gave exquisite gifts to her brother and her mother.

Then they ate and drank, he and the people who were with him, and they stayed there that night; and when they got up early in the morning, he said: Send me back to my Lord.

And the brother and mother said to him: Let the girl stay with us for a few days, at least ten days, after which she will leave.

And he said to them, "Do not delay me, since the Lord has made my journey prosperous; send me back, so that I may go to my Lord."

So they said, "Let's call the girl and ask her for an answer from her own mouth."

So they called Rebecca and said to her, "Do you want to go with this man?" And she answered, "I will go."

So they let their sister Rebekah and her nurse go, along with Abraham's servant and his men.

And they blessed Rebekah, and said to her, "You are our sister; be fruitful a thousand times over [for generations], and may your offspring possess the gate of her enemies."

Then Rebecca and her maids got up, and they mounted the camels and followed the man. So the servant took Rebecca and went away.

Now Isaac was returning from the well of the Living One who sees me, and he was staying in the land of the South.

And Isaac had gone out to the fields in the evening to pray; and lifting up his eyes he looked, and behold, camels were coming.

Rebecca also lifted up her eyes and saw Isaac, and dismounted from the camel; For she had said to the servant, "Who is this man walking in the fields ahead of us?" And the servant had answered, "He is my Lord." And she took a veil and covered herself.

And the servant told Isaac all the things he had done.

Then Isaac brought Rebekah into the tent of Sarah his mother, and he took her as his wife, and loved her. So Isaac was comforted after his mother's death.

Now Abraham took another wife, named Keturah,

Who bore him Zimram, Joksan, Medan, Midian, Jisba, and Suah.

And Jokshan fathered Sheba and Dedan. And the children of Dedan were Ashurim, and Letusim, and Leummim.

And the children of Midian were Hepha, Hepher, Hanoch, Abidah, and Eldaha. All these were children of Keturah.

And Abraham gave everything that belonged to him to Isaac.

But he gave gifts to the sons of his concubines, and sent them away from his son Isaac, to the East to the land of the East, while he was still alive.

And the years that Abraham lived were one hundred and seventy-five years.

And Abraham, faint with age, died in a happy old age, very old, and full [of days], and was gathered to his people.

And Isaac and Ishmael his sons buried him in the cave of Machpelah, in the field of Hephron, son of Zohar the Hittite, which is opposite Mamre.

The field that Abraham had bought from the Hittites: there Abraham was buried with Sarah his wife.

Now it came to pass after the death of Abraham, that God blessed Isaac his son: and Isaac dwelt by the well of the Living One who sees me.

These are the generations of Ishmael, Abraham's son, whom Hagar the Egyptian, Sarah's servant, bore to Abraham.

These are the names of the children of Ishmael, by which names they were named throughout their generations. Ishmael's firstborn was Nebaioth, then Kedar, Adbeel, Mibsam,

Mismah, Duma, Massa,

Hadar, Téma, Jétur, Naphis, and Kedma.

These are the children of Ishmael, and these are their names, according to their villages, and according to their castles: twelve princes of their peoples.

And the years of Ishmael's life were one hundred and thirty-seven years; and he fainted, and died, and was gathered to his people.

And [his descendants] lived from Havilah to Sur, which is opposite Egypt, when one comes towards Assyria; and [the land] which had fallen to [Ishmael] was in the sight of all his brothers.

These are the generations of Isaac, Abraham's son. Abraham fathered Isaac.

And Isaac was forty years old when he married Rebekah, daughter of Bethuel the Syrian, of Paddan-Aram, sister of Laban the Syrian.

And Isaac prayed earnestly to the Lord concerning his wife, because she was barren; and the Lord was moved by his prayers; and Rebekah his wife conceived.

But the children struggled together in her womb, and she said, "If it is so, why am I?" And she went to inquire of the Lord.

And the Lord said to him, "Two nations are in your womb, and two peoples will come from your body; and one people will be stronger than the other people, and the greater will serve the lesser."

And when her time to give birth was fulfilled, behold, there were two twins in her womb.

The one who came out first was red-haired, and all [hairy], like a hairy cloak: and they called his name Esau.

Then his brother came out, holding Esau's heel in his hand; therefore he was called Jacob. Now Isaac was sixty years old when they were born.

Since then, the children grew up, and Esau was a skilled hunter and a man of the field; but Jacob was a blameless man and dwelt in the tents.

And Isaac loved Esau, for venison was his food. But Rebekah loved Jacob.

Now as Jacob was cooking soup, Esau came from the fields, and he was tired.

And Esau said to Jacob, "Please give me some of that red meat, that red meat, for I am weary." Therefore his name was called Edom.

But Jacob said to him, "Sell me your birthright today."

And Esau answered, "Behold, I am about to die; and what good will the birthright do me?"

And Jacob said, "Swear to me today," and he swore to him; thus he sold his birthright to Jacob.

And Jacob gave Esau bread and lentil stew; and he ate and drank; then he arose and went away; thus Esau despised his birthright.

Now there was a famine in the land, besides the first famine which had been in the days of Abraham; and Isaac went to Abimelech king of the Philistines, in Gerar.

For the Lord had appeared to him and said, "Do not go down to Egypt; stay in the land I will tell you about."

Stay in that land, and I will be with you and bless you; for I will give to you and to your descendants all these lands, and I will confirm the oath that I swore to your father Abraham.

I will multiply your descendants like the stars of heaven, and I will give these lands to your descendants, and all nations of the earth will be blessed through your offspring.

Because Abraham obeyed my voice, and kept my ordinance, my commandments, my statutes, and my laws.

So Isaac remained in Gerar.

And when the people of the place inquired who his wife was, he answered: She is my sister; for he was afraid to say: She is my wife; lest, [he said], it should happen that the inhabitants of the place should kill me because of Rebecca; for she is beautiful to see.

Now it came to pass after he had been there some days that Abimelech, King of the Philistines, was looking out of the window, and behold, he saw Isaac playing with Rebekah his wife.

Then Abimelech called Isaac and said to him, "Behold, she is truly your wife; and how is it that you said, 'She is my sister'?" And Isaac answered him, "Because I said, 'So that perhaps I may not die because of her.'"

And Abimelech said: What have you done to us? It was a close call that one of the people slept with your wife, and you caused us to fall into sin.

Abimelech therefore issued a decree to all the people, saying, "Anyone who touches this man or his wife shall surely be put to death."

And Isaac sowed in that land, and he reaped a hundredfold in that year; for the Lord blessed him.

So this man grew, and kept growing, until he was wonderfully grown.

He had both flocks and herds, and a great number of servants; and the Philistines envied him:

So much so that they blocked the wells that his father's servants had dug in the time of his father Abraham, and filled them with earth.

Abimelech also said to Isaac: Leave us, for you have become much more powerful than we are.

So Isaac departed from there and went to camp in the valley of Gerar, and remained there.

And Isaac dug again the wells of water that had been dug in the days of Abraham his father, which the Philistines had stopped up after the death of Abraham, and called them by the same names that his father had called them.

And Isaac's servants dug in that valley, and found there a well of living water. But the shepherds of Gerar had a dispute with Isaac's shepherds, saying, "The water is ours." And he named the well Heseq, because they had quarreled with him.

Then they dug another well, over which they also quarreled; and he called its name Sitnah.

So he withdrew from there and dug another well, over which they did not quarrel, and he named it Rehoboth, saying, "This is because the Lord has now given us room, and we have increased in this land."

And from there he went up to Beer-Sebah.

And the Lord appeared to him that same night, and said to him, "I am the God of Abraham your father; do not be afraid, for I am with you; I will bless you and multiply your descendants for the sake of Abraham my servant."

And he built an altar there, and called on the name of the Lord, and pitched his tents there; and Isaac's servants dug a well there.

And Abimelech came to him from Gerar with Ahuzat his friend, and Phicol the commander of his army.

But Isaac said to them, "Why have you come to me, since you hate me and have sent me away from you?"

And they answered, "We have clearly seen that the Lord is with you; and we have said, 'Let there now be an oath with a curse between us, [that is], between us and you; and let us make a covenant with you.

If you harm us, as we have not touched you, and as we have only done you good, and let you go in peace; you who are now blessed by the Lord.

So he prepared a feast for them, and they ate and drank.

And they rose early in the morning and swore to one another. Then Isaac sent them away, and they departed from him in peace.

It happened on that same day that Isaac's servants came and spoke to him concerning the well they had dug, and said to him, "We have found water."

And he called it Sibah; that is why the name of the city has been Beer-Sebah to this day.

Now Esau, at the age of forty, took as wives Judith, daughter of Beeri the Hittite, and Basemath, daughter of Elon the Hittite;

Which caused bitterness of spirit to Isaac and Rebecca.

And it came to pass that when Isaac grew old, and his eyes were so dim that he could not see, he called Esau his firstborn son, and said unto him, My son! And he answered him, Here I am.

And he said to him, "Behold, now I am old, and I do not know the day of my death."

Now then, I beg you, take your weapons, your quiver, and your bow, and go out to the fields, and get me some venison.

And prepare for me appetizing meats such as I like, and bring them to me, so that I may eat, and that my soul may bless you before I die.

Now Rebecca was listening while Isaac spoke to his son Esau. So Esau went out to the fields to get some venison and bring it back.

And Rebekah spoke to Jacob her son, and said to him, "Behold, I heard your father speak to Esau your brother, saying:

Bring me venison, and prepare for me meats to savor, so that I may eat them; and I will bless you before the Lord before I die.

Now then, my son, obey my word, and do what I am going to command you.

Now go to the sheepfold, and get me two good kids from among the goats, and I will prepare some tasty meat for your father, just the way he likes it.

And you shall take them to your father, so that he may eat them, and bless you, before his death.

And Jacob answered Rebekah his mother, "Behold, Esau my brother is a hairy man, and I am a hairless man."

Perhaps my father will feel me, and he will look upon me as a man who wanted to deceive him, and I will bring his curse upon myself, and not his blessing.

And his mother said to him, "My son, may the curse that you [fear] be upon me! Only obey my word, and go and take from me [what I have told you]."

So he went away, and took it, and brought it to his mother; and his mother prepared hearty meals, just as his father liked them.

Then Rebecca took the finest garments of Esau her older son, which she had in the house, and she dressed Jacob her younger son in them.

And she covered her hands and her neck, which were hairless, with the skins of the kids.

Then she put the food she had prepared and the bread she had made into the hands of her son Jacob.

So he came to his father and said to him, "Father!" He replied, "Here I am; who are you, my son?"

And Jacob said to his father, "I am Esau, your firstborn son; I have done as you commanded me; now rise, I pray you, sit down, and eat of my game, that your soul may bless me."

And Isaac said to his son, "What is this, that you have found it so quickly, my son?"

And he said, "The Lord your God has caused it to be found before me."

And Isaac said to Jacob, "My son, come near, I pray you, and I will feel you, [so that I may know] whether you yourself are my son Esau, or not."

So Jacob approached his father Isaac, who felt him and said, "This voice is the voice of Jacob, but these hands are the hands of Esau."

And he did not recognize him; for his hands were hairy like the hands of his brother Esau; and he blessed him.

He then said, "Are you yourself my son Esau?" He answered, "I am."

He also said to him, "Bring me [the meat], so that I may eat of my son's game, and that my soul may bless you." And he brought it to him, and [Isaac] ate; he also brought him wine, and he drank.

Then Isaac his father said to him, "Come near, I pray you, and kiss me, my son."

And he approached and kissed him. And [Isaac] smelled the scent of his garments and blessed him, saying, "This is the smell of my son, like the smell of a field that the Lord has blessed."

May God give you dew from heaven, and fatness from the earth, and an abundance of wheat and new wine!

Let the peoples serve you, and let the nations bow down before you! Be lord over your brothers, and let your mother's sons bow down before you! Whoever curses you, be cursed; and whoever blesses you, be blessed.

Now it happened that as soon as Isaac had finished blessing Jacob, Jacob having scarcely left before his father Isaac, his brother Esau returned from hunting; He also prepared some tasty meats and brought them to his father, and said to him, "Let my father get up and eat some of his son's game, so that your soul may bless me."

And Isaac his father said to him, "Who are you?" And he said, "I am your son, your firstborn son, Esau."

And Isaac was greatly troubled, and said, "Who is he, and where is he who took game and brought it to me? I ate it all before you came, and I blessed it; and indeed, it shall be blessed!"

As soon as Esau heard his father's words, he cried out with a loud and bitter cry, and said to his father, "Bless me also, bless me, my father!"

But he said: Your brother came with deceit, and took away your blessing.

And [Esau] said, "Is it not with good reason that they called his name Jacob? For he has already supplanted me twice; he has taken away my birthright, and now, behold, he has carried off my blessing.” Then he said, “Have you not reserved a blessing for me?”

And Isaac answered Esau, saying, “Behold, I have made him your lord, and have given him all his brothers as servants, and have supplied him with wheat and new wine; and what shall I do now for you, my son?”

And Esau said to his father, “Do you have only one blessing, my father? Bless me also, bless me, my father!” And Esau raised his voice and wept.

And Isaac his father answered, and said, Behold, your dwelling shall be in the fatness of the earth, and in the dew of heaven above.

And you will live by your sword, and you will be enslaved to your brother; but it will come to pass that, having become master, you will break his yoke from off your neck.

And Esau hated Jacob because of the blessing with which his father had blessed him, and he said in his heart, “The days of mourning for my father are approaching, and then I will kill Jacob my brother.”

And the words of Esau, her older son, were reported to Rebekah; and she sent for Jacob, her second son, and said to him, “Behold, Esau your brother is comforted in the hope that he may kill you.”

Now then, my son, obey my word; get up, and flee to Haran, to Laban, my brother.

And stay with him for a while, until your brother's fury has passed;

May his anger be turned away from you, and may he forget the things you have done to him. Then I will send someone to rescue you. Why should I be deprived of both of you in one day?

And Rebekah said to Isaac, “My life has become tiresome because of these Hittite women. If Jacob marries one of these Hittite women, like the women of this land, what good will my life be to me?”

So Isaac called Jacob, and blessed him, and commanded him, saying, “You shall not take a wife from among the daughters of Canaan.”

Get up; go to Paddan-Aram, to the house of Bethuel, your mother's father, and take for yourself a wife from there from the daughters of Laban, your mother's brother.

And may the Almighty God bless you, and make you increase and multiply, so that you may become an assembly of peoples.

And may he give you the blessing of Abraham, to you and to your descendants with you, so that you may inherit the land where you were a stranger, which God gave to Abraham.

So Isaac sent Jacob away, and he went to Paddan-Aram, to Laban, son of Bethuel the Syrian, brother of Rebekah, the mother of Jacob and Esau.

And Esau saw that Isaac had blessed Jacob, and had sent him to Paddan-Aram, so that he might take a wife for himself from that land, and that he had commanded him, when he blessed him, saying: Do not take a wife from among the daughters of Canaan;

And that Jacob had obeyed his father and mother, and had gone to Paddan-Aram.

Therefore, when Esau saw that the daughters of Canaan displeased Isaac his father, He went to Ishmael, and took as his wife, in addition to his [other] wives, Mahalath, daughter of Ishmael, son of Abraham, sister of Nebaioth.

So Jacob left Beersheba and went to Haran.

And he found himself in a place where he spent the night, because the sun had set. So he took some stones from that place and made them his pillow, and fell asleep in that same place.

And he dreamed; and behold, a ladder was set up on the earth, and its top reached unto heaven; and behold, the angels of God were ascending and descending on it.

And behold, the Lord was standing on the ladder, and he said to him, I am the Lord, the God of Abraham your father, and the God of Isaac; I will give to you and to your offspring the land on which you sleep.

And your descendants shall be like the dust of the earth, and you shall spread to the west, to the east, to the north, and to the south, and all the families of the earth shall be blessed in you and in your offspring.

And behold, I am with you; and I will keep you wherever you go; and I will bring you back to this land; for I will not leave you until I have done what I have said to you.

And when Jacob awoke from his sleep, he said, "Surely the Lord is in this place, and I did not know it."

And he was afraid, and said, How terrifying is this place! This is the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven.

And Jacob rose early in the morning, and took the stone which he had put under his head, and set it up as a pillar; and poured oil on top of it.

And he called the name of that place Bethel: but before that the city was called Luz.

And Jacob made a vow, saying, "If God will be with me, and will keep me safe on the journey I am taking, and will give me bread to eat and clothes to wear,

And if I return in peace to my father's house, surely the Lord will be my God.

And this stone that I have set up as a pillar shall be the house of God; and of all that you have given me, I will give you a full tenth.

So Jacob set out on his journey and went to the land of the Eastern peoples.

And he looked, and behold a well in a field, and there also three flocks of sheep lying down near the well (for the flocks were watered there), and there was a large stone over the opening of the well.

And when all the flocks were gathered there, they rolled the stone off the well's opening and watered the flocks; and then they put the stone back in its place over the well's opening.

And Jacob said to them, "My brothers, where are you from?" They answered, "We are from Haran."

And he said to them, "Do you not know Laban son of Nahor?" And they answered, "We know him."

He said to them, "Is he well?" They answered him, "He is well; and here is Rachel his daughter, coming with the flock."

And he said, "Look, it is still broad daylight; it is not time to bring the flocks away. Water the flocks and bring them back to pasture."

They replied: We cannot do it until all the flocks are gathered together, and the stone has been removed from over the well opening, in order to water the flocks.

And while he was still talking with them, Rachel arrived with her father's flock; for she was a shepherdess.

And it came to pass that when Jacob saw Rachel, daughter of Laban, his mother's brother, and the flock of Laban, his mother's brother, he approached and rolled the stone from above the mouth of the well, and watered the flock of Laban, his mother's brother.

And Jacob kissed Rachel, and raising his voice, he wept.

And Jacob told Rachel that he was her father's brother, and that he was Rebekah's son; and she ran to tell her father.

And it came to pass that as soon as Laban heard the news of Jacob, his sister's son, he ran to meet him, embraced him, and kissed him, and brought him into his house; and [Jacob] told Laban all that [had happened to him].

And Laban said to him, "Surely you are my own bone and my own flesh," and he stayed with him for a whole month.

Then Laban said to Jacob, "Will you serve me for nothing, just because you are my brother? Tell me, what will your wages be?"

Now Laban had two daughters, the elder of whom was named Leah, and the younger, Rachel.

But Leah had tender eyes, and Rachel was of good height and beautiful to behold.

And Jacob loved Rachel, and he said, I will serve you seven years for Rachel, your youngest daughter.

And Laban replied, "It is better that I give it to you than that I give it to another; stay with me."

So Jacob served seven years for Rachel, which seemed to him like a few days because of his love for her.

And Jacob said to Laban, "Give me my wife, for my time is fulfilled, and I will go to her."

So Laban gathered all the people of the place together and held a feast.

But when evening came, he took his daughter Leah and brought her to Jacob, who went to her.

And Laban gave Zilpah his servant to Leah, his daughter, as a servant.

But when morning came, there was Leah. And he said to Laban, "What have you done to me? Didn't I serve you for Rachel? Why then have you deceived me?"

Laban replied: We do not do that in this place, to give the younger daughter before the older one.

Complete this week, and we will also give you the other, for the service you will do with me for another seven years.

So Jacob did this, and he completed Leah's week; and Laban also gave him Rachel his daughter as a wife.

And Laban gave Bilhah his servant to Rachel his daughter as a servant.

So he also went to Rachel, and he loved Rachel more than Leah; and he served at his house for another seven years.

And the Lord, seeing that Leah was hated, opened her womb; but Rachel was barren.

And Leah conceived and bore a son, and she named him Reuben, for she said, "Because the Lord has seen my affliction; therefore now also my husband will love me."

She conceived again and gave birth to a son, and said, "Because the Lord has heard that I am hated, he has given me this one also." And she named him Simeon.

And she conceived again, and gave birth to a son, and said, Now my husband shall cling to me: for I have borne him three sons: Therefore his name was called Levi.

She conceived again and gave birth to a son, and said, "This time I will praise the Lord"; therefore she named him Judah; and she had no more children.

Then Rachel, seeing that she was not bearing children to Jacob, was jealous of Leah her sister; and said to Jacob, "Give me children, or I shall die."

And Jacob became very angry with Rachel, and said to her, "Am I in the place of God, who has prevented you from having children?"

And she said, "Here is my servant Bilhah; go in to her and she will bear children on my knees, and I will have children by her."

So she gave him Bilhah her servant as a wife, and Jacob went in to her.

And Bilhah conceived and bore Jacob a son.

And Rachel said, God has judged in my favor, and he has also answered my voice, and has given me a son; therefore she named him Dan.

And Bilhah, Rachel's servant, conceived again and bore Jacob a second son.

And Rachel said, "I have wrestled strongly with my sister, and I have prevailed." Therefore she named him Naphtali.

Then Leah, seeing that she had stopped bearing children, took Zilpah her servant, and gave her to Jacob as a wife.

And Zilpah, Leah's servant, bore Jacob a son.

And Leah said: A troop has arrived, that is why she named him Gad.

And Zilpah, Leah's servant, bore Jacob a second son.

And Leah said, "It is to make me happy; for the girls will call me blessed"; therefore she named him Asher.

Now Reuben went out at the time of the wheat harvest, found mandrakes in the fields, and brought them to Leah his mother; and Rachel said to Leah, "Please give me some mandrakes from your son."

And she answered him, "Is it a small thing that you have taken my husband from me, that you are also taking my son's mandrakes from me?" And Rachel said, "Let him lie with you tonight, then, for the sake of your son's mandrakes."

And when Jacob returned from the fields in the evening, Leah went out to meet him and said to him, "You will come to me, for I have praised you for my son's mandrakes," and he lay with her that night.

And God listened to Leah, and she conceived and bore Jacob a fifth son.

And she said, "God has rewarded me because I gave my servant to my husband"; therefore she named him Issachar.

And Leah conceived again, and bore Jacob a sixth son.

And Leah said, "God has given me a good dowry; now my husband will remain with me, for I have borne him six children; therefore she named him Zebulun."

Then she gave birth to a daughter, and named her Dina.

And God remembered Rachel, and God having answered her prayer, opened her womb.

Then she conceived and gave birth to a son, and said, "God has taken away my disgrace."

And she named him Joseph, saying, "May the Lord add to me another son!"

And it came to pass that after Rachel had borne Joseph, Jacob said to Laban, "Give me leave, that I may return to my place and to my country."

Give me my wives and children, for whom I have served you, and I will go away; for you know how I have served you.

And Laban answered him, "Listen, I beg you, if I have found favor in your sight, I know that the Lord has blessed me because of you."

He also said to him: Tell me what salary [you want], and I will give it to you.

And he answered him: You know how I served you, and what became of your livestock with me.

For what you had before I came was little, but it has increased greatly, and the Lord has blessed you at my coming; and now, when shall I also do [something] for my house?

And [Laban] said to him, "What shall I give you?" And Jacob answered, "You shall give me nothing; but I will again tend your flocks and keep them, if you do this for me."

Let me pass today among your flocks, [and] let all the speckled and spotted sheep be set apart, and all the red lambs, and the speckled and spotted goats; and this shall be my wages.

And from now on my righteousness will testify for me; for it will come upon my wages, in your presence; and anything that is not pecked or spotted among the goats, and red among the lambs, will be considered stolen, if it is found with me.

And Laban said, "Behold, let it be done to you as you have said."

And on that day he separated the speckled and spotted goats, and all the spotted and speckled female goats, all those with white markings, and all the red lambs, and he put them into the hands of his sons.

And he put a distance of three days' journey between himself and Jacob; and Jacob tended the rest of Laban's flocks.

But Jacob took fresh rods of poplar, hazel, and chestnut, and removed the bark, exposing the white part of the rods.

And he placed the rods that he had peeled in front of the flocks, in the troughs, and in the watering places where the sheep came to drink; and they went into heat when they came to drink.

The ewes, therefore, went into heat at the sight of the rods, and they produced mottled, speckled, and spotted ewes.

And Jacob divided the lambs, and made the sheep of Laban's flock look after the speckled sheep, and all that was red; and he put his flocks apart, and did not put them near Laban's flocks.

And it happened that whenever the early ewes came into heat, Jacob would put the rods in the watering troughs before the eyes of the flock, so that they would come into heat by looking at the rods.

But when the sheep were late, he did not put them in; and the late ones belonged to Laban, and the early ones to Jacob.

So this man became very wealthy, and had large flocks, female and male servants, camels, and donkeys.

Now [Jacob] heard the words of Laban's sons, who said: Jacob took everything that belonged to our father, and from what belonged to our father, he acquired all this glory.

And Jacob looked at Laban's face, and behold, he was not toward him as before.

And the Lord said to Jacob, "Return to the land of your fathers and to your relatives, and I will be with you."

So Jacob sent word to Rachel and Leah to call them to the fields and their flocks, And he said to them, "I know by your father's face that he is not toward me as he was before; yet the God of my father has been with me."

And you know that I served your father with all my might.

But your father mocked me and changed my wages ten times; but God did not allow him to do me any harm.

When he said, "The speckled ones will be your wages," then all the sheep gave birth to speckled lambs; and when he said, "The spotted ones will be your wages," then all the sheep gave birth to spotted lambs.

So God took the cattle away from your father and gave them to me.

For it came to pass at the time when the ewes were in heat, that I lifted my eyes, and I saw in a dream, and behold, the male goats that were covering the female goats were speckled, spotted, and mottled,

And the Angel of God said to me in a dream: Jacob! And I answered: Here I am.

And he said: Now lift up your eyes, and look: all the male goats that are covering the female goats are speckled, spotted, and mottled; for I have seen all that Laban is doing to you.

I am the Mighty God of Bethel, where you anointed the stone [that you set up] as a monument, when you made a vow to me there; now [therefore], arise, leave this land, and return to the land of your relatives.

Then Rachel and Leah answered him, and said, "Do we still have any portion or inheritance in our father's house?"

Has he not treated us as foreigners? For he sold us, and even squandered all our money.

For all the riches that God took away from our father belonged to us and to our children. Now therefore, do everything that God has told you.

So Jacob arose, and made his children and his wives ride on camels;

And he took all his livestock and his possessions, which he had acquired, and all that he owned, which he had acquired in Paddan-Aram, to go to Isaac his father, in the land of Canaan.

Now, while Laban was away shearing his sheep, Rachel stole the marmosets that belonged to her father.

And Jacob hid from Laban the Syrian, having declared nothing [of his plan] to him, because he was fleeing.

So he fled with all that belonged to him, and left, and crossed the river, and advanced towards the mountain of Gilead.

And on the third day it was reported to Laban that Jacob had fled from him.

And he took his brothers with him, and pursued him for seven days' journey, and caught up with him at the mountain of Gilead.

But God appeared to Laban the Syrian in a dream at night, and said to him: Take care not to say anything to Jacob, good or bad.

So Laban reached Jacob; and Jacob had pitched his tents in the mountain; and Laban also pitched his tents with his brothers in the mountain of Gilead.

Now Laban said to Jacob, "What have you done? You have deserted me; you have taken my daughters away like prisoners of war."

Why did you flee secretly, and elude me, without giving me any notice? For I would have led you with joy and with songs, to the sound of drums and violins. You did not [only] let me kiss my sons and daughters; you did foolishly in that. I have the power to harm you, but the God of your father spoke to me last night, saying, "Be careful not to say anything to Jacob, good or bad." Now then, [good thing], that you have gone away in such haste, since you so earnestly wished [to return] to your father's house; [but] why have you stolen my Gods from me?

And Jacob answered Laban, "I went away because I was afraid; for I said [that he should be careful] that you would not take your daughters from me." [But] let him in whom you find your gods not live. Acknowledge before our brothers if there is anything with me that belongs to you, and take it; for Jacob did not know that Rachel had stolen them.

Then Laban came to Jacob's tent, and to Leah's tent, and to the tent of the two maids, but he did not find them; and having left Leah's tent, he went into Rachel's tent.

But Rachel took the marmosets, and having put them in the saddle of a camel, she sat on it; and Laban searched the whole tent, and did not find them.

And she said to her father, "May my Lord not be angry that I cannot rise before him; for I have what women are accustomed to having." And he searched, but he did not find the marmosets.

And Jacob became angry, and quarreled with Laban, and speaking to him, said: What is my crime? What is my sin, that you have pursued me so ardently?

For you have searched all my belongings; [but] what have you found of all the furniture of your house? Put it here before my brothers and yours, and let them judge between the two of us.

I have been with you these past twenty years; your ewes and your goats have not miscarried; I have not eaten the sheep of your flocks.

I did not charge you for what was torn [by wild beasts]; I bore the loss; [and] you demanded from my hand what had been stolen by day, and what had been stolen by night.

By day the sun consumed me, and by night the frost; and my sleep fled from before my eyes.

I served you these past twenty years in your house, fourteen years for your two daughters, and six years for your flocks, and you have changed my wages ten times. If it were not for the God of my father, the God of Abraham, and the fear of Isaac, you would surely have sent me away empty-handed by now. But God has seen my affliction and the toil of my hands, and he has rebuked you last night.

And Laban answered Jacob, and said, These daughters are my daughters, and these children are my children, and these flocks are my flocks, and all that you see is mine; and what shall I do today to these my daughters, or to their children whom they have borne?

Now then, let us make a covenant together, and it will be a testimony between me and you.

And Jacob took a stone and set it up as a pillar.

And he said to his brothers, "Gather stones." So they brought stones and made a heap of them, and ate there on the heap.

And Laban called him Jegar-Sahadutha; and Jacob called him Gal-hed.

And Laban said, "This heap will be a witness between you and me today"; therefore it was named Gal-hed.

He was also called Mizpah; because [Laban] said: May the Lord take heed to me and to you, when we have withdrawn from one another.

If you mistreat my daughters, and if you take a wife other than my daughters, it will not be a man [who will be a witness] between us, take heed to this; it is God who is witness between me and you.

And Laban said again to Jacob, "Look at this heap, and consider the monument that I have set up between me and you."

This heap will be a witness, and this monument will be a witness, that when I come to you I will not pass over this heap; nor when you come to me will you pass over this heap and this monument to harm me.

Let the gods of Abraham and the gods of Nahor, the gods of their father, judge between us; but Jacob swore by the fear of Isaac his father.

And Jacob offered a sacrifice on the mountain, and invited his brothers to eat bread; so they ate bread, and spent the night on the mountain.

And Laban, rising early in the morning, kissed his sons and daughters, and blessed them, and went away. So Laban returned home.

And Jacob continued on his way, and the Angels of God came to meet him;

And when Jacob saw them, he said, "This is the camp of God," and he named that place Mahanajim.

And Jacob sent messengers ahead of him to Esau his brother, to the land of Seir, in the territory of Edom.

And he commanded them, saying, "Speak to my lord Esau in this way: 'Thus says your servant Jacob; I have been a stranger with Laban, and have stayed there until now.'"

And I have oxen, donkeys, sheep, male and female servants; which I am sending to report to my Lord, so that I may find favor in his sight.

And the messengers returned to Jacob, and said to him, "We have come to your brother Esau, and indeed he is coming to meet you, with four hundred men with him."

Then Jacob was very afraid and greatly distressed; and having divided the people who were with him, and the sheep, and the oxen, and the camels into two flocks, he said:

If Esau comes to one of these bands and strikes it, the band that remains will escape.

Jacob also said: O God of my father Abraham, God of my father Isaac, O Lord who said to me: Return to your country, and to your relatives, and I will do you good.

I am too small in comparison to all your kindnesses and all the truth you have shown your servant; for I crossed this Jordan with my staff, but now I am returning with these two strips.

I beg you, deliver me from the hand of my brother Esau; for I fear that he will come and strike me, and [kill] the mother with the children.

But you have said: Surely I will do you good, and I will make your descendants like the sand of the sea, which cannot be counted because of its great number.

And he spent the night in that place, and took from what was in his hand to make a present for Esau his brother.

[Knowledge] two hundred goats, twenty rams, two hundred ewes, twenty sheep.

Thirty female camels that were nursing, and their young; forty young cows, ten young bulls, twenty female donkeys, and ten donkey foals.

And he placed them in the hands of his servants, each flock separately, and said to them, "Pass on before me, and make sure there is a distance between one flock and another."

And he commanded the first, saying: When Esau my brother meets you, and asks you, saying: Whose are you? and where are you going? and whose are these things that are before you?

Then you will say: I am your servant Jacob; this is a present he is sending to my lord Esau; and behold, he himself is after us.

He also gave the same command to the second, and to the third, and to all those who went after the flocks, saying: You shall speak these words to Esau when you find him;

And you shall say to him, "Look, even your servant Jacob is behind us." For he said, "I will appease his anger with this present that will go before me, and afterward I shall see his face; perhaps he will look favorably upon me."

The present man therefore went before him; but for himself he remained that night with his troop.

And he got up that night, and took his two wives, and his two maids, and his eleven children, and crossed the ford of the Jabbok.

So he took them and brought them across the stream; he also brought across everything he had.

Now Jacob was left alone, and a man wrestled with him until the break of day.

And when [this man] saw that he could not overcome him, he touched the socket of his hip; so the socket of Jacob's hip bone was dislodged when the man wrestled with him.

And [this man] said to him, "Leave me, for it is dawning." But he said, "I will not leave you unless you bless me."

And [this man] said to him, "What is your name?" He answered, "Jacob."

Then he said: Your name will no longer be Jacob, but Israel; for you have been master [in struggle] with God and with men, and you have been the strongest.

And Jacob asked, saying, "Please tell me your name." And he replied, "Why do you ask my name?" And he blessed him there.

And Jacob named the place Peniel; for I have, [he said], seen God face to face, and my soul has been delivered.

And the sun rose as soon as it had passed Peniel, and it was limping on one hip.

That is why to this day the children of Israel do not eat the muscle that recedes, which is at the socket of the hip; because [that man] touched the place of the socket of Jacob's hip, at the place of the muscle that recedes.

And Jacob lifted up his eyes and looked; and behold, Esau was coming, and four hundred men with him; and [Jacob] divided the children [into three groups, namely] under Leah, and under Rachel, and under the two maids.

And he put the maids and their children in charge; Leah and her children after them; and Rachel and Joseph last.

And he passed before them, and bowed down to the ground seven times, until he came near to his brother.

But Esau ran to meet him, and embraced him, and threw himself on his neck and kissed him; and they wept.

Then he raised his eyes and saw the women and children, and said, "Who are these? Are they yours?" [Jacob] answered him, "They are the children whom God, by his grace, has given to your servant."

And the maids approached, they and their children, and prostrated themselves.

Then Leah also approached with her children, and they bowed down, and afterward Joseph and Rachel approached, and bowed down also.

And he said, "What do you want to do with all these people I have met?" And he replied, "It is to find favor with my Lord."

And Esau said, "I have plenty, my brother; let what is yours be yours."

And Jacob answered, "No, I beg you: if I have now found favor in your sight, accept this present from my hand; for I have seen your face, as though I had seen the face of God, and because you have been appeased toward me."

Please accept my gift that has been brought to you; for God has given it to me by his grace, and I have everything. So he urged him so strongly that he took it.

And [Esau] said, "Let us go, and let us walk, and I will walk before you."

But [Jacob] said to him, "My lord knows that these children are young, and I am burdened with sheep and cows that are nursing young, and if they are driven hard for a single day, the whole flock will die."

I pray that my Lord may pass before his servant, and I will go slowly, at the pace of this baggage which is before me, and at the pace of these children, until I arrive at my Lord in Sehir.

And Esau said, "I beg you, let me allow some of these people who are with me to stay with you.” And he replied, “Why? [I beg you] that I may find favor with my Lord.” So Esau returned that day by his way to Seir.

And Jacob went to Succoth, and built a house for himself, and made shelters for his livestock; therefore he named the place Succoth.

And Jacob arrived safely at the city of Shechem, in the land of Canaan, from Paddan-Aram, and camped before the city.

And he bought a portion of the field in which he had pitched his tent, from the hand of the sons of Hamor, the father of Shechem, for one hundred pieces of silver.

And he set up an altar there, which he called the Mighty God, the God of Israel.

Now Dinah, the daughter whom Leah had borne to Jacob, went out to see the women of the land.

And Shechem, son of Hemorr-Hivite, prince of the land, saw her, and took her, and lay with her, and forced her.

And his heart was drawn to Dinah, daughter of Jacob, and he loved the young woman, and spoke according to the young woman's heart.

Shechem also spoke to his father Hemor, saying, “Take this girl for me to be my wife.”

And Jacob learned that he had raped Dinah his daughter. Now his sons were with his livestock in the fields; and Jacob kept silent until they had returned.

And Hemor, the father of Shechem, came to Jacob to speak with him.

And when the sons of Jacob came in from the fields, and heard [what had happened], they were greatly distressed, and were very angry at the outrage that [Shechem] had committed against Israel, by lying with the daughter of Jacob, which should not have been done.

And Hemor spoke to them, saying, “My son Shechem has set his affection on your daughter; please give her to him as his wife.”

And you will go with us, give us your daughters, and take our daughters for yourselves.

And live with us, and the land will be at your disposal; remain there, and trade there, and have possessions there.

Shechem also said to the girl's father and brothers, "Let me find favor in your sight, and I will give you everything you ask me."

Ask me for such dowry and such gift as you wish, and I will give them as you tell me; and give me the young girl as my wife.

Then Jacob's sons answered Shechem and his father Hamor; and acting deceitfully (because he had raped Dinah their sister :)

They said to them, “We cannot do that, to give our sister to an uncircumcised man; for that would be a disgrace to us.”

But we will come to terms with you, provided that you become like us by circumcising all the males among you.

Then we will give you our daughters, and we will take your daughters for ourselves, and we will dwell with you, and we will be one people.

But if you do not agree to be circumcised, we will take our daughter and leave.

And their speeches pleased Hamor and Shechem, Hamor's sons.

And the young man did not hesitate to do [what had been proposed to him]; for the daughter of Jacob pleased him greatly; and he was the most esteemed of all those in his father's house.

Hemor and his son Shechem came to the gate of their city and spoke to the people of their city, saying:

These people are peaceful; they are with us. Let them live in the land and trade here, for the land is large enough for them. We will take their daughters as wives, and we will give them our daughters.

And these people will adapt to us in this way, to live with us, [and] to become one people; provided that every male who is among us is circumcised, as they are circumcised.

Their livestock, their possessions, and all their animals, will they not be ours? Let us simply come to terms with them, and let them remain with us.

And all who went out of the gate of their city obeyed Hemor and Shechem his son; and every male among all who went out of the gate of their city was circumcised.

But on the third day, when they were in pain, two of Jacob's sons, Simeon and Levi, Dinah's brothers, took their swords, boldly entered the city, and killed all the males.

They also put to the edge of the sword Hemor and Shechem his son, and took Dinah from the house of Shechem, and went out.

And when those men were killed, the sons of Jacob came and plundered the city, because their sister had been raped.

And they took their flocks, their oxen, their donkeys, and what was in the city and in the fields:

And all their possessions, and all their little children, and took their wives captive; and plundered them, with everything that was in the houses.

Then Jacob said to Simeon and Levi, "You have troubled me by making me detestable to the inhabitants of the land, both Canaanites and Perizzites, and I have only a few men; therefore they will gather together against me, and strike me, and destroy me and my house."

And they replied: Will our sister be treated like a harlot?

Then God said to Jacob, "Arise, go up to Bethel, and dwell there, and set up an altar there to the mighty God who appeared to you when you were fleeing from the presence of your brother Esau."

And Jacob said to his family and to all who were with him, "Put away the gods of the foreigners who are among you, and purify yourselves, and change your clothes."

And let us arise, and go up to Bethel, and there I will make an altar to the Mighty God who answered me in the day of my distress, and who was with me in the way I walked.

So they gave Jacob all the foreign gods they had in their possession, and the rings that were in their ears, and he hid them under an oak tree that was near Shechem.

Then they departed; and the fear of God fell upon the surrounding cities; so that they did not pursue the children of Jacob.

So Jacob, and all the people who were with him, came to Luz, which is in the land of Canaan, which is Bethel.

And there he built an altar, and named that place the [God] Strong of Bethel; for God had appeared to him there, when he was fleeing from his brother.

Then Deborah, Rebecca's nurse, died, and was buried below Bethel under an oak tree, which was called Allon-bacuth.

God appeared again to Jacob, when he came from Paddan-Aram, and blessed him,

And he said to him, "Your name is Jacob; but you shall no longer be called Jacob, for your name shall be Israel"; and he named him Israel.

God also said to him: I am the [God] Mighty, Almighty: increase and multiply: a nation, even a multitude of nations, will be born from you, even kings will come from your loins;

And I will give you the land that I gave to Abraham and Isaac, and I will give it to your descendants after you.

And God went up from him from the place where he had spoken to him.

And Jacob set up a monument at the place where [God] had spoken to him, [namely] a stone for a monument, and he sprinkled it with holy water and poured oil on it.

So Jacob named the place where God had spoken to him Bethel.

Then they left Bethel, and there was still a little bit of country to go before reaching Ephrat, when Rachel gave birth, and she was in great labor.

And as she was having great difficulty giving birth, the midwife said to her: Do not be afraid; for you still have a son here.

And as she breathed her last, (for she died,) she named the child Benoni; but his father named him Benjamin.

So Rachel died, and she was buried on the way to Ephrat, which is Bethlehem.

And Jacob erected a monument over her tomb. This is the monument at Rachel's tomb [which still stands] today.

Then Israel departed, and pitched their tents beyond Migdal-Heder.

And it came to pass that when Israel was dwelling in that land, Reuben came and lay with Bilhah, his father's concubine; and Israel heard of it. Now Jacob had twelve sons.

The sons of Leah were Reuben, Jacob's firstborn, Simeon, Levi, Judah, Issachar, and Zebulun.

Rachel's sons, Joseph and Benjamin.

The sons of Bilhah, Rachel's servant, Dan, and Naphtali.

The sons of Zilpah, Leah's servant, Gad and Asher. These are the children of Jacob, who were born to him in Paddan-Aram.

And Jacob came to Isaac his father [in the plain of] Mamre at Kiriath-arbah, [which] is Hebron, where Abraham and Isaac had stayed as strangers.

And the time that Isaac lived was one hundred and eighty years.

So Isaac, faint with age, died, and was gathered with his people, old and full of days; and Esau and Jacob his sons buried him.

Now these are the generations of Esau, who is Edom.

Esau took his wives from among the daughters of Canaan: namely Hadah daughter of Elon the Hittite, and Aholibamah daughter of Hana, [grand-]daughter of Zibhon the Hivite.

He also took Basmath, daughter of Ishmael, sister of Nebaioth.

And Hadah bore Eliphaz to Esau; and Basemath bore Reuel.

And Aholibamah fathered Jehus, Jahlam, and Korah. These were the children of Esau, who were born to him in the land of Canaan.

And Esau took his wives and his sons and his daughters and all the persons of his household, all his flocks and animals and all the property which he had acquired in the land of Canaan, and he went to another country, away from Jacob his brother.

For their possessions were so great that they could not have remained together; and the country where they dwelt as strangers could not have contained them because of their flocks.

So Esau dwelt in the mountain of Seir; Esau is Edom.

And these are the generations of Esau, father of Edom, in the mountain of Seir.

These are the names of the children of Esau: Eliphaz son of Hadah, Esau's wife; Reuel son of Basemath, Esau's wife.

And the children of Eliphaz were Teman, Omar, Zepho, Gahtam and Kenaz.

Timnaph became a concubine of Eliphaz, son of Esau, and she bore Hamalech to Eliphaz.

These were the children of Hadah, Esau's wife.

These are the sons of Reuel: Nahath, Zerah, Shammah, and Miza. These were the sons of Basemath, the wife of Esau.

And these were the children of Aholibamah, daughter of Hannah, [grand-]daughter of Zibom, and wife of Esau, who bore to Esau Jehus, Jahlam, and Korah.

These are the Dukes of the children of Esau. Of the children of Eliphaz, Esau's firstborn: Duke Teman, Duke Omar, Duke Zepho, Duke Kenaz, Duke Korah, Duke Gahtam, Duke Hamalech. These were the Dukes of Eliphaz in the land of Edom, who were descendants of Hadah.

These are the descendants of Reuel son of Esau: Duke Nahath, Duke Zerah, Duke Shammah, and Duke Miza. These are the dukes who came from Reuel in the land of Edom, who were the descendants of Basemath, Esau's wife.

And these are the sons of Aholibamah, wife of Esau: Duke Jehus, Duke Jalam, Duke Korah; who are the Dukes [descended] from Aholibamah, daughter of Hannah, wife of Esau.

These are the children of Esau, who is Edom, and these are their Dukes.

These are the children of Sehir Horien, who had lived in the land: Lotan, Sobal, Zibhon, and Hana.

Dison, Ezer, and Disan; who are the Dukes of the Horites, sons of Seir in the land of Edom.

And the children of Lotan were Hori and Heman; and Timnah was Lotan's sister.

And these are the children of Sobal: Halvan, Manahath, Hebal, Sepho, and Onam.

And these are the children of Tsibhon: Ajah and Hannah. This Hannah is the one who found the mules in the desert, when he was tending the donkeys of Tsibhon his father.

And these are the children of Hannah: Dishan, and Aholibamah, daughter of Hannah.

And these are the children of Disan: Hemdan, Esban, Jithran, and Keran.

And these are the children of Ezer: Bilhan, Zahavan, and Hakan.

And these are the children of Disan: Huts and Aran.

These are the Dukes of the Horians: Duke Lotan, Duke Sobal, Duke Tsibhon, Duke Hana.

Duke Dison, Duke Ezer, Duke Disan. These are the Dukes of the Horians, according to which their Dukes were [established] in the land of Sehir.

And these are the kings who reigned in the land of Edom, before any king reigned over the children of Israel.

Belah, son of Behor, reigned in Edom, and the name of his city was Dinhabah.

And Belah died, and Jobab son of Zerah of Bozrah reigned in his place.

And Jobab died, and Husam of the land of the Temanites reigned in his place.

And Husam died, and Hadad son of Bedad reigned in his place, who defeated Midian in the territory of Moab; and the name of his city was Havit.

And Hadad died, and Samla of Masreka reigned in his place.

And Samlah died, and Saul of Rehoboth of the river reigned in his place.

And Saul died, and Bahal-hanan son of Habor reigned in his place.

And Bahal-hanan son of Habor died, and Hadar reigned in his place; and the name of his city [was] Pahu; and the name of his wife Mehetabel, daughter of Matred, [grand-]daughter of Mezahab.

And these are the names of the Dukes of Esau according to their families, according to their places, according to their names: Duke Timnah, Duke Halva, Duke Jetheth.

Duke Aholibama, Duke Ela, Duke Pinon.

Duke Kenaz, Duke Teman, Duke Mibtsar,

Duke Magdiel and Duke Hiram. These were the Dukes of Edom, according to their dwellings in the land of their possession. Esau was the father of Edom.

Now Jacob remained in the land where his father had remained as a stranger, [that is] in the land of Canaan.

These are the generations of Jacob. Joseph, seventeen years old, was tending the flocks with his brothers, and he was a young boy among the descendants of Bilhah and among the descendants of Zilpah, his father's wives. And Joseph reported their wicked talk to their father.

Now Israel loved Joseph more than all his [other] sons, because he had him in his old age, and he made him a robe of many colors.

And his brothers, seeing that their father loved him more than all of them, hated him, and could not speak to him gently.

Now Joseph had a dream, which he told to his brothers; and they hated him even more.

So he said to them, "Listen, I pray you, to the dream that I have dreamed."

Behold, we were binding sheaves in the middle of a field; and behold, my sheaf arose and stood upright; and behold, your sheaves surrounded it and bowed down before my sheaf.

Then his brothers said to him, "Do you really reign over us? Do you really rule over us?" And they hated him even more because of his dreams and his words.

He had yet another dream, and he told it to his brothers, saying, "Behold, I had yet another dream, and behold, the sun, and the moon, and eleven stars were bowing down before me."

And when he recited it to his father and brothers, his father rebuked him and said, "What does this dream you had mean? Must I, your mother, and your brothers come and bow down to the ground before you?"

And his brothers envied him; but his father restrained his words.

But his brothers went to tend their father's flocks in Shechem.

And Israel said to Joseph, "Are not your brothers grazing [the flocks] in Shechem? Come, I will send you to them." And he answered him, "Here I am."

And he said to him, "Now go and see if your brothers are well, and if the flocks [are in good condition], and bring it back to me." So he sent him from the valley of Hebron, and he came as far as Shechem.

And a man found him wandering in the fields; and this man asked him, and said to him: What are you looking for?

And he replied: I am looking for my brothers; please tell me where they graze.

And the man said, "They have left from here; and I heard them saying, 'Let us go to Dothain.'" So Joseph went after his brothers and found them in Dothain.

And they saw him from afar; and before he approached them, they plotted against him to kill him.

And they said to one another, "Behold, this dreaming master is coming."

Now then, let us come and kill him, and throw him into one of these pits; and we shall say that a bad beast has devoured him, and we shall see what will become of his dreams.

But Reuben heard this, and delivered him from their hands, saying: Let us not take his life.

Reuben also said to them, "Do not shed blood; throw him into this pit in the desert, but do not lay a hand on him." This was to rescue him from their hands and send him back to his father.

As soon as Joseph came to his brothers, they stripped him of his robe, that multicolored robe that was on him.

And having taken him, they threw him into the pit; but the pit was empty, and there was no water.

Then they sat down to eat bread; and lifting their eyes they looked, and behold a band of Ishmaelites passing by, coming from Gilead, and their camels carrying spices, balm, and myrrh; and they were going to take these things to Egypt.

And Judah said to his brothers, "What will we gain if we kill our brother and conceal his blood?"

Come, let us sell him to these Ishmaelites, and let us not lay a hand on him; for our brother is our flesh; and his brothers agreed.

And as the Midianite merchants passed by, they pulled Joseph out of the pit and sold him for twenty pieces of silver to the Ishmaelites, who took Joseph to Egypt.

Then Reuben returned to the pit, and behold, Joseph was no longer in the pit; and [Reuben] tore his clothes.

He returned to his brothers and said to them, "The child is not found; and I! Where shall I go?"

And they took Joseph's robe, and having killed a male goat, they stained the robe with blood.

Then they sent and had the multicolored robe brought to their father, saying to him: We have found this; now see whether this is your son's robe or not.

And he recognized it, and said: This is my son's robe; a nasty beast has devoured it: surely Joseph has been torn.

And Jacob tore his clothes, and put sackcloth on his loins, and mourned for his son for several days.

And all his sons and daughters came to comfort him. But he rejected all comfort, and said, "Surely I will go down to the tomb mourning for my son," for his father mourned for him.

And the Midianites sold him in Egypt to Potiphar, Pharaoh's eunuch, Provost of the palace.

It came to pass that at that time Judah came down from his brothers and withdrew to a Hadullamite man named Hira.

And Judah saw there the daughter of a Canaanite, named Shuah, and he took her and went to her.

And she conceived and gave birth to a son, and they named him Her.

And she conceived again and gave birth to a son, and she named him Onan.

She gave birth to another son, and she named him Sela. And [Judah] was in Chesib when she gave birth to him.

And Judah married Her, his firstborn, to a daughter whose name was Tamar.

But Her, the firstborn of Judah, was wicked in the sight of the Lord, and the Lord put him to death.

Then Judah said to Onan, "Go in to your brother's wife and take her as your wife [as her brother-in-law], and raise up children for your brother."

But Onan, knowing that the children would not be his, would slander himself against the ground every time he came to his brother's wife, so that he would not give children to his brother.

And what he was doing displeased the Lord, so he also put him to death.

And Judah said to Tamar his daughter-in-law, "Remain a widow in your father's house until my son Sela grows up," for he said, "We must be careful that he does not die like his brothers." So Tamar went and remained in her father's house.

And after several days the daughter of Shuah, Judah's wife, died; and Judah, having consoled himself, went up to the shearers of his sheep at Timnath, with Hirah the Hadullamite, his close friend.

And Tamar was informed, and was told: Behold, your father-in-law is going up to Timnath to shear his sheep.

And she took off her widow's garments, and covered herself with a veil, and wrapped herself in it, and sat at a crossroads which [was] on the road leading to Timnath; because she saw that Sela had grown up, and that she had not been given to him as a wife.

And when Judah saw her, he thought she was a prostitute; for she had covered her face.

And he turned to her on the road and said, "Please let me come to you," for he did not know that she was his daughter-in-law. She replied, "What will you give me to come to me?"

And he said, "I will send you a young goat from among the flock." And she replied, "Will you give me a pledge until you send it?"

And he said, "What pledge shall I give you?" And she replied, "Your signet ring, your handkerchief, and your staff that you have in your hand." And he gave them to her; and he went in to her, and she conceived by him.

Then she got up and left, and having removed her veil, she resumed her widow's clothes.

And Judah sent a young goat from among the goats by the Hadullamite, his close friend, so that he might take back the pledge from the woman's hand; but he did not find her.

And he questioned the men of the place where she had been, saying, "Where is that prostitute who was at the crossroads on the road?" And they answered, "There was no prostitute here."

And he returned to Judah, and said to him, I did not find her; and even the people of the place told me, There has never been a prostitute here.

And Judah said, "Let her keep the pledge, lest we be disgraced. Behold, I sent this young goat, but you did not find it."

Now it came to pass that about three months later, a report was made to Judah, saying, "Tamar your daughter-in-law has committed adultery, and behold, she is even pregnant." And Judah said, "Bring her out, and let her be burned."

And as they were leading her out, she sent word to her father-in-law: I am pregnant by the man to whom these things belong. She also said: Please find out whose seal, handkerchief, and staff this is.

Then Judah recognized them, and he said, "She is more righteous than I, because I did not give her to my son Shelah," and he did not know her again.

And as she was about to give birth, behold, two twins were in her womb;

And while she was giving birth, [one of them] gave his hand, and the midwife took it, and tied a scarlet thread on his hand, saying: This one comes out first.

But when he had withdrawn his hand, behold, his brother came out; and she said, What opening have you made for yourself! The opening be upon you; and he was named Perez.

Then his brother came out, having the scarlet thread on his hand, and he was named Zara.

Now when Joseph was brought to Egypt, Potiphar, Pharaoh's eunuch, provost of the palace, an Egyptian, bought him from the hand of the Ishmaelites, who had brought him there.

And the Lord was with Joseph; and he prospered, and remained in the house of his Egyptian master.

And his master saw that the Lord was with him, and that the Lord made everything he did prosper in his hand.

Therefore Joseph found favor in his master's eyes and served him. And [his master] put him in charge of his household and entrusted to him all that belonged to him.

And it came to pass that from the time he had put him over his house, and over all that he had, the Lord blessed the house of that Egyptian because of Joseph; and the blessing of the Lord was on all things that were his, both in the house and in the fields.

So he entrusted everything that belonged to him to Joseph, without going into any knowledge of anything except the bread he ate. Now Joseph was of fine stature and handsome to behold.

And it came to pass after these things that his master's wife cast her eyes upon Joseph, and said to him, "Lie with me."

But he refused, and said to his master's wife, "Look, my master does not enter into any knowledge with me of the things that are in his house, and he has entrusted to me everything that belongs to him."

There is no one in this house greater than I, and he has forbidden me nothing except you, because you are his wife; and how could I do such a great evil, and sin against God?

And although she spoke to Joseph about it every day, he did not allow her to sleep beside her, nor to be with her.

But one day it happened that he had come home to do what he had to do, and there were none of the servants in the house,

She grabbed him by his robe and said, "Lie with me." But he left her robe in her hands, ran away, and went outside.

And when she saw that he had left her dress in her hands, and that he had fled from it,

She called the people of her house, and spoke to them, saying: Look, a Hebrew man has been brought to us to mock us, he came to me to lie with me; but I cried out loudly.

And as soon as he heard that I raised my voice and cried out, he left his garment beside me, ran away, and went outside.

And she kept Joseph's garment until her master returned home.

Then she spoke to him in these same words, and said: The Hebrew servant whom you brought to us has come to me to mock me.

But when I raised my voice and cried out, he left his garment beside me and fled. And as soon as [Joseph's] master heard the words of his wife, who said to him, "Your servant has done to me as I told you," his anger was kindled. And Joseph's master took him and put him in a narrow prison, in the place where the king's prisoners were confined, and he was there in prison. But the Lord was with Joseph; he extended [his] grace to him, and enabled him to find favor with the master of the prison. And the master of the prison put into Joseph's hands all the prisoners who were in the prison, and he did everything that needed to be done. [And] the master of the prison saw nothing of all that [Joseph] had in his hand; because the Lord was with him, and the Lord made everything he did prosper. After these things, it happened that the Cupbearer of the King of Egypt, and the Baker offended the King of Egypt, their Lord. And Pharaoh was very angry with those two eunuchs, with the chief cupbearer, and with the chief baker. And he warned them in the house of the Provost of the inn, in the narrow prison, in the [same] place where Joseph was confined. And the Provost of the hotel put them in the hands of Joseph, who served them; and they were [some] days in prison. And both had a dream, each his own dream on the same night, [and] each according to the interpretation of his dream; both the Cupbearer and the Baker of the King of Egypt, who [were] confined in the prison. And Joseph came to them in the morning, and looked at them; and behold, they were very sad. And he asked Pharaoh's eunuchs, who were with him in his master's prison, and said to them, "Why do you look so bad today?" And they answered him, "We have dreamed dreams, and there is no one who can interpret them." And Joseph said to them, "Are interpretations not from God? Please tell me [your dreams]."

And the chief cupbearer told Joseph his dream, and said to him: [It seemed to me] in my dream [that] I saw a vine before me. And there were three branches on that vine; and it was about to blossom; its flower came out, and its clusters ripened the grapes. And Pharaoh's cup was in my hand, and I took the grapes and squeezed them into Pharaoh's cup, and I gave the cup into his hand. And Joseph said to him: Here is his explanation: The three branches are three days. In three days Pharaoh will lift up your head, and restore you to your [first] position, and you will give the cup to Pharaoh in his hand, according to your former office, when you were Cupbearer. But remember me when this happiness has come to you, and do me, I pray you, this favor, that you mention me to Pharaoh, and that he let me out of this house. For I was certainly stolen from the land of the Hebrews; and indeed I have done nothing here for which I should be put in this pit. Then the great baker, seeing that Joseph had interpreted [this dream] favorably, said to him: I also had a dream, and it seemed to me that [there were] three white baskets on my head. And in the highest basket [there was] all kinds of meat from the baker's trade, for Pharaoh; and the birds ate them from the basket [which was] on my head. And Joseph answered, and said: This is his explanation: The three baskets are three days. In three days Pharaoh will lift your head from you and hang you on a tree, and the birds will eat your flesh from you. And it came to the third day, [which was] the day of Pharaoh's birth, that he made a feast for all his servants, and he brought out from prison the chief cupbearer and the chief baker, his servants.

And he restored the chief cupbearer to his office as cupbearer, who then gave the cup to Pharaoh.

But he hanged the chief baker, as Joseph had explained to them.

However, the chief cupbearer did not remember Joseph; but forgot him.

But it came to pass that after two whole years Pharaoh reflected, and it seemed to him that he was near the river.

And behold, seven fine young cows, fat and in good condition, came up [out] of the river, and grazed in the marshes.

And behold, seven other young cows, ugly to look at and thin, came up [out] of the river after the others, and stood beside the other young cows on the bank of the river.

And the ugly, thin young cows ate the seven beautiful, fat young cows. Then Pharaoh awoke.

Then he fell asleep again, and dreamed for the second time, and it seemed to him that seven fine, grainy ears of corn were coming out of the same tube.

Then it seemed to him that seven other thin ears of corn, withered by the east wind, sprouted after those.

And the thin ears of grain swallowed up the seven full, grainy ears. Then Pharaoh awoke; and this was the dream.

And it came to pass in the morning that his spirit was frightened, and he sent for all the magicians and all the wise men of Egypt, and recited his dreams to them, but there was no one who interpreted them to him.

Then the chief cupbearer spoke to Pharaoh, saying: Today I will remind everyone of my sins.

When Pharaoh was angry with his servants, and put the chief baker and me in prison, in the house of the Provost of the palace;

Then he and I both dreamed a dream in the same night, each of us reflecting [on what happened to him] according to the interpretation of his dream.

Now there was with us a Hebrew boy, a servant of the Provost of the inn, and we told him our dreams, and he interpreted them to us, giving each one the interpretation according to his dream.

And it happened just as he had interpreted it to us; [for the King] restored me to my position, and hanged the other.

Then Pharaoh sent for Joseph, and he was brought out of prison quickly; and he was shaved, and his clothes were changed; then he came to Pharaoh.

And Pharaoh said to Joseph, "I have had a dream, and there is no one who can interpret it; but I have heard that you know how to interpret dreams."

And Joseph answered Pharaoh, saying, "God, and not I, will answer [regarding] Pharaoh's prosperity."

And Pharaoh said to Joseph, "I was thinking that I was standing on the bank of the river."

And behold, seven young, fat, and well-formed, and very beautiful cows came out of the river and grazed in the marshes.

And behold, seven other young cows came up after them, scrawny, so ugly, and so thin, that I have never seen such ugly ones in all the land of Egypt.

But the young, thin, ugly cows devoured the first seven fat young cows;

They entered their bellies, though it was not apparent that they had entered; for they were as ugly to behold as at the beginning; then I awoke.

I also saw in my thoughts, and it seemed to me that seven ears of corn were coming out of a [same] tube, full and beautiful.

Then came seven small, thin ears of grain, shriveled by the east wind, which sprouted afterward.

But the thin ears of corn swallowed up the seven beautiful ears; and I told [these dreams] to the magicians; but none of them explained them to me.

And Joseph answered Pharaoh, "What Pharaoh thought is one thing; God has told Pharaoh what he is going to do."

The seven beautiful young cows are seven years old; and the seven beautiful ears of corn are seven years old; it is the same dream.

And the seven thin and ugly young cows that came up after them represent seven years; and the seven empty ears of grain withered by the east wind represent seven years of famine.

This is what I told Pharaoh, [knowing] that God showed Pharaoh what he was going to do.

Behold, seven years are coming [in which there will be] great abundance throughout the land of Egypt.

But after those years there will come seven years of famine; then all this abundance in the land of Egypt will be forgotten, and the famine will consume the land.

And this abundance will no longer be seen in the land, because of the famine that will follow; for it will be very great.

And as for the fact that the dream was repeated to Pharaoh a second time, it means that the matter is decided by God, and that God is hastening to execute it.

Now let Pharaoh choose a wise and discerning man and set him over the land of Egypt.

Let Pharaoh also do this: Let him appoint Commissioners over the land, and let him take a fifth [of the revenue] from the land of Egypt during the seven years of plenty.

And let them gather all the provisions of those good years to come, and let the grain that they gather remain under the power of Pharaoh for food in the cities, and let them keep it.

And these provisions will be for the supply of the country during the seven years of famine that will be in the land of Egypt, so that the country will not be consumed by famine.

And the thing pleased Pharaoh and all his servants.

And Pharaoh said to his servants, "Can we find a man like this man, who has the Spirit of God?"

And Pharaoh said to Joseph, "Since God has shown you all these things, there is no one so knowledgeable or wise as you."

You will be over my house, and all my people will kiss your mouth; only I will be greater than you in regard to the throne.

Pharaoh also said to Joseph, "Look, I have appointed you over all the land of Egypt."

Then Pharaoh took his signet ring from his hand and put it on Joseph's hand, and dressed him in fine linen garments, and put a gold chain around his neck.

And he made him ride on the chariot that was second to his own, and they cried out before him, "Kneel down!" And he established him over all the land of Egypt.

And Pharaoh said to Joseph, "I am Pharaoh, but without you no one will lift a hand or a foot in all the land of Egypt."

And Pharaoh named Joseph Zaphenath-Pahaneah, and gave him Asenath, daughter of Potiphera, governor of On, as his wife; and Joseph went [to visit] the land of Egypt.

Now Joseph was thirty years old when he stood before Pharaoh King of Egypt, and having gone out from before Pharaoh, he went throughout all the land of Egypt.

And the land yielded abundantly during the seven years of fertility.

And [Joseph] gathered all the grain of those seven years, which was [collected] in the land of Egypt, and put this grain in the cities; in each city the grain from the surrounding fields.

So Joseph amassed a great quantity of grain, like the sand of the sea; so much so that they ceased to measure it, because it was without number.

But before the [first] year of the famine came, two children were born to Joseph, whom Asenath, daughter of Potiphera, Governor of On, bore to him.

And Joseph named the firstborn Manasseh; because, [he said], God has made me forget all my labors, and all my father's house.
And he named the second Ephraim; because, [he said], God has made me fruitful in the land of my affliction.
Then came to an end the seven years of abundance that had been in the land of Egypt.

And the seven years of famine began, as Joseph had predicted. And the famine was in all the lands; but there was bread throughout the land of Egypt.
Then all the land of Egypt was hungry, and the people cried out to Pharaoh for bread. And Pharaoh answered all the Egyptians, "Go to Joseph, and do whatever he tells you."

Since the famine was throughout the land, Joseph opened all the granaries that were with the Egyptians and distributed grain to them; and the famine increased in the land of Egypt.

People also came from all countries to Egypt to buy grain, because the famine was very great throughout the whole land.

And when Jacob saw that there was grain to be sold in Egypt, he said to his sons, "Why are you looking at each other?"

He also said to them, "Look, I have heard that there is grain for sale in Egypt. Go down there and buy some for us, so that we may live and not die."

Then ten of Joseph's brothers went down to Egypt to buy grain.

But Jacob did not send Benjamin, Joseph's brother, with his brothers; for he said, "We must take care that some fatal accident does not happen to him."

So the Israelites went [to Egypt] to buy grain, along with those who were going there; for the famine was in the land of Canaan.

Now Joseph was governor over the land, and he sold grain to all the peoples of the earth. So Joseph's brothers came and bowed down before him with their faces to the ground.

And Joseph, having seen his brothers, recognized them; but he pretended to be a stranger with them, and spoke harshly to them, saying: Where do you come from? And they answered: From the land of Canaan, to buy food.

Joseph then recognized his brothers; but they did not recognize him.

Then Joseph remembered the dreams he had had about them, and said to them, "You are spies; you have come to spy on the weak points of the land."

And they [answered] him: No, my Lord, but your servants have come to buy food.

We are all children of the same man, we are good people; your servants are not spies.

And he said to them, "That is not so; but you have come to notice the weak points of the land."

And they answered: We were twelve brothers your servants, children of one man, in the land of Canaan, of whom the youngest is now with our father, and one is no more.

And Joseph said to them, "That's what I told you, that you are spies."

You will be tested in this way: Long live Pharaoh, if you leave here, would your younger brother not have come here.

Send one of you to bring your brother; but you will be prisoners, and I will test whether you have told the truth; otherwise, long live Pharaoh, you are spies.

And he had them all put in prison together for three days.

And on the third day Joseph said to them, "Do this, and you will live; I fear God."

If you are good people, let one of you who are brothers be bound in the prison where you have been confined, and go, [and] take some grain with you to provide for the famine of your families.

Then bring me your younger brother and your words will be found to be true; and you will not die; and they did so.

And they said to one another, "We are truly guilty toward our brother; for we saw the anguish of his soul when he begged for mercy from us, and we did not grant him his request; therefore this anguish has come upon us.”

And Reuben answered them, saying, “Did I not tell you, ‘Do not commit this sin against the child’? But you did not listen to me; therefore, behold, his blood is required of you.”

And they did not know that Joseph could hear them; because he was speaking to them through an interpreter.

And he turned away from them to weep. Then he returned to them and spoke to them again, and had Simeon taken from among them and bound before their eyes.

And Joseph commanded that their sacks be filled with wheat, and that the money be put back into each of their sacks, and that they be given provisions for their journey; and this was done.

So they loaded their wheat onto their donkeys and went away.

And one of them opened his bag to feed his donkey at the inn; and he saw his money, and behold, he was there at the opening of his bag.

And he said to his brothers, “My money has been returned to me; indeed, here it is in my bag.” And their hearts trembled, and they were seized with fear, and said to one another, “What has God done to us?”

And when they arrived in the land of Canaan, they told Jacob their father all the things that had happened to them, saying:

The man in charge of the country spoke harshly to us and took us for spies of the country.

But we answered him: We are good people, we are not spies.

We were twelve brothers, children of our father; one is no more, and the youngest is now with our father in the land of Canaan.

And this man, who is in charge of the country, said to us: I will know by this that you are good people; leave me one of your brothers, and take [grain] for your families [against] the famine, and go.

Then bring me your younger brother, and I will know that you are not spies, but good people; I will give you back your brother, and you will trade in the country.

And it came to pass that as they emptied their bags, behold, the bundle of money of each was in his bag; and they saw they and their father, the bundles of their money, and they were all frightened.

Then Jacob their father said to them, “You have deprived me of children: Joseph is no more, and Simeon is no more, and you would take Benjamin? All these things are between me.”

And Reuben spoke to his father, and said to him, “Put two of my sons to death, if I do not bring him back to you; give him to me in charge; and I will bring him back to you.”

And he replied: My son will not go down with you, for his brother is dead, and this one is left alone, and some fatal accident would befall him on the way you will go, and you would send my white hair down in sorrow to the tomb.

But the famine became very great in the land.

And it came to pass that when they had finished eating the food which they had brought from Egypt, their father said unto them, Go back, and buy us a little food.

And Judah answered him, and said to him, “This man expressly protested to us, saying, ‘You will not see my face unless your brother is with you.’”

If you send our brother with us, we will go down [to Egypt] and buy you food.

But if you do not send him, we will not go down there; for that man told us, ‘You will not see my face unless your brother is with you.’

And Israel said, “Why have you wronged me by telling this man that you still had a brother?”

And they [answered] said: This man inquired carefully about us and our relatives, and said to us, “Is your father still alive? Do you have no brother?” And we told him, as he had asked us; could we have known that he would say, “Bring down your brother?”

And Judah said to Israel his father, “Send the child with me, and we will set out on a journey and go away, and we will live, and neither we nor you nor our little ones will die."

I guarantee it, ask for it again from my hand; if I do not bring it back to you; and if I do not present it to you, I will be subject to punishment towards you all my life.

If we hadn't delayed so long, we would certainly have already returned a second time.

Then Israel their father said to them, "If that is so, do this: take in your ships some of the finest things in the land, and bring to this man a present, some balm, some honey, spices, myrrh, dates, and almonds."

And take double the money into your hands, and return what was given to you when you opened your bags; perhaps it was done unknowingly.

And take your brother, and set out on the way, [and] return to this man.

May the Almighty grant you mercy before this man, so that he may release to you your other brother, and Benjamin; and if I must be deprived [of these two sons], so be it.

So they took the present, and having taken double the money in their hands, and Benjamin, they set out on the way, and went down to Egypt; then they presented themselves before Joseph.

Then Joseph saw Benjamin with them, and said to his steward, "Bring these men into the house, and kill some animal, and prepare it; for they shall eat with me at noon."

And the man did as Joseph had told him; and brought these men into Joseph's house. And these men were afraid that they were being led into the house of Joseph, and they said, "We have been brought here because of the money that was put in our bags the first time, so that he may turn and fall upon us, and take us as slaves, and take our donkeys."

Then they approached Joseph's steward and spoke to him at the door of the house, Saying: Alas, my Lord! Indeed, we went down at the beginning to buy provisions.

And when we arrived at the inn, and opened our bags, behold, each man's money was in his bag when he opened it, our money according to its weight; but we brought it back into our hands.

And we brought other money with us to buy food; and we do not know who put our money back in our bags.

And he said to them, "All is well with you; do not be afraid. Your God and the God of your father have given you treasure in your bags; your money has reached me." And he brought Simeon to them.

And this man brought them into Joseph's house, and gave them water, and they washed their feet; he also gave food to their donkeys.

And they prepared the present while waiting for Joseph to return at noon; for they had learned that they would eat bread there.

And Joseph returned home, and they presented to him in the house the gift that they had in their hands, and bowed down to the ground before him.

And he asked them how they were doing, and said to them: Is your father, that [good] old man you told me about, doing well? Is he still alive?

And they answered, "Your servant our father is well; he is still alive." And bowing low, they prostrated themselves.

And raising his eyes, he saw Benjamin, his brother, his mother's son, and he said, "Is this your younger brother of whom you spoke?" And then he said, "My son, may God be gracious to you!"

And Joseph withdrew quickly, for his heart was moved at the sight of his brother, and he sought a place where he could weep, and entering his chamber, he wept there.

Then, having washed his face, he came out of there, and forcing himself, he said: Put the bread on.

And Joseph was served separately, and they were served separately, and the Egyptians who ate with him were also served separately, because the Egyptians could not eat bread with the Hebrews; for it is an abomination to the Egyptians. So they sat down in his presence; the elder according to his birthright, and the younger according to his age; and these men showed each other their astonishment. And he had food brought to them from before him; but Benjamin's portion was five times larger than all the others, and they drank and feasted with him. And [Joseph] instructed his steward, saying: Fill these men's bags with provisions, as much as they can carry, and give each man his money when he opens his bag. And put my cup, the silver cup, in the opening of the sack of the youngest, with the money for his grain; and he did as Joseph had told him. As soon as it was light in the morning, these men were sent back with their donkeys.

And when they had left the city, before they were very far away, Joseph said to his steward, "Go, pursue those men, and when you catch them, say to them, 'Why have you repaid evil for good?'"

Is this not the cup from which my Lord drinks, and by which he will most surely divine? It is wrong of you to have done this.

And he reached them, and said these [same] words to them.

And they answered him, "Why does my Lord speak thus? May God forbid that your servants should do such a thing!"

Behold, we brought you silver from the land of Canaan, which we found when we opened our bags, and how could we steal silver or gold from your master's house?

Let the one of your servants in whose possession [the cup] is found die; and we also shall be servants of my Lord.

And he said to them, "Now let it be done according to your words; let it be so; let the one in whose possession [the cup] is found be my slave, and you shall be innocent."

And immediately each one laid his sack on the ground; and each one opened his sack.

And he searched, beginning with the largest, and ending with the smallest; and the cup was found in Benjamin's bag.

So they tore their clothes, and each one reloaded his donkey, and they returned to the city.

And Judah came with his brothers to the house of Joseph, who was still there, and they threw themselves down before him in the dust.

And Joseph said to them, "What have you done? Don't you know that a man like me never fails to guess?"

And Judah said to him, "What shall we say to my Lord? How shall we speak? And how shall we justify ourselves? God has found the iniquity of your servants; behold, we are slaves of my Lord, both we and he in whose hand the cup was found."

But he said, "God forbid that I should do this! The man in whose hand the cup was found shall be my slave; but you, go up in peace to your father."

Then Judah approached him, saying, "Alas, my Lord! I beg you, let your servant speak a word, and let my Lord hear him, and do not let your anger burn against your servant; for you are like Pharaoh."

My Lord questioned his servants, saying: Do you have a father or a brother?

And we answered my Lord: We have our father who is old, and a child who was born to him in his old age, and who is the youngest [of us]; his brother is dead, and this one is left only from his mother; and his father loves him.

But you said to your servants, "Bring him down to me, and I will see him."

And we said to my Lord: This child cannot leave his father; for if he leaves him, his father will die.

Then you say to your servants: Unless your little brother comes down with you, you will never see my face again.

Now it happened that, upon returning to your servant my father, we reported to him the words of my Lord.

Since then, our father has been telling us: Go back and buy us some food.
And we said to him: We cannot go down there; but if our little brother is with us, we will go down there, for we cannot see the face of that man unless our younger brother is with us.
And your servant, my father, answered us: You know that my wife has borne me two sons,
One of them has gone away from me, and I said, 'Surely he has been torn apart'; and I have not seen him since.
And if you take this one with you and some fatal accident befalls him, you will send my white hair down to the grave with sorrow.
Therefore, when I come to your servant my father, if the child, whose soul is closely bound to his, is not with us,
It will come to pass that as soon as he sees that the child will not be [with us], he will die; thus your servants will bring down with sorrow the white hair of your servant our father to the grave.
Moreover, your servant has answered for the child [to bring him] from my father, saying: If I do not bring him back to you, I shall be liable to my father all my life.
Therefore now, I pray you, let your servant be a slave to my Lord instead of the child, and let him go up with his brothers.
For how can I go back to my father if the child is not with me? I do not want to see the grief my father would feel!
Then Joseph could no longer restrain himself in front of all those who were present, and he cried out: "Get everyone out!" And no one remained with him when he revealed himself to his brothers.
And weeping he raised his voice, and the Egyptians heard it, and the house of Pharaoh heard it also.
Then Joseph said to his brothers, "I am Joseph; is my father still alive?" But his brothers could not answer him, for they were greatly troubled by his presence.
Joseph said again to his brothers, "Please come near to me." And they came near, and he said to them, "I am Joseph your brother, whom you sold to be taken to Egypt."
But now do not be distressed, and do not regret that you sold me here, for God has sent me before you for the preservation of your life.
For behold, there have been two years of famine in the land, and there will be five more years, during which there will be neither plowing nor harvesting.
But God has sent me ahead of you to preserve you on the earth and to give you life by a great deliverance.
So now it is not you who sent me here, but God, who has appointed me as a father to Pharaoh, and as Lord over all his house, and to rule over all the land of Egypt.
Hurry to my father and tell him: This is what your son Joseph said: God has appointed me Lord over all Egypt, come down to me, do not stop.
And you shall dwell in the land of Goscen, and you shall be near me, you and your children, and your children's children, and your flocks, and your oxen, and all that is yours.
And I will support you there, for there are still five years of famine, lest you and your household and all that you have perish through misery.
And behold, you see with your own eyes, and Benjamin my brother sees also with his own eyes, that it is I who speak to you with my own mouth.
Report to my father about my glory in Egypt, and all that you have seen; and hurry, and bring my father down here.
Then he threw himself on his brother Benjamin's neck and wept. Benjamin wept on his neck too.
Then he kissed all his brothers and wept over them; after that his brothers spoke with him.
And the sound was heard in Pharaoh's house, saying, "Joseph's brothers have come";

this greatly pleased Pharaoh and his servants.
Then Pharaoh said to Joseph, "Tell your brothers, 'Do this: load your animals and set out to return to the land of Canaan;
And take your father and your families, and return to me, and I will give you the best of the land of Egypt; and you shall eat the fat of the earth.
But you have the power to command: Do this, take with you from the land of Egypt wagons for your little ones and for your wives; and bring your father, and come. Do not regret your furniture; for the best of all the land of Egypt will be yours. And the children of Israel did so. And Joseph gave them chariots according to Pharaoh's command; he also gave them provisions for the journey.
He gave each of them a change of robes; and he gave Benjamin three hundred [pieces] of silver, and five changes of robes.
He also sent his father ten donkeys loaded with the finest things [that there was] in Egypt, and ten female donkeys carrying wheat, bread, and provisions for his father for the journey.
So he sent his brothers away, and they departed; and he said to them, "Do not quarrel on the way."
So they went up from Egypt and came to Jacob their father in the land of Canaan. And they reported to him and said: Joseph is still alive, and even rules over all the land of Egypt; and his heart failed him, although he did not believe them. And they told him all the words that Joseph had spoken to them; then he saw the chariots that Joseph had sent to carry him; and the spirit returned to Jacob their father.
Then Israel said, "It is enough; Joseph my son still lives. I will go and see him before I die."
So Israel set out with all that belonged to them, and came to Beersheba, and offered sacrifices to the God of their father Isaac.
And God spoke to Israel in the visions of the night, saying: Jacob, Jacob! And he answered: Here I am.
And [God] said to him, "I am the Mighty God, the God of your father; do not be afraid to go down to Egypt, for I will make you into a great nation there."
I will go down with you to Egypt, and I will certainly bring you back up there as well; and Joseph will put his hand on your eyes.
So Jacob departed from Beersheba, and the children of Israel put Jacob their father, and their little ones, and their wives, on the chariots that Pharaoh had sent to carry him.
They also brought their livestock and their possessions which they had acquired in the land of Canaan; and Jacob and all his family with him came to Egypt.
So he brought with him to Egypt his children, and his children's children, his daughters, and his sons' daughters, and all his family.
These are the names of the children of Israel who came to Egypt: Jacob and his children. Jacob's firstborn was Reuben.
And the children of Reuben, Enoch, Pallu, Hetron, and Carmi.
And the children of Simeon: Jemuel, Jamin, Ohab, Jachin, Zohar, and Saul, son of a Canaanite woman.
And the children of Levi, Gershon, Kohath, and Merari.
And the children of Judah, Her, Onan, Shelah, Perez, and Zerah; but Her and Onan died in the land of Canaan. The children of Perez were Hezron and Hamul.
And the children of Issachar: Tolah, Puvah, Job, and Simron.
And the children of Zebulun, Sered, Elon, and Jahleel.
These were the children of Leah, whom she bore to Jacob in Paddan-Aram, with Dinah her daughter; all the persons of her sons and daughters were thirty-three.
And the children of Gad, Ziphjon, Haggai, Suni, Ezbon, Heri, Arodi, and Areli.
And the children of Asher: Jimna, Jisua, Jisui, Beriah, and Serah, their sister. The children of Beriah: Heber and Malkiel.

These [are] the children of Zilpah whom Laban gave to Leah his daughter; and she bore them to Jacob, [namely], sixteen persons.

The children of Rachel, Jacob's wife, [were] Joseph and Benjamin.

And to Joseph in the land of Egypt were born Manasseh and Ephraim, whom Asenath, daughter of Potiphera, governor of On, bore to him.

And the children of Benjamin were Belah, Beker, Asbel, Gera, Nahaman, Ehi, Ros, Muphim, and Huphim, and Ard.

These are the children of Rachel, whom she bore to Jacob; fourteen persons in all.

And the children of Dan, Husim.

And the children of Naphtali, Jahaziel, Guni, Jezer, and Sillem.

These were the children of Bilhah, whom Laban gave to Rachel his daughter, and she bore them to Jacob; in all, seven persons.

All the persons belonging to Jacob who came to Egypt, who were descended from him, except the wives of the children of Jacob, were sixty-six in all.

And the children of Joseph who were born to him in Egypt were two. All the people [therefore] of the house of Jacob who came to Egypt were seventy.

Now [Jacob] sent Judah ahead of him to Joseph, to warn him to come to meet him at Goshen. So they came to the region of Goshen.

And Joseph had his chariot harnessed, and went up to meet his father Israel at Goshen. He appeared to him; he fell on his neck, and wept for a while on his neck.

And Israel said to Joseph, "Now let me die, since I have seen your face, and you still live."

Then Joseph said to his brothers and to his father's family, "I will go up again and tell Pharaoh, 'My brothers and my father's family, who were in the land of Canaan, have come to me.

And these men are shepherds, and have [always] been involved with livestock, and they brought their sheep and their oxen, and everything that belonged to them.

But it will happen that Pharaoh will summon you and ask you, "What is your profession?"

And you will say: Your servants have [always] been involved with livestock from their youth until now, both we and our fathers; so that you may remain in the land of Goshen; for the Egyptians abhor shepherds.

So Joseph came and told Pharaoh, saying, "My father and my brothers, with their flocks and herds and all that belongs to them, have come from the land of Canaan, and behold, they are in the land of Goshen."

And he took some of his brothers; [namely] five; and he presented them to Pharaoh.

And Pharaoh said to Joseph's brothers, "What is your occupation?" They answered Pharaoh, "Your servants are shepherds, as our fathers were."

They also said to Pharaoh, "We have come to live as strangers in this land because there is no pasture for the flocks of your servants, and there is a great famine in the land of Canaan; now therefore we beg you that your servants may live in the land of Goshen."

And Pharaoh spoke to Joseph, saying, "Your father and your brothers have come to you."

The land of Egypt is at your disposal; make your father and your brothers dwell in the best part of the land; let them live in the land of Goshen; and if you know that there are skilled men among them you shall appoint them governors over all my flocks.

Then Joseph brought Jacob his father, and presented him to Pharaoh; and Jacob blessed Pharaoh.

And Pharaoh said to Jacob, "How old are you?"

Jacob answered Pharaoh: The days of the years of my pilgrimages are one hundred and thirty years; the days of the years of my life have been few and evil, and have not attained the days of the years of the life of my fathers, in the days of their pilgrimages.

So Jacob blessed Pharaoh and went out from his presence.

And Joseph assigned a dwelling place to his father and his brothers, and gave them a possession in the land of Egypt, in the best part of the land, in the region of Rahmeses, as Pharaoh had commanded.

And Joseph provided bread for his father, and his brothers, and all his father's household, according to the number of their families.

But there was no bread in all the earth, for the famine was very great; and the land of Egypt, and the land of Canaan, did not know what to do because of the famine.

And Joseph gathered all the money that was found in the land of Egypt and in the land of Canaan, for the grain that was bought; and he brought the money to the house of Pharaoh.

And the money from the land of Egypt and from the land of Canaan ran out; and all the Egyptians came to Joseph, saying, "Give us bread; why should we die before your eyes because the money has run out?"

Joseph replied: Give your livestock, and I will give you some for your livestock, since the money has run out.

So they brought their livestock to Joseph, and Joseph gave them bread for horses, for flocks of sheep, for flocks of oxen, and for donkeys; thus he provided them with bread that year, for all their flocks.

When that year was over, they returned to him the following year and said: We will not hide from my Lord that, with the money exhausted and the herds of animals [having been brought] to my Lord, we have nothing left before my Lord but our bodies and our lands.

Why should we die before your eyes? Buy us and our lands, us and our lands, for bread; and we shall be slaves to Pharaoh, and our lands shall be his; give us also with which to sow, so that we may live, and not die, and that the land may not be desolate.

So Joseph acquired for Pharaoh all the lands of Egypt; for the Egyptians each sold their field, because the famine had increased, and the land belonged to Pharaoh.

And he led the people into the cities, from one end of the borders of Egypt to its other end.

However, he did not acquire the lands of the Priests; because there was a portion assigned to the Priests by order of Pharaoh; and they ate the portion that Pharaoh had given them, therefore they did not sell their lands.

And Joseph said to the people, "Behold, I have acquired for you today, you and your lands from Pharaoh, and this is seed to sow the land."

And when the time of harvest comes, you shall give one fifth to Pharaoh, and the other four shall be yours, to sow the fields, and for your food, and for the food of those who are in your houses, and for the food of your little children.

And they said, "You have saved our lives; may we find favor in the sight of my Lord, and we shall be slaves of Pharaoh."

And Joseph made it a law [that lasts] to this day, concerning the lands of Egypt, [to pay] Pharaoh a fifth [of the revenue]; only the lands of the priests did not belong to Pharaoh.

Now Israel lived in the land of Egypt, in the region of Goshen; and they enjoyed it, and increased, and multiplied exceedingly.

And Jacob lived in the land of Egypt seventeen years; and the years of Jacob's life were one hundred and forty-seven years.

Now when the time of Israel's death drew near, he called Joseph his son, and said to him, I beg you, if I have found favor in your sight, put your hand under my thigh now, and [swear to me] that you will deal with me freely and truthfully; I beg you, do not bury me in Egypt;

But let me sleep with my fathers. You will therefore carry me out of Egypt, and bury me in their tomb. And he answered, I will do it according to your word.

And [Jacob] said to him, "Swear to me"; and he swore to him. And Israel bowed down at the head of the bed.

Now it came to pass after these things that Joseph was told, "Behold, your father is sick"; and he took with him his two sons, Manasseh and Ephraim.

And Jacob was told, and said to him, "Here is Joseph your son coming to you." Then Israel exerted himself and sat down on the bed.

Then Jacob said to Joseph, "The Mighty One, the Almighty, appeared to me at Lus in the land of Canaan, and blessed me."

And he said to me, "Behold, I will make you increase and multiply, and I will make you into a community of peoples, and I will give this land to your descendants after you as a perpetual possession."

Now your two sons, who were born to you in the land of Egypt before I came to you there, are mine: Ephraim and Manasseh will be mine as Reuben and Simeon.

But the children you have after them will be yours, [and] they will be called according to the name of their brothers in their inheritance.

Now, when I came from Paddan, Rachel died to me in the land of Canaan on the way, there being only a little bit of land left to reach Ephrat; and I buried her there, on the way to Ephrat, which is Bethlehem.

Then Israel saw the sons of Joseph, and he said, Who are these?

And Joseph answered his father, "These are my sons whom God has given me here"; and he said, "Bring them to me, I pray, so that I may bless them."

Now the eyes of Israel were dim with age, and he could not see; and he drew them near to himself, and kissed them, and embraced them.

And Israel said to Joseph, "I never expected to see your face; and now God has shown me both you and your children."

And Joseph removed them from between his [father's] knees, and bowed down with his face to the ground.

So Joseph took them both, [and put] Ephraim on his right, on the left of Israel, and Manasseh on his left, on the right of Israel; and brought them near to him.

And Israel put forth his right hand, and laid it upon the head of Ephraim, who was the younger; and his left hand upon the head of Manasseh, thus deliberately transposing his hands, for Manasseh was the firstborn.

And he blessed Joseph, saying: May the God, before whose face my fathers Abraham and Isaac lived, the God who has shepherded me from the beginning of my life until this day;

May the Angel who has protected me from all harm bless these children; and may my name and the name of my fathers Abraham and Isaac be claimed upon them; and may they increase in number like the fish, [multiplying] on the earth.

And Joseph, seeing that his father laid his right hand on Ephraim's head, was displeased, and he lifted up his father's hand, to turn it away from Ephraim's head and onto Manasseh's head.

And Joseph said to his father, "Not so, my father! For this one is the firstborn; put your right hand on his head."

But his father refused, saying, "I know, my son, I know. This one too will become a people, and indeed he will be great; but his younger brother will be greater than he, and his descendants will be a multitude of nations."

And on that day he blessed them, and said: Israel will bless [taking example] in you, [and] saying: May God make you like Ephraim and Manasseh; and he put Ephraim before Manasseh.

Then Israel said to Joseph, "Behold, I am about to die, but God will be with you, and will bring you back to the land of your fathers."

And I give you a portion more than your brothers, which I took with my sword and my bow from the Amorites.

Then Jacob called his sons together and said to them, "Gather around, and I will tell you what will happen to you in the last days."

Assemble yourselves, and listen, sons of Jacob; listen, [I say], Israel your [father].

RUBEN, who are my firstborn, my strength, and the beginning of my vigor; who excels in dignity, and who excels [also] in strength;

You rushed like water; you will not have preeminence, for you went up onto your father's bed, and you defiled my bed by going up onto it.

SIMEON and LEVI, brothers, [were] instruments of violence [in] their homes.

May my soul not enter into their secret council; may my glory not be joined with [their] company, for they killed people in their anger, and carried off oxen for their pleasure.

Cursed be their anger, for it was violent; and their fury, for it was harsh; I will divide them in Jacob, and scatter them in Israel.

Judah, as for you, your brothers will praise you: your hand will be on the collar of your enemies; your father's sons will bow down before you.

Judah is a lion's fan: My son, you have returned from tearing; he has bowed down and lain down like a lion in his strength, and like an old lion; who will awaken him?

The scepter will not depart from Judah, nor the Lawgiver from between his feet, until Shiloh comes; and the assembly of the peoples is his.

He ties his donkey to the vine, and his donkey's colt to the choice vine; he washes his garment in wine, and his robe in the blood of grapes.

He has eyes as red as wine, and teeth as white as milk.

Zebulun will dwell in the harbor of the seas, and will be in the harbor of ships; his sides [will extend] toward Sidon.

ISSACAR is a bony donkey, lying between the bars of the stables.

He saw that rest was good, and that the land was beautiful, and he lowered his shoulder to bear and submitted to the tribute.

Dan will judge his people, as well as any other of the tribes of Israel.

Dan will be a serpent by the road, and a snake by the path, biting the horse's pasterns, so that its rider falls backward.

O Eternal One! I have waited for your salvation.

As for GAD, troops will come to ravage it, but it will ravage in the end.

Excellent bread will come from Asher, and it will provide royal delicacies.

NEPHTHALI is a doe set free; he speaks words that have grace.

JOSEPH is a fruitful branch, a fruitful branch near a fountain; its branches spread over the wall.

They bitterly angered him; they shot at him, and the master archers became his enemies.

But his bow remained in [his] strength, and the arms of his hands were strengthened by the hand of the Mighty One of Jacob, who also made him to be the Shepherd, [and] the Rock of Israel.

[This is from] the Mighty God of your father, who will help you; and from the Almighty, who will fill you with blessings from the heavens above; blessings from the deep below; blessings of the breasts and the womb.

The blessings of your father have surpassed the blessings of those who begot me, to the ends of the hills of eternity; they shall be upon the head of Joseph, and upon the crown of the head of the Nazarene among his brothers.

BENJAMIN is a wolf who will tear; in the morning he will devour the prey, and in the evening he will divide the spoils.

These are the twelve tribes of Israel, and this is what their father said to them when he blessed them; and he blessed each of them with the blessing that was proper to him.

He also gave them this command, and said to them: I am going to be gathered to my people; bury me with my fathers in the cave that is in the field of Hephron the Hittite:

In the cave, I say, which is in the field of Machpelah, opposite Mamre, in the land of Canaan, which Abraham acquired from Hephron the Hittite, with the field to possess it [as the place] of his burial.

This is where Abraham and Sarah his wife were buried; this is where Isaac and Rebekah his wife were buried; and this is where I buried Leah.

The field was acquired from the Hittites along with the cave that is in it.

And when Jacob had finished giving his commandments to his sons, he drew his feet back to the bed, and breathed his last, and was gathered to his people.

Then Joseph threw himself on his father's face, and wept over him, and kissed him.

And Joseph commanded those of his servants who were physicians to embalm his father; and the physicians embalmed Israel.

And they spent forty days embalming him: for it was the custom to embalm bodies [for forty] days; and the Egyptians mourned him for seventy days.

Now when the time of mourning was over, Joseph spoke to those of Pharaoh's house, saying, "Please, if I have found favor with you, tell Pharaoh about this;

That my father made me swear, and said to me, Behold, I am about to die; you shall bury me in my tomb, which I have dug for myself in the land of Canaan; now therefore, I pray you, let me go up there, and bury my father there: and then I shall return.

And Pharaoh replied: Go up and bury your father, as he made you swear.

Then Joseph went up to bury his father, and Pharaoh's servants, the elders of Pharaoh's house, and all the elders of the land of Egypt went up with him.

And all the house of Joseph, and his brothers, and the house of his father [also went up there], leaving only their families, and their flocks, and their oxen in the land of Goshen.

He also brought with him wagons and horsemen; so that there was a very large camp.

And when they came to the threshing floor of Atad, which is beyond the Jordan, they made great and sorrowful lamentations there; and [Joseph] wept for his father for seven days.

And the Canaanites, inhabitants of the land, seeing this mourning at the threshing floor of Atad, said: This mourning is great for the Egyptians; therefore this threshing floor, which is beyond the Jordan, was named Abel-Mizraim.

So the sons of [Jacob] did to his body as he had commanded them.

For his sons carried him to the land of Canaan, and buried him in the cave of the field of Machpelah, opposite Mamre, which Abraham had acquired from Hethron the Hittite with the field, to possess it [as the place] of his sepulcher.

And after Joseph had buried his father, he returned to Egypt with his brothers and all those who had gone up with him to bury his father.

And when Joseph's brothers saw that their father was dead, they said to one another, "Perhaps Joseph will hate us and will not fail to repay us for all the harm we have done to him."

That is why they sent word to Joseph: Your father commanded before he died, saying: You shall say to Joseph, "Please forgive your brothers' wickedness and their sin, for they have wronged you. Now therefore, I beg you, forgive this wickedness of the servants of the God of your father." And Joseph wept when they spoke to him.

Then his brothers also went there and bowed down before him, and said to him, "Behold, we are your servants."

And Joseph said to them, "Do not be afraid; for am I in the place of God?"

[What] you had thought evil against me, God intended good, to do according to what this day [shows], in order to give life to a great people.

Therefore do not be afraid now; I myself will speak to you and your families; and he comforted them, and spoke to them according to their hearts.

So Joseph and his father's household remained in Egypt, and he lived one hundred and ten years,

And Joseph saw the children of Ephraim to the third generation. Manasseh also, son of Manasseh, had children who were brought up on Joseph's lap.

And Joseph said to his brothers, "I am about to die, and God will surely visit you, and he will bring you up out of this land to the land of which he swore to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob."

And Joseph made the children of Israel swear an oath, and said to them: God will surely visit you, and then you will carry my bones away from here.

Then Joseph died, aged one hundred and ten years; and they embalmed him, and put him in a coffin in Egypt.

These are the names of the children of Israel who went into Egypt, each of whom went there with Jacob and their families.

Reuben, Simeon, Levi, and Judah,

Issachar, Zebulun, and Benjamin,

Dan, and Naphtali, Gad, and Asher.

All the people descended from Jacob's hip were seventy, with Joseph [who] was in Egypt.

But Joseph died, and all his brothers, and all that generation.

And the children of Israel multiplied and grew in very great abundance and increased greatly and became very powerful, so that the land was filled with them.

Since then a new King arose over Egypt, who had not known Joseph.

And he said to his people: behold, the people of the children of Israel are greater and mightier than we.

Let us therefore act prudently with it, lest it multiply, and if some war were to come, it would join our enemies and wage war against us, and leave the country.

So they appointed tax collectors over the people to afflict them by overburdening them; for the [people] built fortified cities for Pharaoh, [namely] Pithom and Rahamses.

But the more they afflicted it, the more it multiplied and grew abundantly; therefore they hated the children of Israel.

And the Egyptians made the children of Israel serve rigorously:

So much so that they made their lives bitter by harsh servitude, [employing them] to make mortar, bricks, and all kinds of work that is done in the fields; all the service that was taken from them [was] with rigor.

The King of Egypt also commanded the Hebrew midwives, one of whom was named Siphra, and the other was named Puha;

And he said to them, "When you receive the children of the Hebrew women, and see them on the thrones, if it is a son, put him to death; but if it is a daughter, let her live."

But the midwives feared God, and did not do as the King of Egypt had told them; for they let the sons live.

Then the King of Egypt summoned the midwives and said to them, "Why have you done this, letting the sons live?"

And the midwives answered Pharaoh: because the Hebrew women are not like the Egyptian women; for they are vigorous, [and] they gave birth before the midwife arrived at her house.

And God was kind to the midwives, and the people multiplied and became very powerful.

And because the midwives feared God, he built houses for them.

Then Pharaoh commanded all his people, saying: throw into the river all the sons that will be born, but let all the daughters live.

Now a man from the house of Levi went away and took a daughter of Levi.

She conceived and gave birth to a son, and seeing that he was beautiful, she hid him for three months.

But unable to keep him hidden any longer, she took a box of rushes, coated it with bitumen and pitch, put the child inside, and placed it among reeds on the bank of the river.

And the sister of that [child] stood far away to see what would happen.

Now Pharaoh's daughter went down to the river to bathe, and her daughters were walking along the riverbank, and having seen the chest among the reeds, she sent one of her servants to get it.

And when she opened it, she saw the child, and behold, the child was crying; and she was moved with compassion, and said, This is one of the children of these Hebrews. Then the sister [of the child] said to Pharaoh's daughter, "Shall I go and call a Hebrew woman who is nursing, and she will nurse this child for you?"

And Pharaoh's daughter answered her, "Go." So the girl went away and called for the child's mother.

And Pharaoh's daughter said to him, "Take this child and nurse him for me, and I will give you your wages." So the woman took the child and nursed him.

And when the child grew up, she brought him to Pharaoh's daughter; and he became her son, and she named him Moses; because, she said, I drew him out of the water.

Now it came to pass at that time, when Moses had grown up, he went out to his brothers and saw their works; he also saw an Egyptian beating a Hebrew of his brothers.

And having looked here and there, and seeing that there was no one, he killed the Egyptian, and hid him in the sand.

He went out again on the second day, and behold, two Hebrew men were quarreling; and he said to the one who was in the wrong, "Why do you strike your neighbor?"

Who replied: Who made you Prince and Judge over us? Do you want to kill me, as you killed the Egyptian? And Moses was afraid, and said: Surely the matter is known.

Now when Pharaoh heard of this, he sought to kill Moses, but Moses fled from Pharaoh and settled in the land of Midian, and sat down by a well.

Now the priest of Midian had seven daughters, who came to draw water, and they filled the troughs to water their father's flock.

But some shepherds came and drove them away; and Moses got up and helped them, and watered their flock.

And when they returned to Reuel their father, he said to them: how did you come back so early today?

They replied: an Egyptian man rescued us from the hand of the shepherds; and he even drew plenty of water for us and watered the flock.

And he said to his daughters, "Where is he? Why have you left this man like this? Call him, and let him eat some bread."

And Moses agreed to stay with that man, who gave his daughter Zipporah to Moses.

And she gave birth to a son, and he named him Gersom; because, he said, I had been staying in a foreign country.

Now it came to pass long afterward that the King of Egypt died, and the children of Israel groaned because of their bondage, and they cried out; and their cry came up to God because of their bondage.

So God heard their weeping, and God remembered the covenant he had made with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.

So God looked at the children of Israel, and he paid attention to their condition.

Now Moses was shepherd of the flock of Jethro his father-in-law, the priest of Midian; and leading the flock to the far side of the desert, he came to the mountain of God as far as Horeb.

And the Angel of the Lord appeared to him in a flame of fire from the midst of a bush, and he looked, and behold, the bush was burning, yet the bush was not consumed.

Then Moses said, "I will now turn away and look at this great sight, why the bush is not burned up."

And the Lord saw that [Moses] had turned aside to look; and God called to him from the midst of the bush, saying, Moses, Moses! And he answered, Here I am.

And [God] said: do not come near here; take your sandals off your feet, for the place where you are standing is holy ground.

He also said, "I am the God of your father, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob." And Moses hid his face, because he was afraid to look toward God.

And the Lord said: I have indeed seen the affliction of my people who are in Egypt, and I have heard their cry because of their oppressors, for I have known their sufferings.

That is why I have come down to deliver him from the hand of the Egyptians, and to bring him up out of that land, into a good and spacious land, a land flowing with milk and honey; to the place where the Canaanites, the Hittites, the Amorites, the Perizzites, the Hivites, and the Jebusites are.

And now, behold, the cry of the children of Israel has reached me, and I have also seen the oppression with which the Egyptians oppress them.

Now come, and I will send you to Pharaoh, and you will bring my people, the children of Israel, out of Egypt.

And Moses answered God, "Who am I that I should go to Pharaoh and bring the children of Israel out of Egypt?"

And [God] said to him, "Go, for I will be with you; and this will be the sign to you that it is I who have sent you: when you have brought my people out of Egypt, you will worship God near this mountain."

And Moses said to God, "Behold, when I come to the children of Israel, and say to them, 'The God of your fathers has sent me to you,' and they say to me, 'What is his name?' what shall I tell them?"

And God said to Moses, "I AM WHO I AM." He also said, "Say this to the children of Israel: 'I AM has sent me to you.'"

God also said to Moses: you shall say this to the children of Israel: the LORD, the God of your fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob has sent me to you: this is my name forever, and this is the memorial of me throughout all generations.

Go, and assemble the elders of Israel, and say to them, The Lord, the God of your fathers, the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, appeared to me, saying, Surely I have visited you, and [I have seen] what is being done to you in Egypt.

And I said, I will bring you up out of Egypt, where you are afflicted, to the land of the Canaanites, the Hittites, the Amorites, the Perizzites, the Hivites, and the Jebusites, [which is a land] flowing with milk and honey.

And they will obey your word, and you and the elders of Israel will go to the King of Egypt, and you will say to him: The Lord, the God of the Hebrews, has come to meet us; now therefore we pray that we may go on the three-day journey into the wilderness, and that we may sacrifice to the Lord our God.

But I know that the King of Egypt will not allow you to leave unless he is forced to.

But I will stretch out my hand and strike Egypt with all the wonders I will perform in its midst; and after that, he will let you go.

And I will cause this people to find favor with the Egyptians, and it will come to pass that when you depart, you will not go empty-handed.

But each woman will ask her neighbor and the hostess of her house for ships of silver and ships of gold, and for clothing, which you will put on your sons and daughters: in this way you will plunder the Egyptians.

And Moses answered, and said, "But behold, they will not believe me, nor obey my word; for they will say, 'The Lord has not appeared to you.'"

And the Lord said to him, "What is that in your hand?" He answered, "A staff."

And [God] said to him, "Throw it on the ground." So he threw it on the ground, and it became a snake. And Moses ran away from it.

And the Lord said to Moses, "Stretch out your hand and take hold of its tail." So he stretched out his hand and took hold of it, and it became a staff in his hand.

And [this], so that they may believe that the Lord, the God of their fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, has appeared to you.

The Lord said to him again, "Now put your hand inside your bosom." So he put his hand inside his bosom, and when he took it out, behold, his hand was leprous, like snow. And [God] said to him: put your hand back into your bosom; and he put his hand back into his bosom; then he took it out of his bosom; and behold, it had become like his other flesh.

But if it happens that they do not believe you, and do not obey the voice of the first sign, they will believe the voice of the second sign.

And if it happens that they do not believe in these two signs, and do not obey your word, you shall take water from the river, and pour it on the earth, and the water that you have taken from the river shall become blood on the earth.

And Moses answered the Lord, "Alas, Lord! I am not a man who has spoken well, neither from yesterday nor from before yesterday, even since you have spoken to your servant; for I have a speech impediment.

And the Lord said to him, "Who made man's mouth? Who made the mute, or the deaf, or the seeing, or the blind? Is it not I, the Lord?"

Go now, and I will be with your mouth, and I will teach you what you shall say.

And [Moses] replied: Alas! Lord, please send the one you are going to send.

And the anger of the Lord was kindled against Moses, and he said to him, "Is not Aaron the Levite your brother? I know that he will speak well, and indeed he is coming out to meet you, and when he sees you, he will rejoice in his heart."

You will therefore speak to him and put these words in his mouth; and I will be with your mouth and with his, and I will teach you what you must do.

And he will speak for you to the people, and thus he will be your spokesperson, and you will be his God.

You will also take this rod in your hand, with which you will make these signs.

So Moses went back to Jethro his father-in-law and said to him, "Please let me go back to my brothers in Egypt to see if they are still alive." Jethro said to him, "Go in peace."

But the Lord said to Moses in the land of Midian, "Go back to Egypt, for all those who sought your life are dead."

So Moses took his wife and sons, put them on a donkey, and returned to the land of Egypt. Moses also took the staff of God in his hand.

And the Lord had said to Moses: When you go back to Egypt, you shall be careful to perform all the miracles that I have given you the power to do, and you shall do them before Pharaoh; but I will harden his heart, and he will not let the people go.

You shall therefore say to Pharaoh, thus says the Lord: Israel is my son, my firstborn.

And I told you, 'Let my son go, so that he may serve me,' but you refused to let him go. Behold, I am going to kill your son, your firstborn.

Now it happened that [while Moses was] on his way to the inn, the Lord met him and sought to kill him.

And Zipporah took a sharp knife, and with it cut off her son's foreskin, and threw it at her feet, and said: indeed you are a husband of blood to me.

Then [the Lord] withdrew from him; and she said: bridegroom of blood; because of the circumcision.

And the Lord said to Aaron, "Go to meet Moses in the wilderness." So he went, and met him at the mountain of God and kissed him.

And Moses told Aaron all the words of the Lord who had sent him, and all the signs that he had commanded him [to perform].

So Moses and Aaron continued on their way, and they gathered together all the elders of the children of Israel.

And Aaron spoke all the words that the Lord had spoken to Moses; and performed the signs before the eyes of the people.

And the people believed; and they learned that the Lord had visited the children of Israel, and had seen their affliction; and they bowed down and prostrated themselves.

After this Moses and Aaron went away and said to Pharaoh, "Thus says the Lord, the God of Israel: Let my people go, so that they may celebrate a solemn festival to me in the wilderness."

But Pharaoh said, "Who is the Lord, that I should obey his voice and let Israel go? I do not know the Lord, and I will not let Israel go."

And they said, "The God of the Hebrews has come to meet us. We beg you that we may go on the three-day journey into the wilderness and sacrifice to the Lord our God, lest he come upon us with plagues or with the sword."

And the King of Egypt said to them, "Moses and Aaron, why are you turning the people away from their work? Now go back to your duties."

Pharaoh also said: behold, the people of this land are now very numerous, and you are making them idle from their work.

And Pharaoh commanded the tax collectors [appointed] over the people and his officers that day, saying:

You shall no longer give straw to this people to make bricks, as before; [but] let them go and gather straw for themselves.

Nevertheless, you shall require them to produce the same quantity of bricks as before, without reducing it in any way; for they are people of leisure, and that is why they cry out, saying: come, [and] let us sacrifice to our God.

Let the servitude be increased upon these people, and let them occupy themselves, and no longer amuse themselves with words of lies.

Then the people's tax collectors and their commissioners went out and said to the people: This is what Pharaoh said: I will no longer give you straw.

Go yourselves [and] take straw wherever you find it; but nothing [will be] diminished from your labor.

So the people spread throughout the land of Egypt, to gather stubble instead of straw.

And the tax collectors pressed them, saying: finish your work, each day its task, as when the straw was [provided] to you.

Even the commissioners of the children of Israel, whom Pharaoh's extortioners had appointed over them, were beaten, [and they] were said: Why have you not finished your task of making bricks yesterday and today, as before?

Then the foremen of the children of Israel came crying to Pharaoh, saying, "Why are you doing this to your servants?"

Your servants are not given straw, yet we are told, "Make bricks"; and behold, your servants are beaten, and your people are treated as guilty.

And he replied: You are at leisure, [you are] at leisure; that is why you say: Come, let us sacrifice to the Lord.

Now go and work; for you will not be given straw, and you will produce the same quantity of bricks.

And the Commissioners of the children of Israel saw that they were in a bad state, since it was said: you will not reduce any of your bricks on the task of each day.

And as they left Pharaoh's presence, they met Moses and Aaron, who were standing in front of them.

And they said to them, "May the Lord look upon you and judge, because you have made us a foul odor before Pharaoh and his servants, putting the sword in their hands to kill us."

Then Moses returned to the Lord and said, "Lord, why have you mistreated this people? Why did you send me?"

For ever since I came to Pharaoh to speak in your name, he has mistreated this people, and you have not delivered your people.

And the Lord said to Moses, "Now you will see what I will do to Pharaoh; for he will let them go, [being compelled] by a mighty hand, [being, I say, compelled] by a mighty hand, he will drive them out of his country."

God spoke again to Moses, and said to him: I am the Lord.

I appeared to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob as the Mighty, Almighty [God], but I was not known to them by my name, the Lord.

I have also made this covenant with them, that I will give them the land of Canaan, the land of their pilgrimages, in which they have resided as strangers.

And I heard the weeping of the children of Israel, whom the Egyptians hold captive, and I remembered my covenant.

Therefore say to the children of Israel: I am the Lord, and I will deliver you from under the burdens of the Egyptians, and I will free you from their bondage, I will redeem you with an outstretched arm, and with great judgments.

And I will take you to be my people, I will be God to you, and you will know that I am the Lord your God, who delivers you from under the burdens of the Egyptians.

And I will bring you into the land over which I have lifted up my hand, which I will give to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob, and I will give it to you as an inheritance: I am the Lord.

So Moses spoke to the Israelites in this way. But they did not listen to Moses, because of the anguish of their spirit and their harsh bondage.

And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

Go, and tell Pharaoh King of Egypt to let the children of Israel leave his country.

Then Moses spoke before the Lord, saying, "Behold, the children of Israel have not listened to me, and how will Pharaoh listen to me, since I am uncircumcised in lips?"

But the Lord spoke to Moses and Aaron, and commanded them to go to the children of Israel, and to Pharaoh King of Egypt, to bring the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt.

These are the heads of their fathers' houses: the children of Reuben, the firstborn of Israel, Enoch and Pallu, Hezron and Carmi; these are the families of Reuben.

And the children of Simeon, Jemuel, Jamin, Ohad, Jachin, Zohar, and Saul, son of a Canaanite woman; these are the families of Simeon.

These are the names of Levi's sons according to their birth: Gershon, Kohath, and Merari. And the years of Levi's life were one hundred and thirty-seven.

The children of Guerson, Libni and Simhi, according to their families.

And the children of Kohath, Hamram, Izhar, Hebron, and Huzziel. And the years of Kohath's life were one hundred and thirty-three.

And the children of Merari, Mahli and Musi; these are the families of Levi according to their generations.

Now Hamram took Jochebed his aunt as his wife, and she bore him Aaron and Moses; and the years of Hamram's life were one hundred and thirty-seven.

And the children of Izhar, Korah, Nepheg, and Zicri.

And the children of Huziel, Misaël, Eltsaphan, and Sithri.

And Aaron took as his wife Elisebah, daughter of Hamminadab, sister of Nahshon, who bore him Nadab, Abihu, Eleazar, and Ithamar.

And the descendants of Korah: Assir, Elkanah, and Abiasaph. These are the families of the Korahites.

But Eleazar son of Aaron married one of the daughters of Putiel, who bore him Phinehas. These are the heads of the Levite families.

[Now these are the same Aaron and Moses to whom the Lord said: Bring the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt in their divisions.

These were the ones who spoke to Pharaoh, King of Egypt, to bring the children of Israel out of Egypt. This is Moses, and this is Aaron.

So the day came when the Lord spoke to Moses in the land of Egypt,

The Lord spoke to Moses, saying, "I am the Lord; tell Pharaoh King of Egypt all the words that I have spoken to you."

And Moses said before the Lord, "Behold, I am uncircumcised in lips, and how will Pharaoh listen to me?"

And the Lord said to Moses, "Behold, I have appointed you to be God to Pharaoh, and Aaron your brother shall be your Prophet.”

You shall say all the things that I have commanded you, and Aaron your brother shall tell Pharaoh to let the children of Israel go out of his country.

But I will harden Pharaoh's heart, and I will multiply my signs and wonders in the land of Egypt.

And Pharaoh will not listen to you; I will lay my hand on Egypt, and I will bring my armies, my people, the children of Israel, out of the land of Egypt, by great judgments.

And the Egyptians will know that I am the Lord, when I have stretched out my hand against Egypt and brought the children of Israel out of among them.

And Moses and Aaron did as the Lord had commanded them; they did so.

Now Moses was eighty years old, and Aaron eighty-three, when they spoke to Pharaoh.

And the Lord spoke to Moses and Aaron, saying:

When Pharaoh speaks to you, saying: perform a miracle; then you shall say to Aaron: take your staff, and throw it down before Pharaoh, [and] it will become a dragon.

So Moses and Aaron went to Pharaoh and did as the Lord had commanded; and Aaron threw down his staff before Pharaoh and before his servants, and it became a dragon.

But Pharaoh also brought in the wise men and enchanters; and the magicians of Egypt did the same by their enchantments.

So they each threw down their staffs, and they became dragons; but Aaron's staff swallowed up their staffs.

And Pharaoh's heart was hardened, and he did not listen to them; as the Lord had spoken.

And the Lord said to Moses, “Pharaoh's heart is hardened; he has refused to let the people go.”

Go early in the morning to Pharaoh; behold, he will come out to the water, so stand before him on the bank of the river, and take in your hand the staff that was changed into a serpent.

And you shall say to him: The Lord, the God of the Hebrews, sent me to you, to say: Let my people go, so that they may serve me in the wilderness; but behold, you have not listened to me until now.

Thus says the Lord: You will know that I am the Lord; behold, I am going to strike the waters of the river with the staff that is in my hand, and they shall be turned into blood.

And the fish that are in the river will die, and the river will become foul-smelling, and the Egyptians will labor greatly to find water to drink from the river.

The Lord also said to Moses, “Tell Aaron, ‘Take your staff and stretch out your hand over the waters of Egypt, over their rivers, over their streams, and over their marshes, and over all their pools of water, and they shall become blood, and there shall be blood throughout the land of Egypt, in the vessels of wood and of stone.’”

So Moses and Aaron did as the Lord had commanded. And [Aaron] raised his staff and struck the waters of the river with it, while Pharaoh and his servants saw it; and all the waters of the river were turned into blood.

And the fish that was in the river died, and the river became foul-smelling, so that the Egyptians could not drink the waters of the river; and there was blood throughout the land of Egypt.

And the magicians of Egypt did the same by their enchantments; and Pharaoh's heart was hardened, so that he would not listen to them; according to the Lord had spoken.

And Pharaoh turned his back on them and went into his house, and did not yet apply his heart to the things [he had seen].

All the Egyptians dug around the river to find drinking water, because they could not drink the water from the river.

And seven days passed from the Lord's striking of the river.

After this the Lord said to Moses, “Go to Pharaoh and tell him, ‘This is what the Lord says: Let my people go, so that they may serve me.’”

If you refuse to let it go, behold, I will come and strike all your lands with frogs.

And the river will swarm with frogs, which will come up and enter your house, and the room where you sleep, and onto your bed, and into the house of your servants, and among all your people, into your ovens, and into your kneading troughs.

So the frogs will come up on you, on your people, and on all your servants.

The Lord then said to Moses, “Tell Aaron, ‘Stretch out your hand with your staff over the rivers, the streams, and the marshes, and make the frogs come up over the land of Egypt.’”

And Aaron stretched out his hand over the waters of Egypt, and the frogs came up and covered the land of Egypt.

But the magicians did the same by their enchantments, and made frogs come up over the land of Egypt.

Then Pharaoh summoned Moses and Aaron and said to them, “Plead with the Lord by your prayers, that he may remove the frogs from me and from my people; and I will let the people go, that they may sacrifice to the Lord.”

And Moses said to Pharaoh, “Glorify yourself over me. How long shall I incline my prayers to the Lord for you, for your servants, and for your people, that they may drive the frogs away from you and from your houses? They shall remain only in the river.”

Then he answered: tomorrow. And [Moses] said: [it will be done] according to your word, so that you may know that there is no [God] like the Lord our God.

The frogs will therefore depart from you, from your houses, from your servants, and from your people; only they will remain in the river.

Then Moses and Aaron went out from Pharaoh; and Moses cried out to the Lord about the frogs that he had brought upon Pharaoh.

And the Lord did according to the word of Moses. So the frogs died, and there were no more of them in the houses, nor in the villages, nor in the countryside.

And they piled them up in heaps, and the earth was infected with them.

But when Pharaoh saw that he had respite, he hardened his heart and did not listen to them, just as the Lord had spoken.

And the Lord said to Moses, “Tell Aaron, ‘Stretch out your staff and strike the dust of the ground, and it will become lice throughout all the land of Egypt.’”

And they did so. And Aaron stretched out his hand with his staff, and struck the dust of the ground, and it became lice on men and beasts; all the dust of the land became lice throughout all the land of Egypt.

And the magicians tried to do the same with their enchantments, to produce lice, but they could not. So the lice were found on both men and animals.

Then the magicians said to Pharaoh, “This is the finger of God.” But Pharaoh’s heart was hardened, and he would not listen to them, just as the Lord had said.

Then the Lord said to Moses, “Get up early in the morning and present yourself before Pharaoh. He will be coming out to the water, and you shall say to him, ‘Thus says the Lord: Let my people go, that they may serve me.’”

For if you do not let my people go, behold, I am going to send against you, against your servants, against your people, and against your houses, a mixture of insects; and the houses of the Egyptians shall be filled with this mixture, and also the ground on which they are.

But on that day I will distinguish the land of Goshen, where my people are, so that there will be no mingling of insects, so that you may know that I am the Lord in the midst of the earth.

And I will put a difference between your people and my people; tomorrow this sign will take place.

And the Lord did so; and a great mixture of insects entered the house of Pharaoh, and into every house of his servants, and into all the land of Egypt, so that the land was spoiled by this mixture.

And Pharaoh summoned Moses and Aaron and said to them, "Go, sacrifice to your God in this land."

But Moses said, "It is not right to do so, for we would be offering to the Lord our God the abomination of the Egyptians. If we offer up the abomination of the Egyptians before their very eyes, will they not stone us?"

We will go on a three-day journey into the desert, and we will sacrifice to the Lord our God, as he will tell us.

Then Pharaoh said, "I will let you go to sacrifice to the Lord your God in the wilderness; however, you must not go far at all. Prompt the Lord to me by your prayers."

And Moses said, "Behold, I am going out from you, and I will entreat the Lord by prayer, that the mixture of insects may depart tomorrow from Pharaoh, from his officials, and from his people. But let Pharaoh not continue to mock by refusing to let the people go to sacrifice to the Lord."

Then Moses left Pharaoh and persuaded the Lord by prayer.

And the Lord did according to the word of Moses; and the mixture of insects departed from Pharaoh, and from his servants, and from his people; not one [insect] remained.

But Pharaoh hardened his heart again this time, and did not let the people go.

Then the Lord said to Moses, "Go to Pharaoh and tell him, 'This is what the Lord, the God of the Hebrews, says: Let my people go, so that they may serve me.'"

For if you refuse to let them go, and if you still hold them back,

Behold, the hand of the Lord will be upon your livestock in the field, upon the horses, and upon the donkeys, and upon the camels, and upon the oxen, and upon the sheep, and there will be a very great mortality.

And the Lord will distinguish the livestock of the Israelites from the livestock of the Egyptians, so that nothing belonging to the children of Israel will die.

And the Lord set a deadline, saying: Tomorrow the Lord will do this in the land.

The Lord did this the next day, and all the livestock of the Egyptians died. But not one of the livestock of the children of Israel died.

And Pharaoh sent [to investigate], and behold, there was not a single dead animal of the livestock of the children of Israel. However, Pharaoh's heart was hardened; and he would not let the people go.

Then the Lord said to Moses and Aaron, "Take up your hands full of ashes from the furnace, and let Moses scatter them toward heaven in the presence of Pharaoh."

And they will become dust throughout the land of Egypt, and boils will break out in pustules on both men and beasts throughout the land of Egypt.

So they took ashes from the furnace and stood before Pharaoh; and Moses scattered them toward the heavens; and boils broke out in sores on both men and beasts.

And the magicians could not stand before Moses because of the sores; for the magicians had sores, like all the Egyptians.

And the Lord hardened Pharaoh's heart, and he did not listen to them, just as the Lord had spoken to Moses.

Then the Lord said to Moses, "Get up early in the morning and present yourself before Pharaoh and said to him, 'This is what the Lord, the God of the Hebrews, says: Let my people go, so that they may serve me.'"

For this time I will bring all my plagues into your heart, and upon your servants, and upon your people, so that you may know that there is no one [God] like me in all the earth.

For now, if I had stretched out my hand, I would have struck you and your people with death, and you would have been wiped off the face of the earth.

But I have certainly raised you up for this purpose, to show my power in you, and to make my name praised throughout the earth.

Do you still rise up against my people, refusing to let them go?

Behold, I am going to cause a great hail to rain down tomorrow at this same time, the likes of which have not been seen in Egypt from the day it was founded until now. Now therefore send and gather your livestock and all that you have in the field; for hail will fall on all people and on the livestock that are found in the field and have not been confined, and they will die.

The one of Pharaoh's servants who feared the word of the Lord quickly brought his servants and his animals back into their houses.

But he who did not apply his heart to the word of the Lord left his servants and his animals in the field.

And the Lord said to Moses, "Stretch out your hand toward the heavens, and there will be hail throughout the land of Egypt, on people, on animals, and on all the plants of the field in the land of Egypt."

So Moses stretched out his staff toward the heavens, and the Lord sent thunder and hail, and fire moved back and forth upon the earth. The Lord rained hail upon the land of Egypt.

So there was hail and fire mingled with the hail, which was so great that there had not been anything like it in all the land of Egypt since it had been inhabited.

And the hail struck everything in the fields throughout the land of Egypt, both people and animals. The hail also struck all the plants in the fields and broke all the trees in the fields.

There was only the region of Goshen, where the children of Israel were, [where] there was no hail.

Then Pharaoh sent for Moses and Aaron and said to them, "I have sinned this time; the Lord is righteous, but I and my people are wicked."

Bend the Lord with prayers; let it be enough; and let God not thunder or hail again, for I will let you go, and you will not be arrested anymore.

Then Moses said, "As soon as I go out of the city I will stretch out my hands to the Lord, and the thunder will cease and there will be no more hail, so that you may know that the earth is the Lord's."

But as for you and your servants, I know that you still do not fear the Lord God.

But the flax and the barley had been struck, for the barley was in ears and the flax was in stalks.

But the wheat and spelt were not affected, because they were hidden.

So Moses went out from Pharaoh outside the city and stretched out his hands to the Lord, and the thunder ceased, and the hail and rain no longer fell on the earth.

And when Pharaoh saw that the rain, the hail, and the thunder had ceased, he continued to sin, and he hardened his heart, he and his servants.

Therefore Pharaoh's heart was hardened, and he did not let the children of Israel go; as the Lord had spoken through Moses.

And the Lord said to Moses, "Go to Pharaoh, for I have hardened his heart and the hearts of his servants, so that I may put within him the signs that I am about to perform."

And so that you may tell, when your son and your son's son hear it, what I did in Egypt, and my signs that I performed among them; and you will know that I am the Lord.

So Moses and Aaron came to Pharaoh and said to him, "This is what the Lord, the God of the Hebrews, says: 'How long will you refuse to humble yourself before me? Let my people go so that they may serve me.'"

For if you refuse to let my people go, behold, I will bring locusts into your lands tomorrow.

They will cover the whole face of the earth, so that the earth cannot be seen: and they will graze on the remnant of what escaped, which the hail left you; and they will graze on all the trees that grow in the fields.

And they will fill your houses, and the houses of all your servants, and the houses of all the Egyptians—something your ancestors did not see, nor did your ancestors, from the day they were on earth until this day. Then he turned his back on Pharaoh and went out from him.

And Pharaoh's servants said to him, "How long will this man keep us bound? Let these people go, so that they may serve the Lord their God. Will you wait until you know that Egypt is destroyed?"

So Moses and Aaron were brought back to Pharaoh, and he said to them, "Go, serve the Lord your God." Who are all those who will go?

And Moses answered: we will go with our young men and our old men, with our sons and our daughters, with our flocks and herds; for we have a solemn feast to the Lord.

Then he said to them, "The Lord be with you, as I am letting your little children go; beware, for evil is before you."

It will not be so [as you have asked], but you men, go now and serve the Lord, for that is what you have asked. And they were driven out from Pharaoh's presence.

Then the Lord said to Moses, "Stretch out your hand over the land of Egypt to bring locusts up over the land of Egypt and eat all the grass of the earth and all that the hail has left."

So Moses stretched out his staff over the land of Egypt, and the Lord brought an east wind over the land all that day and all that night; and in the morning the east wind had taken away the locusts.

And he brought up locusts throughout the land of Egypt, and put them in all the regions of Egypt; they were very large, and there had been none like them before, and there will be none like them after.

And they covered the face of the whole land, so that the earth was covered with them; and they devoured all the grass of the earth, and all the fruit of the trees that the hail had left, and there remained no green thing on the trees, nor on the grass of the field, in all the land of Egypt.

Then Pharaoh summoned Moses and Aaron with all haste, and said to them, "I have sinned against the Lord your God and against you."

But now, I pray you, forgive me my sin, just this once; and incline the Lord your God in prayer, that he may take away this death from me only.

So he left Pharaoh and persuaded the Lord by prayer.

Then the Lord sent a very strong wind from the west, which swept away the locusts and drove them into the Red Sea. Not a single locust remained in all the lands of Egypt.

But the Lord hardened Pharaoh's heart, and he did not let the children of Israel go.

Then the Lord said to Moses, "Stretch out your hand toward the heavens, and let there be darkness over the land of Egypt, so thick that one can feel it with one's hand."

So Moses stretched out his hand toward the heavens, and there was very dark darkness over all the land of Egypt for three days.

They could not see one another, and no one rose from the place where he was for three days; but there was light for the children of Israel in the place of their dwellings.

Then Pharaoh summoned Moses and said to him, "Go, serve the Lord; only let your flocks and herds remain; even your little children shall go with you."

But Moses replied: you will also let us bring the sacrifices and burnt offerings that we will make to the Lord our God.

And even our flocks will come with us, not a hoof left behind; for we will take some of them to serve the Lord our God; and we do not know what we will offer to the Lord until we arrive at that place.

But the Lord hardened Pharaoh's heart, and he would not let them go.

And Pharaoh said to him, "Go back from me; beware of seeing my face again; for on the day you see my face you will surely die."

And Moses answered: You have spoken well; I will not see your face again.

But the Lord had said to Moses, I will bring yet another plague on Pharaoh and on Egypt, and after that he will let you go from here, he will let you go completely, and he will drive you out entirely.

Now speak, while the people listen, and [tell them]: let each one ask his neighbor, and each woman her neighbor, for ships of silver and ships of gold.

Now the Lord had found favor in the sight of the people in the sight of the Egyptians; and even Moses was considered a great man in the land of Egypt, both among Pharaoh's servants and among the people.

And Moses said, "Thus says the Lord: 'About midnight I will pass through Egypt.'"

And every firstborn in the land of Egypt shall die, from the firstborn of Pharaoh, who was to sit on his throne, to the firstborn of the female servant who is employed to grind grain; even every firstborn of the animals.

And there will be such a great outcry throughout the land of Egypt, such as never was, nor will ever be.

But against all the children of Israel not even a dog will lash out with its tongue, from man to beast; so that you may know that God has made a distinction between the Egyptians and the Israelites.

And all these of your servants shall come to me and bow down before me, saying, 'Come out, you and all the people who are with you; and then I will come out.' So Moses went out from Pharaoh in a fierce rage.

The Lord had said to Moses, "Pharaoh will not listen to you, so that my miracles may be multiplied in the land of Egypt."

And Moses and Aaron performed all these miracles before Pharaoh. But the Lord hardened Pharaoh's heart, so that he would not let the Israelites go out of his country.

Now the Lord had spoken to Moses and Aaron in the land of Egypt, saying:

This month will be the beginning of months for you, it will be the first month of the year.

Speak to the whole assembly of Israel, saying: that on the tenth [day] of this month, each of them shall take a young one from among the sheep or from among the goats, according to the families of the fathers, a young one, [I say], from among the sheep or from among the goats, for each family.

But if the family is less than enough to eat a young sheep or goat, let him take his neighbor who is near his house, according to the number of persons; you shall calculate how many it will take to eat a young sheep or goat, taking into account what each of you can eat.

Now the young of the sheep or of the goats shall be without blemish, [and shall be] a male, a year old; you shall take it from among the sheep, or from among the goats.

And you shall keep it in guard until the fourteenth day of this month, and the whole congregation of the assembly of Israel shall slaughter it between the two vespers.

And they shall take some of his blood and put it on the two doorposts and on the lintel of the houses where they eat it.

And they shall eat the flesh roasted over the fire that night; and they shall eat it with unleavened bread, [and] with bitter herbs.

Do not eat any of it half-cooked, nor anything that has been boiled in water, but let it be roasted over the fire, its head, its legs, and its entrails.

And leave nothing of it until morning, but if anything remains until morning, you shall burn it with fire.

And you shall eat it in this way: your loins shall be girded, your sandals on your feet, and your staff in your hand, and you shall eat it in haste. It is the Lord's Passover.

For I will pass through the land of Egypt that night, and I will strike down every firstborn in the land of Egypt, both of men and of beasts, and I will execute judgments on all the gods of Egypt; I am the Lord.

And the blood will be a sign for you on the houses in which you are, for when I see the blood, I will pass over you, and there will be no plague of destruction among you when I strike the land of Egypt.

And that day shall be a memorial for you, and you shall celebrate it as a solemn feast to the Lord throughout your generations; you shall celebrate it as a solemn feast, by perpetual ordinance.

For seven days you shall eat unleavened bread, and on the first day you shall remove the leaven from your houses; for whoever eats leavened bread from the first day until the seventh, that person shall be cut off from Israel.

On the first day there will be a holy convocation, and likewise on the seventh day there will be a holy convocation; no work will be done on those days, but food will be prepared for each person.

You will therefore be careful with unleavened bread; because on that same day I will have brought your bands out of the land of Egypt; you will therefore observe that day throughout your generations, as a perpetual ordinance.

In the first month, on the fourteenth day of the month at evening, you shall eat unleavened bread until the twenty-first day of the month at evening.

No leaven shall be found in your houses for seven days; for whoever eats leavened bread, that person shall be cut off from the congregation of Israel, whether he resides as a stranger or is born in the land.

You shall not eat leavened bread; [but] in all your dwellings you shall eat unleavened bread.

So Moses called together all the elders of Israel and said to them, "Choose one from among the sheep or goats, according to your families, and slaughter the Passover lamb."

Then you shall take a bunch of hyssop, and dip it in the blood that will be in a basin, and you shall sprinkle some of the blood that will be in the basin on the lintel and the two doorposts; and none of you shall leave the door of his house until morning.

For the Lord will pass through to strike Egypt, and he will see the blood on the lintel and on the two doorposts, and the Lord will pass over the door and will not allow the destroyer to enter your houses to strike you down.

You shall keep this as a perpetual order for yourself and your children.

When you enter the land that the Lord will give you, as he has spoken, you shall keep this service.

And when your children ask you: what does this service mean to you?

Then you will answer: It is the Passover sacrifice to the Lord, which passed over the houses of the children of Israel in Egypt when he struck Egypt and spared our houses. Then the people bowed down and prostrated themselves.

So the children of Israel went away, and did as the Lord had commanded Moses and Aaron, they did so.

And it came to pass that at midnight the Lord struck down all the firstborn in the land of Egypt, from the firstborn of Pharaoh, who was to sit on his throne, even to the firstborn of the captives who were in the prison, and all the firstborn of the beasts.

And Pharaoh arose in the night, he and his servants, and all the Egyptians; and there was a great outcry in Egypt, because there was not a house where there was not someone dead.

So he called Moses and Aaron at night and said to them, "Get up, leave from among my people, both you and the children of Israel, and go; serve the Lord, as you have spoken of."

Take also your small and large livestock, as you have spoken of, and go, and bless me.

And the Egyptians forced the people, and hurried to bring them out of the country; for they said: we are all dead.

So the people took their dough before it had risen, with their kneading troughs tied to their clothes, on their shoulders.

But the children of Israel had done according to the word of Moses, and had asked the Egyptians for ships of silver and gold, and for clothing.

And the Lord had made the people find favor with the Egyptians, who had lent them; so that they plundered the Egyptians.

So the children of Israel, having departed from Rahmeses, came to Succoth, about six hundred thousand men on foot, not counting the little children.

A great number of all kinds of people also went with them; and very large flocks of both small and large animals.

But because they had been driven out of Egypt, and could not delay any longer, and had not even made any provisions, they baked unleavened cakes of the dough which they had brought from Egypt; for they had not made it rise.

Now the dwelling that the children of Israel had made in Egypt was four hundred and thirty years.

So it came to pass, at the end of four hundred and thirty years, it came to pass, [I say], on that very day, that all the bands of the Lord came out of the land of Egypt.

This is the night that must be carefully observed in honor of the Lord, because [then] he brought them out of the land of Egypt; this same night is to be observed in honor of the Lord by all the children of Israel in their ages.

The Lord also said to Moses and Aaron: This is the ordinance of the Passover: no foreigner shall eat of it.

But every slave who has been bought with money shall be circumcised, [and] then he shall eat of it.

The foreigner and the mercenary will not eat of it.

It shall be eaten in one house, and you shall not carry any of its flesh outside the house, nor break its bones.

The whole assembly of Israel will do it.

And if any foreigner who lives among you wants to keep the Passover to the Lord, every male who belongs to him must be circumcised, and then he may come near to keep it, and he will be like one who was born in the land; but no uncircumcised man may eat of it.

There will be the same law for the one who was born in the land and for the foreigner who lives among you.

All the children of Israel did as the Lord had commanded Moses and Aaron; they did so.

So it came to pass on that very day that the Lord brought the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt, by their bands.

And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

Sanctify for me every firstborn, every one that opens the womb among the children of Israel, both of men and of beasts, [for it is] mine.

Moses then said to the people: Remember this day, on which you came out of Egypt, out of the house of bondage; for the Lord brought you out of it with a mighty hand; therefore you shall eat no leavened bread.

You are going out today in the month when the ears of corn are ripening:

When the Lord has brought you into the land of the Canaanites, Hittites, Amorites, Hivites, and Jebusites, which he swore to your fathers to give you, a land flowing with milk and honey, then you shall perform this service this month.

For seven days you shall eat unleavened bread, and on the seventh day there shall be a solemn feast to the Lord.

For seven days you shall eat unleavened bread; and no leavened bread shall be seen among you; indeed, no leaven shall be seen in any of your lands.

And on that day you shall tell your children these things, saying: It is because of what the Lord has done to me by bringing me out of Egypt.

And this shall be for you a sign on your hand, and a reminder between your eyes, so that the Law of the Lord may be in your mouth, because the Lord brought you out of Egypt with a mighty hand.

You will therefore keep this prescription in its season, year after year.

Also, when the Lord has brought you into the land of the Canaanites, as he swore to you and to your fathers, and has given it to you.

Then you shall present to the Lord everything that opens the womb; even everything that comes out and opens the door of the beasts; what you have of males shall be the Lord's.

But you shall redeem with a young sheep or goat, the firstborn of any donkey, and if you do not redeem it, you shall cut off its throat. You shall also redeem every firstborn male among your children.

And when your son asks you in the future, saying, "What does this mean?" then you shall tell him, "The Lord brought us out of Egypt, out of the house of bondage, with a mighty hand."

For it came to pass that when Pharaoh stubbornly refused to let us go, the Lord killed all the firstborn in the land of Egypt, both the firstborn of men and the firstborn of beasts; therefore I sacrifice to the Lord every male who opens the door, and I redeem every firstborn of my children.

This will be a sign on your hand and a sign between your eyes, that the Lord brought us out of Egypt with a mighty hand.

But when Pharaoh had let the people go, God did not lead them by the way of the land of the Philistines, although it was the shortest; for God said: it is so that it may not happen that the people should repent when they see war, and return to Egypt.

But God led the people around by way of the desert, towards the Red Sea. So the children of Israel went up armed from the land of Egypt.

And Moses had taken Joseph's bones with him; because [Joseph] had expressly made the children of Israel swear, [saying to them]: God will most certainly visit you, therefore you shall carry my bones with you from here.

And they departed from Succoth, and camped at Etham, which is at the end of the desert.

And the Lord went before them by day in a pillar of cloud to lead them along the way, and by night in a pillar of fire to give them light, so that they might travel by day and by night.

[And] he did not remove the pillar of cloud by day, nor the pillar of fire by night, from before the people.

And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

Speak to the children of Israel; [and tell them], that they turn back, and that they encamp before Pi-Hahiroth, between Migdol and the sea, opposite Bahal-Zephon; you shall encamp opposite that [place] by the sea.

Then Pharaoh will say of the children of Israel: they are embarrassed in the land, the desert has confined them.

And I will harden Pharaoh's heart, and he will pursue you; so I will be glorified in Pharaoh and in all his army, and the Egyptians will know that I am the Lord; and they did so.

Now it had been reported to the King of Egypt that the people were fleeing, and the heart of Pharaoh and his servants changed toward the people, and they said, "What have we done, that we have let Israel go, so that they will no longer serve us?"

So he had his chariot harnessed, and he took his people with him.

So he took six hundred elite chariots, and all the chariots of Egypt; and there were captains over all of them.

And the Lord hardened the heart of Pharaoh king of Egypt, and he pursued the children of Israel. Now the children of Israel had gone out with a show of arms.

So the Egyptians pursued them; and all the horses of Pharaoh's chariots, his horsemen, and his army overtook them as they were encamped by the sea, near Pi-Hahiroth opposite Bahal-Zephon.

And when Pharaoh had approached, the children of Israel lifted up their eyes, and behold, the Egyptians were marching after them, and the children of Israel were very afraid, and cried out to the Lord.

And they said to Moses, "Were there no tombs in Egypt that you brought us to die in the desert? What have you done to us by bringing us out of Egypt?"

Isn't that what we told you in Egypt, saying: "Depart from us, so that we may serve the Egyptians? For it is better that we serve them than if we die in the desert."

And Moses said to the people, "Do not be afraid; stand still and see the deliverance of the Lord, which he will give you today; for as for the Egyptians whom you have seen today, you will see them no more."

The Lord will fight for you, and you will remain at peace.

But the Lord had said to Moses, "Why are you crying out to me? Speak to the children of Israel, that they may walk."

And you, lift up your staff, and stretch out your hand over the sea, and divide it, so that the children of Israel may go into the midst of the sea on dry ground.

And as for me, behold, I am going to harden the hearts of the Egyptians, so that they will go in after them; and I shall be glorified in Pharaoh, and in all his army, in his chariots and in his horsemen.

And the Egyptians will know that I am the Lord, when I have been glorified in Pharaoh, in his chariots, and in his horsemen.

And the angel of God, who had been going before the camp of Israel, moved and went behind them; and the pillar of cloud moved from before them and stood behind them:

And it came between the camp of the Egyptians and the camp of Israel; and it was to the one a cloud and a darkness, and to the other, it gave light by night; and one [of the camps] did not approach the other all night long.

Now Moses had stretched out his hand over the sea; and the Lord drove the sea back all night by a very strong east wind, and made the sea dry land, and the waters were divided.

And the children of Israel went into the midst of the sea on dry ground, and the waters were a wall to them on their right and on their left.

And the Egyptians pursued them; and they went after them into the midst of the sea, [namely] all of Pharaoh's horses, his chariots, and his horsemen.

But it came to pass that in the morning watch, the Lord, being in the pillar of fire and in the cloud, looked down upon the camp of the Egyptians, and routed it.

He removed the wheels from his chariots and made them plodding heavily. Then the Egyptians said, "Let us flee from the Israelites, for the Lord is fighting for them against the Egyptians."

And the Lord said to Moses, "Stretch out your hand over the sea, and the waters will return upon the Egyptians, upon their chariots, and upon their horsemen."

So Moses stretched out his hand over the sea, and the sea returned to its rushing state as the morning came; and the Egyptians, fleeing, met the sea [which had rejoined]; and so the Lord hurled the Egyptians into the midst of the sea.

For the waters returned and covered the chariots and the horsemen of all Pharaoh's army, who had gone into the sea after the Israelites, and not one of them was left.

But the children of Israel walked through the midst of the sea on dry ground; and the waters were a wall to them on their right and on their left.

So the Lord delivered Israel that day from the hand of the Egyptians; and Israel saw the Egyptians dead on the seashore.

So Israel saw the great power that the Lord had displayed against the Egyptians; and the people feared the Lord, and they believed in the Lord and in Moses his servant.

Then Moses and the children of Israel sang this song to the Lord, and said: I will sing to the Lord, for he has exalted himself greatly; he has thrown into the sea both horse and rider.

The Lord is my strength and my praise, and he has been my Savior, my mighty God. I will build him a tabernacle; he is the God of my father, and I will exalt him.

The Lord is a mighty warrior; his name is the Lord.

He threw Pharaoh's chariots and his army into the sea; the elite of his captains were submerged in the Red Sea.

The chasms covered them, they sank to the bottom [of the waters] like a stone.

Your right hand, O Lord, has shown itself magnificent in strength; your right hand, O Lord, has crushed the enemy.

You have ruined by the greatness of your Majesty those who rose up against you; you unleashed your anger, and it consumed them like stubble.

By the breath of your nostrils the waters were heaped up; the flowing waters stood still like a heap; the deeps were frozen in the middle of the sea.

The enemy said: I will pursue, I will overtake, I will divide the spoils, my soul will be satisfied with them, I will draw my sword, my hand will destroy them.

You blew with your wind, the sea covered them; they were sunk like lead in the beautiful waters.

Who is like you among the mighty, O Lord! Who is like you, majestic in holiness, worthy to be revered and praised, doing marvelous things?

You stretched out your right hand, the earth swallowed them up.

You have led by your mercy this people whom you have redeemed; you have led them by your strength to the dwelling place of your holiness.

The peoples heard it, and they trembled; grief seized the inhabitants of Palestine.

Then the Princes of Edom will be troubled, and trembling will seize the strongholds of Moab, all the inhabitants of Canaan will melt away.

Terror and dread will fall upon them; they will be made as dull as stone, by the greatness of your arm, until your people, O Lord, have passed away; until this people whom you have acquired have passed away.

You will bring them in and plant them on the mountain of your inheritance, in the place you have prepared for your dwelling, O Lord, in the sanctuary, O Lord, which your hands have established.

The Lord will reign forever and ever.

For Pharaoh's horse went into the sea with his chariot and his horsemen, and the Lord turned the waters of the sea back upon them, but the children of Israel walked on dry ground in the midst of the sea.

And Miriam the Prophetess, Aaron's sister, took a drum in her hand, and all the women went out after her with drums and flutes.

And Mary answered them: Sing to the Lord, for he has been exalted on high; he has thrown into the sea both horse and rider.

After this Moses led the Israelites away from the Red Sea, and they headed towards the desert of Shur, and having walked for three days through the desert, they found no water.

From there they came to Mara, but they could not drink the waters of Mara, because they were bitter; therefore the place was called Mara.

And the people murmured against Moses, saying, "What shall we drink?"

And [Moses] cried out to the Lord; and the Lord showed him a certain kind of wood, which he threw into the water; and the water became sweet. There he set before him a statute and a law, and there he tested him;

And he said to him, "If you listen carefully to the voice of the Lord your God, and do what is right in his sight, and pay attention to his commandments, and keep all his ordinances, I will not bring on you any of the afflictions that I brought on Egypt, for I am the Lord who heals you."

Then they came to Elim, where there were twelve springs of water, and seventy palms; and they camped there by the waters.

And the whole assembly of the children of Israel having departed from Elim came to the wilderness of Sin, which is between Elim and Sinai, on the fifteenth day of the second month after they had come out of the land of Egypt.

And the whole assembly of the children of Israel murmured against Moses and Aaron in that desert.

And the children of Israel said to them, "Ah! If only we had died by the hand of the Lord in the land of Egypt, when we sat beside the stews of meat and ate our fill of bread; for you have brought us out into this wilderness to kill this whole assembly with hunger."

And the Lord said to Moses, "Behold, I will rain down bread from heaven unto you, and the people shall go out, and gather forth a day's provision, that I may test them, [to see] whether they shall keep my Law, or not."

But on the sixth day they must prepare what they have brought in, and there must be double what they gather each day.

Moses and Aaron then said to all the children of Israel: This evening you will know that the Lord has brought you out of the land of Egypt.

And in the morning you will see the glory of the Lord; because he has heard your murmurings against the Lord; for why are we that you murmur against us?

Moses said then: it will be when the Lord has given you meat to eat this evening, and in the morning has filled you with bread, because he has heard your grumbling, with which you have grumbled against him; for what are we? Your grumbling is not against us, but against the Lord.

And Moses said to Aaron, "Tell all the congregation of the children of Israel, 'Come near to the presence of the Lord, for he has heard your murmurings.'"

Now it came to pass that as soon as Aaron had spoken to all the congregation of the children of Israel, they looked toward the wilderness, and behold, the glory of the Lord appeared in the cloud.

And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

I have heard the murmurings of the children of Israel. Speak to them and tell them: between the two evenings you shall eat meat, and in the morning you shall be filled with bread; and you shall know that I am the Lord your God.

So in the evening quails came up, which covered the camp, and in the morning there was a layer of dew around the camp.

And when this layer of dew has vanished, there is something small and round on the surface of the desert, like hail on the earth.

When the Israelites saw this, they asked one another, "What is it?" for they did not know what it was. Moses said to them, "It is the bread that the Lord has given you to eat."

But what the Lord has commanded is that each one should gather as much as he needs for his food, a homer per person, according to the number of your persons; each one should take some for those who are in his tent.

So the children of Israel did this; and some gathered more, and some less.

And they measured it by Homers; and he who had gathered much did not have more [than he needed]; nor did he who had gathered little have less; but each one gathered according to what he could eat.

And Moses had told them: no one should leave any of it until morning.

But there were some who did not obey Moses; for some of them kept some of it until morning; and worms were born in it, and it stank; and Moses became very angry with them.

Thus each person gathered as much as they needed to feed themselves every morning, and when the heat of the sun came, it melted.

But on the sixth day they gathered double the amount of bread, two Homers for each person; and the leaders of the assembly came to report it to Moses.

And he said to them, "This is what the Lord has said: 'Tomorrow is a Sabbath of rest, holy to the Lord; bake what you will bake, and boil what you will boil, and put away all that is left over, to keep it until morning.'"

So they kept it tight until morning, as Moses had commanded, and it did not stink, nor were there any worms inside.

Then Moses said, "Eat it today, for today is the Lord's Rest; today you will not find it in the fields."

For six days you shall gather it; but the seventh is the Sabbath; there shall be none on that day.

And on the seventh day some of the people went out to gather some, but they found none.

And the Lord said to Moses, "How long will you refuse to keep my commandments and my laws?"

Consider that the Lord has commanded you to observe the Sabbath; therefore he gives you bread for two days on the sixth day; let each one remain in his place, and let no one leave the place where he is on the seventh day.

So the people rested on the seventh day.

And the house of Israel called [this bread] Manna; and it was like coriander seed, white, and had the taste of honey cakes.

And Moses said: This is what the Lord has commanded: that a Homer be filled with it, to be kept throughout your generations, so that you may see the bread that I made you eat in the wilderness, after I brought you out of the land of Egypt.

Moses then said to Aaron, "Take a jar and put in it a full homer of manna, and set it before the Lord, to be kept throughout your generations."

And Aaron placed it before the Testimony to be kept there, as the Lord had commanded Moses.

And the children of Israel ate the manna for forty years, until they came to an inhabited land; they ate, [I say], the manna, until they came to the borders of the land of Canaan.

Now, a Homer is one-tenth of an Ephah.

And the whole assembly of the children of Israel set out from the desert of Sin, according to their journeys, following the command of the Lord, and they encamped in Rephidim, where there was no water for the people to drink.

And the people rebelled against Moses, and they said to him, "Give us water to drink." And Moses said to them, "Why are you rebelling against me? Why are you testing the Lord?"

So the people became thirsty in that place because there was no water; and so the people grumbled against Moses, saying, "Why did you bring us up out of Egypt to make us, our children, and our livestock die of thirst?"

And Moses cried out to the Lord, saying, "What shall I do to this people? They will soon stone me."

And the Lord answered Moses, go ahead of the people, and take with you some of the elders of Israel, and take in your hand the staff with which you struck the river, and come.

Behold, I will stand there before you on the rock at Horeb, and you shall strike the rock, and water shall come out of it, and the people shall drink. So Moses did so, for the elders of Israel saw it.

And he named the place Massah and Meribah; because of the dispute of the children of Israel, and because they had tested the Lord, saying, Is the Lord among us, or not? Then Hamalech came and fought Israel at Rephidim.

And Moses said to Joshua, "Choose some men for us, and go out to fight against Hamalech, and tomorrow I will stand on the top of the hill, and the rod of God will be in my hand."

And Joshua did as Moses had commanded him, fighting against Hamalech; but Moses and Aaron and Hur went up to the top of the hill.

And it happened that when Moses raised his hand, Israel was then the strongest; but when he lowered his hand, then Hamalech was the strongest.

And Moses' hands became heavy, so they took a stone and put it under him, and he sat on it; and Aaron and Hur supported his hands, one on this side and the other on the other; and so his hands were steady until the setting sun.

Joshua therefore defeated Hamalech and his people with the edge of the sword.

And the Lord said to Moses, "Write this in a book for the record, and tell Joshua that I will utterly blot out the memory of Hammalek from under heaven."

And Moses built an altar, and named it: The Lord My Sign.

He also said: because the hand [was raised] on the throne of the Lord, the Lord will always have war against Hamalech.

Now Jethro, the priest of Midian, Moses' father-in-law, having heard of all the things that the Lord had done to Moses and to Israel his people, [namely], how the Lord had brought Israel out of Egypt,

He took Zipporah, Moses' wife, after [Moses] had sent her away;

And the two sons of this woman, one of whom was named Guersom, because, he said, I had been a traveler in a foreign country;

And the other Eliezer; for, [he had said], the God of my father has been to my aid, and has delivered me from the sword of Pharaoh.

Jethro, Moses' father-in-law, came to Moses with his children and his wife in the wilderness, where he was encamped, in the mountain of God.

And he sent word to Moses: Jethro your father-in-law, come to you, and your wife, and her two sons with her.

And Moses went out to meet his father-in-law, and having bowed down, kissed him; and they inquired of each other concerning their prosperity; then they entered the tent.

And Moses told his father-in-law all the things that the Lord had done to Pharaoh and to the Egyptians in favor of Israel, and all the hardship they had suffered on the way, and how the Lord had delivered them.

And Jethro rejoiced over all the good that the Lord had done for Israel, because he had delivered them from the hand of the Egyptians.

Then Jethro said: Blessed be the Lord, who has delivered you from the hand of the Egyptians, and from the hand of Pharaoh, who has, [I say], delivered the people from the hand of the Egyptians.

Now I know that the Lord is great above all gods, for in this very thing in which they boasted, he prevailed over them.

Jethro, Moses' father-in-law, also took a burnt offering and sacrifices [to offer] to God; and Aaron and all the Elders of Israel came to eat bread with Moses' father-in-law in the presence of God.

And it happened the next day, as Moses sat to judge the people, and the people stood before Moses from morning until evening,

Moses' father-in-law saw all that he was doing to the people, and he said to him, "What are you doing to these people? Why do you sit alone, while all the people stand before you from morning till evening?"

And Moses answered his father-in-law: [it is] because the people come to me to inquire about God.

When they have any case they come to me, and I judge between one and the other, and make them hear God's ordinances and his laws.

But Moses' father-in-law said to him, "What you are doing is not right."

Surely you will succumb, you and this people who are with you; for this is too heavy for you; you cannot do this alone.

Listen to my advice. I will advise you, and God will be with you; be for the people before God, and bring their cases to God.

And instruct them in the ordinances and the laws; and make them understand the way by which they shall walk, and what they shall do.

And choose for yourself, from among all the people, virtuous men, who fear God; true men, who hate dishonest gain, and appointed commanders of thousands, and commanders of hundreds, and commanders of fifties, and commanders of tens;

And let them judge the people at all times, but let them report to you all the great cases, and let them judge all the small cases; thus they will relieve you, and bear a part [of the burden] with you.

If you do this, and God commands you to do so, you will be able to survive, and all the people will happily arrive at their place.

So Moses obeyed his father-in-law's word and did everything he had told him.

So Moses chose righteous men from all Israel and appointed them as leaders over the people, leaders of thousands, leaders of hundreds, leaders of fifties, and leaders of tens;

They were to judge the people at all times, but they were to report difficult matters to Moses, and to judge all minor cases.

Then Moses let his father-in-law go, and he returned to his own country.

On the first day of the third month, after the children of Israel had come out of the land of Egypt, on that very day they came to the desert of Sinai.

Having therefore departed from Rephidim, they came to the desert of Sinai, and camped in the desert; and Israel camped opposite the mountain.

And Moses went up to God; for the Lord had called him from the mountain, saying to him, "Speak thus to the house of Jacob, and announce this to the children of Israel:

You have seen what I did to the Egyptians; how I carried you [as] on eagles' wings, and brought you to myself.

Now therefore, if you obey my voice exactly, and if you keep my covenant, you will also be among all peoples my most precious jewel, although all the earth belongs to me.

And you will be to me a kingdom of priests and a holy nation; these are the words that you shall speak to the children of Israel.

Then Moses came and called the elders of the people, and proposed before them all these things which the Lord had commanded him.

And all the people answered with one accord, saying, "We will do everything the Lord has said." And Moses reported to the Lord all the words of the people.

And the Lord said to Moses, "Behold, I am coming to you in a thick cloud, so that the people may hear when I speak with you, and may always believe you; for Moses had reported to the Lord the words of the people."

The Lord also said to Moses: Go to the people, and consecrate them today and tomorrow, and let them wash their clothes;

And let them be fully prepared for the third day, for on the third day the Lord will descend upon Mount Sinai in the sight of all the people.

You shall set up boundary markers for the people all around, and say: "Beware of going up the mountain or touching any of its extremities. Whoever touches the mountain shall surely be put to death."

No hand will touch it; it will certainly be stoned or pierced with arrows; whether beast or man, it will not live. When the trumpet sounds its long blast, they will go up to the mountain.

And Moses came down from the mountain to the people, and sanctified the people, and they washed their clothes.

And he said to the people: Be fully prepared for the third day, and do not approach your wives.

And on the morning of the third day there were thunders and lightnings, and a great cloud over the mountain, with a very loud sound of a trumpet, at which all the people in the camp were terrified.

Then Moses led the people out of the camp to meet God; and they stood at the foot of the mountain.

Now Mount Sinai was completely covered with smoke, because the Lord had descended upon it in fire; and its smoke rose like the smoke of a furnace, and the whole mountain trembled greatly.

And as the sound of the horn grew louder and louder, Moses spoke, and God answered him with a voice.

So the Lord came down on Mount Sinai, to the top of the mountain, and called Moses to the top of the mountain; and Moses went up.

And the Lord said to Moses, "Go down and command the people not to break through [the barriers to go up] to the Lord to look, lest many of them perish."

And even the priests who approach the Lord must consecrate themselves, lest the Lord should fall upon them.

And Moses said to the Lord, "The people cannot go up Mount Sinai, because you have commanded us, saying to me, 'Put limits on the mountain and consecrate it.'"

And the Lord said to him, "Go down; then you and Aaron with you shall go up; but let the priests and the people not break through [the boundary stones] to go up to the Lord, lest it happen that he should fall upon them."

So Moses went down to the people and told them.

Then God spoke all these words, saying:

I am the Lord your God, who brought you out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage.

You shall have no other gods before me.

You shall not make for yourself a carved image, or any likeness of anything that is in heaven above, or that is on the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth.

You shall not bow down to them or serve them; for I am the Lord your God, the Mighty One, who is jealous, punishing the children for the sin of the parents to the third and fourth generation of those who hate me;

And showing mercy to a thousand [generations] those who love me and keep my commandments.

You shall not take the name of the Lord your God in vain, for the Lord will not hold him guiltless who takes his name in vain.

Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy.

You shall work six days, and you shall do all your work;

But the seventh day is a Sabbath to the Lord your God. You shall not do any work on it, neither you, nor your son or daughter, nor your male or female servant, nor your animals, nor your foreigner residing in your towns.

For the Lord made the heavens and the earth, the sea, and all that is in them in six days, and rested on the seventh day; therefore the Lord blessed the Sabbath day and made it holy.

Honor your father and your mother, so that your days may be prolonged in the land that the Lord your God is giving you.

You shall not kill.

You shall not commit lewd acts.

You shall not steal.

You shall not bear false witness against your neighbor.

You shall not covet your neighbor's house; you shall not covet your neighbor's wife, nor his male servant, nor his female servant, nor his ox, nor his donkey, nor anything that is your neighbor's.

Now all the people saw the thunder, the lightning, the sound of the trumpet, and the mountain smoking; and when the people saw this, they trembled and stood at a distance.

And they said to Moses, "You speak to us, and we will listen; but let not God speak to us, lest we die."

And Moses said to the people, "Do not be afraid; for God has come to test you, and so that the fear of him may be before you, and that you may not sin."

So the people stood at a distance, but Moses approached the darkness in which God was.

And the Lord said to Moses, "Say this to the children of Israel: 'You have seen that I have spoken to you from heaven:'"

You shall not make for yourselves gods of silver or gods of gold.

You shall make for me an altar of earth, on which you shall sacrifice your burnt offerings, and your peace offerings, your flocks and your herds; wherever I put the memorial of my Name, I will come there to you, and I will bless you.

If you make me an altar of stones, do not cut them; for if you pass an iron over them, you will defile it.

And you shall not go up to my altar by steps, lest your nakedness be uncovered in going up.

These are the laws you will propose to them.

If you buy a Hebrew slave, he will serve you for six years, and in the seventh he will go out to be free, without paying anything.

If he came with his body [only], he will leave with his body; if he had a wife, his wife will also leave with him.

If his master has given him a wife who has borne him sons or daughters, his wife and the children he has by her shall belong to his master, but he shall go out with his body.

But if the slave says positively: I love my master, my wife, and my children, I will not go out to be free.

Then his master will bring him before the judges, and will bring him near the door or the doorpost, and his master will pierce his ear with an awl; and he will serve him forever.

If someone sells his daughter into slavery, she will not go out as other slaves go out.

If she displeases her master, who has not betrothed her, he will make her bought; but he will not have the power to sell her to a foreign people, after she has been unfaithful to him.

But if he has betrothed her to his son, he shall do for her according to the law of daughters.

If he takes another one for himself, he will not deprive himself of his food, his clothes, or the friendship that is due to him.

If he doesn't do these three things for her, she'll leave without paying any money.

If someone strikes a man, and he dies, he shall be put to death.

If he has not laid a trap for him, but God has allowed him to fall into his hands, I will establish for you a place where he will flee.

But if anyone deliberately rises up against his neighbor, to kill him by cunning, you shall take him from my altar, so that he may die.

Anyone who strikes his father or mother shall be punished with death.

If anyone kidnaps a man and sells him, or if he is found in his possession, he shall be put to death.

Anyone who curses their father or mother will be punished with death.

If some have quarreled, and one has struck another with a stone, or with his fist, and he does not die, but is forced to take to his bed;

If he gets up, and walks outside leaning on his staff, the one who struck him will be absolved; however, he will compensate him for what he has lost, and make him fully healed.

If someone has struck his male or female servant with a stick, and he dies under his hand, punishment will not fail.

But if he survives a day or two, no punishment will be done, because it is his money.

If men quarrel, and one of them strikes a pregnant woman, and she gives birth, if there is no death, he shall be fined as the woman's husband imposes on him, and he shall pay it according to the Judges ordain.

But if there is a death, you shall give life for life.

An eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth, a hand for a hand, a foot for a foot,

Burn for burn, wound for wound, bruise for bruise.

If anyone strikes the eye of his servant, or the eye of his female servant, and damages the eye, he shall let him go free for his eye;

And if he causes his male or female servant to lose a tooth, he shall let him go free for the sake of his tooth.

If an ox butts a man or a woman with its horn, and [the person] dies, the ox shall be stoned without exception, and no one shall eat of its flesh, but the owner of the ox shall be acquitted.

If the ox had previously been accustomed to butting with its horn, and its master had been warned with protest, and had not confined it, if it kills a man or a woman, the ox shall be stoned, and its master shall also be put to death.

If a price is imposed on him to redeem himself, he will give the ransom of his life, according to whatever is imposed on him.

If the ox butts a son or daughter with its horn, it shall be done to him according to this same law.

If the ox butts a slave, male or female, with its horn, [the one to whom the ox belongs] shall give thirty shekels of silver to the master of the slave, and the ox shall be stoned.

If someone uncovers a pit, or if someone digs a pit, and does not cover it, and an ox or a donkey falls into it,

The owner of the pit will give satisfaction, [and] return the money to the owner [of the ox], but the dead animal will belong to him.

And if anyone's ox injures his neighbor's ox, and it dies, they shall sell the live ox and divide the money in half, and they shall also divide the dead ox in half.

[But] if it is known that the ox had previously been accustomed to butting with its horn, and that the owner did not keep it, he shall give ox for ox; but the dead ox shall be his.

If someone steals an ox, or a kid, or a lamb, and kills it or sells it, he must restore five oxen for the ox, and four lambs or kids for the lamb or kid.

If a thief is found broken and is struck so that he dies, the one who struck him will not be guilty of murder.

[But] if the sun rises upon him, he will be guilty of murder. He shall therefore make full restitution; [and] if he has no means, he shall be sold for his theft.

If what was stolen is found alive in his possession, whether ox, donkey, sheep or goat, he shall return double.

If someone lets their livestock graze in another's field or vineyard, they will give back some of the best of their own field and vineyard.

If the fire goes out and finds thorns, and the wheat that is in the heap, or standing, or the field is consumed, he who kindled the fire must fully repay what has been burned.

If someone gives his neighbor money or vessels to keep, and it is stolen from his house, if the thief is found, he must pay back double.

[But] if the thief is not found, the master of the house shall be brought before the Judges [to swear] if he has not laid his hand on his neighbor's property.

When there is a question of anything involving wrongdoing, whether it concerns an ox, a donkey, a sheep, a goat, or a garment, or anything lost, which [someone] claims belongs to him, the case of both [parties] shall come before the Judges; and he whom the Judges have condemned shall pay double to his neighbor.

If someone entrusts to their neighbor a donkey, an ox, or any small or large animal, and it dies, or breaks [a limb], or is taken away without anyone seeing it,

The Lord's oath will come between the two [parties, to know] whether he has not laid his hand on his neighbor's property, and the owner [of the beast] will be satisfied [with the oath], and [the other] will not [give it] back.

But if it is true that it was stolen from him, he will return it to his master.

If it is true that it was torn [by wild beasts], he will bring her marks of it, [and] he will not restore what was torn.

If someone has borrowed some animal from his neighbor, and it breaks [some limb], or dies, while its owner is not present, he will not fail to return it.

[But] if her master is with him, he will not return her; if she has been hired out, only her hire will be paid.

If someone seduces a virgin who is not betrothed, and lies with her, he must provide her with a dowry, taking her as his wife.

But if the girl's father absolutely refuses to give her to him, he will charge her as much money as is given for the dowry of virgins.

You shall not let the witch live.

Anyone who has kept company with an animal will be punished with death.

Whoever sacrifices to other gods, besides the Eternal One alone, will be destroyed in the manner of the forbidden.

You shall not trample or oppress the foreigner; for you were foreigners in the land of Egypt.

You shall not grieve the widow or the orphan.

If you afflict them in any way, and they cry out to me, I will certainly hear their cry.

And my anger will blaze, and I will put you to death with the sword, and your wives will be widows, and your children orphans.

If you lend money to my people, to the poor among you, you shall not act as a usurer towards them; you shall not charge them usury.

If you take your neighbor's garment as a pledge, you must return it to him before the sun sets.

For it is his only covering, it is his garment to cover his skin; where else would he sleep? If he should cry out to me, I will hear him; for I am merciful.

You shall not speak ill of the judges, nor shall you curse the prince of your people.

You will not delay in offering me from your abundance and your liquors; you will give me the firstborn of your sons.

You shall do the same with your cow, your sheep, and your goat. It shall be with its mother for seven days, and on the eighth day you shall give it to me.

You shall be holy to me; and you shall not eat flesh torn in the field, [but] you shall throw it to the dogs.

You shall not raise a false rumor, [and] you shall not join with the wicked to be a witness, so that violence may be done.

You shall not follow the multitude to do evil; and you shall not answer in a lawsuit in such a way that you turn aside after many to pervert [the law].

You shall not honor the poor man in his lawsuit.

If you come across your enemy's ox, or his stray donkey, you shall not fail to bring it back to him.

If you see the donkey of the one who hates you, bowed down under its load, you will stop to help it, and you will not fail to assist it.

You shall not pervert the rights of the needy person who is among you, in his legal proceedings.

You shall turn away from [all] false speech, and you shall not put to death the innocent and the righteous; for I will not justify the wicked.

You shall not accept a bribe; for a bribe blinds even the most enlightened, and perverts the words of the righteous.

You shall not oppress a stranger; for you know what it is to be a stranger, because you were strangers in the land of Egypt.

For six years you will sow your land, and reap its harvest.

But in the seventh year you shall give it rest, and let it lie fallow, so that the poor of your people may eat of it, and the beasts of the field may eat what remains; you shall do the same with your vineyard and your olive trees.

You shall work six days; but you shall rest on the seventh day, so that your ox and your donkey may rest, and that the son of your servant and the stranger may be strengthened.

You shall be careful to do all the things that I have commanded you. You shall not mention the names of foreign gods; they shall not be heard from your mouth.

Three times a year you will celebrate a solemn feast for me.
You shall keep the solemn feast of unleavened bread; you shall eat unleavened bread for seven days, as I commanded you, in the season [and] in the month when the ears of grain ripen; for in that month you came out of Egypt; and no one shall appear before me empty-handed.
And the solemn feast of the harvest of the first fruits of your labor, of what you have sown in the field; and the solemn feast of the ingathering, after the end of the year, when you have gathered from the field [the fruits of] your labor.
Three times a year all your males shall appear before the Lord God.
You shall not sacrifice the blood of my sacrifice with leavened bread; and the fat of my solemn feast shall not remain overnight until morning.
You shall bring into the house of the Lord your God the firstfruits of the firstfruits of your land. You shall not boil a young goat in its mother's milk.
Behold, I send an angel before you, to guard you on the way, and to bring you to the place that I have prepared for you.
Beware of provoking his anger, and listen to his voice, and do not provoke him; for he will not forgive your sin; because my Name is in him.
But if you listen carefully to his voice, and if you do all that I tell you, I will be an enemy to your enemies, and I will afflict those who afflict you.
For my angel will walk before you and bring you into the land of the Amorites, Hittites, Perizzites, Canaanites, Hivites, and Jebusites, and I will destroy them.
You shall not bow down to their gods, nor serve them, nor do according to their works, but you shall utterly destroy them, and you shall utterly smash their statues.

You shall serve the Lord your God; and he will bless your bread and your water; and I will remove the diseases from among you.
There will be no miscarrying or barren woman in your land; I will fulfill the number of your days.
I will send the terror of my Name before you, and I will terrify every people you come to, and I will make all your enemies turn their backs before you.
And I will send hornets before you, which will drive out the Hivites, the Canaanites, and the Hittites from before your face.
I will not drive them out from before you in one year, lest the land become a desolate wasteland, and the beasts of the field multiply against you.
But I will drive them out little by little from before you, until you have increased and possess the land.
And I will set up boundaries from the Red Sea to the Sea of the Philistines, and from the desert to the river; for I will deliver the inhabitants of the land into your hands, and I will drive them out from before you.
You shall not make any alliance with them, nor with their gods.
They will not dwell in your land, lest they cause you to sin against me; for you would be serving their Gods; and [this] would be a snare to you.
Then he said to Moses, "Come up to the Lord, you and Aaron, Nadab and Abihu, and seventy of the elders of Israel, and worship from a distance."
And Moses alone will approach the Lord, but they will not approach him, nor will the people go up with him.
Then Moses came and recited to the people all the words of the Lord and all his laws, and all the people answered with one voice and said, "We will do everything the Lord has said."
Now Moses wrote down all the words of the Lord, and rising early in the morning, he built an altar at the foot of the mountain, and set up twelve stones as a pillar for the twelve Tribes of Israel.
And he sent young men from the children of Israel who offered burnt offerings, and who sacrificed calves to the Lord as peace offerings.

And Moses took half of the blood and put it in basins, and sprinkled the other half on the altar.

Then he took the book of the covenant and read it, and the people listened to him, and said, "We will do everything the Lord has said, and we will obey."

So Moses took the blood and sprinkled it on the people, saying, "This is the blood of the covenant that the Lord has made with you, according to all these words."

Then Moses, Aaron, Nadab, Abihu, and the seventy elders of Israel went up; And they saw the God of Israel, and under his feet something like a work of sapphire tiles, resembling the sky when it is clear.

And he did not lay his hand on those who had been chosen from among the children of Israel; so they saw God, and they ate and drank.

And the Lord said to Moses, "Come up to me on the mountain and stay here, and I will give you tablets of stone and the law and the commandments that I have written, to teach you."

Then Moses arose with Joshua who served him; and Moses went up to the mountain of God;

And he said to the Elders of Israel, "Stay here and wait for us until we return to you. Aaron and Hur will be with you; whoever has any matter, let him go to them."

So Moses went up on the mountain, and a cloud covered the mountain.

And the glory of the Lord remained on Mount Sinai, and the cloud covered it for six days; and on the seventh day he called to Moses from within the cloud.

And what was seen of the glory of the Lord on the top of the mountain was like a consuming fire, the children of Israel seeing it.

And Moses entered the cloud, and went up the mountain; and Moses was on the mountain forty days and forty nights.

And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

Speak to the children of Israel, and let an offering be taken for me. You shall accept my offering from every man whose heart offers it willingly.

And this is the offering you will take from them: gold, silver, and bronze.

Purple, scarlet, crimson, fine linen, goat hair,

Sheepskins dyed red, squirrel hides, Sittim wood,

Oil for the lamp, aromatic scents for the anointing oil, drugs for perfume,

Onyx stones, and filling stones for the Ephod and for the Breastplate,

And they shall make me a sanctuary, and I shall dwell among them.

[They will do it] according to everything I am going to show you, according to the pattern of the pavilion, and [according to] the pattern of all its utensils; you will therefore do it in this way.

And they shall make an Ark of Shittim wood; and its length shall be two and a half cubits, and its width one and a half cubits, and its height one and a half cubits.

And you shall cover it with pure gold, you shall cover it outside and inside; and you shall make a crown of gold all around it.

And you shall cast for it four gold rings, which you shall put on its four corners, two rings on one side of it, and two others on the other side.

You shall also make poles of Sittim wood, and you shall cover them with gold.

Then you will insert the poles into the rings on the sides of the Ark, to carry the Ark with them.

The poles will be in the rings of the Ark, and they will not be taken out.

And you shall place in the Ark the Testimony that I will give you.

You shall also make a mercy seat of pure gold, two and a half cubits long and one and a half cubits wide.

And you shall make two cherubim of gold; you shall make them of work stretched with a hammer, [taken] from the two ends of the mercy seat.

Make therefore one Cherub taken from the end on this side, and the other Cherub from the end on the other side: you shall make the Cherubim taken from the Mercy Seat on its two ends.

And the cherubim shall spread their wings upward, covering the mercy seat with their wings, and their faces shall be opposite one another; and the gaze of the cherubim shall be toward the mercy seat.

And you shall place the mercy seat on top of the Ark, and you shall put into the Ark the Testimony which I will give you.

And I will be there with you, and I will tell you from above the mercy seat, from between the two cherubim that are on the Ark of the Testimony, all the things that I will command you for the children of Israel.

You shall also make a table of Sittim wood: its length shall be two cubits, and its width one cubit, and its height one and a half cubits.

You shall cover it with pure gold, and you shall make a crown of gold around it.

You shall also make around it a fence one hand's width, and all around its fence you shall make a crown of gold.

You shall also make for him four gold rings, which you shall put on the four corners, which shall be on his four feet.

The rings will be at the location of the fence, in order to attach the bars to support the table.

You shall make the wooden poles from Shittim, and you shall cover them with gold, and the table shall be carried with them.

You shall also make its dishes, its cups, its goblets, and its basins, with which the sprinkling will be done; you shall make them of pure gold.

And you shall place the bread of the Presence on this table, continually before me.

You shall also make a lampstand of pure gold; the lampstand shall be hammered out; its shaft and its branches, its plates, its finials, and its flowers shall be made from it.

Six branches will come out of its sides; three branches on one side of the lampstand, and three others on the other side of the lampstand.

In one of the branches there will be three small almond-shaped dishes, a pommel and a flower; in the other branch three small almond-shaped dishes, a pommel and a flower; [it will be] the same for the six branches coming from the lampstand.

There will also be four small almond-shaped dishes on the chandelier, along with its handles and flowers.

One pommel under two branches [taken] from the lampstand, one pommel under two [other] branches [taken] from it, and one pommel under two [other] branches taken from it; it [will be] the same for the six branches proceeding from the lampstand. Their pommels and their branches will be [made] from it, [and] the whole lampstand will be a single piece of work hammered out, [and] of pure gold.

You shall also make its seven lamps, and they shall be lit, so that they give light opposite the lampstand.

And its snuffers, and its crucibles will be of pure gold.

We will do it with all our tools, with a talent of pure gold.

Look, then, and do according to the pattern shown to you in the mountain.

You shall also make the pavilion of ten rolls of fine twisted linen, purple, scarlet, and crimson; and you shall make them strewn with cherubim of exquisite workmanship.

The length of a roll shall be twenty-eight cubits, and the width of the same roll four cubits; all the rolls shall have the same measurement.

Five of these rolls will be joined together, and the other five will also be joined together.

Also make purple laces on the edge of one roll, at the edge of the [first] assembly; and you will do the same thing on the edge of the last roll in the other assembly.

You will make fifty laces in one roll, and you will make fifty laces on the edge of the roll that is in the second assembly; the laces will be opposite each other.

You shall also make fifty gold hooks, and you shall fasten the rollers one to the other with the hooks; thus a pavilion shall be made.

You shall also make scrolls of goat's hair to serve as a Tabernacle over the pavilion; you shall make eleven of these scrolls.

The length of one roll will be thirty cubits, and the width of the same roll will be four cubits; the eleven rolls will have the same measurement.

Then you shall join five separate scrolls, and six separate scrolls; but you shall double the sixth scroll on the front of the Tabernacle.

You will also make fifty laces on the edge of one of the rollers, [namely] on the last one that is coupled, and fifty laces on the edge of the other roller that is coupled.

You shall also make fifty bronze hooks, and you shall put the hooks into the loops; and you shall assemble the Tabernacle in this way, so that it may be one.

But what will be in excess of the scroll of the Tabernacle, [namely] the half of the scroll which will remain, will float on the back of the pavilion.

And a cubit on this side and a cubit on the other, of what is extra in the length of the scrolls of the Tabernacle, shall float beside the pavilion on this side and on that side, to cover it.

You shall also make for this Tabernacle a covering of sheepskins dyed red, and a covering of catkins over it.

And you will make wooden planks for the pavilion from Sittim, which will be made to stand upright.

The length of a board shall be ten cubits, and the width of the same board one and a half cubits.

There shall be two tenons in each plank, like rungs one after the other; [and] you shall do thus with all the planks of the pavilion,

You will therefore make the planks of the pavilion, [namely] twenty planks on the side that faces towards the South.

And below the twenty boards you shall make forty silver bases; two bases under one board for its two tenons, and two bases under the other board for its two tenons.

And twenty beams on the other side of the pavilion, on the northern side.

And their forty bases shall be of silver, two bases under one plank, and two bases under the other plank.

And for the back of the pavilion facing west, you shall make six planks.

You will also make two boards for the corners of the pavilion, on both sides of the back.

And they shall be equal at the bottom, and they shall be joined and united at the top with a ring; the same shall be true of the two [boards] which shall be at the two corners.

There will therefore be eight boards, and sixteen silver bases; two bases under one board, and two bases under the other board.

After that you will make five bars of Sittim wood, for the shingles on one side of the pavilion.

Likewise [you shall make] five bars, for the boards on the other side of the pavilion; and five bars for the boards on the side of the pavilion, for the bottom, towards the West side.

And the middle bar will be in the middle of the planks, running from one end to the other.

You shall also cover the boards with gold, and you shall make their rings of gold, to put the bars in, and you shall cover the bars with gold.

You shall therefore set up the Tabernacle according to the form shown to you on the mountain.

And you shall make a veil of purple, scarlet, and crimson, and of fine twisted linen; it shall be made of exquisite workmanship, strewn with cherubim.

And you shall place it on four pillars of Shittim wood overlaid with gold, having their hooks of gold, and they shall be on four bases of silver.

Then you shall put the veil under the hooks, and you shall bring into it, [that is to say], inside the veil, the Ark of the Testimony, and this veil shall be a separation between the Holy Place and the Most Holy Place.

And you shall place the Mercy Seat on the Ark of the Testimony, in the Most Holy Place.

And you shall put the table outside this veil, and the lampstand opposite the table, on the side of the pavilion, towards the South; and you shall place the table on the North side.

And at the entrance of the Tabernacle you shall make a tapestry of purple, scarlet, crimson, and fine twisted linen, the work of an embroiderer.

You shall also make for this tapestry five pillars of Shittim wood, which you shall cover with gold, and their hooks shall be of gold; and you shall cast for them five bronze bases.

You shall also make an altar of Shittim wood, five cubits long and five cubits wide; the altar shall be square, and its height shall be three cubits.

You shall make its horns at its four corners; its horns shall be [taken] from it, and you shall cover it with bronze.

You shall make its cauldrons to receive its ashes, and its scrapers, and its basins, and its forks, and its censers; you shall make all its utensils of bronze.

You shall make for it a bronze grating in the form of a lattice, and you shall make for the lattice four bronze rings at its four corners;

And you shall place it below the altar enclosure at the bottom, and the lattice shall extend to the middle of the altar.

You shall also make poles for the altar, poles of Shittim wood, and you shall overlay them with bronze.

And we will pass its poles through the rings; the poles will be on both sides of the altar to carry it.

You shall make it of planks, [and it shall be] hollow; they shall make it as it was shown to you in the mountain.

You shall also make the courtyard of the pavilion, on the side that faces south; the curtains of the courtyard shall be of fine twisted linen; the length of one side shall be one hundred cubits.

There will be twenty pillars with their twenty bronze bases; [but] the hooks of the pillars and their nets will be of silver.

Thus on the northern side there will be a hundred [cubits] of curtains in length, and its twenty pillars with their twenty bronze bases; but the hooks of the pillars with their nets will be of silver.

The width of the forecourt on the western side will be fifty cubits of curtains, which will have ten pillars, with their ten bases.

And the width of the courtyard on the eastern side, directly towards the rising sun, shall be fifty cubits.

On one side there will be fifteen cubits of curtain walls, with their three pillars and their three foundations.

And on the other side, fifteen [cubits of] curtain walls, with their three pillars and their three foundations.

There will also be for the gate of the courtyard a tapestry twenty cubits long, made of purple, scarlet, crimson, and fine twisted linen, the work of an embroiderer, with four pillars and four bases.

All the pillars of the courtyard shall be encircled with a silver net, and their hooks shall be of silver, but their bases shall be of bronze.

The length of the courtyard shall be one hundred cubits, and the width fifty on each side; and the height five cubits. It shall be of fine twisted linen, and the bases of the pillars shall be of bronze.

All the utensils of the pavilion, for all its service, and all its stakes, along with the stakes of the courtyard, shall be of bronze.

You shall also command the children of Israel to bring you virgin olive oil for the light, so that the lamps may shine continually.

Aaron and his sons shall arrange them in the presence of the Lord, from evening until morning, in the Tabernacle of Meeting, outside the veil that is before the Testimony; it shall be a perpetual ordinance for the children of Israel, in their generations. And you bring near to you Aaron your brother, and his sons with him, from among the children of Israel, to exercise the priesthood for me, [namely] Aaron, and Nadab, Abihu, Eleazar and Ithamar, sons of Aaron. And you shall make holy garments for Aaron your brother, for glory and for adornment.

And you shall speak to all the men of spirit, to each one whom I have filled with the spirit of knowledge, so that they may make garments for Aaron to consecrate him, so that he may exercise the priesthood for me. And these are the garments they shall make: the breastpiece, the ephod, the rochet, the tunic, which fits tightly, the turban, and the baldric; they shall make the holy garments for Aaron your brother, and for his sons, to exercise the priesthood for me.

And they shall take gold, purple, scarlet, crimson, and fine linen. And they shall make the Ephod of gold, purple, scarlet, crimson, and fine twisted linen, of exquisite workmanship. It will have two shoulder pieces that will join at both ends, and it will be joined [thus]. The exquisite belt with which he will be girded, [and] which will be over it, will be of the same workmanship, and taken from him, [being] of gold, purple, scarlet, crimson, and fine twisted linen. And you shall take two onyx stones, and engrave on them the names of the children of Israel; Six of their names on one stone and the six names of the others, on the other stone, according to their birth. You shall engrave on the two stones, with the work of a lapidary, with the engraving of a seal, the names of the children of Israel, and you shall set them in gold settings. And you shall put the two stones on the shoulder pieces of the Ephod, so that they may be memorial stones for the children of Israel; for Aaron shall bear their names on his two shoulders before the Lord, for a memorial. You will also make golden cleats; And two small chains of fine gold with ends, in the form of a cord, and you shall put the chains thus made in the form of a cord into the crampons. You shall also make the breastplate of judgment of exquisite workmanship, like the work of the Ephod, of gold, purple, scarlet, crimson, and fine twisted linen. It will be square [and] double; and its length will be a palm, and its width a palm.

And you shall fill it with precious stones, in four rows. In the first row shall be a sardonyx, a topaz, and an emerald. And in the second row, a Carbuncle, a Sapphire, and a Jasper. And in the third row, a Ligurian, an Agate, and an Amethyst. And in the fourth row, a Chrysolite, an Onyx and a Beryl, which will be set in gold, according to their tracery. And these stones shall be according to the names of the children of Israel, twelve according to their names, each of them engraved with a seal engraving, according to the name it is to bear, [and] they shall be for the twelve Tribes. You shall therefore make for the Breastplate chains with ends, like cords, which shall be of pure gold. And you shall make two gold rings on the breastplate, and you shall put the two rings on the two ends of the breastplate. And you shall put the two gold chains made with cords into the two rings at the end of the breastplate.

And you shall put the two other ends of the two corded chains to the two crampons, and you shall put them on the shoulder pieces of the Ephod, on the front of the Ephod.

You shall also make two other gold rings, which you shall put on the two other ends of the Breastplate, on the edge which will be on the side of the Ephod on the inside.

And you shall make two other gold rings, which you shall put on the two shoulder pieces of the Ephod from below, corresponding on the front, at the place where it joins, above the exquisite belt of the Ephod.

And they shall join the breastpiece raised by its rings to the rings of the Ephod with a purple cord, so that it may stay above the exquisite girdle of the Ephod, and that the breastpiece may not move from above the Ephod.

[Thus] Aaron shall bear on his heart the names of the children of Israel in the breastplate of judgment, when he enters the Holy Place, as a memorial before the Lord continually.

And you shall put on the breastplate of judgment the Urim and the Thummim, which shall be on Aaron's heart, when he comes before the Lord; and Aaron shall bear the judgment of the children of Israel on his heart before the Lord continually.

You shall also make the Rochet of the Ephod entirely of purple.

And the opening through which the head passes shall be in the middle, [and] there shall be a hem at its opening all around, of woven work, like the opening of a bodice, so that it does not tear.

And you shall make on its sides pomegranates of purple, scarlet, and crimson all around, and golden bells between them all around.

A golden bell, then a pomegranate; a golden bell, then a pomegranate; on the banks of the Rochet all around.

And Aaron shall be clothed with it when he ministers, and its sound shall be heard when he enters the holy place before the Lord, and when he comes out of it, so that he does not die.

And you shall make a plate of pure gold, on which you shall engrave [these words], with the engraving of a seal: HOLINESS TO THE LORD.

Which you shall place with a purple cord, and it shall be on the Tiara, corresponding to the front of the Tiara.

And it shall be upon Aaron's forehead; and Aaron shall bear the iniquity of the holy offerings which the children of Israel shall have offered, in all the gifts of their holy offerings, and it shall continually be upon his forehead, to make them acceptable before the Lord.

You shall also make a shirt of fine linen to fit over the body, and you shall also make the Tiara of fine linen; but you shall make the baldric of embroidered work.

You shall also make for Aaron's children tunics, sashes, and caps for their glory and for their adornment.

And you shall clothe Aaron your brother, and his sons with him; you shall anoint them, you shall consecrate them, and you shall sanctify them; and they shall serve me as priests.

And you shall make for them linen undergarments, to cover their nakedness, which shall stay from the waist down to the bottom of the thighs.

Aaron and his sons shall wear this garment when they enter the Tabernacle of Meeting, or when they approach the altar to minister in the Holy Place; and they shall not bear the penalty for any iniquity, nor shall they die. This shall be a perpetual ordinance for him and for his descendants after him.

But this is what you will do to them when you consecrate them to exercise the priesthood for me: take a calf from the flock, and two rams without blemish;

And unleavened bread, and unleavened cakes mixed with oil, and unleavened fritters anointed with oil; and you shall make them of fine wheat flour.

You shall put them in a basket, and you shall present them in the basket; [you shall present] also the calf and the two sheep.

Then you shall bring Aaron and his sons to the entrance of the Tabernacle of Meeting, and you shall wash them with water.

Then you shall take the garments, and you shall clothe Aaron with the shirt and the Rochet of the Ephod, the Ephod, and the Breastplate, and you shall fasten over them the exquisite girdle of the Ephod.

Then you shall place the Tiara on her head, and the crown of holiness on the Tiara. And you shall take the anointing oil and pour it on his head; and you shall anoint him thus.

Then you will bring his sons near, and you will dress them in shirts,

And you shall gird them with the baldric, Aaron, [I say], and his sons, and you shall fasten caps on them; and they shall possess the priesthood by perpetual ordinance; and you shall consecrate Aaron and his sons in this way.

And you shall bring the calf before the Tabernacle of Meeting, and Aaron and his sons shall lay their hands on the head of the calf.

And you shall slaughter the calf before the Lord at the entrance to the Tabernacle of Meeting.

Then you shall take some of the blood of the calf, and put it with your finger on the horns of the altar, and you shall sprinkle all the rest of the blood at the base of the altar.

You shall also take all the fat that covers the entrails, and the membrane that is on the liver, and the two kidneys, and the fat that is on them, and you shall burn them on the altar.

But you shall burn the flesh of the calf, its skin, and its dung with fire outside the camp; it is a sin offering.

Then you shall take one of the rams, and Aaron and his sons shall lay their hands on the head of the ram.

Then you shall slaughter the ram, and taking its blood, you shall sprinkle it all around the altar.

Then you will cut the ram into pieces, and having washed its entrails and its legs, you will put them on its pieces and on its head.

And you shall burn the whole ram on the altar; it is a burnt offering to the Lord, a pleasing aroma, an offering made by fire to the Lord.

Then you will take the other ram, and Aaron and his sons will lay their hands on its head.

And you shall slaughter the ram, and taking some of its blood, you shall put it on the soft part of Aaron's [right] ear, and on the soft part of his sons' right ears, and on the thumb of their right hands, and on the big toe of their right feet, and you shall sprinkle the rest of the blood on the altar all around.

And you shall take some of the blood that is on the altar, and of the anointing oil, and sprinkle it on Aaron, and on his garments, on his sons, and on the garments of his sons with him; thus he, and his garments, and his sons, and the garments of his sons, shall be consecrated with him.

You shall also take the fat of the ram, and the tail, and the fat which covers the entrails, the lining of the liver, the two kidneys, and the fat which is on them, and the right shoulder; for it is the ram of consecrations.

[You shall also take] a loaf of bread, a cake made with oil, and a doughnut from the basket where these unleavened things are, which shall be before the Lord.

And you shall put all these things on the palms of Aaron's hands, and on the palms of his sons' hands, and you shall wave them as a wave offering before the Lord.

Then, receiving them from their hands, you shall burn them on the altar, on the burnt offering, to be a pleasing aroma before the Lord; it is a sacrifice made by fire to the Lord.

You shall also take the breast of the ram of consecration, which is for Aaron, and you shall wave it as a wave offering before the Lord; and it shall be your portion.

You shall therefore consecrate the breast of the wave offering, and the shoulder of the raised offering, both that which was waved and that which was raised from the ram of consecration, from that which is for Aaron, and from that which is for his sons. This shall be a perpetual ordinance for Aaron and his sons concerning the offerings of the Israelites, for it is a heaped offering. Whenever there is a heaped offering from the Israelites, from their peace offerings, their heaped offering shall be to the Lord.

And the holy garments that will be for Aaron will be for his sons after him, so that they may be anointed and consecrated in these garments.

The priest who succeeds him from among his sons, and who comes to the Tabernacle of Meeting to minister in the Holy Place, shall be clothed with it for seven days.

Now you shall take the ram of consecration, and boil its flesh in a holy place;

And Aaron and his sons shall eat at the entrance of the Tabernacle of Meeting the flesh of the ram, and the bread that shall be in the basket.

They shall eat these things, by which atonement has been made, to consecrate them [and] sanctify them; but the stranger shall not eat them, because they are holy.

If there are any remains of the consecration meat, and of the bread until morning, you shall burn these remains with fire; they shall not eat them, because they are holy.

You shall do thus to Aaron and his sons, according to all the things that I have commanded you; you shall consecrate them for seven days.

You shall offer a calf for sin every day to make atonement, and you shall offer a sin offering for the altar, making atonement for it, and you shall anoint it to consecrate it.

For seven days you shall make atonement for the altar, and you shall consecrate it; and the altar shall be most holy; everything that touches the altar shall be holy.

But this is what you shall do on the altar; you shall continually offer two year-old lambs each day.

You shall sacrifice one of the lambs in the morning, and the other lamb between the two vespers.

With a tenth of fine flour kneaded in a fourth part of a hin of virgin oil, and with a sprinkling of wine from a fourth part of a hin for each lamb.

And you shall sacrifice the other lamb between the two vespers, with a cake as in the morning, and you shall sprinkle it with the same aroma; it is a sacrifice offered by fire to the Lord.

This will be the continual burnt offering in your generations, at the entrance to the Tabernacle of Meeting before the Lord, where I will be with you to speak to you.

I will be there for the children of Israel, and [the Tabernacle] will be sanctified by my glory.

I will therefore consecrate the Tabernacle of Meeting and the altar. I will also consecrate Aaron and his sons, so that they may serve me as priests.

And I will dwell in the midst of the children of Israel, and I will be God to them;

And they will know that I am the Lord their God, who brought them out of the land of Egypt to dwell among them. I am the Lord their God.

You shall also make an altar for incense, and you shall make it of Shittim wood.

Its length shall be one cubit, and its width one cubit; it shall be square; but its height shall be two cubits, [and] its horns [will be made] from it.

You shall cover it with pure gold, both its top, its sides all around, and its horns; and you shall make a crown of gold all around it.

You shall also make two gold rings below his crown, on his two sides, which you shall put at the two corners, to pass through the poles which shall be used to carry him.

You shall make the wooden bars from Sittim, and you shall overlay them with gold.

And you shall place them before the veil, which is in front of the Ark of the Testimony, in the place of the mercy seat which is over the Testimony, where I will be with you.

And Aaron shall make an incense of aromatic things on this altar; he shall make incense on it every morning when he trims the lamps.

And when Aaron lights the lamps between the two vespers, he shall also make the incense there, [namely] the continual incense before the Lord throughout your generations.

You shall not offer on this altar any foreign incense, nor any burnt offering, nor any grain offering, nor shall you sprinkle anything on it.

But Aaron shall make atonement once a year on the horns of this altar; he shall make atonement once a year on this altar in your generations with the blood of the sin offering made for atonement. It is most holy to the Lord.

The Lord also spoke to Moses, and said to him:

When you take a census of the children of Israel, according to their number, each one shall give to the Lord the redemption of his person, when you take a census of them, and there shall be no plague upon them when you take a census of them.

All those who go through the census shall give half a shekel, according to the shekel of the Sanctuary, which is twenty obols; the half shekel shall therefore be the offering [that will be given] to the Lord.

All those who pass through the census, from the age of twenty years and above, shall give this offering to the Lord.

The rich will not increase anything, and the poor will not decrease anything by half a shekel, when they give to the Lord the offering to redeem your persons.

You shall therefore take from the children of Israel the atonement money, and you shall apply it to the work of the Tabernacle of Meeting, and it shall be for a memorial to the children of Israel before the Lord to redeem your persons.

The Lord spoke again to Moses, saying:

Also make a bronze basin, with its bronze base, for washing; and you shall place it between the Tabernacle of Meeting and the altar, and you shall put water in it;

And Aaron and his sons shall wash their hands and feet.

When they enter the Tabernacle of Meeting they shall wash with water, so that they do not die, and when they approach the altar to minister, to burn the offering made by fire to the Lord.

They shall therefore wash their feet and their hands, so that they do not die; this shall be a perpetual ordinance for them, both for Aaron and for his descendants throughout their generations.

The Lord also spoke to Moses, saying:

Take the most exquisite aromatic things; five hundred shekels of pure myrrh, half as much fragrant cinnamon, two hundred and fifty shekels, and two hundred and fifty shekels of aromatic cane.

From the broken pieces the weight of five hundred [shekels], according to the shekel of the Sanctuary, and a Hin of olive oil.

And you shall make of it a holy anointing oil, a perfume compounded by the art of the perfumer; it shall be the holy anointing oil.

Then you shall anoint the Tabernacle of Meeting and the Ark of the Testimony.

The table and all its utensils, the lampstand and its utensils, and the altar of incense,

And the altar of burnt offerings and all its utensils, the basin and its base.

Thus you will sanctify them, and they will be a most holy thing; everything that touches them will be holy.

You shall also anoint Aaron and his sons, and consecrate them to serve me as priests.

You shall also speak to the children of Israel, saying: this shall be a holy anointing oil for me in your generations.

You shall not anoint the flesh of any man with it, nor shall you make any other of the same composition; it is holy, it shall be holy to you.

Whoever makes a similar ointment, and puts it on another, shall be cut off from among his people.

The Lord also said to Moses: take spices, [namely] stacte, onyx, galbanum, all prepared, and pure frankincense, all in equal weight.

And you shall make of it an aromatic perfume according to the art of the perfumer, and you shall add salt to it; you shall make it pure, and it shall be holy to you. And when you have ground it very finely, you shall put some of it in the Tabernacle of Meeting before the Testimony, where I will be with you. It shall be most holy to you.

And as for the perfume that you make, you shall not make for yourselves any like it; it shall be holy to the Lord.

Whoever makes anything similar to sniff it out will be cut off from among his people.

The Lord also spoke to Moses, saying:

Look, I have called by his name Bezalel, son of Uri, son of Hur, of the Tribe of Judah.

And I filled him with the Spirit of God, in wisdom, in understanding, in knowledge, and in all kinds of craftsmanship,

In order to invent designs for working in gold, silver, and bronze;

In the carving of [precious] stones; to work them, [and] in carpentry, to work in all kinds of works.

And behold, I have given him as a companion Aholiab son of Ahisamach, of the Tribe of Dan; and I have put knowledge in the heart of every intelligent man, that they may do all the things which I have commanded you.

[Knowing] the Tabernacle of meeting, the Ark of the Testimony, and the Mercy Seat which is to be above it, and all the utensils of the Tabernacle;

And the table with all its utensils; and the pure lampstand with all its utensils; and the altar of incense;

And the altar of burnt offering with all its utensils, the basin and its base;

And the garments of service; the holy garments of Aaron the Priest, and the garments of his sons for exercising the priesthood;

And the anointing oil, and the fragrance of aromatic things for the Sanctuary, and they shall do all the things that I have commanded you.

The Lord spoke again to Moses, saying:

You too must speak to the children of Israel, saying: You shall surely keep my Sabbaths; for it is a sign between me and you throughout your generations, so that you may know that I am the Lord, who sanctifies you.

Therefore keep the Sabbath, for it must be holy to you; whoever violates it shall be put to death; whoever, [I say], does any work on that day shall be cut off from among his people.

Six days work shall be done; but the seventh day is a Sabbath of rest, a holy day to the Lord; whoever does any work on the Sabbath day shall be put to death.

Thus the children of Israel shall keep the Sabbath, to celebrate the day of rest in their generations, by a perpetual covenant.

This is a sign between me and the children of Israel forever; for the Lord made the heavens and the earth in six days, and rested in the seventh.

And God gave to Moses, after he had finished speaking with him on Mount Sinai, the two Tablets of the Testimony; Tablets of stone, written with the finger of God.

But when the people saw that Moses delayed so long in coming down from the mountain, they gathered around Aaron and said to him, "Get up and make us gods who will go before us, for as for this Moses, the man who brought us up out of the land of Egypt, we do not know what has happened to him."

And Aaron answered them, "Break off the gold rings that are in the ears of your wives, your sons, and your daughters, and bring them to me."

And immediately all the people broke off the gold rings that were in their ears, and they brought them to Aaron,

Having received them from their hands, he fashioned the gold with a chisel, and made a molten calf. And they said: These are your gods, O Israel, who brought you up out of the land of Egypt.

When Aaron saw this, he built an altar before the calf; and cried out, saying, "Tomorrow there shall be a solemn feast to the Lord."

So they got up early the next morning and offered burnt offerings and presented peace offerings; and the people sat down to eat and drink, and then they got up to play.

Then the Lord said to Moses, "Go downstairs, for your people, whom you brought up out of the land of Egypt, have become corrupt."

They quickly turned away from the way I commanded them, they made themselves a molten calf, and bowed down before it, and sacrificed to it, and said: These are your gods, O Israel, who brought you up out of the land of Egypt.

The Lord said again to Moses, "I have looked at this people, and behold, it is a stiff-necked people."

But now leave me alone, and my anger will burn against them, and I will consume them; but I will make you into a great nation.

Then Moses pleaded with the Lord his God, and said, O Lord, why should your anger burn against your people, whom you brought out of the land of Egypt with great power and a mighty hand?

Why would the Egyptians say: He has taken them away in evil ways to kill them on the mountains, and to consume them from the earth? Turn from your fierce anger, and relent from this evil [that you want to do] to your people.

Remember Abraham, Isaac, and Israel, your servants, to whom you swore by your own self, saying to them, "I will multiply your descendants like the stars of heaven, and I will give to your descendants all this land, which I have promised, and they shall inherit it forever."

And the Lord relented concerning the disaster he had said he would do to his people.

Then Moses looked, and came down from the mountain, having in his hand the two Tablets of the Testimony, [and] the Tablets [were] written on both sides, written on this side and on the other.

And the Tablets were the work of God, and the writing was God's writing, engraved on the Tablets

And Joshua, hearing the voice of the people making a great noise, said to Moses: there is a sound of battle in the camp.

And [Moses] answered him: [it is] not a voice nor a shout of the mightiest, nor a voice nor a shout of the mightiest; [but] I hear the voice of people singing.

And it came to pass that when [Moses] approached the camp, he saw the Calf and the dancing; and the anger of Moses was kindled, and he threw down the Tablets from his hands, and broke them at the foot of the mountain.

He then took the calf they had made, burned it in the fire, and ground it to powder; then he sprinkled the powder into water, and made the children of Israel drink it.

And Moses said to Aaron, "What has this people done to you, that you have brought such a great sin upon them?"

And Aaron answered him: May not the anger of my Lord be kindled; you know that this people is prone to evil.

But they said to me, "Make us gods who will go before us, for as for this Moses, the man who brought us up out of the land of Egypt, we do not know what has happened to him."

So I told them, whoever has gold, let him break it into pieces; and they gave it to me; and I threw it into the fire, and this calf came out.

Now Moses saw that the people were destitute, for Aaron had destitute them so as to be a reproach among their enemies.

And Moses, standing at the gate of the camp, said, "Who is for the Lord? Let him come to me." And all the children of Levi gathered around him.

And he said to them, "Thus says the Lord, the God of Israel: 'Each of you put your sword at his side, and go back and forth from gate to gate throughout the camp, and each of you kill his brother, his friend, and his neighbor.'"

And the children of Levi did according to the word of Moses; and on that day about three thousand men of the people fell.

For Moses had said: consecrate your hands today to the Lord, each one even against his son and against his brother, so that you may receive a blessing today.

And the next day Moses said to the people: You have committed a great sin; but I will now go up to the Lord; and perhaps I will make atonement for your sin.

So Moses returned to the Lord and said, "Alas! I beg you, this people has committed a great sin by making gods of gold for themselves."

But now forgive them their sin; if not, then blot me out of your book which you have written.

And the Lord answered Moses, "Whoever sins against me I will blot out of my book."

Now go, lead the people to the place to which I spoke to you; behold, my angel will go before you; and on the day I take punishment, I will punish them for their sin.

So the Lord struck the people, because they had been the authors of the calf that Aaron had made.

The Lord said to Moses, "Go up from here, you and the people whom you brought up out of the land of Egypt, to the land of which I swore to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, saying, 'I will give it to your offspring.'"

And I will send an angel before you, and I will drive out the Canaanites, the Amorites, the Hittites, the Perizzites, the Hivites, and the Jebusites, [to lead you] to the land flowing with milk and honey, but I will not go up among you, because you [are] a stiff-necked people, lest I consume you on the way.

And the people heard this sad news, and mourned, and none of them put on their ornaments.

For the Lord had said to Moses, "Tell the Israelites, 'You are a stiff-necked people; I will come up among you in a moment and consume you. Now then, take off your ornaments, and I will know what to do to you.'"

So the children of Israel stripped themselves of their ornaments, going towards the mountain of Horeb.

And Moses took a tent, and put it up for himself outside the camp, away from the camp; and he called it the tent of meeting; and all who sought the Lord went out to the tent of meeting, which was outside the camp.

And it happened that as soon as Moses went out to the pavilion, all the people would get up, and each one would stand at the entrance of his tent, and look at Moses from behind, until he had entered the pavilion.

And as soon as Moses entered the pavilion, the pillar of cloud descended and stood at the door of the pavilion, and [the Lord] spoke with Moses.

And when all the people saw the pillar of cloud standing at the door of the pavilion, they stood up, and each one bowed down at the door of his tent.

And the Lord spoke to Moses face to face, as a man speaks to his close friend; then [Moses] returned to the camp, but his servant Joshua son of Nun, a young man, did not move from the pavilion.

So Moses said to the Lord, "Look, you told me, 'Bring up these people,' but you did not tell me whom you should send with me. You even said, 'I know you by name, and you have found favor in my sight.'"

Now therefore I pray you, if I have found favor in your sight, show me your way, and I shall know you, that I may find favor in your sight; consider also that this nation is your people.

And [the Lord] said: My face will go, and I will give you rest.

And [Moses] said to him: if your face does not come, do not bring us up from here.

For how will we know that we have found favor in your sight, I and your people? Will it not be when you go with us? And [then] I and your people will be amazed more than all the peoples on earth.

And the Lord said to Moses, "I will do as you say, for you have found favor in my sight, and I have known you by name."

[Moses] also said: I pray you, show me your glory.

And [God] said: I will cause all my goodness to pass before your face, and I will proclaim the name of the Lord before you; and I will be gracious to whom I will be gracious, and I will have compassion on whom I will have compassion.

Then he said: You will not be able to see my face; for no man may see me and live.

The Lord also said: behold, there is a place with me, and you shall stand upon the rock;

And when my glory passes by, I will put you in the opening of the rock, and cover you with my hand, until I have passed by;

Then I will withdraw my hand, and you will see me from behind, but my face will not be seen.

And the Lord said to Moses, "Make two tablets of stone like the first ones, and I will write on them the words that were on the first tablets that you broke."

And be ready in the morning, and go up in the morning to Mount Sinai, and present yourself there before me on the top of the mountain.

But let no one go up with you, and let no one appear on the whole mountain; and let neither flock nor herd graze against this mountain.

So Moses leveled two tablets of stone like the first ones, and got up early in the morning and went up Mount Sinai, as the Lord had commanded him, and he took the two tablets of stone in his hand.

And the Lord descended in the cloud, and stood there with him, and cried out the name of the Lord.

As the Lord passed by before him, he cried out: The Lord, the Lord, the [God], strong, gracious, merciful, slow to anger, abounding in grace and truth.

Keeping the gift free to a thousand [generations], removing iniquity, crime, and sin, which does not leave the guilty unpunished, and punishes the iniquity of the fathers on the children, and on the children's children, to the third and the fourth [generation];

And Moses hastened, bowed his head to the ground, and prostrated himself.

And he said: O Lord! I pray you, if I have found favor in your sight, let the Lord now go in our midst; for this is a stiff-necked people; therefore forgive our iniquities and our sin, and possess us.

And he answered: Behold, I who make a covenant before all your people will do wonders which have not been done in all the earth, nor in any nation, and all the people in whose midst you [are], shall see the work of the Lord, for what I am going to do with you shall be a terrible thing.

Keep carefully what I command you today. Behold, I am going to drive out from before you the Amorites, the Canaanites, the Hittites, the Perizzites, the Hivites, and the Jebusites.

Be careful not to make an alliance with the inhabitants of the country you are about to enter, lest they perhaps become a snare among you.

But you will demolish their altars, you will smash their statues, and you will cut down their groves.

For you shall not bow down to another [God], because the Lord is called the jealous [God]; the mighty [God] is jealous.

So that it does not happen that you make a covenant with the inhabitants of the land; and that when they come to fornicate after their gods, and to sacrifice to their gods, someone does not invite you, and you do not eat of his sacrifice.

And that you do not take some of their daughters for your sons, who, being fornicators after their gods, will cause your sons to be fornicators after their gods.

You will not make yourself any god of cast iron.

You shall keep the solemn feast of unleavened bread; you shall eat unleavened bread for seven days, as I commanded you, in the season of the month in which the ears of grain ripen; for in the month that the ears of grain ripen you came out of the land of Egypt.

Everything that opens the womb will be mine; and even the first male that is born of all the beasts, both large and small livestock.

But you shall redeem the firstborn of a donkey with a lamb or a kid. If you do not redeem it, you shall cut off its throat. You shall redeem every firstborn of your sons; and no one shall appear before me empty-handed.

Six days you shall work, but on the seventh you shall rest; you shall rest during plowing time and harvest time.

You shall hold a solemn feast of weeks at the time of the first fruits of the wheat harvest; and a solemn feast of the harvest at the end of the year.

Three times a year every male among you shall appear before the Ruler, the Lord, the God of Israel.

For I will drive out the nations from before you, and I will extend your borders; and no one will covet your land when you go up to appear three times a year before the Lord your God.

You shall not offer the blood of my sacrifice with leavened bread; nothing of the sacrifice of the solemn feast of the Passover shall be kept until morning.

You shall bring the firstfruits of the first fruits of the land into the house of the Lord your God. You shall not boil a young goat in its mother's milk.

The Lord also said to Moses: Write down these words; for according to the content of these words I have made a covenant with you and with Israel.

And [Moses] remained there with the Lord forty days and forty nights, neither eating bread nor drinking water; and [the Lord] wrote on the Tablets the words of the covenant, [that is], the ten commandments.

Now it happened that when Moses came down from Mount Sinai, holding in his hand the two Tablets of the Testimony, when, [I say], he came down from the mountain, he did not perceive that the skin of his face had become radiant while he spoke with God. But when Aaron and all the Israelites saw Moses, and perceived that the skin of his face was radiant, they were afraid to approach him.

But Moses called them, and Aaron and all the leaders of the assembly returned to him; and Moses spoke with them.

After this all the children of Israel approached, and he commanded them all the things that the Lord had told him on Mount Sinai.

So Moses finished speaking to them: but he had put a veil over his face.

And when Moses went in to the Lord to speak with him, he would remove the veil until he came out; and when he came out, he would tell the children of Israel what he had been commanded.

Now the children of Israel had seen that the face of Moses, the skin, [I say], of his face was radiant; therefore Moses put the veil back over his face, until he returned to speak with the Lord.

So Moses gathered the whole congregation of the children of Israel, and said to them, "These are the things that the Lord has commanded to be done."

Six days you shall work, but the seventh day shall be holy to you; for it is a Sabbath of rest [consecrated] to the Lord; whoever works on that day shall be put to death.

You shall not kindle a fire in any of your dwellings on the Sabbath day.

Then Moses spoke to the whole assembly of the children of Israel, and said to them, "This is what the Lord has commanded you, saying:

Take from among your possessions an offering to the Lord; whoever is willing shall bring this offering to the Lord, namely, gold, silver, and bronze,

Purple, scarlet, crimson, fine linen, and goat's hair,

Sheepskins dyed red, and hides of wood pigeons, from Sittim wood,

Oil for the lamp, aromatic substances for the anointing oil, and perfume made from aromatic substances,
Onyx stones, and filling stones for the Ephod, and for the Breastplate.
And all the wise men among you will come and do everything the Lord has commanded. [Knowledge], The pavilion, its Tabernacle, and its covering, its rings, its boards, its bars, its pillars, and its foundations;
The Ark and its poles, the Mercy Seat, and the veil to be stretched in front;
The Table and its bars, and all its utensils, and the bread of the Presence.
And the lampstand, its utensils, its lamps, and the oil for the lamp.
And the altar of incense and its poles; the anointing oil, the perfume of aromatic things, and the tapestry to hang at the entrance, [namely] at the entrance of the pavilion.
The altar of burnt offering, its bronze grating, its bars and all its utensils; the basin, and its base.
The curtains of the forecourt, its pillars, its foundations, and the tapestry to hang at the gate of the forecourt.
And the stakes of the pavilion, and the stakes of the courtyard, and their ropes.
The garments for service in the Sanctuary, the holy garments of Aaron the Priest, and the garments of his sons for exercising the Priesthood.
Then the whole assembly of the children of Israel left the presence of Moses.
And whoever was moved in his heart, whoever, [I say], felt inclined to generosity, brought the offering of the Lord for the work of the Tabernacle of meeting, and for all its service, and for the holy garments.
And the men came with the women; whoever was willing brought earrings, rings, bracelets, and gold jewelry, and whoever offered some gold offering to the Lord.
Every man who had purple, scarlet, crimson, fine linen, goats' hair, sheepskins dyed red, and squirrel skins, brought them.
Every man who had enough to make an offering of silver and bronze brought it for the offering of the Lord; and every man whose house had been found wood from Shittim for all the work of the service brought it.
Every skilled woman spun with her hand, and brought what she had spun, of purple, scarlet, crimson, and fine linen.
All the women whose hearts led them [to work] in their industry, spun goat hair.
The leaders also [of the assembly] brought onyx stones, and stones for the Ephod and for the Breastplate;
And aromatic things, and oil, both for the lamp, and for the anointing oil, and for the perfume composed of aromatic things.
Therefore, every man and woman whose heart moved them to be generous, to bring what was needed to do the work that the Lord had commanded through Moses to be done, all the children, [I say], of Israel, brought gifts willingly to the Lord.
Then Moses said to the children of Israel: see, the Lord has called by name Bezalel, the son of Uri, the son of Hur, of the Tribe of Judah;
And he filled him with the Spirit of God in wisdom, in understanding, in knowledge, for all kinds of works.
Even in order to invent designs for working in gold, silver, and bronze;
In the carving of precious stones to work them; and in carpentry, to work in every exquisite craft.
And he also put it into his heart, both to him and to Aholiab son of Ahisamach, of the Tribe of Dan, to teach it;
And he filled them with industry to do all kinds of work, even exquisite work, and embroidery, in purple, scarlet, crimson, and fine linen, and weaving, doing all kinds of work, and inventing all kinds of designs.
And Bezalel, and Aholiab, and all the men of spirit, to whom the Lord had given wisdom and understanding, to know how to do all the work of the service of the Sanctuary, did according to all the things that the Lord had commanded.

So Moses summoned Bezalel and Aholiab, and all the intelligent men in whose hearts the Lord had put wisdom, and all who were moved in their hearts to come forward to do this work.

They carried away from before Moses all the offering that the children of Israel had brought for the work of the service of the Sanctuary. Now some freewill offering was still being brought every morning.

Therefore, all the skilled men who were doing all the work of the Sanctuary came, each from the work they were doing;

And they spoke to Moses, saying: the people keep bringing more than is needed for the service and for the work that the Lord has commanded to be done.

Then by the command of Moses they proclaimed throughout the camp: that neither man nor woman should do any more work for the offering of the Sanctuary; and so they prevented the people from offering.

Because they had enough cloth to do all the work, and there was even some left over.

All the men of the greatest intellect among those who were doing the work made the pavilion; [namely] ten rolls of fine twisted linen, of purple, scarlet, and crimson; and they made them strewn with cherubim, of exquisite workmanship.

The length of one roll was twenty-eight cubits, and the width of the same roll was four cubits; all the rolls had the same measurement.

And they joined five scrolls together, and five other scrolls together.

And they made purple cords on the edge of one roll, [namely] on the edge of the one that was attached; they did the same on the edge of the last roll, in the assembly of the other.

They made fifty laces in one roll, and fifty laces at the edge of the roll that was in the assembly of the other; the laces being opposite each other.

Then they made fifty gold hooks, and they fastened the rollers together with the hooks; thus a pavilion was made.

Then they made scrolls of goat hair to serve as a tabernacle over the pavilion; they made eleven of these scrolls.

The length of one roll was thirty cubits, and the width of the same roll was four cubits; and the eleven rolls were of the same measure.

And five of these rolls were assembled separately, and six rolls separately.

Fifty laces were also made on the edge of one of the rollers, [namely] on the last one which was attached, and fifty laces on the edge of the other roller, which was attached.

They also made fifty bronze hooks to fasten the Tabernacle, so that there would be only one.

Then they made for the Tabernacle a covering of sheepskins dyed red, and a covering of catfish skins on top of it.

And they made wooden planks from Sittim for the pavilion, which they made stand upright.

The length of a board was ten cubits, and the width of the same board was one and a half cubits.

There were two tenons on each plank in the form of rungs one after the other; the same was done on all the planks of the pavilion.

So they made the planks for the pavilion; [namely] twenty planks on the side that looked directly towards the South.

And below the twenty planks, forty silver bases were made, two bases under one plank, for its two tenons, and two bases under the other plank, for its two tenons.

Twenty planks were also made on the other side of the pavilion, on the northern side.

And their forty bases, of silver: two bases under one plank, and two bases under the other plank.

And for the back of the pavilion, towards the West, six planks were made.

And they made two boards for the corners of the pavilion on both sides of the back; Which were equal at the bottom, and which were joined and united at the top with a ring; the same was done to the two [boards] which were at the two corners. There were therefore eight boards and sixteen silver bases; [namely] two bases under each board.

Then we made five bars of Sittim wood, for the planks on one side of the pavilion. And five bars for the planks on the other side of the pavilion; and five bars for the planks of the pavilion for the bottom, towards the western side; And we made sure that the middle bar passed through the middle of the planks from one end to the other.

And they covered the boards with gold, and made their rings of gold to pass the bars through, and they covered the bars with gold.

They also made the veil of purple, scarlet, crimson, and fine twisted linen; they made it of exquisite workmanship, strewn with cherubim.

And they made for it four pillars of Shittim wood, which they overlaid with gold, having their hooks of gold; and they cast for them four bases of silver.

They also made at the entrance of the Tabernacle a tapestry of purple, scarlet, crimson, and fine twisted linen, the work of an embroiderer;

And its five pillars with their hooks; and their capitals and their nets were covered with gold; but their five bases were of bronze.

Then Bezalel made the ark of Shittim wood. Its length was two and a half cubits, its width one and a half cubits, and its height one and a half cubits.

And he covered it inside and out with pure gold, and made a crown of gold around it;

And he cast four gold rings for it to put on its four corners; [namely] two rings on one side of it, and two others on the other side.

He also made bars of Sittim wood, and covered them with gold.

And he put the poles into the rings on the sides of the Ark, to carry the Ark.

He also made the Mercy Seat of pure gold; its length was two and a half cubits, and its width one and a half cubits.

And he made two cherubim of gold; he made them of elaborate work with a hammer, taken from the two ends of the mercy seat;

[Knowing] one Cherub taken from the end on this side, and the other Cherub taken from the end on the other side; he made, [I say], the Cherubim taken from the Mercy Seat; [namely] from its two ends.

And the Cherubim spread their wings upward, covering the Mercy Seat with their wings; and their faces were opposite one another, [and] the Cherubim looked toward the Mercy Seat.

He also made the wooden table of Sittim; its length was two cubits, its width one cubit, and its height one and a half cubits.

And he covered it with pure gold, and made a crown of gold around it.

He also made around it a fence a handbreadth wide, and he made a crown of gold around its fence.

And he cast four gold rings for him, and he put the rings on the four corners, which [were] on his four feet.

The rings were at the place of the fence, to put the bars on, in order to carry the Table [with them].

And he made the wooden poles from Shittim, and overlaid them with gold to carry the Table.

He also made of pure gold vessels to place on the Table, his dishes, his cups, his basins, and his goblets, with which the sprinkling was to be done.

He also made the lampstand of pure gold; he made it with hammer-like workmanship; its stem, its branches, its plates, its knobs, and its flowers were made from it.

And six branches came out of its sides, three branches on one side of the lampstand, and three on the other side of the lampstand.

On one of the branches there were three almond-shaped dishes, a pommel, and a flower; and on the other branch there were three almond-shaped dishes, a pommel, and a flower; he did the same to the six branches that came out of the lampstand. And on the candlestick were four almond-shaped dishes, its finials and its flowers. And a pommel under two branches [taken] from the lampstand, and a pommel under two [other] branches, [taken] from it, and a pommel under two [other] branches, taken from it, [namely] from the six branches that proceeded from the lampstand. Their knobs and branches were [made] from him, [and] the whole lampstand was a work of one piece, hammered out, [and] of pure gold. He also made his seven lamps, his snuffers, and his bowls of pure gold. And he did it with all its finery, a talent of pure gold. He also made the altar of incense out of Shittim wood; its length was one cubit, and its width one cubit; it was square; but its height was two cubits, [and] its horns came from it. And he covered the top of the altar, and its sides all around, and its horns with pure gold; and he made a crown of gold all around it. He also made two gold rings below his crown on its two sides, which he put at the two corners, to pass the bars through, in order to carry it [with them]. And he made the wooden bars from Shittim, and overlaid them with gold. He also composed the anointing oil, which was a holy thing, and the pure perfume of drugs, the work of a perfumer. He also made the altar of burnt offerings out of Shittim wood; and its length was five cubits, and its width five cubits; it was square; and its height was three cubits. And he made its horns at its four corners; its horns came out of it, and he covered it with bronze. He also made all the utensils for the altar, the cauldrons, the scrapers, the basins, the forks, [and] the censers; he made all its utensils of bronze. And he made for the altar a bronze grating, in the form of a lattice, below the altar enclosure, from the bottom to the middle. And he cast four rings at the four corners of the bronze grid, to hold the bars. And he made the wooden bars from Shittim, and covered them with bronze. And he passed the bars through the rings, on the sides of the altar, to carry it with them, making it of planks, and hollow. He also made the bronze basin and its bronze base for the mirrors of the women who assembled in groups; who assembled, [I say], in groups at the door of the Tabernacle of meeting. He also made a courtyard, for the side that faces towards the South, [and] curtains of fine twisted linen, one hundred cubits long, for the courtyard. And he made their twenty pillars with their twenty bases of bronze, [but] the hooks of the pillars and their nets were of silver. And for the northern side, he made [curtains] of one hundred cubits, their twenty pillars and their twenty bases were of bronze, but the hooks of the pillars and their nets were of silver. And on the western side, curtains of fifty cubits, their ten pillars, and their ten foundations; the hooks of the pillars and their nets were of silver. And for the side of the East, directly towards the Levant, [curtains] of fifty cubits. He made fifteen cubits of curtains for one side, [and] their three pillars with their three foundations; And on the other side, fifteen cubits of curtains, so that there would be as many on this side as on the other side of the gate of the courtyard, [and] their three pillars with their three bases. So he made all the curtains of the courtyard that were all around, of fine twisted linen.

He also made the bases of the pillars of bronze, but he made the hooks of the pillars of silver, and the nets, and their capitals were covered with silver, and all the pillars of the courtyard were encircled around with a silver net.

And he made the tapestry for the gate of the court of purple, scarlet, and crimson, and of fine twisted linen, of embroidered work, twenty cubits long, and five cubits high, which was the width; corresponding to the curtains of the court.

And its four pillars with their bases, of bronze, and their hooks, of silver; also the covering of their capitals and their nets, of silver.

And all the posts of the Tabernacle and of the surrounding courtyard, of bronze.

This is the account of the things that were used at the pavilion, [namely] at the pavilion of the Testimony, according to the account made by the commandment of Moses, which the Levites were employed to do under the direction of Ithamar, son of Aaron, the priest.

And Bezalel, son of Uri, son of Hur, of the Tribe of Judah, did all the things that the Lord had commanded Moses.

And with him Aholiab son of Ahisamach, of the Tribe of Dan, the craftsmen, and those who worked in exquisite work, and the embroiderers in purple, scarlet, crimson, and fine linen.

All the gold that was used for the work, [namely] for all the work of the Sanctuary, which was gold of offering, [was] twenty-nine talents, and seven hundred and thirty shekels, according to the shekel of the Sanctuary.

And the money of those of the assembly who were counted was one hundred talents, and one thousand seven hundred and seventy-five shekels, according to the shekel of the Sanctuary:

Half a shekel per head, half a shekel according to the shekel of the Sanctuary; all those who passed through the census from the age of twenty years and above were six hundred and three thousand five hundred and fifty.

So there were one hundred talents of silver to cast the foundations of the Sanctuary, and the foundations of the veil, [namely] one hundred foundations of one hundred talents, one talent for each foundation.

But from the thousand seven hundred and seventy-five [shekels], he made the hooks for the pillars, and he covered their capitals, and made nets around them.

The bronze offering was seventy talents, and two thousand four hundred shekels;

From which were made the foundations of the door of the Tabernacle of Meeting, and the bronze altar with its bronze grating, and all the utensils of the altar;

And the foundations of the courtyard all around, and the foundations of the gate of the courtyard, and all the piles of the pavilion, and all the piles of the courtyard all around.

They also made purple, scarlet, and crimson garments for the service of the Sanctuary; and they made the holy garments for Aaron, as the Lord had commanded Moses.

So they made the Ephod of gold, purple, scarlet, crimson, and fine twisted linen.

They spread out sheets of gold and cut them into strips to be woven together with purple, scarlet, crimson, and fine linen of exquisite workmanship.

Shoulder straps were made for the Ephod, which were attached so that it was joined at both ends.

And the exquisite belt with which he was girded was made from him, and of the same workmanship, of gold, purple, scarlet, crimson, and fine twisted linen, as the Lord had commanded Moses.

They also set the onyx stones in their gold settings, having the names of the children of Israel engraved with a seal engraving.

And they were placed on the shoulder pieces of the Ephod, so that they might be memorial stones for the children of Israel, as the Lord had commanded Moses.

They also made the Breastplate of exquisite workmanship, like the work of the Ephod, of gold, purple, scarlet, crimson, and fine twisted linen.

They made the breastplate square and double; its length was a palm, and its width a palm on each side.

And it was filled with four rows of stones. In the first row, a sardonyx, a topaz, and an emerald were placed.

In the second row, a Carbuncle, a Sapphire, and a Jasper.

In the third row, a Ligurian, an Agate, and an Amethyst.

And in the fourth row, a Chrysolite, an Onyx, and a Beril, surrounded by gold chatons, in their tracery.

Thus there were as many stones as there were names of the children of Israel, twelve according to their names, each one engraved with a seal engraving, according to the name, [which it was to bear, and] they were for the twelve Tribes.

And on the breastplate, chains with ends, like cords, of pure gold were made.

They also made two gold clamps and two gold rings, and they put the two rings on the two ends of the breastplate.

And the two gold chains made with cords were put into the two rings at the end of the breastplate;

And we put the two other ends of the two corded chains, on the two crampons, on the shoulder pieces of the Ephod, on the front of the Ephod.

They also made two [other] gold rings, and put them on the two [other] ends of the breastpiece on its edge, which was on the side of the ephod on the inside.

They also made two [other] gold rings, and they put them on the two shoulder pieces of the Ephod from below, corresponding on the front of the Ephod, at the place where it joined above the exquisite belt of the Ephod.

And the breastpiece, raised by its rings, was joined to the rings of the ephod with a purple cord, so that it would stay above the exquisite girdle of the ephod, and that the breastpiece would not move from above the ephod, as the Lord had commanded Moses.

They also made the Rochet of the Ephod of woven work, [and] entirely of purple.

And the opening [for the head to pass through] was in the middle of the Rochet, like the opening of a bodice; and there was a hem at the opening of the Rochet all around, so that it would not tear.

And on the banks of Rochet they made pomegranates of purple, scarlet, and crimson, with twisted wire.

They also made little bells of pure gold, and they put the bells among the pomegranates on the banks of Rochet all around, among the pomegranates.

[Knowledge], a small bell, then a pomegranate; a small bell, then a pomegranate, on the banks of the Rochet all around, to perform the service, as the Lord had commanded Moses.

They also made for Aaron and his sons shirts of fine linen, woven for the purpose.

And the tiara of fine linen, and the ornaments of the skullcaps of fine linen, and the linen underpants, of fine twisted linen.

And the baldric of fine twisted linen, of purple, scarlet, crimson, of embroidered work, as the Lord had commanded Moses.

And the holy coronation plate of pure gold, on which was written in seal engraving script: HOLINESS TO THE ETERNAL.

And a purple cord was placed on it, to be attached to the turban on top, as the Lord had commanded Moses.

Thus was completed all the work of the pavilion of the Tabernacle of Meeting; and the children of Israel did according to all the things which the Lord had commanded Moses; they did them thus.

And they brought to Moses the pavilion, the Tabernacle, and all its utensils, its hooks, its boards, its poles, its pillars, and its foundations;

The covering of sheepskins dyed red, and the covering of squirrel skins, and the veil to spread [before the Most Holy Place];

The Ark of the Testimony, and its bars, and the Mercy Seat;

The Table, with all its utensils, and the bread of the Presence;
And the pure lampstand, with all its arranged lamps, and all its utensils, and the oil for the lamp;
And the golden altar, the anointing oil, the incense of spices, and the tapestry for the entrance of the Tabernacle;
And the bronze altar, with its bronze grating, its bars, and all its utensils; the basin, and its base;
And the curtains of the courtyard, its pillars, its foundations, the tapestry for the gate of the courtyard, its rope, its stakes, and all the utensils of the service of the pavilion, for the Tabernacle of meeting;
The garments for service in the Sanctuary, the holy garments for Aaron the Priest, and the garments for his sons to exercise the Priesthood.
The children of Israel [therefore] did all the work; as the Lord [had] commanded Moses.
And Moses saw all the work, and behold, it had been done just as the Lord had commanded, it had been done thus; and Moses blessed them.
And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:
On the first day of the first month, you shall set up the pavilion of the Tabernacle of Meeting.
And you shall place the Ark of the Testimony there, and you shall spread the veil before it.
Then you shall bring the table, and arrange on it what is to be arranged. You shall also bring the lampstand, and light its lamps.
You shall also place the golden altar for incense in front of the Ark of the Testimony; and you shall put the entrance tapestry in the pavilion.
You shall also place the altar of burnt offering opposite the entrance to the pavilion of the Tabernacle of Meeting.
You shall also place the basin between the Tabernacle of Meeting and the altar, and put water in it.
You shall also put up the courtyard all around, and you shall put up the tapestry at the gate of the courtyard.
You shall also take the anointing oil, and anoint the pavilion with it, and all that is in it, and consecrate it, with all its utensils; and it shall be holy.
You shall also anoint the altar of burnt offering, and all its utensils, and you shall consecrate the altar, and the altar shall be most holy.
You shall also anoint the basin and its base, and consecrate it.
You shall also bring Aaron and his sons to the entrance of the Tabernacle of Meeting, and wash them with water.
And you shall clothe Aaron with the holy garments, and anoint him, and consecrate him; and he shall exercise the priesthood for me.
You shall also bring his sons near, and you shall dress them in shirts.
And you shall anoint them as you anointed their father; and they shall exercise the priesthood for me, and their anointing shall be for them to exercise the priesthood forever, from generation to generation.
Moses did everything the Lord had commanded him; he did it in this way.
For on the first day of the first month, in the second year, the pavilion was erected.
So Moses pitched the pavilion, and put up its foundations, and laid its boards, and put up its poles, and erected its pillars.
And he spread the Tabernacle over the pavilion, and put the covering of the Tabernacle over the pavilion from above, as the Lord had commanded Moses.
Then he took and placed the Testimony in the Ark, and put the poles in the Ark; he also put the Mercy Seat on top of the Ark.
And he brought the Ark into the pavilion, and laid the tapestry veil, and placed it in front of the Ark of the Testimony, as the Lord had commanded Moses.

He also placed the Table in the Tabernacle of Meeting, beside the pavilion, toward the North, on this side of the veil.

And he arranged the rows of loaves of bread before the Lord on it, as the Lord had commanded Moses.

He also placed the lampstand in the Tabernacle of Meeting opposite the Table on the side of the pavilion towards the South.

And he lit the lamps before the Lord, as the Lord had commanded Moses.

He also placed the golden altar in the Tabernacle of Meeting before the veil.

And he made incense of spices burn on him, as the Lord had commanded Moses.

He also installed the tapestry in the entrance hall of the pavilion.

And he placed the altar of burnt offering at the entrance of the pavilion of the Tabernacle of Meeting; and offered the burnt offering and the grain offering upon it, as the Lord had commanded Moses.

And he placed the basin between the Tabernacle of Meeting and the altar, and put water in it to wash himself.

And Moses and Aaron with his sons washed their hands and feet.

And when they entered the Tabernacle of Meeting, and approached the altar, they washed themselves, as the Lord had commanded Moses.

He also erected the courtyard all around the pavilion and the altar, and hung the tapestry for the gate of the courtyard. Thus Moses finished the work.

And the cloud covered the Tabernacle of Meeting, and the glory of the Lord filled the pavilion.

So much so that Moses could not enter the Tabernacle of Meeting, because the cloud stood over it and the glory of the Lord filled the pavilion.

Now when the cloud lifted from above the Tabernacle, the children of Israel went out in all their raids.

But if the cloud did not lift, they did not set out until the day it lifted.

For the cloud of the Lord was over the pavilion by day, and the fire was there by night, in the sight of all the house of Israel, in all their battles.

Then the Lord called to Moses and spoke to him about the Tabernacle of Meeting, saying:

Speak to the children of Israel, and say to them: When any of you offers to the Lord an offering of a four-footed animal, he shall make his offering of the herd or of the flock.

If his offering for a burnt offering is a herd of cattle, he shall offer a male without blemish; he shall offer it willingly, at the entrance of the Tabernacle of Meeting, before the Lord.

And he shall lay his hand on the head of the burnt offering, and it shall be accepted for him, to make atonement for him.

Then they shall slaughter the calf before the Lord, and Aaron's sons the priests shall offer its blood, and they shall sprinkle the blood all around on the altar, which is at the entrance of the Tabernacle of Meeting.

And they will slaughter the burnt offering, and cut it into pieces.

And the sons of Aaron the priests shall put fire on the altar, and arrange the wood on the fire.

And the sons of Aaron the priests shall arrange the pieces, the head, and the offal on top of the wood that will be on the fire on the altar.

But he shall wash the belly and the legs with water, and the priest shall burn all these things on the altar; it is a burnt offering, a sacrifice made by fire, a pleasing aroma to the Lord.

If his offering for the burnt offering is from small livestock, from among the sheep or from among the goats, he shall offer a male without blemish.

And it shall be slaughtered beside the altar toward the North before the Lord, and Aaron's sons the priests shall sprinkle its blood all around the altar.

Then it shall be cut into pieces, with its head and its offal; and the priest shall arrange them on the wood which shall be in the fire which is on the altar. But he shall wash his belly and his legs with water. Then the priest shall offer all these things and burn them on the altar; it is a burnt offering, a sacrifice made by fire, a pleasing aroma to the Lord.

If his offering for the burnt offering to the Lord is birds, he shall make his offering of turtledoves, or young pigeons.

And the priest shall offer it on the altar, and cut its head with his nail, in order to burn it on the altar, and he shall scour its blood at the side of the altar.

And he shall remove his jabot with his quill, and throw them near the altar toward the East, where the ashes shall be.

He shall therefore cut it open with his wings without dividing it; and the priest shall burn it on the altar, above the wood which is in the fire; it is a burnt offering, a sacrifice made by fire, a pleasing aroma to the Lord.

And when someone offers the grain offering to the Lord, his offering shall be of fine flour, and he shall pour oil on the grain, and put incense on top of it.

And he shall bring it to the sons of Aaron the priests, and the [priest] shall take a handful of the fine flour and of the oil from which the cake was made, with all the incense that was on the cake, and he shall burn its memorial offering on the altar; it is an offering made by fire as a pleasing aroma to the Lord.

But what remains of the cake will belong to Aaron and his sons; it is a most holy thing among the offerings made by fire to the Lord.

And when you offer an offering of baked cakes, they shall be unleavened cakes of fine flour, kneaded with oil, and unleavened fritters, anointed with oil.

And if your offering is a cake baked on a baking sheet, it shall be of fine flour kneaded in oil, without leaven.

You will put it in pieces, and pour oil on it; for it is a grain offering.

And if your offering is a pan cake, it will be made of fine flour with oil.

Then you shall bring to the Lord the cake which is made of these things, and it shall be presented to the Priest, who shall bring it to the altar.

And the priest shall take away its memorial and burn it on the altar; it is an offering made by fire as a pleasing aroma to the Lord.

And what remains of the cake will belong to Aaron and his sons; it is a most holy thing, among the offerings made by fire to the Lord.

Whatever cake you offer to the Lord, it shall not be made with leaven; for you shall not burn leaven or honey in any offering made by fire to the Lord.

You may offer them to the Lord in the offering of firstfruits, [but] they shall not be placed on the altar as a [smelling] offering.

You shall also season with salt every offering of your cake, and you shall not let the salt of the covenant of your God be lacking on your cake; but in all your offerings you shall offer salt.

And if you offer to the Lord the cake of the first fruits, you shall offer, for the cake of your first fruits, ears of grain that are beginning to ripen, roasted over the fire, [namely] the grains of a few ears of grain, well crushed in the hands.

Then you shall put oil on the cake, and you shall also put incense on top of it; it is a cake offering.

And the priest will burn his memorial offering, made from his crushed grain and oil, with all the incense; it is an offering made by fire to the Lord.

And if someone's offering is a peace offering, and he offers it from the herd, whether male or female, he shall offer it without blemish before the Lord.

And he shall lay his hand on the head of his offering, and it shall be slaughtered at the entrance of the Tabernacle of Meeting, and the sons of Aaron the Priests shall sprinkle the blood on the altar around it.

Then they shall offer, from the sacrifice of peace offerings, an offering made by fire to the Lord, [namely] the fat that covers the entrails, and all the fat that is on the entrails;

And the two kidneys with the fat that is on them, up to the sides, and we will remove the membrane that is on the liver [to put it] with the kidneys.

And Aaron's sons shall burn all of it on the altar, on top of the burnt offering which shall be on the wood [that will be put] on the fire; it is an offering made by fire, a pleasing aroma to the Lord.

If his offering is small livestock for the peace offering to the Lord, whether male or female, he shall offer it without blemish.

If he offers a lamb as his offering, he shall offer it before the Lord.

And he shall lay his hand on the head of his offering, and it shall be slaughtered before the Tabernacle of Meeting, and Aaron's sons shall sprinkle its blood on the altar around it.

And he shall offer from the sacrifice of peace an offering made by fire to the Lord, removing its fat, and its entire tail up to the spine, with the fat that covers the entrails, and all the fat that is on the entrails;

And the two kidneys with the fat that is on them, up to the sides, and he will remove the membrane that is on the liver [to put it] on the kidneys.

And the priest will burn [all] of it on the altar; it is an offering made by fire to the Lord.

But if his offering is from among the goats, he shall offer it before the Lord.

And he shall lay his hand on the head of his [offering], and it shall be slaughtered before the Tabernacle of Meeting; and the sons of Aaron shall sprinkle its blood on the altar around it.

Then he shall offer his offering as a sacrifice made by fire to the Lord, [namely], the fat that covers the entrails, and all the fat that is on the entrails.

And the two kidneys, and the fat that is on them, up to the flanks, and he will remove the membrane that is on the liver [to put it] on the kidneys.

Then the priest shall burn all these things on the altar; it is a food offering made by fire, a pleasing aroma. All the fat belongs to the Lord.

This is a perpetual ordinance throughout your generations and in all your dwellings, that you shall eat no fat, nor any blood.

The Lord spoke again to Moses, saying:

Speak to the children of Israel, and say to them: When a person sins unintentionally against any of the commandments of the Lord, by doing things which should not be done, and does any of these things;

If the anointed priest has committed a sin similar to any fault of the people, he shall offer to the Lord for his sin which he has committed, a calf without blemish, taken from the flock, as a sin offering.

He shall bring the calf to the entrance of the Tabernacle of Meeting before the Lord, and shall lay his hand on the head of the calf, and slaughter it before the Lord.

And the anointed priest shall take some of the blood of the calf and bring it into the Tabernacle of meeting.

And the priest shall dip his finger in the blood, and sprinkle the blood seven times before the Lord, in front of the veil of the sanctuary.

The priest shall also put some of the blood before the Lord on the horns of the altar of incense, which is in the tabernacle of meeting; but he shall pour out all the rest of the blood of the calf at the foot of the altar of burnt offering, which is at the entrance of the tabernacle of meeting.

And he shall remove all the fat from the calf of the sin offering, [namely], the fat that covers the entrails, and all the fat that is on the entrails.

And the two kidneys with the fat that is on them, up to the sides, and he will remove the membrane that is on the liver [to put it] on the kidneys;

As they are taken from the ox of the peace offering, and the Priest will burn [all] these things on the altar of burnt offering.

But as for the calf's hide and all its flesh, with its head, legs, entrails, and dung,

And [even] the whole calf, he shall take it out of the camp to a clean place, where the ashes are scattered, and he shall burn it on wood in the fire; it shall be burned in the place where the ashes are scattered.

And if the whole assembly of Israel sinned by mistake, and the matter was not perceived by the assembly, and they violated some commandment of the Lord, by doing things which should not be done, and became guilty;

And when the sin they have committed becomes manifest, the assembly shall offer as a sin offering a calf taken from the flock, and it shall be brought before the Tabernacle of Meeting.

And the elders of the assembly shall lay their hands on the head of the calf before the Lord.

And the anointed priest shall bring some of the calf's blood into the Tabernacle of meeting.

Then the priest shall dip his finger in the blood, and sprinkle it before the Lord in front of the veil, seven times.

And he shall put some of the blood on the horns of the altar which is before the Lord in the Tabernacle of Meeting, and he shall pour out all the rest of the blood at the foot of the altar of burnt offering, which is at the entrance of the Tabernacle of Meeting.

And he shall remove all its fat and burn it on the altar;

And he will do with this calf, as he did with the calf of the sin offering. The priest will do this; he will make atonement for them, and they will be forgiven.

Then he shall bring the calf out of the camp and burn it as he burned the first calf; for it is the offering for the sin of the congregation.

If any of the leaders has sinned, having unintentionally violated any of the commandments of the Lord his God, by doing things which should not be done, and has become guilty;

And when he is warned of his sin, which he has committed, he shall bring as a sacrifice a young male goat without blemish;

And he shall lay his hand on the head of the goat, and it shall be slaughtered in the place where the burnt offering is slaughtered before the Lord; [for] it is a sin offering.

Then the priest shall take with his finger some of the blood of the sin offering and put it on the horns of the altar of burnt offering, and he shall sprinkle the rest of its blood at the base of the altar of burnt offering.

And he shall burn all his fat on the altar like the fat of the peace offering; thus the priest shall make atonement for him for his sin, and he shall be forgiven.

If any person from the common people has sinned by mistake, by violating any of the commandments of the Lord, [and] by committing things which should not be done, and has made himself guilty;

And when he is warned of the sin he has committed, he shall bring his offering of a young female goat, without blemish, for the sin he has committed.

And he shall lay his hand on the head of the sin offering, and the sin offering shall be slaughtered in the place where the burnt offering is slaughtered.

Then the priest shall take some of the goat's blood with his finger and put it on the horns of the altar of burnt offering, and he shall sprinkle all the rest of its blood at the foot of the altar.

And he shall remove all his fat as the fat is removed from the peace offering, and the priest shall burn it on the altar as a pleasing aroma to the Lord, and make atonement for him, and he shall be forgiven.

If he brings a lamb as an offering for his sin, it will be a female without blemish that he will bring.

And he shall lay his hand on the head of the sin offering, and it shall be slaughtered for sin in the place where the burnt offering is slaughtered.

Then the priest shall take with his finger some of the blood of the sin offering and put it on the horns of the altar of burnt offering, and he shall sprinkle all the rest of its blood at the foot of the altar.

And he shall remove all its fat, as the fat is removed from the lamb of the peace offering, and the Priest shall burn them on the altar on top of the Lord's offerings made by fire, and he shall make atonement for him concerning his sin which he has committed, and he shall be forgiven.

And when someone sins by hearing someone utter any detestable word, and has witnessed it, whether they saw it or knew it, and has not declared it, they will bear their iniquity.

Or when someone has touched an unclean thing, whether the carcass of unclean wild beasts, or the carcass of unclean domestic animals, or the carcass of reptiles, which are unclean, even if he did not realize it, he is nevertheless unclean and guilty.

Or when he has touched a man's uncleanness, whatever his uncleanness may be, whether he did not perceive it or whether he knew it, he is guilty.

Or when someone has sworn by lightly uttering with his lips to do harm or good, according to whatever a man lightly utters when swearing, whether he did not realize it or whether he knew it, he is guilty in one of these points.

Therefore, when someone is guilty in any of these matters, he must confess in what he has sinned.

And he shall bring [the victim] of his sin to the Lord for the sin which he has committed, [namely] a female of the flock, either a young ewe or a young goat, for the sin; and the Priest shall make atonement for him for his sin.

And if he cannot find a sheep or a goat, he shall bring to the Lord as an offering for the sin he has committed, two turtledoves, or two young pigeons; one as a sin offering; and the other, as a burnt offering.

He shall bring them, [I say], to the priest, who shall first offer the one who is for sin; and he shall cut their heads with his nail toward the neck, without separating them.

Then he shall sprinkle some of the blood of the sin offering on one side of the altar; and what remains of the blood shall be sprinkled at the foot of the altar; for it is a sin offering.

And of the other he shall make a burnt offering, according to the ordinance, and the priest shall make atonement for him for his sin which he has committed; and he shall be forgiven.

But if the one who has sinned cannot find two turtledoves, or two young pigeons, he shall bring as his offering a tenth part of an ephah of fine flour, [but] he shall not put oil or incense on it; for it is an offering for sin.

He shall bring it to the Priest, who shall take a handful of it as a memorial portion of this offering, and burn it on the altar, on the offerings made by fire to the Lord; [for it is an offering for] sin.

Thus the priest will make atonement for him for his sin which he has committed in one of these things, and he will be forgiven; and the rest will be for the priest, as a grain offering.

The Lord also spoke to Moses, saying:

When someone has committed a crime and a sin by mistake, by [withholding] things sanctified to the Lord, he shall bring [a sacrifice for] his sin to the Lord; [namely] a ram without blemish, [taken] from the flock, with the valuation that you shall make of the holy thing, making it in shekels of silver, according to the shekel of the Sanctuary, because of his sin.

He shall therefore restore what he has sinned in [withholding] of the holy thing, and he shall add a fifth on top of it, and give it to the Priest; and the Priest shall make atonement for him with the ram of the sacrifice [for sin], and he shall be forgiven.

And when someone sins and violates any of the Lord's commandments by doing things that should not be done, and does not know it, he will be guilty and will bear his iniquity.

He shall therefore bring to the Priest a ram without blemish [taken] from the flock, with the estimate that you will make of the sin; and the Priest will make atonement for him for the sin which he committed unintentionally, and of which he did not perceive; and thus he shall be forgiven.

There is sin; certainly he has made himself guilty against the Lord.

The Lord also spoke to Moses, saying:

When anyone has sinned and committed a crime against the Lord by lying to his neighbor about a deposit, or about something that was placed in his hands, whether he stole it or deceived his neighbor.

Or if he has found something lost, and lies about it; or if he swears falsely on any of the things that happen to a man to do, sinning against them;

If it happens, therefore, that he has sinned and is found guilty, he shall give back what he has stolen, or what he has usurped by deceit, or the deposit entrusted to him for safekeeping, or the lost thing he has found;

Or whatever he swore falsely; he shall restore the principal, and add a fifth on top of it to that which belonged to him; he shall give it on the day that he is declared guilty.

And he shall bring to the Lord the priest [the victim of] his sin, [namely] a ram without blemish, [taken] from the flock, with the valuation that you shall make of the guilt.

And the priest will make atonement for him before the Lord, and he will be forgiven for all that he has done in which he has been guilty.

The Lord also spoke to Moses, saying:

Command Aaron and his sons, and say to them: This is the Law of the burnt offering; the burnt offering shall remain on the fire that is on the altar all night until morning, and the fire of the altar shall be kept burning there.

And the priest, clothed in his linen robe, shall put his linen undergarments on his flesh, and he shall lift the ashes after the fire has consumed the burnt offering on the altar; then he shall put them beside the altar.

Then he shall take off his clothes, and having put on other clothes, he shall carry the ashes outside the camp to a clean place.

And as for the fire that is on the altar, it shall be kept burning there, and it shall not be allowed to go out. The priest shall kindle wood on the fire every morning, arrange the burnt offering on the wood, and burn the fat of the peace offerings on it.

The fire shall be kept continually burning on the altar, [and] it shall not be allowed to go out.

And this is the Law of the offering of the cake; the sons of Aaron shall offer it before the Lord on the altar.

And a handful of the fine flour from the cake, and of its oil, with all the incense that is on the cake, shall be taken and burned as a pleasing aroma on the altar as a memorial to the Lord.

And Aaron and his sons shall eat what remains of it; they shall eat it unleavened in a holy place, they shall eat it in the court of the Tabernacle of meeting.

None of it shall be baked that is made with leaven; I have given it to them as their portion from among my offerings made by fire; it is a most holy thing, like [the sin offering] and [the trespass offering].

Every male among the sons of Aaron shall eat of it; it is a perpetual ordinance throughout your generations concerning the offerings made by fire to the Lord; whoever touches them shall be sanctified.

The Lord also spoke to Moses, saying:

This is the offering of Aaron and his sons, which they shall offer to the Lord on the day he is anointed, [namely] a tenth of an ephah of fine flour, as a perpetual offering; half in the morning, [and] the other half in the evening.

It will be prepared on a griddle with oil, you will bring it browned like this, and you will offer the cooked pieces of the cake as a pleasing aroma to the Lord. And the priest from among his sons who will be anointed in his place shall do this by perpetual ordinance; he shall be burned entirely to the Lord.

And the entire cake of the Priest will be consumed, without eating any of it.

The Lord also spoke to Moses, saying:

Speak to Aaron and his sons, and say to them: This is the Law [of the sin offering]; [the sin offering] shall be slaughtered before the Lord in the [same] place where the burnt offering shall be slaughtered; [for] it is a most holy thing.

The priest who offers [the sin offering] shall eat it; it shall be eaten in a holy place, in the courtyard of the Tabernacle of meeting.

Whoever touches his flesh shall be holy, and if any blood falls on his garment, that on which the blood has fallen shall be washed in the holy place.

And the earthenware vessel in which it was boiled shall be broken; but if it was boiled in a bronze vessel, it shall be scoured and washed in water.

Every male among the priests may eat of it; it is a most holy thing.

No sin offering, the blood of which is brought into the Tabernacle of Meeting to make atonement in the Sanctuary, shall be eaten, but shall be burned with fire.

But this is the law of [offering for] the offense; it is a most holy thing.

In the same place where the burnt offering is slaughtered, [the victim] for the crime will be slaughtered; and its blood will be sprinkled on the altar all around.

Then we will offer all the fat, with its tail, and all the fat that covers the entrails.

And we will remove the two kidneys, and the fat that is on them up to the sides, and the phlegm that is on the liver [to put it] on the two kidneys.

And the priest shall burn all these things on the altar as an offering made by fire to the Lord; it is a guilt offering.

Every male among the priests shall eat of it; it shall be eaten in a holy place, [for] it is a most holy thing.

[The offering for] the offense shall be like [the offering for] the sin; there shall be one law for both: [and the victim] shall belong to the priest who has made atonement by it.

And the priest who offers a burnt offering for someone shall have the skin of the burnt offering that he has offered.

And every cake baked in the oven, and which is prepared in the pan, or on the griddle, shall belong to the Priest who offers it.

But any cake kneaded with oil, or dry, will also belong to all of Aaron's sons.

And this is the Law of the Sacrifice of prosperity that will be offered to the Lord.

If anyone offers it as a thanksgiving offering, he shall offer with the Thanksgiving sacrifice unleavened cakes mixed with oil, and unleavened fritters anointed with oil, and fine flour browned into cakes mixed with oil.

He will offer with these cakes leavened bread for his offering with the sacrifice of thanksgiving for his prosperity.

And he shall offer one piece of all kinds which he shall offer as an offering raised to the Lord; [and] it shall belong to the Priest who will sprinkle the blood of the peace offering.

But the flesh of the thanksgiving sacrifice for his prosperity shall be eaten on the day it is offered; nothing of it shall be left until morning.

If the sacrifice of his offering is a vow, or a voluntary offering, it shall be eaten on the day on which his sacrifice was offered; and if there is any leftover, it shall be eaten the next day.

But what remains of the meat of the sacrifice will be burned with fire on the third day.

If anyone eats the meat of the sacrifice of his prosperity on the third day, the one who offered it will not be accepted, [and] it will not be credited to him as a good deed; it will be an abomination, and the person who ate it will bear his iniquity. And the flesh [of this sacrifice] that has touched anything unclean shall not be eaten, it shall be burned with fire; but whoever is clean shall eat of this flesh. For anyone who eats the meat of the peace offering, which belongs to the Lord, and has any defilement on him, that person shall be cut off from among his people.

If a person touches anything unclean, whether human uncleanness, unclean animal, or any other unclean thing, and eats the meat of the peace offering, which belongs to the Lord, that person shall be cut off from among his peoples.

The Lord also spoke to Moses, saying:

Speak to the children of Israel, and tell them: You shall not eat any fat of beef, lamb, or goat.

The fat of a dead animal, or the fat of an animal torn apart [by wild beasts], may be used for any other purpose, but you shall not eat it.

For whoever eats the fat of an animal whose fat is offered as a fire offering to the Lord, that person who has eaten it shall be cut off from among his peoples.

In none of your dwellings shall you eat blood, whether of birds or of other beasts.

Anyone who has eaten any blood whatsoever shall be cut off from among his people.

The Lord also spoke to Moses, saying:

Speak to the children of Israel, and say to them: He who offers the sacrifice of his prosperity to the Lord shall bring to the Lord his offering, [which he shall take] from the sacrifice of his prosperity.

His hands, [I say], will bring the offerings of the Lord which are made by fire, [that is to say] the fat, he will bring it with the breast, [offering] the breast to wave it as a waved offering before the Lord.

Then the priest will burn the fat on the altar; but the breast will belong to Aaron and his sons.

You shall also give to the Priest as a high offering, the right shoulder of your peace offerings.

The one among Aaron's sons who offers the blood and fat of the peace offerings shall have the right shoulder as his portion.

For I took from the children of Israel the breast of the leaping, and the shoulder of the lifting up, from all the sacrifices of their prosperity, and I gave them to Aaron the Priest, and to his sons, by perpetual ordinance, [having taken them] from the children of Israel.

This is the [right] of the anointing of Aaron and of the anointing of his sons on these offerings of the Lord made by fire, from the day that they were presented to perform the priesthood to the Lord.

And what the Lord commanded that was given to them by the children of Israel, from the day they were anointed, to be a perpetual ordinance throughout their generations.

This, then, is the law of the burnt offering, the cake, the sin offering, the guilt offering, the consecration offering, and the peace offering.

Which the Lord commanded Moses on Mount Sinai; when he commanded the children of Israel to offer their offerings to the Lord in the desert of Sinai.

The Lord also spoke to Moses, saying:

Take Aaron and his sons with him, the garments, the anointing oil, and a calf [for the sin offering], two rams, and a basket of unleavened bread.

And summons the whole assembly to the entrance of the Tabernacle of Meeting.

And Moses did as the Lord had commanded him; and the assembly was summoned to the entrance of the Tabernacle of Meeting.

And Moses said to the assembly, "This is what the Lord has commanded to be done."

And Moses brought Aaron and his sons near, and washed them with water.

And he put the shirt on Aaron, and girded him with the baldric, and clothed him with the Rochet, and put the Ephod on him, and girded him with the exquisite girdle of the Ephod, with which he girded him over it.

Then he put the breastplate on himself, after having placed the Urim and Thummim on the breastplate.

He also put the turban on her head, and he put on the front of the turban the gold plate, which is the holy crown, as the Lord had commanded Moses.

Then Moses took the anointing oil and anointed the Tabernacle and all the things in it, and consecrated them.

And he sprinkled it on the altar seven times, and anointed the altar, all its utensils, the basin, and its base, to consecrate them.

He also poured some of the anointing oil on Aaron's head and anointed him to sanctify him.

Then Moses brought Aaron's sons near, dressed them in tunics, and girded them with sashes, and fastened caps on them, as the Lord had commanded Moses.

Then he brought the calf of the sin offering, and Aaron and his sons laid their hands on the head of the calf of the sin offering.

And Moses, having slaughtered it, took some of its blood and put it with his finger on the horns of the altar all around, and made atonement for the altar, and he sprinkled the rest of the blood at the foot of the altar; thus he consecrated it to make atonement over it.

Then he took all the fat that was on the entrails, and the lining of the liver, the two kidneys with their fat, and Moses burned them on the altar.

But he burned the calf with its skin, its flesh, and its dung outside the camp, as the Lord had commanded Moses.

He also brought the ram of the burnt offering near, and Aaron and his sons laid their hands on the head of the ram.

And Moses, having slaughtered him, sprinkled the blood all around the altar.

Then he tore the [ram] to pieces, and smoked its head, pieces, and offal.

And he washed the entrails and the legs in the water, and burned the whole ram on the altar; for it was a burnt offering of pleasing aroma, an offering made by fire to the Lord, as the Lord had commanded Moses.

He also brought the other ram, [namely] the consecration ram; and Aaron and his sons laid their hands on the head of the ram.

And Moses, having slaughtered him, took some of his blood and put it on the soft part of Aaron's right ear, and on the thumb of his right hand, and on the big toe of his right foot.

He also brought Aaron's sons near, and put some of the same blood on the soft part of their right ear, and on the thumb of their right hand, and on the big toe of their right foot, and he sprinkled the rest of the blood on the altar all around.

Then he took the fat, the tail, and all the fat that [is] on the entrails, and the lining of the liver, and the two kidneys with their fat, and the right shoulder.

He also took from the basket unleavened loaves that were before the Lord, an unleavened cake, and a loaf of bread made with oil, and a fritter, and placed them on the fat, and on the right shoulder.

Then he placed all these things on the palms of Aaron's hands, and on the palms of his sons' hands, and waved them as a wave offering before the Lord.

After Moses received them from their hands, and burned them on the altar on top of the burnt offering; for these are the consecrations of a pleasing aroma, it is a sacrifice made by fire to the Lord.

Moses also took the breast of the ram of consecration, and waved it before the Lord, and this was Moses' portion, as the Lord had commanded Moses.

And Moses took some of the anointing oil and some of the blood that was on the altar, and sprinkled it on Aaron and on his garments; on his sons, and on the garments of his sons with him; thus he consecrated Aaron [and] his garments; his sons, and the garments of his sons with him.

After this, Moses said to Aaron and his sons, "Boil the meat at the entrance of the Tabernacle of Meeting, and eat it there, with the bread that is in the basket of consecration, as [the Lord] commanded me, saying: Aaron and his sons shall eat these things."

But you shall burn in the fire what remains of the meat and the bread.

And you shall not go out for seven days from the entrance of the Tabernacle of Meeting, until the days of your consecrations are completed; for seven days shall be spent consecrating you.

The Lord has commanded that [in these other days] be done as was done in this one, to make atonement for you.

You shall therefore remain for seven days at the entrance of the Tabernacle of Meeting, day and night, and you shall observe what the Lord has commanded you to observe, so that you do not die; for it has been commanded me thus.

So Aaron and his sons did all the things that the Lord had commanded through Moses.

And it came to pass on the eighth day that Moses summoned Aaron and his sons, and the elders of Israel.

And he said to Aaron, "Take a calf from the flock [for the sin offering] and a ram for the burnt offering, [both] without blemish, and bring them before the Lord."

And you shall speak to the children of Israel, saying: Take a young goat [for the offering] for the sin offering, a calf and a lamb, [both] a year old, without blemish, for the burnt offering;

And a bull and a ram for a peace offering, to be offered before the Lord, and a cake mixed with oil; for today the Lord will appear to you.

So they took the things that Moses had commanded, [and brought them] before the Tabernacle of Meeting; and all the assembly approached, and stood before the Lord.

And Moses said, "Do what the Lord has commanded you, and the glory of the Lord will appear to you."

And Moses said to Aaron, "Go near to the altar and offer your sin offering and your burnt offering, and make atonement for yourself and for the people; and present the offering for the people; and make atonement for them, as the Lord has commanded."

Then Aaron approached the altar and slaughtered the calf [of his sin offering].

And Aaron's sons presented the blood to him, and he dipped his finger in the blood and put it on the horns of the altar; then he sprinkled the rest of the blood at the base of the altar.

But he burned on the altar the fat, the kidneys, and the liver membrane of the sin offering, as the Lord had commanded Moses.

And he burned the flesh and skin in the fire outside the camp.

He also slaughtered the burnt offering, and Aaron's sons presented the blood to him, which he sprinkled all around the altar.

Then they presented to him the burnt offering [cut] into pieces, and the head, and he burned [these things] on the altar.

And he washed the entrails and the legs, which he burned over the burnt offering on the altar.

He offered the people's offering, he took the goat of [the offering for] the sin offering for the people, he slaughtered it, and offered it for the sin offering, like the first [offering].

He offered it as a burnt offering, and acted according to the ordinance.

Then he offered the grain offering, and filled the palm of his hand with it, and burned it on the altar, besides the morning burnt offering.

He also slaughtered the bull and the ram for the peace offering, which was for the people; and Aaron's sons presented the blood to him, which he sprinkled all around the altar.

[They presented] the fat of the bull and the ram, the tail, and what covers [the entrails], and the kidneys, and the lining of the liver.

And they placed the fat on the breasts, and the fat was burned on the altar.

And Aaron waved the breasts and the right shoulder as a wave offering before the Lord, as the Lord had commanded Moses.

Aaron also raised his hands toward the people and blessed them; and he came down after offering the sin offering, the burnt offering, and the peace offering.

Then Moses and Aaron came to the Tabernacle of Meeting, and when they came out they blessed the people; and the glory of the Lord appeared to all the people.

For fire came out from before the Lord and consumed the burnt offering and the fat on the altar; and when all the people saw this, they shouted for joy and bowed down with their faces to the ground.

Now the sons of Aaron, Nadab and Abihu, each took his censer, and having put fire in it, they put incense on it, and offered strange fire before the Lord; which he had not commanded them.

And fire came out from before the Lord and consumed them, and they died before the Lord.

And Moses said to Aaron, "This is what the Lord spoke of when he said, 'I will be sanctified among those who approach me, and I will be glorified in the sight of all the people.'" And Aaron remained silent.

And Moses called Mishael and Elzaphan, the sons of Huzziel, Aaron's uncle, and said to them, "Come here, carry your brothers out of the camp from before the Sanctuary."

So they approached and carried them out of the camp with their shirts, just as Moses had spoken.

Then Moses said to Aaron, and to Eleazar and Ithamar his sons: Do not uncover your heads, and do not tear your clothes, and you will not die, and [the Lord] will not be angry with all the congregation, but let your brothers, all the house of Israel, weep because of the burning that the Lord has caused.

And do not go out from the entrance of the Tabernacle of Meeting, lest you die; for the anointing oil of the Lord is upon you; and they did according to the word of Moses.

And the Lord spoke to Aaron, saying:

You shall not drink wine or beer, you or your sons with you, when you enter the Tabernacle of Meeting, lest you die; this is a perpetual ordinance throughout your generations.

So that you may be able to distinguish between what is holy and what is profane, between what is defiled and what is clean;

And so that you may teach the children of Israel all the ordinances that the Lord will have spoken to them through Moses.

Then Moses spoke to Aaron, and to Eleazar and Ithamar his sons, who had remained.

"Take," he told them, "the grain offering that is left over from the Lord's offerings made by fire, and eat it like unleavened bread beside the altar, for it is most holy."

You shall eat it in a holy place; because it is the portion assigned to you and your sons of the offerings made by fire to the Lord; for it was commanded me thus.

You shall also eat the breast of the twirl, and the shoulder of the lifting up in a clean place, you, your sons, and your daughters with you; for these things were given to you from the peace offerings of the children of Israel, for your portion, and for that of your children.

They shall bring the shoulder of the offering, and the breast of the waving, with the offerings made by fire, [which are] the fats to wave as a wave offering before the Lord; and [this] shall belong to you and to your sons with you by a perpetual ordinance, as the Lord [has] commanded.

Now Moses was searching diligently for the goat [of the sin offering], but behold, it had been burned, and [Moses] became very angry with Eleazar and Ithamar, the sons of Aaron who had remained, [and] said to them:

Why did you not eat the sin offering in a holy place? For it is most holy, since it was given to you to bear the iniquity of the congregation, to make atonement for them before the Lord.

Behold, her blood was not brought into the Sanctuary; therefore do not fail to eat it in the holy place, as I commanded.

Then Aaron answered Moses, "Look, today they have offered their sin offering and their burnt offering before the Lord, and these things have happened to me. If I had eaten the sin offering today, would that have pleased the Lord?"

When Moses heard this, he approved it.

And the Lord spoke to Moses and Aaron, and said to them:

Speak to the children of Israel, and tell them: These are the animals from among all the beasts that are on the earth that you may eat.

You may eat from among the four-footed animals of all those that have a divided hoof, and that have a cloven foot, and that chew the cud.

But you shall not eat those that chew the cud [only], or that have a divided hoof [only]; like the camel, for it chews the cud well, but it does not have a divided hoof; it is unclean for you.

And the rabbit; for it chews the cud well, but it does not have a divided hoof; it is unclean for you.

And the hare; for it chews the cud well, but it does not have a divided hoof; it is unclean for you.

And the pig; for it has a divided hoof and a cloven foot, but it does not chew the cud; it is unclean for you.

You shall not eat any of their flesh, nor even touch their dead flesh; they are unclean for you.

You may eat of this from among all that is in the waters; you may eat of all that has fins and scales in the waters, whether in the sea or in the rivers.

But you shall not eat anything that does not have fins and scales, whether in the sea or in the rivers, whether reptiles of the waters or any living thing that is in the waters; it shall be an abomination to you.

Therefore, they shall be an abomination to you; you shall not eat their flesh, and you shall consider their dead flesh an abomination.

Therefore, everything that lives in the waters, and that does not have fins and scales, shall be an abomination to you.

And of the birds you shall regard as abominable, they shall not be eaten, they shall be an abomination to you: the eagle, the osprey, the falcon.

The Vulture, and the Kite, according to their species;

Every crow according to its kind;

The Tawny Owl, the Hound, the Cuckoo, and the Sparrowhawk, according to their species;

The Owl, the Diver, the Owl,

The Swan, the Cormorant, the Pelican,

The Stork, and the Heron, according to their species, and the Hoopoe, and the Bat.

And every flying reptile that walks on four feet will be an abomination to you.

But you may eat any flying reptile that walks on four feet, having legs on its feet, to jump with them on the ground.

These are the ones you will eat: the Arbe according to its kind, the Solham according to its kind, the Hargol according to its kind, and the Kabag according to its kind.

But every other flying reptile that has four feet will be an abomination to you.

You will therefore be defiled by these beasts; whoever touches their dead flesh will be defiled until evening.

Anyone who carries any of their dead flesh must wash their clothes and be unclean until evening.

Every animal that has a divided hoof, but does not have a cloven foot, and does not chew the cud, will be unclean to you; whoever touches them will be unclean.

And everything that walks on its paws, among all the animals that walk on four feet, will be unclean to you; whoever touches their dead flesh will be unclean until evening.

And whoever carries any of their dead flesh must wash their clothes and be unclean until evening; they are unclean for you.

This too shall be defiled among the reptiles that creep on the earth, the weasel, the mouse, and the tortoise, according to their kinds.

The Hedgehog, the Crocodile, the Lizard, the Slug, and the Mole.

These things are unclean among reptiles for you; whoever touches them when they are dead will be unclean until evening.

Therefore, anything on which they fall when they are dead will be soiled, whether wooden vessel, clothing, skin, or bag, whatever vessel is used to do anything, will be put in the water, and will be soiled until evening, then it will be clean.

But if any of it falls into any earthen vessel, everything in it will be defiled, and you will break the vessel.

And any meat that is eaten, on which water has been brought, will be defiled; any drink that is drunk from any vessel will be defiled.

And if any of their dead flesh falls on anything, it will be defiled; the oven and the hearth will be destroyed; they are defiled, and they will be defiled to you.

However, the fountain, or the well, [or any other] body of water shall be clean.

Therefore, whoever touches their dead flesh shall be defiled.

And if any of their dead flesh has fallen on any seed that is sown, it will be clean.

But if water had been put on the seed, and some of their dead flesh falls on it, it will be defiled to you.

And when one of the animals that are for your meat dies [of itself], whoever touches its dead flesh will be unclean until evening.

And whoever eats any of its dead flesh must wash their clothes and be unclean until evening. Likewise, whoever carries the dead flesh of this animal must wash their clothes and be unclean until evening.

Therefore, every reptile that crawls on the earth shall be an abomination to you, [and] they shall not eat.

You shall not eat anything that crawls on its breast, nor anything that walks on four feet, nor anything that has many feet among all the reptiles that creep on the earth; for they are an abomination.

Do not make yourselves abominable by any creeping thing that crawls, and do not defile yourselves by them: for you would be defiled by them.

Because I am the Lord your God. You shall therefore consecrate yourselves, and be holy, for I am holy; so that you shall not defile yourselves with any creeping thing that creeps on the earth.

For I am the Lord, who brought you up out of the land of Egypt, to be your God, and to be holy; for I am holy.

This is the Law concerning beasts, and birds, and every living creature that moves in the waters, and every living thing that creeps on the earth.

In order to distinguish between the soiled and the clean, and between the animals that may be eaten and those that may not be eaten.

The Lord also spoke to Moses, saying:

Speak to the children of Israel, and say to them: If a woman, after conceiving, gives birth to a male child, she shall be unclean for seven days; she shall be unclean as in the days of her months.

And on the eighth day the flesh of the child's foreskin shall be circumcised.

And she shall remain thirty-three days in the blood of her purification, and shall not touch any holy thing, nor come to the Sanctuary, until the days of her purification are completed.

If she gives birth to a daughter, she will be unclean for two weeks, as in the days of her months, and she will remain sixty-six days in the blood of her purification.

After the time of her purification is completed, whether for son or for daughter, she shall present to the Priest a one-year-old lamb as a burnt offering, and a young pigeon, or a turtledove, [as a sin offering], at the entrance of the Tabernacle of Meeting.

The priest shall offer these things before the Lord and make atonement for her, and she shall be cleansed of the flow of her blood. This is the law for her who gives birth to a son or a daughter.

If she cannot afford a lamb, then she shall take two turtledoves, or two young pigeons, one for a burnt offering and the other [as a sin offering], and the priest shall make atonement for her, and she shall be cleansed.

The Lord also spoke to Moses and Aaron, saying:

The man who has in the skin of his flesh a tumor, or scab, or sore, and it appears in the skin of his flesh like a leprous sore, he shall be brought to Aaron the Priest, or to one of his sons the Priests.

And the priest shall look at the sore that is in the skin of his flesh, and if the hair of the sore has turned white, and if the sore, to see it, is deeper than the skin of his flesh, it is a sore of leprosy; the priest shall therefore look at him, and judge him unclean.

But if the sore is white in the skin of his flesh, and if it is not seen to be deeper than the skin, and if his hair has not turned white, the Priest shall shut up for seven days the one who has the sore.

And the priest shall look at it on the seventh day, and if he sees that the sore has stopped, and that it has not grown in the skin, the priest shall have it shut up for another seven days.

And the priest shall look at it again on the seventh day, and if he sees that the sore has cleared up, and that it has not spread on the skin, the priest shall pronounce him clean; it is scabies, and he shall wash his clothes, and be clean.

But if the scabies has grown in any way on the skin, after he has been examined by the Priest to be found clean, and after he has been examined a second time by the Priest;

The priest shall look at him again, and if he sees that the scab has grown on the skin, the priest shall judge him unclean; it is leprosy.

When a man has a leprous disease, he shall be brought to the priest.

Whoever looks at it; and if he sees that there is a white swelling in the skin, and that the hair has turned white, and that raw flesh appears in the swelling;

It is a chronic leprosy in the skin of his flesh, and the priest will judge him unclean, and will not confine him; for he is judged unclean.

If the leprosy breaks out severely in the skin, and covers all the skin of the sore, from the head of this man to his feet, as much as the Priest can see;

The priest shall look at him, and if he sees that the leprosy has covered all the flesh of that man, then he shall judge [the one who has] the sore clean; the sore has become completely white; he is clean.

But the day live flesh is seen, it will be defiled.

Then the priest will look at the living flesh and judge it unclean; the living flesh is unclean; it is leprosy.

But if the living flesh changes and becomes white, then he will come to the Priest.

And the priest shall look at him, and if he sees that the wound has turned white, the priest shall judge clean [the one who has] the wound: he is clean.

If the flesh has had an ulcer in its skin, let it be healed;

And if in the place where the ulcer was there is a white swelling, or a white-reddish pustule, it shall be examined by the Priest.

The priest will therefore look at it, and if he sees that it is deeper than the skin, and that its hair has turned white, then the priest will consider it unclean; it is a leprous sore, the leprosy has broken out in the ulcer.

If the priest looking at it sees that the hair has not turned white, and that it is not deeper than the skin, but that it has withdrawn, the priest will have it shut up for seven days.

But if it has spread in any way on the skin, the Priest will consider him unclean; it is a plague.

But if the bud stops in its place, not growing, it is a burning ulcer; thus the priest will judge it clear.

If the flesh has in its skin an inflammation of fire, and the living flesh of the inflamed part is a reddish-white pimple, or white [only];

The priest will look at it, and if he sees that the hair has turned white in the sore, and that it is deeper than the skin, it is leprosy, it has formed a sore in the inflammation; the priest will therefore consider it unclean; it is a leprous disease.

But if the priest, looking at it, sees that there is no white hair on the pimple, and that it is not lower than the skin, and that it has receded, the priest will have it shut up for seven days.

Then the priest shall look at it on the seventh day, and if the sore has grown in any way into the skin, the priest shall judge it unclean; it is a leprous disease.

But if the sore stops in its place without growing on the skin, and has withdrawn, it is a swelling of inflammation; and the Priest will judge it clear; it is a fire of inflammation.

If a man or woman has a wound on their head, or [a man] on his beard,

The priest shall look at the sore, and if it is seen to be deeper than the skin, having in it fine yellowish hair, the priest shall judge it to be unclean; it is ringworm, it is leprosy of the head, or of the beard.

And if the priest, looking at the ringworm lesion, sees that it is not deeper than the skin, and has no black hair in it, the priest shall shut up for seven days [the one who has] the ringworm lesion;

And on the seventh day the Priest shall look at the sore, and if he sees that the ringworm has not spread, and that it has no yellowish hair, and that, seeing the ringworm, it is not deeper than the skin;

[The one who has the ringworm plague] shall shave, but he shall not shave [the place] of the ringworm, and the priest shall shut up for seven more days [the one who has] the ringworm.

Then the priest shall look at the mite on the seventh day, and if he sees that the mite has not spread on the skin, and that it is not deeper than the skin, the priest shall judge him clean, and that man shall wash his clothes, and be clean.

But if the ringworm grows in any way on the skin, after it has been cleansed,

The priest shall look at it; and if he sees that the tinea has grown in the skin, the priest shall not look for any yellowish hair; it is unclean.

But if he sees that the ringworm has stopped, and that black hair has appeared there, the ringworm is cured; he is clean, and the Priest will judge him clean.

And if the man or woman has pimples on their skin, pimples, [I say], that are white,

The Priest will look at them, and if he sees that in the skin of their flesh there are raised and white spots, it is a white spot that has appeared in the skin; therefore he is clean.

If a man has a bald head, he is bald, [and yet] he is clean-cut.

But if his head is bald on the side of his face, he is bald, [and nevertheless] he is clean-shaven.

And if in the bald or hairless area there is a white-reddish sore, it is leprosy that has budded in its bald or hairless area.

And the Priest shall look at it, and if he sees that the swelling of the wound is white-reddish in its bald or hairless part, like leprosy of the skin of the flesh;

The man is a leper, he is unclean; the priest will not fail to judge him unclean: his plague is in his head.

But the leper in whom the plague will have his clothes torn, and his head uncovered, and he will be covered on the upper lip, and he will cry out: the defiled one, the defiled one.

For as long as he has this affliction, he shall be considered unclean; he is unclean, he shall remain alone, and his dwelling shall be outside the camp.

And if the garment is infected with the leprous disease, whether it is a woolen garment or a linen garment;

Or in the warp, or in the weft of flax, or wool, or also in the skin, or in any fur work whatsoever.

And if this sore is green, or reddish in the garment, or in the skin, or in the warp, or in the weft, or in any part of the skin, it shall be a leprous sore, and it shall be shown to the Priest.

And the priest shall look at the wound, and shall shut up for seven days [the one who has] the wound.

And on the seventh day he shall examine the plague; if the plague is raw in the garment, or in the warp, or in the weft, or in the skin, or in any fur work, the plague is a gnawing leprosy, it is unclean.

He shall therefore burn the garment, the warp or weft of wool or linen, and all things of skin, which have this disease; for it is a consuming leprosy, it shall be burned with fire.

But if the priest looks, and sees that the wound is not in the garment, or in the warp, or in the weft, or in anything else that is made of skin;

The priest shall command that the thing where the wound is be washed, and he shall have it shut up for seven more days.

But if the priest, after the wound has been washed, looks at it, and sees that the wound has not changed its color, and that it has not increased, it is unclean, you shall burn it with fire; it is a dent in its underside, or in its peeling place.

If the priest looks and sees that the wound has cleared up after he has been washed, he shall tear it from the garment, or from the skin, or from the warp, or from the weft.

But if it still appears on the garment, or in the warp, or in the weft, or in anything made of skin, it is leprosy that has broken out; you shall burn with fire the thing where the sore is.

But if you have washed the garment, or the warp, or the weft, or any part of the skin, and the sore has gone away, it shall be washed again; then it shall be clean.

Such is the law of the plague of leprosy on the garment of wool, or linen, or in the warp, or in the weft, or in any thing of skin, to judge it clean, or soiled.

The Lord also spoke to Moses, saying:

This is the law for the leper for the day of purification; he shall be brought to the priest.

And the priest shall go out outside the camp and look at him; and if he sees that the leprous disease is healed in the leper,

The priest shall command that two live, clean sparrows be taken for the one to be cleansed, along with cedar wood, scarlet yarn, and hyssop.

And the Priest shall command that the throat of one of the sparrows on an earthen vessel on running water be cut.

Then he shall take the live sparrow, the cedar wood, the scarlet yarn, and the hyssop; and he shall dip [all these things] with the live sparrow, in the blood of the other sparrow that was slaughtered over running water.

And he will sprinkle it seven times on the one who is to be cleansed of leprosy, and will cleanse him, and he will let the sparrow go live through the fields.

And the one who is to be cleansed shall wash his clothes, and shave off all his hair, and bathe himself in water, and he shall be clean, and then he shall enter the camp, but he shall remain seven days outside his tent.

And on the seventh day he shall shave off all his hair, his head, his beard, the eyebrows of his eyes, all his hair; he shall shave off, [I say], all his hair; then he shall wash his clothes and his flesh, and he shall be clean.

And on the eighth day he will take two lambs without blemish, and a ewe a year old without blemish, and three-tenths of fine flour for making cake, kneaded with oil, and a log of oil.

And the priest who performs the purification shall present the one who is to be cleansed, and these things, before the Lord at the entrance of the Tabernacle of Meeting.

Then the priest shall take one of the lambs and offer it as a guilt offering with a log of oil, and wave these things before the Lord as a wave offering.

And he shall slaughter the lamb in the place where the sin offering is slaughtered, and the burnt offering in the holy place; for the guilt offering belongs to the priest, as does the sin offering; it is most holy.

And the priest shall take some of the blood [of the offering for] the guilt offering, and put it on the soft part of the right ear of him who is to be cleansed, and on the thumb of his right hand, and on the big toe of his right foot.

Then the Priest shall take some oil from the log, and pour it into the palm of his left hand.

And the priest shall dip the finger of his right hand into the oil that is in his left palm, and sprinkle the oil with his finger seven times before the Lord.

And of the rest of the oil that is in his palm, the Priest shall put on the soft part of the right ear of the one to be cleansed, and on the thumb of his right hand, and on the big toe of his right foot, on the blood taken from the guilt offering.

But what remains of the oil on the palm of the priest, he shall put on the head of the one who is to be cleansed; and thus the priest shall make atonement for him before the Lord.

Then the priest shall offer [the offering for] sin, and make atonement for him who is to be cleansed of his defilement; then he shall slaughter the burnt offering.

And the priest shall offer the burnt offering and the grain offering on the altar, and make atonement for him who is to be cleansed; and he shall be clean.

But if he is poor, and does not have the means to provide these things, he shall take a lamb as a waved offering for the guilt, in order to make propitiation for himself, and a tenth of fine flour mixed with oil, for the cake, with a log of oil;

And two turtledoves or two young pigeons, as he can provide, one of which will be for the sin offering, and the other for the burnt offering.

And on the eighth day of his purification he shall bring them to the Priest at the entrance of the Tabernacle of Meeting, before the Lord.

And the priest shall receive the lamb [of the offering for] the guilt offering, and the log of oil, and wave them before the Lord as a wave offering.

And he shall slaughter the lamb of the [offering for the] guilt offering; then the priest shall take some of the blood of the [offering for the] guilt offering, and put it on the soft part of the right ear of him who is to be cleansed, and on the thumb of his right hand, and on the big toe of his right foot.

Then the Priest shall pour oil into the palm of his left hand.

And with the finger of his right hand he shall sprinkle some of the oil that is in his left hand, seven times before the Lord.

And he shall put some of the oil that is in his palm on the soft part of the right ear of the one to be cleansed, and on the thumb of his right hand, and on the big toe of his right foot, on the place of the blood taken from the guilt offering.

Then he shall put the rest of the oil that is in his palm on the head of the one who is to be cleansed, in order to make atonement for him before the Lord.

Then he will sacrifice one of the turtledoves, or one of the squabs, depending on what he has been able to provide.

Of what he has been able to provide, one portion will be for the sin offering, and the other for the burnt offering, along with the grain offering; thus the priest will make atonement before the Lord for the one who must be cleansed.

This is the law of one who has a leprous disease and cannot afford to cleanse himself.

Then the Lord spoke to Moses and Aaron, saying:

When you have entered the land of Canaan, which I am giving you as a possession, if I send a plague of leprosy into any house in the land that you possess;

The one to whom the house belongs shall come and inform the priest, saying, "I see something like a plague in my house."

Then the priest shall command that the house be emptied before he enters to look at the plague; so that nothing in the house may be defiled, then the priest shall enter to see the house.

And he will look at the wound, and if he sees that the wound which is on the walls of the house has some dimples tending towards green, or reddish, which are, to see them, more sunken than the wall;

The priest shall go out of the house to the entrance and shut up the house for seven days.

And on the seventh day the priest shall return, and look at it, and if he sees that the plague has spread to the walls of the house;

Then he will order that the stones, which are the source of the plague, be removed and thrown outside the city into a defiled place.

He will also scrape off the plaster from the inside of the house all around, and the plaster that has been scraped off will be thrown outside the city into a defiled place.

Then we will take other stones, and bring them to the place of the [first] stones, and we will take other mortar to plaster the house.

But if the wound returns and breaks out again in the house, after the stones have been removed, and after it has been scraped and replastered,

The priest shall enter and look at it, and if he sees that the plague has increased in the house, it is a spreading leprosy in the house; it is defiled.

So they will demolish the house, its stones, and its timbers, with all its mortar, and transport them outside the city to a defiled place.

And if anyone has entered the house while the priest had it shut up, he will be unclean until evening.

And whoever sleeps in this house shall wash his clothes; and whoever eats in this house shall wash his clothes.

But when the priest enters and sees that the plague has not grown in that house, after he has plastered it over again, he shall judge the house clean, for its plague is healed.

Then he will take to purify the house two sparrows, cedar wood, scarlet yarn, and hyssop.

And he will cut the throat of one of the sparrows on a ship of earth, on running water.

And he shall take the cedar wood, the hyssop, the scarlet yarn, and the live sparrow, and dip all of them in the blood of the slaughtered sparrow and in fresh water; then he shall sprinkle it in the house seven times.

He shall therefore purify the house with the blood of the sparrow, and with the living water, and with the live sparrow, the cedar wood, the hyssop, and the scarlet.

Then he will let the live sparrow go outside the city into the fields, and he will make atonement for the house; and it will be clean.

Such is the law of every leprous and tinea plague;

Of leprosy of clothing, and of house;

Of tumor, scabies, and pimple;

To teach when something is defiled and when it is clean; such is the law of leprosy.

The Lord also spoke to Moses and Aaron, saying:

Speak to the children of Israel, and tell them: Every man whose flesh flows will be defiled because of his discharge.

And such will be the defilement of her discharge; when her flesh gives free rein to her discharge, or when her flesh restrains her discharge, that is her defilement. Any bed on which the one who falls will be defiled; and anything on which he will sit will be defiled.

Anyone who touches his bed must wash their clothes and bathe themselves with water; they will be unclean until evening.

And whoever sits on anything on which the one who falls down has sat, shall wash his clothes and bathe himself in water; and he shall be unclean until evening.

And whoever touches the flesh of the one who flows out must wash his clothes and bathe himself in water; and he will be unclean until evening.

And if the one who is filthy spits on the one who is clean, the one who was clean must wash his clothes and bathe himself in water, and he will be unclean until evening.

Any mount that the one who follows him will have mounted will be defiled.

Anyone who touches anything that has been under him will be unclean until evening; and anyone who carries any of it must wash his clothes and bathe himself in water; and he will be unclean until evening.

Anyone who has been touched by the fluid that flows out, without washing their hands in water, must wash their clothes and bathe themselves in water; and they will be unclean until evening.

And the earthen vessel that the one who is drifting down will be broken; but every wooden vessel will be washed in water.

But when the one who is flowing is purified from his discharge, he shall count seven days for his purification, he shall wash his clothes and his flesh with living water, and thus he shall be clean.

And on the eighth day he shall take for himself two turtledoves, or two young pigeons, and he shall come before the Lord at the entrance of the Tabernacle of Meeting, and give them to the Priest.

And the priest shall sacrifice them, one as a sin offering and the other as a burnt offering; thus the priest shall make atonement for him before the Lord because of his discharge.

The man from whom the seed came forth shall also wash all his flesh in water, and he shall be unclean until evening.

And every garment, or every skin on which there is semen, shall be washed in water, and shall be unclean until evening.

Even the woman with whom such a man has company shall bathe in water [with her husband], and they shall be unclean until evening.

And when the woman's period begins, with her flow of blood in her body, she shall be separated for seven days; [and] whoever touches her shall be unclean until evening. Everything on which she lay during her separation will be unclean; and everything on which she sat will be unclean.

Anyone who touches that woman's bed must wash their clothes and bathe themselves in water, and they will be unclean until evening.

And whoever touches anything on which she has sat must wash their clothes and bathe in water; they will be unclean until evening.

Even if the thing [that someone touched was] on the bed, or on something on which she was sitting, when someone touches that thing, he will be unclean until evening.

And if anyone has lived with her so that her flowers are on him, he will be unclean for seven days; and every bed on which he sleeps will be unclean.

If a woman has a discharge of blood for several days, but not for the duration of her menstrual cycle; or if she has a discharge for longer than the duration of her menstrual cycle, for the entire duration of her discharge, she shall be unclean as at the time of her separation.

Every bed on which she lies throughout her discharge will be like the bed of her separation; and everything on which she sits will be unclean, as [for] the uncleanness of her separation.

And whoever has touched these things shall wash his clothes and bathe himself in water; and he shall be unclean until evening.

But if it is purified of its discharge, it will count seven days, and after that it will be clean.

And on the eighth day she shall take two turtledoves or two young pigeons, and bring them to the Priest at the entrance of the Tabernacle of Meeting.

And the priest shall offer one as a sin offering and the other as a burnt offering; thus the priest shall make atonement for her before the Lord, because of the flow of her uncleanness.

Thus you will separate the children of Israel from their defilements, and they will not die because of their defilements, by defiling my pavilion which is in the midst of them.

Such is the law of the one who comes from, and of the one from whom the seed comes, who defiles him.

This is also the law of the woman who is sick during her months, and of every person who is in childbirth, and who has her discharge, whether male or female, and of the one who lies with the one who is defiled.

Now the Lord spoke to Moses after the death of Aaron's two sons, when they approached the presence of the Lord and died.

The Lord then said to Moses, "Speak to Aaron your brother, and [tell him] not to enter at any time into the Sanctuary within the veil before the mercy seat, which is on the Ark, lest he die; for I will appear in a cloud above the mercy seat."

Aaron shall enter the Sanctuary in this way, [after he has offered] a calf from the flock for the sin offering, and a ram for the burnt offering.

He will put on the holy linen shirt, having put the linen undergarments on his flesh, and he will gird himself with the linen baldric, and wear the linen tiara, which are the holy garments, and he will put them on after washing his flesh with water.

And he shall take from the congregation of the children of Israel two young male goats [as a sin offering], and one ram for a burnt offering.

Then Aaron shall offer his calf [as an offering] for sin, and make atonement for himself and for his house.

And he shall take the two goats, and present them before the Lord, at the entrance of the Tabernacle of Meeting.

Then Aaron shall cast lots for the two goats; one lot for the Lord, and one lot for [the goat that is to be] Hazazel.

And Aaron shall offer the goat on which the lot fell to the Lord, and sacrifice it [as a sin offering].

But the goat on which the lot fell to be Hazazel shall be presented alive before the Lord to make atonement by him, and it shall be sent into the wilderness to be Hazazel.

Aaron shall therefore offer his calf [as a sin offering], and make atonement for himself and for his house, he shall slaughter, [I say], his calf which is the sin offering.

Then he shall take a censer full of the burning coals of the fire that is on the altar before the Lord, and his palms full of powdered incense, and he shall bring it from the house in the veil;

And he shall put the incense on the fire before the Lord, so that the cloud of incense may cover the mercy seat that is over the Testimony, so that he shall not die.

He shall also take some of the calf's blood, and sprinkle it with his finger in front of the Mercy Seat towards the East; he shall, [I say], sprinkle some of that blood seven times with his finger before the Mercy Seat.

He shall also slaughter the people's goat, which is [the sin offering], and bring its blood inside the veil, and do with its blood as he did with the blood of the calf, sprinkling it toward the mercy seat; on the front of the mercy seat.

And he will make atonement for the Sanctuary, [cleansing it] of the defilements of the children of Israel, and of their iniquities, according to all their sins; and he will do the same thing to the Tabernacle of meeting, which remains with them in the midst of their defilements.

And no one shall be at the Tabernacle of Meeting when the Priest enters it to make atonement in the Sanctuary, until he comes out, when he makes atonement for himself and for his house, and for all the congregation of Israel.

Then he shall go out to the altar that is before the Lord, and make atonement for him; and taking some of the blood of the calf and of the blood of the goat, he shall put it on the horns of the altar all around.

And he shall sprinkle the blood seven times with his finger on the altar, and cleanse it and consecrate it from the defilements of the children of Israel.

And when he has finished making atonement for the Sanctuary, and for the Tabernacle of Meeting, and for the altar, then he shall offer the live goat.

And Aaron, laying both his hands on the head of the live goat, shall confess over it all the iniquities of the children of Israel, and all their faults, according to all their sins, and he shall put them on the head of the goat, and send it into the wilderness by a man appointed for it.

And the goat will bear all their iniquities in an uninhabitable land, and then this man will let the goat go through the desert.

And Aaron shall return to the Tabernacle of Meeting, and shall take off the linen garments which he had put on when he entered the Sanctuary, and lay them there.

He shall also wash his flesh with water in the holy place, and put on his garments; then he shall go out and offer his burnt offering and the burnt offering of the people, and make atonement for himself and for the people.

He will also burn the fat of the sin offering on the altar.

And the one who led the goat to be Hazazel shall wash its clothes and its flesh with water; then he shall return to the camp.

But the calf and the goat that were offered [as a sin offering], and whose blood was brought into the sanctuary to make atonement, shall be brought out of the camp, and their skin, their flesh, and their dung shall be burned with fire.

And the one who burned them shall wash his clothes and his flesh with water; after which he shall return to the camp.

And this shall be for you a perpetual ordinance. On the tenth day of the seventh month you shall afflict yourselves, and you shall do no work, whether you are a native of the land or a foreigner residing among you.

For on that day [the Priest] will make atonement for you, to cleanse you; [thus] you will be cleansed of all your sins before the Lord.

It shall therefore be a Sabbath of rest for you, and you shall afflict your souls; it is a perpetual ordinance.

And the priest who is anointed and consecrated to serve as priest in place of his father shall make atonement, having put on the linen garments, which are the holy garments.

And he will make atonement for the holy sanctuary, for the tabernacle of meeting, and for the altar, and for the priests, and for all the people of the assembly.

This therefore shall be for you a perpetual ordinance, to make atonement for the children of Israel for all their sins once a year; and it was done as the Lord had commanded Moses.

The Lord also spoke to Moses, saying:

Speak to Aaron and his sons, and to all the children of Israel, and say to them: This is what the Lord has commanded, saying:

Anyone from the house of Israel who slaughters an ox, or a lamb, or a goat in the camp, or who slaughters it outside the camp,

And if he did not bring it to the entrance of the Tabernacle of Meeting to make an offering to the Lord before the pavilion of the Lord, the blood shall be charged against that man; he has shed blood; therefore that man shall be cut off from among his people.

So that the children of Israel may bring their sacrifices, which they sacrifice in the fields, and bring them, I say, to the Lord, to the entrance of the Tabernacle of Meeting, to the Priest, and offer them as peace offerings to the Lord;
And let the Priest sprinkle the blood on the altar of the Lord at the entrance of the Tabernacle of Meeting, and burn the fat of it as a pleasing aroma to the Lord;
And let them no longer offer their sacrifices to the devils, with whom they have debauched. Let this be a perpetual ordinance for them throughout their lives.
Therefore, you shall say to them: Whoever, whether from the children of Israel or from the strangers who sojourn among them, has offered a burnt offering or a sacrifice,

And whoever does not bring him to the entrance of the Tabernacle of Meeting, to sacrifice him to the Lord, that man shall be cut off from among his peoples.
Whoever of the family of Israel or of the foreigners who sojourn among them eats any blood, I will set my face against that person who has eaten blood, and I will cut him off from among his people.

For the life of the flesh is in the blood; therefore I have commanded you that it be put on the altar to make atonement for your souls; for it is the blood which will make atonement for the soul.

That is why I said to the children of Israel: Let none of you eat blood; let not even the stranger who sojourns among you eat blood.

And whoever of the children of Israel, or of the strangers who sojourn among them, hunts down a wild animal or a bird that is eaten, he shall shed their blood and cover it with dust.

For the life of every flesh is in its blood; that is its life; therefore I said to the children of Israel, You shall not eat the blood of any flesh; for the life of every flesh is its blood; whoever eats it shall be cut off.

And anyone who has eaten the flesh of any animal that died of itself, or was torn apart [by wild beasts], whether born in the land or a foreigner, shall wash his clothes and bathe himself with water, and he shall be unclean until evening; then he shall be clean.

If he does not wash [his clothes] and his flesh, he will bear his iniquity.

The Lord spoke again to Moses, saying:

Speak to the children of Israel, and say to them: I am the Lord your God.

You shall not do as they do in the land of Egypt where you lived, nor as they do in the land of Canaan, to which I am bringing you; and you shall not live according to their statutes.

[But] you shall do according to my statutes, and you shall keep my ordinances to walk in them; I am the Lord your God.

You shall therefore keep my statutes and my ordinances, which [if] a man performs, he shall live by them; I am the Lord.

Let no one approach his close relative to uncover her nakedness; I am the Lord.

You shall not uncover the nakedness of your father, nor the nakedness of your mother; she is your mother, you shall not uncover her nakedness.

You shall not uncover the nakedness of your father's wife; it is your father's nakedness.

You shall not uncover the nakedness of your sister, the daughter of your father, or the daughter of your mother, whether born in the house or outside [the house]; you shall not uncover their nakedness.

As for the nakedness of your son's daughter, or your daughter's daughter, you shall not uncover their nakedness, for they are your nakedness.

You shall not uncover the nakedness of the daughter of your father's wife, born of your father; she is your sister.

You shall not uncover the nakedness of your father's sister; she is a close relative of your father.

You shall not uncover the nakedness of your mother's sister, for she is a close relative of your mother.

You shall not uncover the nakedness of your father's brother, [and] you shall not approach his wife; she is your aunt.

You shall not uncover the nakedness of your daughter-in-law; she is your son's wife, you shall not uncover her nakedness.

You shall not uncover the nakedness of your brother's wife; it is your brother's nakedness.

You shall not uncover the nakedness of a woman and her daughter, nor take her son's daughter or her daughter's daughter to uncover their nakedness; they are your close relatives. It is an enormous thing.

You shall not take a wife with her sister to grieve her by uncovering her nakedness during her lifetime.

You shall not approach a woman during her period of uncleanness, to uncover her nakedness.

You shall not have the company of your neighbor's wife, defiling yourself with her.

You shall not give any of your children to be sacrificed [by fire] before Molech, and you shall not profane the Name of your God; I am the Lord.

You shall not have sexual relations with a male; it is an abomination.

You shall not approach any animal to defile yourself with it; and a woman shall not prostitute herself to an animal; it is a perversion.

Do not defile yourselves in any of these things; for the nations that I am going to drive out from before you have defiled themselves in all these things;

Whose land has been defiled, and I am going to punish it for its iniquity, and the land will vomit out its inhabitants.

But as for you, you shall keep my ordinances and my judgments, and you shall not do any of these abominations, whether he who was born in the land or the stranger who sojourns among you.

For the people of that land who were before you committed all these abominations, and the land became defiled.

Would not the earth vomit you out if you defiled it, as it vomited out the people who were on it before you?

For whoever does any of these abominations, those who do them shall be cut off from among their people.

You shall therefore keep what I have commanded you to keep, and you shall not practice any of these abominable customs which were practiced before you, and you shall not defile yourselves with them; I am the Lord your God.

The Lord also spoke to Moses, saying:

Speak to all the congregation of the children of Israel, and say to them: Be holy, for I, the Lord your God, am holy.

You shall each fear your mother and your father, and you shall keep my Sabbaths; I am the Lord your God.

You shall not turn to idols, nor make for yourselves any molten gods; I am the Lord your God.

If you offer a peace offering to the Lord, you will offer it willingly.

It shall be eaten on the day that you sacrifice it, and the next day, but what remains until the third day shall be burned with fire.

If it is eaten on the third day, it will be an abomination; it will not be accepted.

Whoever eats of it will bear his iniquity, for he will have profaned the holy thing of the Lord, and that person shall be cut off from among his people.

And when you reap the harvest of your land, you shall not finish reaping the ends of your field, nor shall you glean what remains of your harvest.

And you shall not pluck the gleanings of your vineyard, nor gather the [fallen] grapes of your vineyard, but you shall leave them for the poor and the foreigner; I am the Lord your God.

You shall not steal, nor deny [the thing to which it belongs]; and none of you shall lie to his neighbor.

You shall not swear falsely by my name, for you would be profaning the name of your God; I am the Lord.

You shall not oppress your neighbor, nor rob him. The wages of your hired servant shall not remain with you until morning.

You shall not curse the deaf, nor put a stumbling block before the blind, but you shall fear your God; I am the Lord.

You shall not do injustice in judgment; you shall not show partiality to the poor, nor honor the person of the great, [but] you shall judge your neighbor justly.

You shall not go about slandering among your people. You shall not rise up against the blood of your neighbor; I am the Lord.

You shall not hate your brother in your heart. You shall carefully admonish your neighbor, and you shall not suffer sin in him.

You shall not take vengeance, nor bear it against the children of your people; but you shall love your neighbor as yourself; I am the Lord.

You shall keep my ordinances. You shall not breed your animals with other animals of different kinds. You shall not sow your field with different kinds of grain, and you shall not wear clothing of different kinds, such as wool and linen.

If a man has lain with a woman who was a slave and was betrothed to a man, and she has not been redeemed and given her freedom, they shall have the whip; [but] they shall not put them to death; because she had not been set free.

And the man shall bring his [offering for the] guilt offering to the Lord at the entrance of the Tabernacle of Meeting, [namely] a ram for the guilt offering.

And the priest will make atonement for him before the Lord with the ram of the guilt offering, because of the sin he has committed; and the sin he has committed will be forgiven him.

And when you have entered the land, and you have planted some fruit tree there, you shall consider its fruit as its foreskin; it shall be uncircumcised for three years, and no one shall eat of it.

But in the fourth year all its fruit will be holy, to praise the Lord.

And in the fifth year you shall eat its fruit, so that it may multiply its yield for you; I am the Lord your God.

You shall not eat anything with the blood. You shall not practice divination, nor shall you predict the weather.

You shall not shave the corners of your head in a circle, nor shall you spoil the corners of your beard.

You shall not make any cuts in your flesh for the dead, nor print any markings on yourselves; I am the Lord.

You shall not defile your daughter by prostituting her to make her commit fornication; lest the earth be defiled by fornication, and be filled with abomination.

You shall keep my Sabbaths, and you shall reverence my Sanctuary; I am the Lord.

Do not turn away after those who have the spirit of Python, nor after diviners; do not seek to defile yourselves by them; I am the Lord your God.

Rise up before the gray-haired, and honor the person of the aged, and fear your God; I am the Lord.

If any foreigner lives in your country, you shall not harm him.

The foreigner residing among you shall be to you as one born among you, and you shall love him as yourself; for you were foreigners in the land of Egypt. I am the Lord your God.

You shall not do injustice in judgment, nor in rule, nor in weight, nor in measure. You shall have just scales, just weighing stones, a just ephah, and a just hin. I am the Lord your God who brought you out of the land of Egypt.

Therefore, keep all my ordinances and my judgments, and do them; I am the Lord.

The Lord also spoke to Moses, saying:

You shall say to the children of Israel: Whoever of the children of Israel, or of the strangers who dwell in Israel, gives offspring to Molech, shall be put to death; the people of the land shall stone him to death.

And I will set my face against such a man, and I will cut him off from among his people, because he has given some of his offspring to Molech, to defile my Sanctuary, and to profane my Holiness Name.

If the people of the land close their eyes in any way whatsoever, so as not to see when that man has given offspring to Molech, [and] not to put him to death;

I will set my face against that man and against his family, and I will cut him off from among my people, with all those who revel like him, reveling after Molech.

As for the person who turns away after those who have the spirit of Python, and after the soothsayers, by frivolous pursuits with them, I will set my face against that person, and I will cut him off from among his people.

Therefore, consecrate yourselves and be holy, for I am the Lord your God.

Keep my commandments and do them; I am the Lord who sanctifies you.

When someone curses his father or his mother, he shall be put to death; he has cursed his father or his mother, his blood is upon him.

As for the man who has committed adultery with another man's wife, because he has committed adultery with his neighbor's wife, both the adulterous man and woman shall be put to death.

The man who has lain with his father's wife has uncovered his father's nakedness; both of them shall be put to death; their blood is upon them.

And when a man has lain with his daughter-in-law, they shall both be put to death; they have committed adultery; their blood is upon them.

When a man has had the company of a male, they have both committed an abominable act; they shall be put to death, their blood is upon them.

And when a man takes a wife and her mother, that is an abomination; he shall be burned with fire with them, so that there may be no abomination among you.

The man who has defiled himself with an animal shall be punished with death; you shall also kill the animal.

And when any woman has prostituted herself to any animal, you shall kill that woman and the animal; they shall be put to death, their blood is upon them.

When a man takes his sister, the daughter of his father or the daughter of his mother, and sees her nakedness, and she sees the nakedness of that man, it is an outrageous thing; therefore they shall be cut off in the presence of the children of their people; he has uncovered the nakedness of his sister, he shall bear his iniquity.

When a man has sexual relations with a woman during her menstrual period, and has uncovered her nakedness, uncovering her flow, and she has uncovered the flow of her blood; both of them shall be cut off from among their people.

You shall not uncover the nakedness of your mother's sister, nor of your father's sister; because he will have uncovered her flesh, they will both bear their iniquity.

And when a man has lain with his aunt, he has uncovered his uncle's nakedness; they will bear their sin, and they will die without leaving children.

And when a man takes his brother's wife, he is a disgrace; he has uncovered his brother's shame; they shall have no children.

Therefore keep all my ordinances and my judgments, and observe them; and the land into which I am bringing you to dwell will not vomit you out.

You shall not follow the ordinances of the nations that I am going to drive out from before you; for they did all these things, and I abhorred them. And I told you, "You will possess their land, and I will give it to you to possess; it is a land flowing with milk and honey." I am the Lord your God, who set you apart from the other peoples.

Therefore, separate the clean animal from the unclean, the clean bird from the unclean, and do not defile yourselves by eating unclean animals and birds, or anything that creeps on the earth, or anything that I have forbidden you to be unclean.

You shall therefore be holy to me; for I, the Lord, am holy, and I have separated you from the [other] peoples, that you should be mine.

When a man or woman has a spirit of divination, or is a soothsayer, they shall be put to death; they shall be stoned to death; their blood shall be upon them.

The Lord also said to Moses, "Speak to the priests, the sons of Aaron, and say to them, 'None of them shall defile himself among his peoples for a dead man.'"

Otherwise, for his close relative, who is closely related to him, [namely] for his mother, for his father, for his son, for his daughter, and for his brother.

And as for his virgin sister, who is close to him and has not had a husband, he will defile himself for her.

If he is married, he shall not defile himself [for his wife] among his people by becoming unclean.

They shall not pluck the hair from their heads to make them bald, nor shall they shave off the corners of their beards, nor make any cuts in their flesh.

They shall be holy to their God, and they shall not profane the name of their God; for they offer the sacrifices of the Lord made by fire, which is the meat of their God; therefore they shall be most holy.

They shall not take a fornicating or dishonored woman; nor shall they take a woman divorced from her husband; for they are holy to their God.

Therefore, you shall make each of them holy, because they offer the meat of your God.

They shall be holy to you, for I am holy, I the Lord who sanctifies you.

If the priest's daughter defiles herself by committing fornication, she defiles her father; therefore, let her be burned with fire.

And the high priest among his brothers, on whose head the anointing oil has been poured, and who has consecrated himself to wear the [holy] garments, shall not uncover his head, nor tear his garments.

He shall not go near any dead person; he shall not defile himself for his father or his mother;

He shall not leave the sanctuary, nor defile the sanctuary of his God, for the crown and the anointing oil of his God are upon him. I am the Lord.

He will marry a virgin.

He will not take a widow, nor a divorced woman, nor a dishonored woman, nor a harlot; but he will take as his wife a virgin from among his people.

He shall not defile his descendants among his peoples; for I am the Lord who sanctifies him.

The Lord also spoke to Moses, saying:

Speak to Aaron, and say to him: If any of your descendants in their lifetimes has any defect [in their body], they shall not approach to offer the meat of their God.

For no man in whom there is any defect will approach it; [namely] the blind man, or the lame man, or the snub-nosed man, or the man who has any superfluity in his members.

Or the man who has some fracture in his feet, or in his hands.

Or who will be hunchbacked, or thin, or who will have some suffusion in the eye, or who will have a dry scab, or an ulcerous scab, or who will be broken.

Therefore, no man of the descendants of Aaron the Priest in whom there is any defect shall approach to offer the offerings made by fire to the Lord; if there is a defect in him, he shall not approach to offer the meat of his God.

He will be able to eat the meat of his God, [namely] most holy things; and holy things.

But he shall not enter towards the veil, nor shall he approach the altar, because there is a defect in him, lest he defile my Sanctuaries; for I am the Lord who sanctifies them.

So Moses spoke these words to Aaron and his sons, and to all the children of Israel.

Then the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

Tell Aaron and his sons, when they are to abstain from the holy things of the children of Israel, so that they do not profane my holy name in the things which they themselves sanctify me; I am the Lord;

Therefore, tell them: Any man of all your descendants throughout your generations who, being defiled, approaches the holy things which the children of Israel have sanctified to the Lord, that person shall be cut off from my presence; I am the Lord.

Any man of Aaron's descendants who is leprous, or who has a discharge, shall not eat of the holy things until he is cleansed; and also he who has touched any unclean man for having touched a dead man, and he who has a flow of semen.

And whoever has touched any reptile by which he is defiled, or any man by which he is defiled, whatever defilement may be in him.

The person who has touched these things will be unclean until evening, and shall not eat of the holy things, unless he has washed his flesh with water.

Then she will be clean after sunset; and she will eat holy things; for that is her food.

He shall not eat the flesh of any animal that died of itself, or was torn apart by [wild beasts], to defile himself by it; I am the Lord.

Therefore, let them keep what I have commanded them to keep, and let them not sin concerning the [holy] meat, lest they die by defiling it; I am the Lord who sanctifies them.

No foreigner shall eat of the holy things; neither shall a foreigner staying with the priest, nor a hired worker, eat of the holy things.

But when the priest buys someone with his money, he will eat of him; likewise, anyone born in his house; these will eat of his meat.

But if the priest's daughter is married to a foreigner, she shall not eat of the holy things presented as a raised offering.

But if the priest's daughter is a widow, or divorced, and has no children, having returned to her father's house, as [she lived there in] her youth, she shall eat of her father's meat; but no stranger shall eat of it.

If anyone ignorant eats of a holy thing, he shall add a fifth on top of it, and give it to the priest with the holy thing.

And they shall not defile the sanctified things of the children of Israel, which they have offered to the Lord.

But they will bear the penalty for their sin, because they have eaten of their holy things; for I am the Lord who sanctifies them.

The Lord spoke again to Moses, saying:

Speak to Aaron and his sons, and to all the children of Israel, and say to them: Whoever of the house of Israel, or of the strangers who are in Israel, shall offer his offering, according to all his vows, or according to all his freewill offerings, which are offered as a burnt offering to the Lord;

He will willingly offer a male without blemish, from among the cows, [or] from among the sheep, or from among the goats.

You will not offer anything that has any defect, because it would not be acceptable to you.

If a man offers to the Lord a peace offering in fulfillment of any vow, or in making any freewill offering, whether of oxen or sheep, that which is without blemish shall be accepted; there shall be no blemish.

You shall not offer to the Lord anything that is blind, or broken, or mutilated, or that has a leopard, or a dry scab, or a scab of ulceration, and you shall not give any of it for the sacrifice that is made by fire on the altar to the Lord.

You may well make a voluntary offering of an ox, or a sheep, or a goat having some superfluity, or some defect in its members, but they will not be accepted for the vow.

You shall not offer to the Lord, nor sacrifice in your land [an animal] whose genitals are bruised, or broken, or torn out, or cut.

You shall not take any of these things from the hand of a foreigner to offer as food to your God, for the corruption that is in them is a blemish in them; they shall not be acceptable to you.

The Lord spoke again to Moses, saying:

When a calf, or a lamb, or a goat is born, and has been with its mother for seven days, from the eighth day and the following days, it shall be acceptable for the offering of the sacrifice which is made by fire to the Lord.

You shall not slaughter in the same day a cow, or a sheep, or a goat, with its young.

When you offer a sacrifice of thanksgiving to the Lord, you shall offer it willingly.

It shall be eaten that same day, [and] you shall not reserve any of it until morning; I am the Lord.

Therefore keep my commandments and do them; I am the Lord.

And do not profane my holy name, for I will be sanctified among the children of Israel; I am the Lord who sanctifies you;

And who brought you out of the land of Egypt to be God to you; I am the Lord.

The Lord also spoke to Moses, saying:

Speak to the children of Israel, and say to them: The appointed feasts of the Lord, which you shall proclaim, shall be holy convocations; and these are my appointed feasts.

Six days you shall work, but on the seventh day, which is the Sabbath of rest, there shall be a holy convocation; you shall do no work, [for] it is a Sabbath to the Lord in all your dwellings.

And these are the solemn feasts of the Lord, which shall be holy convocations, which you shall proclaim at their season.

In the first month, on the fourteenth day of the month between the two vespers, is the Passover to the Lord.

And the fifteenth day of that same month is the solemn feast of unleavened bread to the Lord; you shall eat unleavened bread for seven days.

On the first day you will have a holy convocation; you will do no servile work.

But you shall present to the Lord for seven days an offering made by fire, [and] on the seventh day there shall be a holy convocation; you shall do no servile work.

The Lord also spoke to Moses, saying:

Speak to the children of Israel, and say to them: When you have entered the land that I am giving you, and have reaped its harvest, then you shall bring to the priest a handful of the first fruits of your harvest.

And he shall wave that handful before the Lord, so that it may be acceptable to you; the priest shall wave it on the day after the Sabbath.

And on the day that you whirl this handle, you shall sacrifice a lamb without blemish, and one year old, as a burnt offering to the Lord.

And the cake of this burnt offering shall be of two-tenths of fine flour, mixed with oil, as an offering made by fire to the Lord as a pleasing aroma; and its sprinkling with wine shall be a fourth of a Hin.

And you shall eat neither bread, nor roasted grain, nor grain on the cob, until that day itself, even until you have brought the offering to your God; it is a perpetual ordinance throughout your generations, in all your dwellings. You shall also count from the day after the Sabbath, [namely] from the day that you brought the handful that is to be twirled, seven whole weeks. Therefore you shall count fifty days to the day after the seventh week; and you shall offer to the Lord a new cake.

You shall bring from your dwellings two loaves of bread, to make a wave offering, they shall be of two-tenths, and of fine flour, kneaded with leaven; they are the first fruits to the Lord.

You shall also offer with this bread seven lambs without blemish, and one year old, and one calf taken from the flock, and two rams, which shall be a burnt offering to the Lord, with their cakes, and their sprinklings, sacrifices made by fire as a pleasing aroma to the Lord.

You shall also sacrifice a young male goat [as a sin offering], and two lambs a year old as a peace offering.

And the priest shall wave them with the bread of the first fruits, and with the two lambs, as a wave offering before the Lord; they shall be holy to the Lord for the priest.

Therefore, on that same day you shall proclaim a holy convocation; you shall do no servile work; it is a perpetual ordinance in all your dwellings throughout your generations.

And when you reap the harvest of your land, you shall not finish reaping the edges of your field, nor shall you glean the ears of grain that remain of your harvest, but you shall leave them for the poor and for the foreigner; I am the Lord your God.

The Lord also spoke to Moses, saying:

Speak to the children of Israel, and say to them: In the seventh month, on the first day of the month, there shall be a rest for you, a memorial of gladness, and a holy convocation.

You shall do no servile work, and you shall offer to the Lord an offering made by fire.

The Lord also spoke to Moses, saying:

Likewise, in that same month, which is the seventh, the tenth day shall be the day of atonement; you shall have a holy convocation, and you shall afflict your souls, and you shall offer to the Lord sacrifices made by fire.

On that day you shall do no work, for it is the day of atonement, to make atonement for you before the Lord your God.

For anyone who is not afflicted on that day will be cut off from among his people.

And anyone who has done any work on that day, I will destroy that person from among his people.

You shall not do any work; this is a perpetual ordinance throughout your generations in all your dwellings.

This is a Sabbath of rest for you: therefore you shall afflict your souls. On the ninth day of the month, at evening, from one evening until the next, you shall observe your rest.

The Lord also spoke to Moses, saying:

Speak to the children of Israel, and say to them: On the fifteenth day of this seventh month [shall be] the solemn Feast of Tabernacles for seven days, to the Lord.

On the first day there will be a holy convocation; you will do no servile work.

For seven days you shall present an offering made by fire to the Lord; and on the eighth day you shall have a holy convocation, and you shall present an offering made by fire to the Lord; it is a solemn assembly; you shall do no servile work.

These are the solemn feasts of the Lord, which you shall proclaim as holy convocations, to offer to the Lord offerings made by fire; [namely] a burnt offering, a cake, a sacrifice, and a sprinkling; each of these things in its day;

Besides the Sabbaths of the Lord, and besides your gifts, and besides all your vows, and besides all the freewill offerings that you present to the Lord.

And also on the fifteenth day of the seventh month, when you have gathered the yield of the land, you shall celebrate the solemn feast of the Lord for seven days. The first day shall be a day of rest; the eighth day also shall be a day of rest.

And on the first day you shall take the fruit of a beautiful tree, branches of palm trees, and boughs of leafy trees, and willows of the brook, and you shall rejoice before the Lord your God for seven days.

And you shall celebrate this solemn feast to the Lord for seven days in the year; it is a perpetual ordinance throughout your generations; you shall celebrate it in the seventh month.

You shall dwell in tents for seven days; all those born among the Israelites shall dwell in tents.

So that your descendants may know that I made the children of Israel dwell in tents when I brought them out of the land of Egypt; I am the Lord your God.

Thus Moses declared to the children of Israel the solemn feasts of the Lord.

The Lord also spoke to Moses, saying:

Command the children of Israel to bring you virgin oil for the lamp, so that the lamps may burn continually.

Aaron shall arrange them before the Lord continually, from evening until morning, outside the veil of the Testimony in the Tabernacle of Meeting; it is a perpetual ordinance throughout your generations.

He will arrange, [I say], continually the lamps on the pure lampstand before the Lord.

You will also take fine flour, and you will bake twelve cakes, each cake will be two-tenths of an ounce.

And you shall present them before the Lord in two rows on the pure Table, six in each row.

And you shall put pure incense on each row, which shall be a memorial for the bread; it is an offering made by fire to the Lord.

They shall be arranged continually before the Lord every Sabbath day, on behalf of the children of Israel; it is a perpetual covenant.

And they shall belong to Aaron and his sons, who shall eat them in a holy place; for they shall be a most holy thing to him among the offerings of the Lord made by fire; it is a perpetual ordinance.

Now the son of an Israelite woman, who was also the son of an Egyptian man, went out among the children of Israel, and this son of the Israelite woman and an Israelite man quarreled in the camp.

And the son of the Israelite woman blasphemed the name [of the Lord] and cursed him; and they brought him to Moses. Now his mother's name was Shelomith, daughter of Dibri, of the Tribe of Dan.

And they warned him until they had been told [what they should do with it] according to the word of the Lord.

And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

Take out of the camp the one who has cursed; and let all those who heard him lay their hands on his head, and let the whole assembly stone him.

And speak to the children of Israel, and say to them: Whoever curses his God will bear his sin.

And whoever blasphemes the Name of the Lord shall be put to death; the whole assembly shall not fail to stone him, they shall put to death both the foreigner and the one born in the land who blasphemes the Name [of the Lord].

Anyone who strikes a person to death will also be punished with death.

He who strikes an animal to death shall give it life for life.

And when anyone has wronged his neighbor, he shall be treated as he has wronged.

Fracture for fracture, eye for eye, tooth for tooth; according to the evil he has done to a man, so it will be done to him.

Whoever strikes an animal to death shall give it back; but whoever strikes a man to death shall be put to death.

You shall render the same judgment. [You shall treat] the foreigner as one who was born in the land; for I am the Lord your God.

So Moses spoke to the children of Israel, who brought out of the camp the one who had cursed, and stoned him to death; thus the children of Israel did as the Lord had commanded Moses.

The Lord also spoke to Moses on Mount Sinai, saying:

Speak to the children of Israel, and say to them: When you enter the land that I am giving you, the land shall rest; it shall be a Sabbath to the Lord.

For six years you shall sow your field, and for six years you shall prune your vineyard, and gather its produce.

But in the seventh year there shall be a Sabbath of rest for the land; it shall be a Sabbath to the Lord; you shall not sow your field, nor prune your vineyard.

You shall not reap what grows of itself from what falls when you reap, and you shall not gather the grapes of your unpruned vine; [it] shall be the year of the earth's rest.

But what comes from the ground in the Sabbath year shall be food for you, and for your male servant, and for your female servant, and for your hired worker, and for your foreigner who dwells with you;

And to your beasts, and to the animals that are in your land; all its produce shall be for eating.

You shall also count seven weeks of years, [namely] seven times seven years, and the days of seven weeks shall make forty-nine years.

Then you shall sound the trumpet of jubilation on the tenth day of the seventh month, the day, [I say], of atonement, you shall sound the trumpet throughout all your land.

And you shall sanctify the fiftieth year, and proclaim liberty throughout the land to all its inhabitants; it shall be a Jubilee year for you, and you shall return each to his possession, and each to his family.

This fiftieth year shall be a Jubilee for you; you shall not sow or reap what the earth produces of itself, nor shall you gather the fruit of the unpruned vine.

For it is the [year] of Jubilee, it shall be holy to you; you shall eat what the fields produce in that year.

In this Jubilee year, you will each return to your possessions.

And if you sell anything to your neighbor, or if you buy [something] from your neighbor, let none of you trample on his brother.

But you will buy from your neighbor according to the number of years after the Jubilee. Likewise, sales will be made to you according to the number of years of the report.

According to the number of years there are, you will increase the price of what you buy; and according to the number of years there are fewer, you will decrease it; for the number of harvests is being sold to you.

Therefore, let none of you trample on his neighbor, but fear your God, for I am the Lord your God.

Do according to my ordinances, keep my judgments, observe them, and you will surely dwell in the land.

And the earth will give you its fruits, you will eat of them, you will be satisfied, and you will surely dwell in it.

And if you say, "What shall we eat in the seventh year if we do not sow and do not gather in our harvest?"

I will command my blessing [to be poured out] upon you in the sixth year, and [the land] will yield for three years.

Then you shall sow in the eighth year, and you shall eat of the produce of the past until the ninth year; until its produce comes, you shall eat that of the past. The land will not be sold outright, for the land is mine; and you are strangers and foreigners in my land.

Therefore, throughout the land you possess, you shall grant the right of redemption for the land.

If your brother becomes poor and sells something of what he owns, the one who has the right of redemption, namely his nearest relative, shall come and redeem the thing sold by his brother.

If this man has no one who has the right of redemption, and he has found enough of himself to redeem what he has sold;

He will count the years of the time he made the sale, and he will restore the surplus to the man to whom he made it, and thus he will return to his possession.

But if he has not found enough to give back, the thing which he has sold shall be in the hand of the one which bought it, until the year of Jubilee; then [the buyer] shall go out of it in the Jubilee, and [the seller] shall return to his possession.

And if someone has sold a house to live in within any walled city, he shall have the right of redemption until the end of the year of his sale; his right of redemption shall be for one year.

But if it is not redeemed within the year, the house which is in the walled city shall remain with the purchaser absolutely and for all his years; he shall not leave it in the Jubilee.

But the houses in the villages, which are not surrounded by walls, shall be considered as land; the seller shall have the right of redemption, and [the buyer] shall go out at the Jubilee.

And as for the cities of the Levites, the Levites shall have a perpetual right of redemption of the houses in the cities of their possession.

And he who has bought [some house] from the Levites, shall go out at the Jubilee of the house sold, which is in the city of his possession; for the houses of the cities of the Levites [are] their possession among the children of Israel.

But the field in the suburbs of their cities will not be sold; for it is their perpetual possession.

When your brother becomes poor and stretches out his trembling hands to you, you shall support him, [you shall support] also the foreigner and the sojourner, so that he may live with you.

You shall not take from him usury or interest, but you shall fear your God; and your brother shall live with you.

You shall not give him your money at interest, nor give him your food in excess.

I am the Lord your God, who brought you out of the land of Egypt to give you the land of Canaan, to be God to you.

Likewise, when your brother becomes poor among you and sells himself to you, you shall not treat him as one treats slaves.

[But] he will be with you as a mercenary and a foreigner, and he will serve you until the year of Jubilee.

Then he will leave your house with his children, he will return to his family, and come back into the possession of his fathers.

For they are my servants, because I brought them out of the land of Egypt; therefore they shall not be sold as slaves are sold.

You shall not rule over him strictly, but you shall fear your God.

And as for your male and female slaves who will be yours, they shall be from among the nations that are around you; you shall buy the male and female slave from them.

You will also buy some from among the children of the foreigners who reside with you, even from their families who will be among you, whom they will have begotten in your country, and you will possess them.

You will have them as an inheritance to leave to your children after you, so that they may inherit their possession, [and] you will use them in perpetuity; but as for your brothers, the children of Israel, no one will rule strictly over his brother. And when the foreigner or the sojourner who is with you has become rich, and your brother who is with him has become so poor that he has sold himself to the foreigner, [or] to the sojourner who is with you, or to someone from the descendants of the family of the foreigner.

After he has sold himself, he will have a right of redemption, [and] one of his brothers will redeem him.

Either his uncle, or his uncle's son, or some other close relative of his blood from among those of his family, will redeem him; or he himself, if he finds the means, will redeem himself.

And he shall count with his buyer from the year that he sold himself to him, until the year of Jubilee; so that the money of the price for which he sold himself shall be counted according to the number of years; the time that he has served shall be counted to him as the days of a mercenary.

If there are still several years left, he will return the price of his purchase for those [years], according to the price for which it was purchased.

And if there are few years left until the Jubilee year, he will take account of it, and return the price of his purchase in proportion to the years he has served.

He will have been with him like a hired servant who hires himself out year after year; [and this stranger] will not rule over him strictly in your presence.

If he is not redeemed by someone of these means, he and his sons will leave in the Jubilee year.

For the children of Israel are my servants; they are my servants whom I brought out of the land of Egypt; I am the Lord your God.

You shall not make for yourselves idols, nor erect for yourselves any carved image or statue, nor set up any painted stone in your land to bow down to them; for I am the Lord your God.

You shall keep my Sabbaths, and reverence my Sanctuary; I am the Lord.

If you walk in my ordinances, and if you keep my commandments and do them;

I will give you the rains you need in their season, the earth will yield its fruit, and the trees of the field will yield their fruit.

The threshing of the grain will reach the vintage in your land, and the vintage will reach the sowing; you will eat your bread, you will be satisfied, and you will live securely in your own land.

I will give peace to the land, you will sleep without anyone terrifying you; I will make it so that there are no more bad beasts in the land; and the sword will not pass through your land.

But you will pursue your enemies, and they will fall by the sword before you.

Five of you will chase a hundred, and a hundred will chase ten thousand; and your enemies will fall by the sword before you.

And I will turn to you, I will make you increase and multiply, and I will establish my covenant with you.

You will also eat very old provisions, and you will remove the old to make room for the new.

I will even put my Tabernacle in your midst, and my soul will not be unwilling to have you.

But I will walk among you, I will be your God, and you will be my people.

I am the Lord your God, who brought you out of the land of Egypt, so that you would not be their slaves; I broke the sticks of your yoke, and made you walk with your heads held high.

But if you do not listen to me and do not do all these commandments;

And that you reject my ordinances, and that your soul has my judgments against its will, so as not to do all my commandments, and to break my covenant;

Therefore I will do this to you; I will pour out upon you terror, languor, and scorching heat, which will consume your eyes and torment your soul; and you will sow your seed in vain, for your enemies will eat it.

And I will set my face against you; you will be defeated before your enemies; those who hate you will rule over you; and you will flee, with no one pursuing you.

If you still do not listen to me after these things, I will add seven times as much to punish you for your sins.

And I will cut down the pride of your power, and I will make the heavens to you like iron, and your earth like bronze.

Your strength will be wasted in vain, for your land will not yield its produce, and the trees of the earth will not bear their fruit.

If you march against me and refuse to listen to me, I will add seven times as many plagues to you, according to your sins.

I will send wild beasts against you, which will deprive you of your children, kill your livestock, and reduce you to a small number, and your roads will be deserted.

If you do not amend yourselves after these things [to convert] to me, but walk contrary to me;

I will also march against you, and I will strike you seven times as much, according to your sins.

And I will bring upon you the sword that will avenge my covenant; and when you retreat to your cities I will send plagues among you, and you will be delivered into the hands of the enemy.

When I have broken your staff of bread, ten women will bake your bread in an oven, and will give you back your bread by weight; you will eat of it, and you will not be satisfied.

But if you still do not listen to me, but instead march against me,

I will march against you in my fury, and I will punish you seven times as much according to your sins;

And you will eat the flesh of your sons, and you will also eat the flesh of your daughters.

I will destroy your high places; I will ruin your Tabernacles; I will put your carcasses on the carcasses of your dung gods, and my soul will hate you.

I will also reduce your cities to a desert, I will ruin your sanctuaries, and I will not smell your pleasant fragrance.

And I will devastate the country so much that your enemies, who will become accustomed to it, will be astonished.

And I will scatter you among the nations, and I will draw out the sword after you, and your land will be desolate, and your cities a desert.

Then the land will delight in its Sabbaths, all the time that it is desolate; and when you are in the land of your enemies the land will rest, and delight in its Sabbaths.

As long as it remains desolate, it will rest; whereas it did not rest in your Sabbaths, when you lived there.

And as for those who remain of you, I will make their hearts cowardly when they are in the land of their enemies, so that the sound of a rustling leaf will pursue them, and they will flee as if fleeing from the sword, and they will fall without anyone pursuing them.

And they will clash with one another as if fleeing from the sword, with no one pursuing them; and you will not be able to stand against your enemies.

And you will perish among the nations, and the land of your enemies will consume you.

And those who remain of you will be consumed because of their iniquities in the land of your enemies; and they will also be consumed because of the iniquities of their fathers, with them.

Then they will confess their iniquity, and the iniquity of their fathers, according to the sins they have committed against me; and also according to how they have walked headlong against me.

I will also have marched against them, and I will have brought them into the land of their enemies; and then their uncircumcised heart will be humbled, and they will then receive with submission [the punishment for] their iniquity.

And then I will remember my covenant with Jacob, and my covenant with Isaac, and I will also remember my covenant with Abraham, and I will remember the land.

When the earth has been abandoned by them, and has taken pleasure in its Sabbaths, having remained desolate because of them; when they have received with submission [the punishment for] their iniquity, because they have rejected my judgments, and their soul has despised my ordinances.

[I will remember, I say], when they are in the land of their enemies; because I have not rejected them, nor hated them to consume them entirely, and to break the covenant that I made with them; for I [am] the Lord their God.

And I will remember for their benefit the covenant made with their ancestors, whom I brought out of the land of Egypt, in the sight of the nations, to be their God; I am the Lord.

These are the ordinances, the judgments, and the laws that the Lord established between himself and the children of Israel on Mount Sinai, through Moses.

The Lord also spoke to Moses, saying:

Speak to the children of Israel, and say to them: When anyone makes a great vow, the people [dedicated] to the Lord [will be placed] according to your valuation.

And the valuation that you shall make of a male, from the age of twenty years until the age of sixty years, shall be the price of fifty shekels of silver, according to the shekel of the Sanctuary.

But if it is a woman, then your estimate will be thirty shekels.

If it is a person from the age of five to the age of twenty, then the valuation you shall make of a male shall be twenty shekels; and as for the female, [the valuation shall be] ten shekels.

And if it is a person from the age of one month to the age of five years, the valuation you shall make of a male shall be five shekels of silver; and the valuation you shall make of a female shall be three shekels of silver.

And when it is a person aged sixty years and above, if it is a male, your valuation shall be fifteen shekels; and if it is a female, [the valuation shall be] ten shekels.

And if he is poorer than your estimate, he shall present himself before the Priest who will make an estimate of him, and the Priest will make an estimate according to what the one who made the vow can provide.

And if it is from one of these kinds of animals that is offered to the Lord, then everything that has been given to the Lord of this kind [of animals] shall be holy. He will not exchange it, nor put another in its place, a good one for a bad one, or a bad one for a good one: and if he puts in any way that it is one beast for another beast, both that one and the one that has been put in its place shall be holy.

And if it is from a defiled animal, which is not offered to the Lord, he shall present the animal before the priest,

Who will make the assessment, whether it is good or bad; and it shall be done so, according to the assessment you, Priest, have made.

But if he wants to buy it back in some way, he will add a fifth on top of your estimate.

And when someone has consecrated his house to be holy to the Lord, the priest shall assess it as to whether it is good or bad; [and] the assessment that the priest has made shall stand.

But if the one who consecrated it wants to redeem his house, he shall add on top of it a fifth of the money of your appraisal, and it shall remain his.

And if the man consecrates to the Lord [some part] of the field of his possession, your valuation shall be according to what is sown there; the Homer of barley seed shall be valued at fifty shekels of silver.

If he has sanctified his field since the Jubilee year, we will adhere to your assessment.

But if he consecrates his field after the Jubilee, the Priest will account to him for the money according to the number of years remaining until the year of Jubilee, and this will be deducted from your valuation.

And if the one who consecrated the field wants to redeem it in any way, he shall add on top of it a fifth of the money of your valuation, and it shall remain his.

But if he does not redeem the field, and the field is sold to another man, he will no longer be able to redeem it.

And that field, having passed the Jubilee, shall be holy to the Lord, like a forbidden field; its possession shall belong to the Priest.

And if he consecrates to the Lord a field that he has bought, not being one of his own fields;

The priest shall count to him the sum of your valuation until the year of Jubilee, and he shall give your valuation on that day, [so that it may be] a holy thing to the Lord.

But in the Jubilee year the field will return to the one from whom he had bought it, [and] to whom was the possession of the land.

And any estimate you make shall be according to the shekel of the Sanctuary; the shekel is twenty obols.

However, no one may sanctify the firstborn of the animals, for it belongs to the Lord by right of primogeniture, whether of cow, sheep, or goat, it is the Lord's.

But if it is from unclean animals, he will redeem it according to your valuation, and he will add a fifth to your valuation; and if it is not redeemed, it will be sold according to your valuation.

But no forbidden thing that anyone has devoted to the Lord as a forbidden thing, whether man, beast, or field of his possession, shall be sold or redeemed; all forbidden things shall be most holy to the Lord.

No forbidden thing, devoted by prohibition among men, will be redeemed, but will be put to death.

Now every tithe of the land, both of the grain of the land and of the fruit of the trees, is the Lord's; it is holy to the Lord.

But if anyone wants to redeem in any way anything from his tithe, he shall add a fifth on top of it.

But every tithe of cattle, sheep and goats, [that is] everything that passes under the rod, which is the tenth, shall be consecrated to the Lord.

one will not choose the good or the bad, and one will not put another in its place; that if one does it in any way whatsoever, the changed beast and the other which has been put in its place, will be sanctified, [and] will not be redeemed.

These are the commandments that the Lord gave to Moses on Mount Sinai, for the children of Israel.

Now the Lord spoke to Moses in the wilderness of Sinai, in the tabernacle of meeting, on the first day of the second month of the second year, after they had come out of the land of Egypt, saying:

Take a census of the whole congregation of the children of Israel, according to their families, according to their fathers' houses, counting them name by name, [namely] all the males, each one by head;

From the age of twenty and above, all those in Israel who are able to go to war, you and Aaron shall count them according to their troops.

And there shall be with you a man from each Tribe, [namely] the one who [is] the head of his father's house.

And these are the names of the men who will assist you. For the Tribe of Reuben, Elizur son of Zedeur.

For that of Simeon, Selumiel, son of Tsurisaddai.

For that of Judah, Nahasson, son of Hamminadab.

For that of Issachar, Nathanael, son of Tsuhar.

For that of Zebulun, Eliab, son of Helon.

of the children of Joseph, for the Tribe of Ephraim, Elisamah, son of Hammiud; for that of Manasseh, Gamaliel son of Pedatsur.

For the Tribe of Benjamin, Abidan, son of Guidhoni.

For that of Dan, Ahihezer, son of Hammisaddai.

For that of Aser, Paghiel, son of Hocran.

For that of Gad, Eliasaph, son of Dehuel.

For that of Naphtali, Ahirah, son of Henan.

These were the ones who were called to hold the assembly; they were the leaders of the Tribes of their fathers, heads of the thousands of Israel.

Then Moses and Aaron took those men who had been named;

And they summoned the whole assembly on the first day of the second month, and registered each one according to their families, [and] according to the house of their fathers, registering them, name by name, from the age of twenty years, and above, each one by head;

As the Lord had commanded Moses, he counted them in the desert of Sinai.

The children of Reuben, the firstborn of Israel, according to their generations, their families, and the houses of their fathers, were counted by name, [and] by head, [namely] all the males twenty years old and above, all who could go to war;

Those, [I say], of the Tribe of Reuben, who were counted, were forty-six thousand five hundred.

The children of Simeon, according to their generations, their families, and their fathers' houses, those who were numbered by name and by head, [namely] all the males twenty years old and above, all those who could go to war;

Those, [I say], of the Tribe of Simeon, who were counted, were fifty-nine thousand three hundred.

Children of Gad, according to their generations, their families, and the houses of their fathers, each numbered by name, from the age of twenty years and above, all those who could go to war;

Those, [I say], of the Tribe of Gad, who were counted, were forty-five thousand six hundred and fifty.

Children of Judah, according to their generations, their families, and the houses of their fathers, numbered each by name, from the age of twenty years, and above, all those who could go to war;

Those, [I say], of the Tribe of Judah, who were counted, were seventy-four thousand six hundred.

The children of Issachar, according to their generations, their families, and the houses of their fathers, each one numbered by name, from the age of twenty years, and above, all those who could go to war;

Those, [I say], of the Tribe of Issachar, who were counted, were fifty-four thousand four hundred.

The children of Zebulun, according to their generations, their families, and the houses of their fathers, numbered each by name, from the age of twenty years, and above, all those who could go to war;

Those, [I say], of the Tribe of Zebulun, who were counted, were fifty-seven thousand four hundred.

As for the children of Joseph; the children of Ephraim, according to their generations, their families, and the houses of their fathers, numbered each by name, from the age of twenty years, and above, all those who could go to war;

Those, [I say], of the Tribe of Ephraim, who were counted, were forty thousand five hundred.

The children of Manasseh, according to their generations, their families, and the houses of their fathers, each numbered by name, from the age of twenty years, and above, all those who could go to war;

Those, [I say], of the Tribe of Manasseh, who were counted, were thirty-two thousand two hundred.

The children of Benjamin, according to their generations, their families, and their fathers' houses, each numbered by name, from the age of twenty years and above, all those who could go to war;

Those, [I say], of the Tribe of Benjamin, who were counted, were thirty-five thousand four hundred.

The children of Dan, according to their generations, their families, and their fathers' houses, each one numbered by name, from the age of twenty years, and above, all those who could go to war;

Those, [I say], of the Tribe of Dan, who were counted, were sixty-two thousand seven hundred.

The children of Asher, according to their generations, their families, and the houses of their fathers, each numbered by name, from the age of twenty years and above, all those who could go to war;

Those, [I say], of the Tribe of Asher, who were counted, were forty-one thousand five hundred.

[From] the children of Naphtali, according to their generations, their families, and the houses of their fathers, numbered each by name, from the age of twenty years, and above, all those who could go to war;

Those, [I say], of the Tribe of Naphtali, who were counted, were fifty-three thousand four hundred.

These were the ones Moses and Aaron counted, the twelve leaders of Israel being there, one for each house of their fathers.

Thus all those of the children of Israel, who were counted according to their fathers' houses, from the age of twenty years, and above, all those among the Israelites who could go to war;

All those, [I said], whose numbers were counted, were six hundred and three thousand five hundred and fifty.

But the Levites were not numbered with them, according to the tribe of their fathers.

For the Lord had spoken to Moses, saying:

You shall not take a census of the Tribe of Levi, nor shall you collect their number along with the [other] children of Israel.

But you shall give the Levites charge of the tent of the Testimony, and of all its furnishings, and of all that belongs to it; they shall carry the tent, and of all its furnishings; they shall serve there, and encamp around the tent.

And when the pavilion departs, the Levites shall take it down, and when the pavilion is encamped, they shall set it up. If any stranger approaches, he shall be put to death.

Now the children of Israel shall encamp each in his own quarter, and each under his own banner, according to his troops.

But the Levites shall encamp around the Pavilion of the Testimony, so that there may be no indignation upon the assembly of the children of Israel, and they shall take charge of the Pavilion of the Testimony.

And the children of Israel did according to all the things which the Lord had commanded Moses; they did it thus.

And the Lord spoke to Moses and Aaron, saying:

The children of Israel shall camp each under his banner, with the standards of their fathers' houses, all around the Tabernacle of meeting, opposite it.

Those of the banner of the company of Judah will encamp directly towards the Levant, by his troops; and Nahshon, son of Hamminadab, will be the leader of the children of Judah;

And his troop, and those counted, seventy-four thousand six hundred.

Near him will encamp the Tribe of Issachar, and Nathanael, son of Zuhar, will be the leader of the children of Issachar;

And his troop, and those counted, fifty-four thousand four hundred.
[Then] the Tribe of Zebulun, and Eliab, son of Helon, shall be the leader of the children of Zebulun;
And his troop, and those counted, fifty-seven thousand four hundred.
All those counted from the company of Judah, one hundred and eighty-six thousand four hundred by their troops, will depart first.
The banner of Reuben's company, by his troops, will be towards the South, and Elizur, son of Sedeur, will be the leader of Reuben's children;
And his troop, and those counted, forty-six thousand five hundred.
Near him will encamp the Tribe of Simeon, and Selumiel, son of Tsurisaddai, will be the leader of the children of Simeon;
And his troop, and those counted, fifty-nine thousand three hundred.
Then the Tribe of Gad, and Eliasaph, son of Reuel, shall be the leader of the children of Gad;
And his troop, and those counted, forty-five thousand six hundred and fifty.
All those counted in Ruben's company, one hundred and fifty-one thousand four hundred and fifty, by their troops, will depart second.
Then the Tabernacle of meeting will depart with the company of Levites, in the midst of the companies that will depart according to where they are encamped, each in its place, according to their banners.
The banner of the company of Ephraim, by its troops, will be towards the West; and Elisamah, son of Hammiud, will be the leader of the children of Ephraim;
And his troop, and those counted, forty thousand five hundred.
Near him [will encamp] the Tribe of Manasseh, and Gamaliel, son of Pedazur, will be the leader of the children of Manasseh;
And his troop, and those counted, thirty-two thousand two hundred.
Then the Tribe of Benjamin, and Abidan, son of Gideoni, shall be the leader of the children of Benjamin;
And his troop, and those counted, thirty-five thousand four hundred.
All those counted from the company of Ephraim, one hundred and eight thousand and one hundred, by their troops, will depart third.
The banner of the company of Dan, by its troops, will be towards the North, and Ahihezer, son of Hammisadaai, will be the leader of the children of Dan;
And his troop, and those counted, sixty-two thousand seven hundred.
Near him will encamp the Tribe of Asher, and Pagiel, son of Hocran, will be the leader of the children of Asher;
And his troop, and those counted, forty-one thousand five hundred.
Then the Tribe of Naphtali, and Ahirah, son of Henan, shall be the leader of the children of Naphtali;
And his troop, and those counted, fifty-three thousand four hundred.
All those counted in Dan's company, one hundred fifty-seven thousand six hundred, will be the last to leave under the banners.
These were the children of Israel who were counted according to their ancestral houses. All those counted in the companies according to their divisions were six hundred and three thousand five hundred and fifty.
But the Levites were not numbered with the [other] children of Israel, as the Lord had commanded Moses.
And the children of Israel did according to all the things which the Lord had commanded Moses, [and] thus encamped according to their banners, and thus departed, each according to their families, [and] according to the house of their fathers.
These are the generations of Aaron and Moses, in the days that the Lord spoke to Moses on Mount Sinai.
These are the names of Aaron's sons: Nadab, who was the firstborn, Abihu, Eleazar, and Ithamar.

These are the names of the sons of Aaron the priests, who were anointed and consecrated to exercise the priesthood.
But Nadab and Abihu died before the Lord when they offered strange fire before the Lord in the wilderness of Sinai, and they had no children; but Eleazar and Ithamar served as priests before Aaron their father.
And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:
Bring the Tribe of Levi near, and have them stand before Aaron the Priest, so that they may serve him.
And let them be in charge of what he will command them to guard, and what the whole assembly will command them to guard, before the Tabernacle of meeting, by performing the service of the Tabernacle.
And that they keep all the utensils of the Tabernacle of meeting, and that which will be entrusted to them by the children of Israel, to perform the service of the Tabernacle.
Thus you shall give the Levites to Aaron and his sons; they are absolutely given to him from among the children of Israel.
You shall therefore give the administration to Aaron and his sons, and they shall perform their priesthood. If any foreigner approaches them, he shall be put to death.

And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:
Behold, I have taken the Levites from among the children of Israel, instead of every firstborn who opens the womb among the children of Israel; therefore the Levites shall be mine.
For every firstborn belongs to me, from when I struck down every firstborn in the land of Egypt; I have consecrated to myself every firstborn in Israel, both of men and beasts; they shall be mine, I am the Lord.
The Lord also spoke to Moses in the desert of Sinai, saying:
Count the children of Levi, by their fathers' houses, [and] by their families, counting every male from the age of one month, and above.
So Moses counted them according to the command of the Lord, as he had been commanded.

These are the sons of Levi according to their names: Gershon, Kohath, and Merari.
And these are the names of the sons of Guerson, according to their families, Libni, and Simhi.
And the sons of Kohath according to their families: Hamram, Izhar, Hebron, and Huzziel.
And the sons of Merari, according to their families, Mahli and Musi; these are the families of Levi, according to the houses of their fathers.
From Guerson [came] the family of the Libnites, and the family of the Simhites; these are the families of the Guersonites;
Of these, those who were counted, after the count [which was made] of all the males from the age of one month and above, were seven thousand five hundred in number.
The families of the Gersonites will camp behind the Tabernacle in the West.
And Eliasaph, son of Lael, will be the head of the Gershonite family.
And the children of Guerson shall be in charge of the Tabernacle of Meeting, the tent, the Tabernacle, its covering, the tapestry of the entrance of the Tabernacle of Meeting;
And the curtains of the courtyard with the tapestry of the entrance to the courtyard, which serve for the pavilion and for the altar all around, and its rope, for all its service.
And from Kohath came the family of the Hamramites, the family of the Izharites, the family of the Hebronites, and the family of the Huzielites; these were the families of the Kohathites;
Of which all the males from the age of one month and above were eight thousand six hundred, having charge of the Sanctuary.

The families of Kohath's children will camp on the side of the Tabernacle towards the South.

And Elizaphan, son of Huziel, [will be] the head of the house of the fathers of the families of the Kohathites.

And they will be in charge of the Ark, the Table, the lampstand, the altars, and the utensils of the Sanctuary with which the service is performed, and the tapestry, with everything used in it.

And the chief of the chiefs of the Levites [will be] Eleazar, son of Aaron the priest; who will have the superintendence over those who have charge of the Sanctuary.

And from Merari [came forth] the family of the Mahlites, and the family of the Musites; these were the families of Merari;

Of these, those who were counted [after] the count [which was made] of all the males, from the age of one month and above, were six thousand two hundred.

And Esuriel, son of Abihail, shall be the head of the house of the fathers of the families of the Merarites; they shall encamp on the side of the Tabernacle towards the north.

And the children of Merari shall be given charge of the boards of the Tabernacle, its bars, its pillars, its bases, and all its utensils, with everything that is in it; And the pillars of the courtyard all around, with their foundations, their piles, and their ropes.

And Moses, Aaron, and his sons, who are in charge of the sanctuary and the care of the Israelites, shall encamp before the Tabernacle of Meeting toward the east. And if any foreigner approaches it, he shall be put to death.

All those Levites who were counted, whom Moses and Aaron counted by their families, according to the commandment of the Lord, all the males a month old and above, were twenty-two thousand.

And the Lord said to Moses, "Take a census of all the firstborn males of the children of Israel, from one month old and above, and count their names."

And you shall take for me, I am the Lord, the Levites, instead of all the firstborn who are among the children of Israel; [you shall take] also the animals of the Levites, instead of all the firstborn of the animals of the children of Israel.

So Moses counted, as the Lord had commanded him, all the firstborn who were among the children of Israel.

And all the firstborn males, the count of names having been made, from the age of one month and above, according to how they were counted, were twenty-two thousand two hundred and seventy-three.

And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

Take the Levites instead of all the firstborn among the children of Israel, and the animals of the Levites instead of their animals; and the Levites shall be mine; I am the Lord.

And as for those who must be redeemed from the firstborn of the children of Israel, who are two hundred and seventy-three, more than the Levites;

You shall take five shekels per head, according to the shekel of the Sanctuary; the shekel is twenty obols.

And you shall give to Aaron and his sons the money from those who have been redeemed, exceeding the number of Levites.

Moses therefore took the money from the redemption of those who were extra, besides those who had been redeemed by the exchange of the Levites.

And he received the money from the firstborn of the children of Israel, which was one thousand three hundred and sixty-five shekels, according to the shekel of the Sanctuary.

And Moses gave the money from the redeemed to Aaron and his sons, according to the command of the Lord, as the Lord had commanded him.

And the Lord spoke to Moses and Aaron, saying:

Take a census of the Kohathites, descendants of Levi, by their clans and their ancestral houses.

From the age of thirty and above, up to the age of fifty, all who enter in order to serve in the Tabernacle of meeting.

This is the service of the children of Kohath at the Tabernacle of Meeting, [that is], the Most Holy Place.

When the camp departs, Aaron and his sons will come, and they will unfurl the tapestry veil and cover the Ark of the Testimony with it.

Then they will put a covering of sandpiper skins over it, they will spread a purple cloth over it, and they will put its poles on it.

And they shall spread a purple cloth over the Table of the Showbread, and put on it the dishes, the cups, the basins, and the sprinkling goblets. The daily bread shall be on it.

They will spread over it a crimson-dyed cloth, cover it with a covering of sandpiper skins, and put its poles on it.

And they shall take a purple cloth, and cover with it the lampstand of the light with its lamps, its snuffers, its basins, and all the oil vessels which are used for the lampstand;

And they will put it, along with all its vessels, in a covering of sandpiper skins, and place it on levers.

They shall spread a purple cloth over the golden altar, cover it with a covering of catfish skins, and put its poles on it.

They shall also take all the utensils of the service which are used in the Sanctuary, they shall put them in a purple cloth, and they shall cover them with a covering of catfish skins, and put them on levers.

They shall remove the ashes from the altar and spread a scarlet cloth over it.

And they shall put on it the utensils used for the altar, the censers, the hooks, the scrapers, the basins, and all the vessels of the altar; they shall spread over it a covering of catkins, and they shall put its poles on it.

The camp will set out after Aaron and his sons have finished covering the Sanctuary and all its vessels, and after that the children of Kohath will come to carry it, and they will not touch the holy things, lest they die; this is what the children of Kohath will carry from the Tabernacle of Meeting.

And Eleazar son of Aaron, the priest, shall have charge of the oil of the light, the incense of spices, the continual grain, and the anointing oil; charge of the whole pavilion, and of all things which are in the sanctuary, and of its utensils.

And the Lord spoke to Moses and Aaron, saying:

Do not give cause for the race of the families of Kohath to be cut off from among the Levites.

But do this for them, so that they may live and not die; for when they approach the Most Holy Things, Aaron and his sons will come, and will arrange them, each according to his service, and according to what he is to carry.

And they will not enter to look when the holy things are wrapped up, so that they do not die.

The Lord also spoke to Moses, saying:

Also take a census of the children of Guerson according to their fathers' houses, [and] according to their families;

From the age of thirty, and above, up to the age of fifty, counting all those who enter to keep their rank, in order to be employed in serving at the Tabernacle of meeting.

This is the service of the families of the Gersonites, in what they must serve, and in what they must bear.

They shall therefore carry the scrolls of the pavilion, and the Tabernacle of meeting, its covering, the covering of chaff that is on it over it, and the tapestry of the entrance of the Tabernacle of meeting;

The curtains of the courtyard, and the tapestry of the entrance of the gate of the courtyard, which serve for the pavilion and for the altar all around, their cordage, and all the utensils of their service, and everything that is made for them; this is what they will serve.

All the service of the children of Guerson in all that they are to carry, and in all that they are to serve, shall be [regulated] by the orders of Aaron and his sons, and you shall charge them to observe all that they are to carry.

This is the service of the families of the children of the Gershonites at the Tabernacle of Meeting; and their charge shall be under the direction of Ithamar, son of Aaron the Priest.

You shall also count the children of Merari according to their families [and] according to the houses of their fathers.

You shall count them from the age of thirty and above, down to the age of fifty; all those who come in order to serve at the Tabernacle of meeting.

Now this is the responsibility of what they will have to bear, according to all the service that they will have to do at the Tabernacle of meeting, [namely] the boards of the pavilion, its bars, and its pillars, with its bases;

And the pillars of the courtyard all around, and their bases, their nails, their ropes, all their utensils, and everything used in these things, and you shall count to them all the utensils which they shall be charged to carry, piece by piece.

This is the service of the families of the children of Merari, for all that they must serve at the Tabernacle of Meeting, under the direction of Ithamar, son of Aaron, the Priest.

Moses and Aaron, and the leaders of the assembly, counted the children of the Kohathites, according to their families, and according to the houses of their fathers.

From the age of thirty, and above, up to the age of fifty, all those who entered in order to serve at the Tabernacle of meeting.

And those who were counted according to their families were two thousand seven hundred and fifty.

These are the numbered families of the Kohathites, all serving at the Tabernacle of Meeting, whom Moses and Aaron numbered according to the command that the Lord had given through Moses.

Now, as for the count of the children of Guerson according to their families, and according to the houses of their fathers,

From the age of thirty and above, up to the age of fifty, all those who entered in order to serve at the Tabernacle of Meeting,

Those, [I said], who were counted according to their families, and according to the houses of their fathers, were two thousand six hundred and thirty.

These are the numbered families of the children of Gershon, all serving at the Tabernacle of Meeting, whom Moses and Aaron numbered according to the commandment of the Lord.

And as for the enumeration of the families of the children of Merari, according to their families, [and] according to the houses of their fathers,

From the age of thirty, and above, up to the age of fifty, all who entered in order to serve at the Tabernacle of meeting;

Those, [I said], who were counted according to their families, were three thousand two hundred.

These are the censuses of the families of the children of Merari, whom Moses and Aaron counted according to the command that the Lord had given through Moses.

Thus all those counted, whom Moses and Aaron and the leaders of Israel counted from among the Levites, according to their families, and according to the houses of their fathers;

From the age of thirty, and above, up to the age of fifty, all those who entered service to be employed in what had to be served, and in what had to be carried from the Tabernacle of meeting.

All those, [I said], who were counted, were eight thousand five hundred and eighty. They were numbered according to the command that the Lord had given through Moses, each according to what he had to serve and what he had to carry, and the burden of each was as the Lord had commanded Moses.

Then the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

Command the children of Israel to put out of the camp every leper, every decrepit person, and every person defiled for a dead person.

You shall put them out, both the man and the woman, you shall put them, [I say], out of the camp, so that they do not defile the camp of those among whom I dwell.

And the children of Israel did so, and put them out of the camp, as the Lord had told Moses; the children of Israel did so.

And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

Speak to the children of Israel; when any man or woman has committed any of the sins that man commits by doing a crime against the Lord, and such a person is found guilty;

Then they will confess their sin, which they have committed; and [the guilty one] will give back the total amount of what he was found guilty of, and he will add a fifth on top of it, and give it to the one against whom he committed the offense. If this man has no one to whom the right of redemption belongs to reclaim what was committed in the offense, that thing shall be restored to the Lord, and it shall belong to the Priest, in addition to the ram of atonement with which atonement shall be made for him.

Likewise, every offering raised from among all the sanctified things of the children of Israel, which they present to the Priest, shall belong to him.

Therefore, anything that someone has consecrated will belong to the priest; whatever each person has given to him will belong to him.

The Lord also spoke to Moses, saying:

Speak to the children of Israel, and say to them: When a man's wife has committed adultery and sinned against him;

And that someone will have lain with her, and will have known her, without her husband knowing anything about it; but that she hid herself, and defiled herself, and that there was no witness against her, and that she was not caught;

And that the spirit of jealousy should seize her [husband], so that he is jealous of his wife, because she has defiled herself; or that the spirit of jealousy should seize him, so that he is jealous of his wife, although she has not defiled herself; This man shall bring his wife before the priest, and he shall bring her offering for her, [namely] a tenth of an ephah of barley flour; [but] he shall not pour oil on it; nor shall he put incense on it; for it is a cake of jealousy, a memorial cake, to remind them of iniquity.

And the priest will bring it near, and will make it stand before the Lord.

Then the priest shall take holy water in an earthen vessel, and some of the dust that is on the pavement of the pavement, and put it into the water.

Then the priest shall make the woman stand before the Lord, he shall uncover the head of this woman, and he shall place on the palms of this woman the memorial cake, which is the cake of jealousy; and the priest shall hold in his hand the bitter waters, which bring the curse.

And the priest shall make the woman swear an oath, and shall say to her: If no man has lain with you, and if while in the power of your husband you have not been unlawful [and] defiled, be free [from the harm] of these bitter waters which bring a curse.

But if, while under the power of your husband, you have committed adultery and defiled yourself, and someone other than your husband has slept with you;

Then the priest shall make the woman swear an oath of desecration, and the priest shall say to the woman: May the Lord deliver you to the desecration to which you have submitted yourself by oath, in the midst of your people, the Lord making your thigh fall, and your belly swell.

And may these waters that bring the curse enter your body, causing your belly to swell and your thigh to fall. Then the woman will answer, Amen, Amen.

Then the priest shall write these curses in a book, and erase them with bitter water.

And he will make the woman drink the bitter waters that bring a curse, and the waters that bring a curse will enter her, to be bitter waters.

The priest shall therefore take the cake of jealousy from the woman's hand, wave it before the Lord, and offer it on the altar.

The priest will also take a piece of the cake as a memorial of this cake and will burn it on the altar; then he will make the woman drink the water.

And after he has made her drink the waters, if it is true that she has defiled herself and committed the crime against her husband, the waters that bring the curse will enter her, being bitter waters, and her belly will swell, and her thigh will fall; thus that woman will be subject to the detestation of the oath in the midst of her people.

If the woman has not defiled herself, but is pure, she will receive no harm and will have children.

This is the Law of Jealousy, when a woman who is under her husband's authority has become promiscuous and defiled.

Or when the spirit of jealousy has seized the husband, and being jealous of his wife, he has brought her before the Lord, and the priest has done to that woman all that is ordained by this law.

And the man will be free from sin; but this woman will bear her iniquity.

The Lord also spoke to Moses, saying:

Speak to the children of Israel, and say to them: When a man or a woman has taken the vow of a Nazirite, to become a Nazirite to the Lord;

He shall abstain from wine and beer, he shall not drink any vinegar made from wine or beer, nor any grape liqueur, and he shall not eat fresh grapes, nor dried grapes.

During all the days of his Nazirite vow he shall eat no fruit of the vine, from the seeds to the skin [of the grape].

No razor shall touch his head during all the days of his Nazirite vow. He shall be holy until the days for which he became a Nazirite to the Lord are fulfilled, and he shall let the hair of his head grow long.

During all the days that he became a Nazirite to the Lord, he shall not approach any dead person.

He shall not defile himself for his father, nor for his mother, nor for his brother, nor for his sister, when they are dead; for the Nazirite vow of his God is upon his head.

Throughout all the days of his Nazirite vow, he is holy to the Lord.

If anyone dies suddenly in his presence, the head of his Nazirite vow will be defiled, and he will shave his head on the day of his purification, he will shave it on the seventh day.

And on the eighth day he shall bring to the Priest two turtledoves, or two young pigeons, to the entrance of the Tabernacle of Meeting.

And the priest shall offer one as a sin offering and the other as a burnt offering, and make atonement for him for his sin over the dead man; thus he shall sanctify his head on that day.

And he shall set apart to the Lord the days of his Nazareth, offering a lamb a year old for the guilt, and the first days shall be counted as nothing; for his Nazareth was defiled.

This is the law for a Nazirite: when the days of his Nazirite vow are completed, he shall be brought to the gate of the Tabernacle of meeting.

And the Lord will make his offering of a lamb a year old without blemish, as a burnt offering, and of a ewe a year old without blemish, for a sin offering, and of a ram without blemish, for a peace offering;

And a basket of unleavened bread, cakes of fine flour, kneaded with oil, and unleavened doughnuts, anointed with oil, with their cake, and their sprinkling; These are the ones the priest shall offer before the Lord; he shall also offer his sin offering and his burnt offering.

And he shall offer the ram as a peace offering to the Lord, with the basket of unleavened bread; the priest shall also offer his cake and his sprinkling.

And the Nazirite shall shave off the head of his Nazirite vow at the entrance of the Tabernacle of Meeting, and shall take the hair of his Nazirite vow and put it on the fire which is under the sacrifice of peace offerings.

And the priest shall take the boiled shoulder of the ram, and an unleavened cake from the basket, and an unleavened doughnut, and place them on the palms of the hands of the Nazirite, after he has shaved off his Nazirite hat.

And the priest shall wave these things as a wave offering before the Lord; it is a holy thing belonging to the priest, with the waving breast and the lifting shoulder, after which the Nazirite may drink wine.

This is the law of the Nazirite who has dedicated to the Lord his offering for his Naziriteship, besides what he has [still] able to offer; he shall do according to his vow which he has vowed, according to the law of his Naziriteship.

The Lord also spoke to Moses, saying:

Speak to Aaron and his sons, and tell them: This is how you shall bless the children of Israel, saying to them:

May the Lord bless you and keep you.

May the Lord make his face shine on you and be gracious to you.

The Lord turns his face toward you and gives you peace.

They will therefore put my Name upon the children of Israel, and I will bless them.

Now the day came when Moses had finished setting up the pavilion, and had anointed it, and had sanctified it with all its utensils, and the altar with all its utensils, [it came, I say,] after he had anointed and sanctified them;

The leaders of Israel, and the heads of their fathers' families, who are the leaders of the Tribes, and who had attended to the census, made their offering.

And they brought their offering before the Lord, [namely], six covered wagons, and twelve oxen, each wagon for two of the chief ones, and each ox for each of them, and they offered them before the pavilion.

Then the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

Take [these things] from them; and they shall be used in the service of the Tabernacle of meeting; and you shall give them to the Levites, to each according to his office.

So Moses took the chariots and the oxen and gave them to the Levites.

He gave the children of Guerson two carts and four oxen, according to their use.

But he gave to the children of Merari four chariots and eight oxen, according to their use, under the direction of Ithamar, son of Aaron, the priest.

But he did not give any to the children of Kohath, because the service of the Sanctuary was their responsibility; they carried it on their shoulders.

And the leaders offered for the dedication of the altar, on the day it was anointed, the leaders, [I say], offered their offering before the altar.

And the Lord said to Moses, "One of the leaders shall offer his offering one day, and another on another day, for the dedication of the altar."

On the first day, therefore, Nahshon, son of Hamminadab, offered his offering for the Tribe of Judah.

And his offering was a silver dish weighing one hundred and thirty [shekels], a silver basin weighing seventy shekels, according to the shekel of the Sanctuary, both full of fine flour mixed with oil for the cake;

A golden cup of ten [shekels], full of perfume;

A calf taken from the flock, a ram, a lamb a year old, for a burnt offering;
A young goat [for the offering] for sin;
And for the peace offering, two bulls, five rams, five male goats, and five lambs a year old. This was the offering of Nahshon, son of Hamminadab.
On the second day Nathanael, son of Tshuhar, chief of the [Tribe] of Issachar, [offered].

A young goat [for the offering] for sin;
And for the peace offering, two bulls, five rams, five male goats, and five lambs a year old. This was the offering of Eliab, son of Helon.
On the fourth day Elizur, son of Sedeur, chief of the children of Reuben, [offered].

His offering was a silver dish weighing one hundred and thirty [shekels], a silver basin weighing seventy shekels, according to the shekel of the Sanctuary, both full of fine flour, kneaded with oil for the cake;
A golden cup of ten [shekels], full of perfume;

A young goat [for the offering] for sin;
And for the peace offering, two bulls, five rams, five male goats, and five lambs a year old. This was the offering of Elizur, son of Zedeur.
On the fifth day Selumiel, son of Tsurisaddai, leader of the children of Simeon, [offered].

A golden cup of ten [shekels], full of perfume;
A calf taken from the flock, a ram, a lamb a year old, for a burnt offering;
A young goat [for the offering] for sin;
And for the peace offering, two bulls, five rams, five male goats, and five one-year-old lambs. This was the offering of Selumiel, son of Tsurisaddai.
On the sixth day Eliasaph, son of Dehuel, leader of the children of Gad, [offered]. His offering was a silver dish weighing one hundred and thirty [shekels], a silver basin weighing seventy shekels, according to the shekel of the Sanctuary, both full of fine flour mixed with oil for the cake;
A golden cup of ten [shekels], full of perfume;
A calf taken from the flock, a ram, a lamb a year old, for a burnt offering;
A young goat [for the offering] for sin;
And for the peace offering, two bulls, five rams, five male goats, and five lambs a year old. This was the offering of Eliasaph son of Dehuel.
On the seventh day Elisamah, son of Hammiud, leader of the children of Ephraim, [offered].
His offering was a silver platter, weighing one hundred and thirty [shekels], a silver basin of seventy shekels, according to the shekel of the Sanctuary, both full of fine flour mixed with oil for the cake;

A golden cup of ten [shekels], full of perfume;

A calf taken from the flock, a ram, a lamb a year old, for a burnt offering;

A young goat [for the offering] for sin;

And for the peace offering, two bulls, five rams, five male goats, and five one-year-old lambs. This was the offering of Elisamah, son of Hammiud.

On the eighth day Gamaliel, son of Pedatsur, leader of the children of Manasseh, [offered].

A young goat [for the offering] for sin;

And for the peace offering, two bulls, five rams, five male goats, and five one-year-old lambs. This was the offering of Gamaliel, son of Pedatsur.

On the ninth day Abidan, son of Gideoni, chief of the children of Benjamin, [offered].

A young goat [for the offering] for sin;

And for the peace offering, two bulls, five rams, five male goats, and five lambs a year old. This was the offering of Abidan, son of Gidhoni.

On the tenth day Ahiezer, son of Hammisaddai, chief of the children of Dan, [offered].

On the eleventh day Paghiel, son of Hocran, chief of the children of Asher, [offered].

A young goat [for the offering] for sin;

And for the peace offering, two bulls, five rams, five male goats, and five lambs a year old. This was the offering of Paghiel, son of Hocran.

On the twelfth day Ahirah, son of Henan, chief of the children of Naphtali, [offered].

His offering was a silver dish weighing one hundred and thirty [shekels], a silver basin weighing seventy shekels, according to the shekel of the Sanctuary, both full of fine flour mixed with oil for the cake;

A golden cup of ten [shekels], full of perfume;

A calf taken from the flock, a ram, a lamb a year old, for a burnt offering;

A young goat [for the offering] for sin;

And for the peace offering, two bulls, five rams, five male goats, and five lambs a year old. This was the offering of Ahirah, son of Henan. This was the dedication of the altar, which was [made] by the leaders of Israel, when he was anointed; Twelve silver plates, twelve silver basins, twelve gold cups. And each silver dish [was] one hundred and thirty [shekels], and each basin seventy; all the silver of the vessels amounted to two thousand four hundred [shekels], according to the shekel of the Sanctuary. Twelve gold cups full of perfume, each of ten [shekels], according to the shekel of the Sanctuary; all the gold [therefore] of the cups amounted to six eighty [shekels].

All the bulls for the burnt offering were twelve calves, with twelve rams, [and] twelve one-year-old lambs, with their cakes, and twelve young male goats [for the offering] for the sin.

And all the bulls of the peace offering were twenty-four calves, [with] sixty rams, sixty male goats, [and] sixty one-year-old lambs. Such was the dedication of the altar, after it was anointed.

And when Moses entered the Tabernacle of Meeting to speak with God, he heard a voice speaking to him from above the mercy seat that was on the Ark of the Testimony, from between the two Cherubim, and he spoke to him.

The Lord also spoke to Moses, saying:

Speak to Aaron, and tell him: When you light the lamps, the seven lamps will give light in front of the lampstand.

And Aaron did so, and he lit the lamps [to give light] on the front of the lampstand, as the Lord had commanded Moses.

Now the lampstand was made in such a way that it was of hammered gold, [work] made with a hammer, its shaft also, [and] its flowers. The lampstand was made according to the pattern that the Lord had shown Moses.

Then the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

Take the Levites from among the children of Israel, and purify them.

You shall do this to purify them. You shall sprinkle them with the water of purification; they shall shave all their flesh, they shall wash their clothes, and they shall purify themselves.

Then they shall take a calf from the herd with its cake of fine flour mixed with oil; and you shall take a second calf from the herd [for the offering] for the sin.

Then you shall bring the Levites near before the Tabernacle of Meeting, and you shall summon the whole assembly of the children of Israel.

You shall bring the Levites before the Lord, and the children of Israel shall lay their hands on the Levites.

And Aaron shall present the Levites as an offering before the Lord on behalf of the children of Israel, and they shall be employed in the service of the Lord.

And the Levites shall lay their hands on the heads of the calves; then you shall sacrifice one [as a sin offering] and the other as a burnt offering to the Lord, to make atonement for the Levites.

Afterwards you shall present the Levites before Aaron and his sons, and you shall offer them as a gift to the Lord.

Thus you shall separate the Levites from among the children of Israel, and the Levites shall be mine.

After that the Levites will come to serve at the Tabernacle of Meeting, when you have purified them and presented them as an offering.

For they are entirely given to me from among the children of Israel; I have taken them for myself instead of all those who open the womb, instead of all the firstborn among the children of Israel.

For every firstborn among the children of Israel is mine, both of men and of beasts; I consecrated them to myself on the day that I struck down every firstborn in the land of Egypt.

I took the Levites instead of all the firstborn among the children of Israel. And I gave all of the Levites from among the children of Israel to Aaron and his sons, to do the service of the children of Israel in the Tabernacle of Meeting, and to serve as a redemption for the children of Israel; so that there would be no plague upon the children of Israel, [as would be] if the children of Israel approached the Sanctuary.

Moses and Aaron, and all the congregation of the children of Israel, did to the Levites all the things that the Lord had commanded Moses concerning the Levites; the children of Israel did so.

So the Levites purified themselves and washed their clothes, and Aaron presented them as an offering before the Lord and made atonement for them to purify them.

Having done this, the Levites came to perform their service at the Tabernacle of Meeting before Aaron and his sons; and it was done to them as the Lord had commanded Moses concerning the Levites.

Then the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

This concerns the Levites. A Levite twenty-five years of age or above shall enter into service to be employed at the Tabernacle of Meeting;

But since the age of fifty he will be out of service, and will no longer serve.

However, he will serve his brothers at the Tabernacle of Meeting, to guard what [has been entrusted to them], but he will not do any service; you shall therefore do the same to the Levites concerning their duties.

The Lord had also spoken to Moses in the desert of Sinai, in the first month of the second year, after they had come out of the land of Egypt, saying:

Let the children of Israel celebrate Passover at its season.

You shall make it in its season, on the fourteenth day of this month between the two vespers, according to all its ordinances, and according to all that it must be done therein.

So Moses spoke to the children of Israel, so that they might celebrate the Passover.

And they celebrated the Passover in the first month, on the fourteenth day of the month, between the two vespers, in the desert of Sinai; according to all that the Lord had commanded Moses, the children of Israel did so.

Now there were some who, being defiled for a dead man, could not observe the Passover that day, and they presented themselves that same day before Moses and Aaron.

And these men said to them, "We are defiled for a dead man; why should we be deprived of offering the offering to the Lord at its season among the children of Israel?"

And Moses said to them, "Stop, and I will hear what the Lord commands concerning you."

Then the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

Speak to the children of Israel, and say to them: When any of you or of your descendants is defiled for a dead person, or is on a journey to a distant place, he shall nevertheless keep the Passover to the Lord.

They shall make it on the fourteenth day of the second month between the two vespers; and they shall eat it with unleavened bread and bitter herbs.

They shall leave none of it until morning, nor break its bones; they shall observe all the ordinances of the Passover.

But if anyone, being clean or not on a journey, does not observe the Passover, that person shall be cut off from among his people; that man shall bear his sin, because he did not offer the offering of the Lord at its season.

And when a foreigner residing among you celebrates the Passover to the Lord, he shall observe it according to the ordinance of the Passover, and according to the proper ordinance. The same ordinance shall apply to both the foreigner and the native-born.

Now on the day that the pavilion was set up, the cloud covered the pavilion over the Tabernacle of the Testimony; and in the evening it appeared like fire over the Tabernacle until morning.

This continued; the cloud covered him, but at night it appeared like fire.

And as the cloud lifted from above the Tabernacle, the children of Israel set out; and in the place where the cloud stopped, the children of Israel camped there.

The children of Israel marched at the command of the Lord, and they camped at the command of the Lord; all the days that the cloud remained over the pavilion they remained encamped.

And when the cloud continued to [rest] over the pavilion for several days, the children of Israel heeded the Lord, and did not depart.

And for a few days that the cloud was over the pavilion, they camped at the command of the Lord, and they set out at the command of the Lord.

And when the cloud was there from evening until morning, and when the cloud lifted in the morning, they would set out; whether by day or by night, when the cloud lifted, they would set out.

If the cloud continued to [stop] over the pavilion, [and] remained there for two days, or a month, or longer, the children of Israel remained encamped, and did not depart; but when it lifted, they departed.

They camped at the command of the Lord, and they set out at the command of the Lord; and they kept watch over the Lord, according to the command of the Lord, which he made known to them by Moses.

Then the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

Make yourself two silver trumpets, made of hammered work; and they shall be used for summoning the assembly, and for sending out the companies.

When the bell rings, the whole assembly will gather around you at the entrance of the Tabernacle of Meeting.

And when the sound of one bell is given, the leaders, who are the heads of thousands of Israel, will gather around you.

But when you sound the alarm loudly, the companies that are encamped towards the East will leave.

And when you sound the second time with a loud bang, the companies that are camped towards the South will leave; they will sound with a loud bang when they want to leave.

And when you convene the assembly, you shall ring the bell, but not with a loud ringing.

Now the sons of Aaron the priests shall sound the trumpets; and this shall be a perpetual ordinance for you throughout your generations.

And when you march in battle in your land against your enemy, who comes to attack you; you shall sound the trumpets with a loud blast, and the Lord your God will remember you, and you shall be delivered from your enemies.

Therefore, in your days of joy, in your solemn feasts, and at the beginning of your months, you shall blow the trumpets over your burnt offerings and over your peace offerings, and they shall serve as a memorial before your God; I am the Lord your God.

Now it came to pass on the twentieth day of the second month of the second year, that the cloud lifted from above the pavilion of the Testimony.

And the children of Israel set out according to their routes, from the desert of Sinai, and the cloud settled in the desert of Paran.

So they set out for the first time, following the command of the Lord, declared by Moses.

And the banner of the companies of the children of Judah set out first, according to their troops; and Nahshon, son of Hamminadab, led the band of Judah;

And Nathanael, son of Tsuhar, led the band of the Tribe of the children of Issachar.

And Eliab, son of Helon, led the band of the Tribe of the children of Zebulun.

And the pavilion was dismantled; then the children of Guerson, and the children of Merari, who carried the pavilion, departed.

Then the banner of Reuben's companies set out, according to their troops; and Elizur, son of Sedeur, led Reuben's band.

And Selumiel, son of Tsurisaddai, led the band of the Tribe of the children of Simeon.

And Eliasaph, son of Dehuel, led the band of the children of Gad.

Then the Kohathites, who carried the Sanctuary, departed; meanwhile, the Tabernacle was being set up while these men were coming.

Then the banner of the companies of the children of Ephraim set out, according to their troops; and Elisamah, son of Hammihud, led the band of Ephraim.

And Gamaliel, son of Pedatsur, led the band of the Tribe of the children of Manasseh.

And Abidan, son of Guidhoni, led the band of the Tribe of the children of Benjamin.

Finally the banner of the companies of the children of Dan, which was in the rearguard, set out, according to their troops; and Ahihezer, son of Hammisaddai, led the band of Dan.

And Paghiel, son of Hocran, led the band of the Tribe of the children of Asher.

And Ahirah, son of Henan, led the band of the Tribe of the children of Naphtali.

These were the encampments of the children of Israel according to their troops, when they departed.

Now Moses said to Hobab, son of Reuel of Midian, his father-in-law, "We are going to the place the Lord said I will give you. Come with us, and we will treat you well, for the Lord has promised good things to Israel."

And Hobab answered him, "I will not go there, but I will go to my country and to my relatives."

And Moses said to him, "Please do not leave us; for you will be our guide, because you know the places where we will camp in the desert."

And it will come to pass that when you have come with us, and the good that the Lord owes us has come to pass, we will also do good to you.

So they set out from the mountain of the Lord, [and they traveled] the three-day journey; and the Ark of the covenant of the Lord went before them for the three-day journey to seek a place where they might rest.

And the cloud of the Lord was upon them by day, when they set out from the place where they had camped.

Now it sometimes happened that at the departure of the Ark, Moses would say: Arise, O Lord, and your enemies shall be scattered, and those who hate you shall flee from before you.

And when they put it down, he would say: Return, O Lord, to the ten thousand thousands of Israel.

Afterwards it came to pass that the people complained of their weariness, and the Lord heard it, and the Lord, having heard it, his anger was kindled, and the fire of the Lord was kindled among them, and consumed [some] at the edge of the camp.

Then the people cried out to Moses, and Moses prayed to the Lord, and the fire was extinguished.

And they called that place Taberah, because the fire of the Lord had been kindled among them.

And the people gathered together who were among them were seized with desire, and even the children of Israel began to weep, saying, "Who will give us meat to eat?"

We remember the fish we ate in Egypt, without it costing us anything, the cucumbers, the melons, the leeks, the onions, and the garlic.

And now our souls are parched; our eyes see nothing but manna.

Now the manna was like coriander seed, and its color was like the color of bdellion.

The people would disperse, gather it up, then grind it in millstones, or pound it in a mortar, and cook it in a cauldron, and make cakes from it, the taste of which was similar to that of a fresh oil liqueur.

And when the dew had fallen on the camp at night, the manna would fall upon it. Moses then heard the people weeping in their families, each at the entrance of his tent; [and] the Lord was exceedingly angry, and Moses was grieved.

And Moses said to the Lord, "Why have you afflicted your servant? And why have I not found favor in your sight, that you have placed the burden of all these people upon me?"

Did I conceive all these people; or did I beget them, to say to myself: Carry them in your womb, as a nurse carries a nursing child, [carry them] to the land for which you swore to their fathers?

Where would I get the meat to give to all these people? For they weep for me, saying, "Give us meat so that we may eat it."

I cannot bear the weight of all these people alone, for they are too heavy for me. If you act this way towards me, I beg you, if I have found favor in your sight, to let me die, so that I may not see my misfortune.

Then the Lord said to Moses, "Assemble for me seventy men from among the elders of Israel, whom you know to be the elders of the people and their officers, and bring them to the Tabernacle of Meeting, and let them stand there with you."

Then I will come down and speak with you there, and I will set aside some of the Spirit that is on you and put it on them, so that they may share the burden of the people with you and not have to bear it alone.

And you shall say to the people, "Prepare yourselves for tomorrow, and you shall eat meat; because you have wept when the Lord heard it, and you said, 'Who will give us meat to eat? For we were well in Egypt; so the Lord will give you meat, and you shall eat it.'"

You shall not eat of it for one day, nor two days, nor five days, nor ten days, nor twenty days;

But for a whole month, until it comes out of your nostrils and you expel it from your mouth, because you have rejected the Lord, who is in your midst, and have wept before him, saying, "Why did we come out of Egypt?"

And Moses said: There are six hundred thousand foot soldiers in this people in the midst of whom I am, and you have said: I will give them meat so that they may eat it for a whole month!

Will sheep or cattle be slaughtered for them, so that there is enough for them? Or will all the fish of the sea be gathered together for them, until there is enough for them?

And the Lord answered Moses, "Is the Lord's hand shortened? You will now see whether what I have told you will come true or not."

So Moses went out and recited the words of the Lord to the people, and he gathered seventy men from among the elders of the people and had them stand around the Tabernacle.

Then the Lord descended in the cloud and spoke to Moses, and set aside some of the Spirit that was upon him, and put it upon the seventy elders. And it came to pass that as soon as the Spirit rested upon them, they prophesied; but they did not continue.

Now there were two of them left in the camp, one named Eldad and the other Medad, on whom the Spirit rested, and they were of those [whose names] had been written, but they had not gone into the Tabernacle, and they were prophesying in the camp.

Then a boy ran and told Moses, saying, "Eldad and Medad are prophesying in the camp."

And Joshua, son of Nun, who served Moses, one of his young men, answered, saying, "My lord Moses, stop them."

And Moses answered him, "Are you jealous for my sake? Would that all the Lord's people were prophets, and that the Lord would put his Spirit on them!"

Then Moses and the elders of Israel withdrew to the camp.

Then the Lord caused a wind to rise, and it swept quail away from the sea and scattered them over the camp about a day's journey, on this side and that, all around the camp; and there were almost two cubits high on the ground.

And the people rose up all that day, and all that night, and all the following day, and gathered quails; the one who had gathered the least had ten homers; and they spread them out carefully for themselves all around the camp.

But while the flesh was still between their teeth, before it was chewed, the anger of the Lord was kindled against the people, and he struck the people with a very great plague.

And that place was named Kibroth-taava; for there they buried the people who had coveted.

And from Kibroth-taava the people went to Hazeroth, and they settled in Hazeroth. Then Miriam and Aaron spoke against Moses because of the Ethiopian woman he had taken, for he had taken an Ethiopian woman.

And they said, "Did the Lord speak only through Moses? Did he not also speak through us?" And the Lord heard it.

Now this man Moses [was] very meek, [and] more so than all the men who [were] on the earth.

And immediately the Lord said to Moses, Aaron, and Miriam, "Come, you three, to the Tabernacle of Meeting." So the three of them went.

Then the Lord descended in the pillar of cloud and stood at the entrance of the Tabernacle; then he called Aaron and Miriam, and they both came.

And he said, "Now listen to my words: If there is any prophet among you, I, the Lord, will make myself clearly known to him in a vision, and will speak to him in a dream."

[But] it is not so with my servant Moses, who is faithful in all my house.

I speak with him face to face, and he sees me indeed, not in darkness, nor in any representation of the Lord. Why then were you not afraid to speak against my servant Moses?

So the anger of the Lord was kindled against them, and he went away.

For the cloud departed from above the Tabernacle; and behold, Miriam was leprous, [white] as snow; and Aaron looked upon Miriam and saw that she was leprous.

Then Aaron said to Moses, "Alas, my lord! I beg you not to place this sin upon us, for we have acted foolishly, and we have sinned."

I pray that she may not be like a dead child, half of whose flesh is already consumed when it comes out of its mother's womb.

Then Moses cried out to the Lord, saying, "O Mighty One [God], I pray you, heal her, I pray you."

And the Lord answered Moses, "If her father had spat in her face [in anger], would she not be disgraced for seven days? Let her remain confined outside the camp for seven days, and after that she may be received in."

So Mary was shut up outside the camp for seven days; and the people did not leave there until Mary was received [into the camp].

After that the people departed from Hazeroth, and they camped in the desert of Paran.

And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

Send men to explore the land of Canaan, which I am giving to the children of Israel.

You shall send one man from each of their ancestral tribes, all of them leaders.

So Moses sent them from the wilderness of Paran, according to the command of the Lord; and all these men were leaders of the children of Israel.

And these are their names: From the Tribe of Reuben, Samuiah, son of Zaccur.

From the Tribe of Simeon, Saphat, son of Hori.

From the Tribe of Judah, Caleb, son of Jephunneh.

Of the Tribe of Issachar, Jiguel, son of Joseph.

Of the Tribe of Ephraim, Hosea, son of Nun.

From the Tribe of Benjamin, Palti, son of Raphu.

Of the tribe of Zebulun, Gaddiel, son of Sodi.

From the other Tribe of Joseph, [namely] of the Tribe of Manasseh, Gaddi, son of Susi.

From the Tribe of Dan, Hammiel, son of Guemalli.

From the Tribe of Asher, Sethur, son of Michael.

From the Tribe of Naphtali, Nahbi, son of Vaphsi.

From the Tribe of Gad, Guéuel, son of Maki.

These are the names of the men whom Moses sent to explore the land. Now Moses had appointed Hoshea, son of Nun, Joshua.

Moses then sent them to explore the land of Canaan, and he told them: Go up this way towards the South, and then you will go up into the mountains.

And you will see what that country is like, and what people live in it, whether they are strong or weak; whether they are few or many.

And what is the country where he lives, whether it is good or bad; and what cities do he live in, whether in tents or in walled cities?

And what is the soil like, whether it's rich or poor, whether there are trees or not?

Take heart, and eat local fruit. Now, it was the time of the first grapes.

So they set out and examined the land, from the Desert of Zin to Rehob, at the entrance to Hamath.

So they went up towards the South, and came to Hebron, where Ahiman, Shesai, and Talmai, descendants of Hanak, were. Now Hebron had been built seven years before Zohan of Egypt.

And they came to the Escol stream, and from there cut down a vine branch with a single bunch of grapes; and two of them carried it with a lever. They also brought pomegranates and figs.

And that place was called Nahal-Escol, because of the cluster of grapes that the children of Israel cut there.

And after forty days they returned from the country they had gone to explore.

And having arrived, they came to Moses and Aaron, and to all the congregation of the children of Israel, in the wilderness of Padan at Kadesh; and having made their report to them, and to all the congregation, they showed them some of the fruit of the land.

So they reported to Moses, and said to him, "We have been to the land to which you sent us; and truly it is a land flowing with milk and honey, and this is of its fruit."

There is only this, that the people who live in the land are robust, and the cities are enclosed, [and] very large; we also saw the children of Hanak there.

The Hamalekites live in the land of the Negev; and the Hittites, the Jebusites, and the Amorites live in the hill country; and the Canaanites live along the sea, and by the shore of the Jordan.

Then Caleb silenced the people before Moses, and said, "Let us go up boldly and possess that land, for surely we will be the strongest there."

But the men who had gone up with him said, "We cannot go up against these people, for they are stronger than we are."

And they spoke ill of the land which they had examined before the children of Israel, saying: The land through which we have passed to see is a land which consumes its inhabitants, and all the people which we saw there are people of great stature.

We also saw giants there, descendants of Hanak, of the race of giants; and we seemed like grasshoppers in their presence.

Then the whole assembly rose up and began to shout, and the people wept that night.

And all the children of Israel murmured against Moses and against Aaron; and all the assembly said to them, "Would to God that we had died in the land of Egypt, or in this desert! Would to God that we had died!"

And why is the Lord leading us to that land, only to fall by the sword? Our wives and little children will be plundered. Wouldn't it be better for us to return to Egypt? And they said to one another, "Let us appoint a leader and return to Egypt." Then Moses and Aaron fell on their faces before all the assembly of the children of Israel.

And Joshua, son of Nun, and Caleb, son of Jephunneh, who were among those who had explored the land, tore their clothes;

And they spoke to the whole assembly of the children of Israel, saying: The land through which we passed to explore it is a very good land.

If we please the Lord, he will bring us into that land and give it to us. It is a land flowing with milk and honey.

Only do not rebel against the Lord, and do not fear the people of that land; for they will be our bread; their protection has departed from them, and the Lord is with us; do not fear them.

Then the whole assembly spoke of stoning them; but the glory of the Lord appeared to all the children of Israel at the Tabernacle of Meeting.

And the Lord said to Moses, "How long will this people provoke me to anger with their contempt, and how long will they not believe in me, after all the signs I have performed among them?"

I will strike it with death, and I will destroy it; but I will make you into a people greater and stronger than it is.

And Moses said to the Lord, "But the Egyptians will hear it, for you have brought this people up by your power from among them."

And they will say, along with the inhabitants of this land who have heard that you, O Lord, were in the midst of this people, and that you appeared, O Lord, before their very eyes, that your cloud rested upon them, and that you went before them by day in the pillar of cloud, and by night in the pillar of fire;

When you have put this people to death, as if they were one man, the nations that have heard of your name will speak this language.

Because the Lord could not bring this people into the land he had sworn to give them, he killed them in the desert.

Now I pray that the power of the Lord may be magnified, as you have spoken, saying: The Lord is slow to anger, and abounding in grace, taking away iniquity and sin, and by no means clearing the guilty, punishing the children for the iniquity of the fathers to the third and the fourth [generation].

Forgive, I pray, the iniquity of this people, according to the greatness of your grace, as you have forgiven this people, from Egypt until now.

And the Lord said: I have forgiven according to your word.

But surely I live, and the glory of the Lord will fill the whole earth.

For as for all the men who have seen my glory, and the signs that I performed in Egypt and in the desert, who have already tempted me ten times, and have not obeyed my voice;

If they ever see the land that I swore to their fathers to give them, all those, I say, who have angered me with contempt, will not see it.

But because my servant Caleb had a different spirit, and persisted in following me, I will also bring him into the land where he has been, and his descendants will possess it as an inheritance.

Now the Hamalekites and the Canaanites live in the valley; return tomorrow, and go to the desert by way of the Red Sea.

The Lord also spoke to Moses and Aaron, saying:

How long will this wicked assembly continue to murmur against me? I have heard the murmurings of the children of Israel, by which they murmur against me.

Tell them: As surely as I live, says the Lord, I will not do to you as you have spoken, and as I have heard.

Your carcasses will fall in this desert, and all of you who were numbered according to all the count you made, from the age of twenty years, and above, all of you who murmured against me;

If you enter the land for which I raised my hand, [swearing] that I would make you dwell there, except Caleb, son of Jephunneh, and Joshua, son of Nun.

And as for your little children, whom you said would be prey, I will bring them in there, and they will know what this land is that you have despised.

But as for you, your carcasses will fall in this desert.

But your children will graze in this desert for forty years; and they will bear [the punishment for] your lewdness, until your carcasses are consumed in the desert.

According to the number of days you took to explore the land, which was forty days, one day for a year, you will bear [the punishment for] your iniquities for forty years, and you will know that I have broken the course of my blessings upon you.

I am the Lord who has spoken; if I do not do this to all this wicked assembly, to those who have gathered against me, they shall be consumed in this wilderness, and they shall die there.

The men whom Moses had sent to spy on the land, and who, upon returning, had caused the whole assembly to murmur against him, by defaming the land;

Those men who had spoken ill of the country died of a plague before the Lord.

But Joshua, son of Nun, and Caleb, son of Jephunneh, survived from among those who had gone to explore the land.

Now Moses said these things to all the children of Israel, and the people mourned greatly over them.

Then, having risen early in the morning, they went up to the top of the mountain, saying, "Here we are, and we will go up to the place of which the Lord has spoken; for we have sinned."

But Moses said to them, "Why are you transgressing the commandment of the Lord? It will not succeed."

Do not go up there; for the Lord is not among you, so that you may not be defeated before your enemies.

For the Hamalekites and the Canaanites are there before you, and you will fall by the sword; because you have ceased to follow the Lord, the Lord will not be with you.

However, they persisted in going up to the top of the mountain, but the Ark of the covenant of the Lord and Moses did not move from the middle of the camp.

Then the Hamalekites and the Canaanites who lived in that mountain came down and defeated them and routed them as far as Hormah.

Then the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

Speak to the children of Israel, and say to them: When you have entered the land where you are to dwell, which I am giving you;

And that you will make a sacrifice by fire to the Lord, a burnt offering, or [some other] sacrifice, to fulfill some vow, either voluntarily, or at your solemn feasts, to make a pleasing aroma offering to the Lord, from the herd or from the flock;

He who offers his offering to the Lord shall offer with it a cake of fine flour, one-tenth of which was mixed with a fourth part of a hin of oil;

And the fourth part of a Hin of wine for the sprinkling that you will do on the burnt offering, or on [some other] sacrifice for each lamb.

But if it is for a ram, you will make a cake of two-tenths of fine flour, kneaded with a third of a Hin of oil;

And the third part of a Hin of wine for sprinkling, which you shall offer as a pleasing aroma to the Lord.

And if you sacrifice a calf as a burnt offering, or [such other] sacrifice, to fulfill some important vow, or to make a peace offering to the Lord;

We will offer with the calf a cake made of three-tenths of the flour, kneaded with half a hin of oil.

And you shall offer half a hin of wine for sprinkling, as a pleasing aroma offering made by fire to the Lord.

We will do the same for each bull, each ram, and each young of the ewes and of the goats.

According to the number you sacrifice, you will do the same for each one, according to their number.

All those born in the land will do these things in this way, offering a sacrifice made by fire as a pleasing aroma to the Lord.

If any foreigner, or [anyone else] among you, who is staying with you during your generations, makes a sacrifice by fire as a pleasing aroma to the Lord, he shall do as you do.

O assembly! There shall be one ordinance for you and for the stranger who sojourns [among you], there shall be one perpetual ordinance throughout your generations; it shall be with the stranger as with you in the presence of the Lord.

There will be the same law and the same rights for you and for the foreigner who resides among you.

The Lord also spoke to Moses, saying:

Speak to the children of Israel, and say to them: When you have entered the land to which I will bring you;

And when you eat bread from the land, you shall offer a heaped offering to the Lord.

You shall offer as a raised offering a cake for the firstfruits of your dough; you shall offer it in the manner of the raised offering taken from the threshing floor. Therefore, in your lifetimes you shall give to the Lord a heaped offering, taken from the firstfruits of your dough.

And when you have sinned unintentionally, and have not done all these commandments that the Lord gave to Moses;

All that the Lord commanded you through Moses, from the day that the Lord began to give his commandments, and throughout your generations;

If it happens that the thing was done by mistake, without the assembly noticing it, the whole assembly shall offer as a burnt offering, a pleasing aroma to the Lord, a calf taken from the flock, with its cake and its sprinkling, according to the ordinance, and a young male goat as a sin offering.

Thus the priest shall make atonement for the whole congregation of the children of Israel, and they shall be forgiven; because it was a thing which happened by mistake; and they shall bring before the Lord their offering which must be a sacrifice made by fire to the Lord, and [the offering for] their sin, because of their error.

Then it will be forgiven the whole assembly of the children of Israel, and the stranger who sojourns among them, because this happened to all the people by mistake.

If a single person has sinned unintentionally, he shall offer [as a sin offering] a one-year-old goat.

And the priest will make atonement for the person who has sinned unintentionally, because he has sinned unintentionally before the Lord, [and] making atonement for him, he will be forgiven.

There will be the same law for anyone who has done something by mistake, whether they are born in the land of the children of Israel or are a foreigner residing among them.

But as for the one who has sinned through pride, whether born in the land or a foreigner, he has insulted the Lord; that person shall be cut off from among his people;

Because he despised the word of the Lord and disobeyed his commandment, this person shall surely be cut off; his iniquity is upon him.

Now the children of Israel, being in the desert, found a man gathering wood on the Sabbath day.

And those who found him gathering wood brought him to Moses and Aaron, and to all the assembly.

And he was warned; for it had not yet been declared what should be done to him.

Then the Lord said to Moses, "That man shall be put to death, and the whole assembly shall stone him outside the camp."

So the whole assembly brought him out of the camp, and they stoned him, and he died; as the Lord had commanded Moses.

And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

Speak to the children of Israel, and say to them: Let them make bands for themselves from generation to generation on the corners of their garments, and let them put a purple cord on the bands of the corners [of their garments].

This cord will be on the band, and when you see it, you will remember all the commandments of the Lord, so that you may do them, and not follow the thoughts of your heart, nor the desires of your eyes, by which you are debauchery.

So that you may remember all my commandments, and do them, and be holy to your God.

I am the Lord your God, who brought you out of the land of Egypt to be your God; I am the Lord your God.

Now Korah, son of Izhar, son of Kohath, son of Levi, made a business, with Dathan and Abiram sons of Eliab, and On, son of Peleth, sons of Reuben;

And they rose up against Moses, with two hundred and fifty men of the children of Israel, who were leaders of the assembly, who were called to hold the council, and who were men of reputation.

And they gathered together against Moses and against Aaron, and said to them, "It is enough for you, since all the congregation are holy, and the Lord is in their midst; why then do you exalt yourselves above the congregation of the Lord?"

When Moses heard this, he bowed down with his face [to the ground].

And he spoke to Korah and to all those who were assembled with him, [and] said to them: [Tomorrow] in the morning the Lord will reveal him who belongs to him, and him who is holy, and he will bring him near to him; he will bring near to him the one he has chosen.

Do this, take up censers; let Korah, [I say], and all those who are assembled with him, [take up censers].

And tomorrow put fire in it, and put incense in it before the Lord; and the man whom the Lord chooses will be the holy one. Children of Levi, let it be sufficient for you.

Moses also said to Korah: Now listen, children of Levi.

Is it too little for you that the God of Israel has separated you from the assembly of Israel, bringing you near to himself to be employed in the service of the Lord's pavilion, and to stand before the assembly to serve it?

And that he brought you near, [you] and all your brothers, the children of Levi, with you, that you should still seek the priesthood?

Therefore you and all those gathered with you have gathered against the Lord; for who is Aaron that you murmur against him?

And Moses sent to summon Dathan and Abiram, sons of Eliab, who answered, "We will not go up there."

Is it a small thing that you brought us up from a land flowing with milk and honey, to make us die in this desert, that you even want to rule over us?

Have you brought us to a land flowing with milk and honey, and given us an inheritance of fields or vineyards? Will you gouge out the eyes of these people here? We will not go up there.

Then Moses was very angry, and said to the Lord, "Do not look at their offering; I have not taken from them a single donkey, nor have I harmed any of them."

Then Moses said to Korah, "You and all those who are gathered with you, appear before the Lord tomorrow, you [I say], and these; and Aaron also."

And each one of you shall take your censers and put incense in them; and let each one present his censer before the Lord, which shall be two hundred and fifty censers; and you and Aaron also, each with his censer.

So they each took his censer, and put fire in it, and then incense, and they stood at the entrance of the Tabernacle of Meeting, and Moses and Aaron also stood there. And Korah summoned the whole assembly against them at the entrance of the Tabernacle of Meeting; and the glory of the Lord appeared to all the assembly.

Then the Lord spoke to Moses and Aaron, saying:

Separate yourselves from the midst of this assembly, and I will consume them in a moment.

But they bowed down with their faces [to the ground], and said: O [God] Mighty One? God of the spirits of all flesh? One man will have sinned, and will you be angry with all the assembly?

And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

Speak to the assembly, and tell them: withdraw from the tents of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram.

So Moses got up and went to Dathan and Abiram; and the elders of Israel followed him.

And he spoke to the assembly, saying: "Please withdraw from the tents of these wicked men, and do not touch anything that belongs to them, lest you be consumed for all their sins."

So they withdrew from the tents of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram. Dathan and Abiram came out and stood at the entrance of their tents, with their wives, their children, and their families.

And Moses said, "This is how you will know that the Lord has sent me to do all these things, and I have done nothing of my own accord."

If these die as all men die, and are punished with the punishment of all men, then the Lord has not sent me.

But if the Lord creates a completely new case, and the earth opens its mouth and swallows them up with all that belongs to them, and they go down alive into the pit; then you will know that these men have angered the Lord with contempt.

And it happened that as soon as he had finished saying all these words, the earth that was beneath them split open.

And the earth opened its mouth and swallowed them up, along with their tents, all the men who were in Korah, and all their possessions.

So they went down alive into the abyss, they and all who were with them; and the earth covered them, and they perished in the midst of the assembly.

And all Israel who were around them fled at their cry; for they said, "[Let us beware] lest the earth swallow us up."

And fire came out from the Lord and consumed the two hundred and fifty men who were offering incense.

Then the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

Tell Eleazar son of Aaron, the priest, to take up the censers out of the midst of the fire, and to scatter the fire far away, for they are consecrated;

[Know] the censers of those who have sinned against their souls, and let them be made into large plates to cover the altar; since they have offered them before the Lord they shall be consecrated, and they shall be for a sign to the children of Israel.

So Eleazar the Priest took the bronze censers, which these men who were burned had presented, and they made plates out of them to cover the altar.

It is a memorial for the children of Israel, so that no foreigner who is not of the race of Aaron may approach to make incense before the Lord, and that he may not be like Korah, and like those who were assembled with him; as the Lord spoke by means of Moses.

But the very next day the whole assembly of the children of Israel grumbled against Moses and against Aaron, saying, "You have killed the people of the Lord."

And it came to pass as the assembly gathered together against Moses and against Aaron, that they looked toward the Tabernacle of Meeting, and behold, the cloud covered it, and the glory of the Lord appeared.

Then Moses and Aaron came before the Tabernacle of Meeting.

And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

Get out of the midst of this assembly, and I will consume them in a moment. Then they bowed down with their faces to the ground.

Then Moses said to Aaron, "Take the censer and put fire in it from the altar, and put incense in it, and go quickly to the assembly and make atonement for them; for great anger has gone out from before the Lord; the plague has begun."

And Aaron took the censer, as Moses had told him, and he ran into the midst of the assembly, and behold, the plague had already begun upon the people. So he put incense on it and made atonement for the people.

And as he stood between the living dead, the plague was stopped.

And fourteen thousand seven hundred died from this plague, besides those who had died because of Korah.

And Aaron returned to Moses at the entrance of the Tabernacle of Meeting, after the plague had stopped.

After this the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

Speak to the children of Israel, and take a rod from each of them according to their father's house, from all those who are leaders among them according to their father's house, twelve rods, and write the name of each one on his rod.

But you shall write the name of Aaron on the staff of Levi; for there shall be a staff for each head of their fathers' house.

And you shall place them in the Tabernacle of Meeting before the Testimony, where I am accustomed to be with you.

And it will come to pass that the rod of the man whom I will choose will flourish; and I will put an end to the murmuring of the children of Israel, by which they murmur against you.

When Moses had spoken to the children of Israel, all their leaders, according to their ancestral houses, gave him a staff each. Thus there were twelve staffs. Now Aaron's staff was placed among their staffs.

And Moses placed the rods before the Lord at the Tabernacle of the Testimony.

And it came to pass the very next day, when Moses entered the Tabernacle of the Testimony, behold, Aaron's rod had blossomed for the house of Levi, and it had put forth blossoms, produced buds, and ripened almonds.

Then Moses took all the rods out from before the Lord and brought them to all the children of Israel, and when they saw them, each one took back his rod.

And the Lord said to Moses, "Put Aaron's rod back before the Testimony, to be kept as a sign to the rebellious children; and you shall put an end to their murmuring before me, so that they shall not die again."

And Moses did as the Lord had commanded him; he did so.

And the children of Israel spoke to Moses, saying, "Behold, we are fainting, we are lost, we are all lost."

Whoever approaches the house of the Lord will die; shall we all be completely consumed?

Then the Lord said to Aaron, "You and your sons and your father's house with you shall bear the iniquity of the sanctuary; and you and your sons with you shall bear the iniquity of your priesthood."

Bring also your brothers, the Tribe of Levi, which is the Tribe of your father, near to you, so that they may be added to you and serve you, but you and your sons with you shall serve before the Tabernacle of the Testimony.

They shall guard what you command them to guard, and what must be guarded of all the Tabernacle, but they shall not approach the vessels of the Sanctuary, nor the altar, lest they die, and you die with them.

They will therefore be assigned to you, and they will guard everything that needs to be guarded in the Tabernacle of meeting, according to all the service of the Tabernacle; and no stranger will approach you.

But you shall take care what is done in the Sanctuary and what is done at the altar, so that there may no longer be indignation upon the children of Israel.

For as for me, behold, I have taken your brothers the Levites from among the children of Israel, who are given to you as a pure gift for the Lord, to be used in the service of the Tabernacle of Meeting.

But you and your sons with you will fulfill your priestly duties in everything concerning the altar and what is within the veil, and you will minister there. I am establishing your priesthood as a gift; therefore, if any outsider approaches it, he shall be put to death.

The Lord also said to Aaron, "Behold, I have given you charge of my offered gifts, out of all the holy things of the children of Israel; I have given them to you and to your children as a perpetual ordinance, because of the anointing."

This will be yours from among the most holy things that are not burned, [namely] all their offerings, whether of all their cakes, or of all [their sacrifices] for sin, or of all [their sacrifices] for the offense, which they will bring me; these are most holy things for you and for your children.

You shall eat them in a most holy place; every male shall eat of them; it shall be holy to you.

This too shall belong to you, [namely] the heaped offerings which they shall give of all the wave offerings of the children of Israel, I have given them to you and to your sons and to your daughters with you, by perpetual ordinance; whoever is clean in your house, shall eat of it.

I have also given you their first fruits which they shall offer to the Lord, [namely] all the best of the oil, and all the best of the new wine, and of the wheat.

The first fruits of all things that their land produces, and that they bring to the Lord, shall belong to you; whoever is clean in your house, shall eat of it.

Everything forbidden in Israel will be yours to do.

Everything that opens the womb of any flesh that they offer to the Lord, both of men and of beasts, shall belong to you; but the firstborn of man shall not fail to be redeemed; the firstborn of an unclean beast shall also be redeemed.

And they shall redeem [the firstborn of men] who are to be redeemed from the age of one month, according to the valuation that you make of them, which shall be five shekels of silver, according to the shekel of the Sanctuary, which [is] twenty obols.

But the firstborn of a cow, nor the firstborn of a sheep, nor the firstborn of a goat, shall not be redeemed, for they are holy. You shall sprinkle their blood on the altar and burn their fat as a sacrifice offered by fire, a pleasing aroma to the Lord.

But their flesh will belong to you, like the whirling breast, and like the right shoulder.

I have given to you and to your sons and daughters with you, by perpetual ordinance, all the offerings raised from the holy things, which the children of Israel shall offer to the Lord, to be a firm covenant forever before the Lord, for you and for your descendants with you.

Then the Lord said to Aaron, "You will have no inheritance in their land, nor will you have any portion among them; I am your portion and your inheritance among the children of Israel."

And as for the children of Levi, behold, I have given to them as an inheritance all the tithes of Israel, for the service in which they are employed, which is the service of the Tabernacle of meeting.

And the children of Israel shall no longer approach the Tabernacle of Meeting, lest they become guilty of sin and die.

But the Levites shall serve at the Tabernacle of Meeting and bear their iniquity; this ordinance shall be forever throughout your generations, and they shall have no inheritance among the children of Israel.

For I have given to the Levites as an inheritance the tithes of the children of Israel, which they shall offer to the Lord as a heaped offering; therefore I have said of them, that they shall have no inheritance among the children of Israel.

Then the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

You shall also speak to the Levites, and you shall say to them: When you have received from the children of Israel the tithes which I have given you to take from them for your inheritance, you shall offer from these tithes the heaped offering of the Lord, [namely] the tithe of the tithe.

And your generous offering will be credited to you like the wheat taken from the threshing floor, and like the abundance taken from the winepress.

Therefore you too shall offer the Lord's offering of all your tithes which you have received from the children of Israel, and you shall give from each one the Lord's offering to Aaron the Priest.

You shall offer the whole Lord's offering, of all the things given to you, of all that is best, to be the sanctification of the tithe taken from the same [tithe].

And you shall say to them: When you have offered as a raised offering the best of the tithe, taken from the same [tithe], it shall be charged to the Levites as the income from the threshing floor, and as the income from the winepress.

And you and your families will eat it everywhere; for it is your wages for the service you are employed in the Tabernacle of meeting.

You will not be guilty of sin concerning the tithe, when you have offered as a raised offering the best of it, and you will not defile the holy things of the children of Israel, and you will not die.

The Lord also spoke to Moses and Aaron, saying:

This is an ordinance concerning the Law which the Lord commanded, saying: Speak to the children of Israel, and [tell them] that they should bring you a whole red young heifer, in which there is no blemish, [and] which has not borne the yoke.

Then you shall give it to Eleazar the Priest, who shall bring it out of the camp, and it shall be slaughtered in his presence.

Then Eleazar the Priest shall take some of his blood with his finger, and sprinkle the blood seven times towards the front of the Tabernacle of Meeting;

And they shall burn the young cow in his presence; they shall burn its skin, its flesh, its blood, and its dung.

And the priest shall take cedar wood, hyssop, and scarlet yarn, and throw them into the fire where the young cow is burned.

Then the priest shall wash his clothes and his flesh with water, and after that he shall return to the camp; and the priest shall be unclean until evening.

And the one who burned it shall wash his clothes with water, he shall also wash his flesh in water, and he shall be unclean until evening.

And a clean man shall gather the ashes of the young heifer, and put them outside the camp in a clean place; and they shall be kept for the congregation of the children of Israel; to be made from them the water of separation; it is a purification for sin.

And he who has gathered the ashes of the young heifer shall wash his clothes, and shall be unclean until evening; and this shall be a perpetual ordinance for the children of Israel, and for the stranger who sojourns among them.

Anyone who touches a dead body of any person will be unclean for seven days.

And he shall purify himself with that water on the third day, and on the seventh day he shall be clean; but if he does not purify himself on the third day, he shall not be clean on the seventh day.

Anyone who has touched the dead body of any dead person and has not purified himself has defiled the pavilion of the Lord; therefore such a person shall be cut off from Israel; for he shall be defiled, because the water of separation has not been sprinkled on him; his defilement remains on him.

This is the Law; when a man dies in any tent, whoever enters the tent, and everything in the tent, shall be unclean for seven days.

Therefore, any uncovered vessel, on which there is no lid attached, will be defiled.

And whoever touches in the field a man who has been killed by the sword, or any [other] dead body, or any human bone, or a tomb, shall be unclean for seven days. And for the one who is defiled, some of the powder from the young cow burned for purification will be taken and put into a vessel, with fresh water poured over it. Then a clean man shall take hyssop, and having dipped it in water, shall sprinkle it on the tent, and on all the vessels, and on all the persons who were there, and on the one who touched the bone or the slain man, or the dead man, or the tomb. A man who is clean shall sprinkle it on the third day and the seventh day on the one who is unclean, and shall purify him on the seventh day; then he shall wash his clothes, and bathe himself with water, and he shall be clean in the evening. But the man who is defiled, and does not purify himself, that man shall be cut off from the midst of the assembly, because he has defiled the sanctuary of the Lord; and the water of separation having not been sprinkled on him, he is defiled. And this shall be a perpetual ordinance for them; and whoever has sprinkled the water of separation shall wash his clothes; and whoever has touched the water of separation shall be unclean until evening. And everything that the unclean man touches will be unclean, and the person who touches it will be unclean until evening. Now the children of Israel, [namely] the whole assembly, arrived at the desert of Zin in the first month; and the people remained at Kadesh, and Miriam died there, and was buried there. And when there was no water for the assembly, they gathered together against Moses and against Aaron. And the people disputed with Moses, and they said to him, "Would to God that we had died when our brothers died before the Lord?" And why have you brought the assembly of the Lord into this wilderness, to die here, us and our animals? And why did you bring us up out of Egypt to bring us to this evil place, which is not a place for sowing, nor a place for fig trees, nor for vines, nor for pomegranates; and where there is not even water to drink? Then Moses and Aaron withdrew from before the assembly to the entrance of the Tabernacle of Meeting, and fell on their faces, and the glory of the Lord appeared. Then the Lord spoke to Moses, saying: Take the staff, and summon the assembly, you and Aaron your brother, and speak to the rock in their presence, and it will give its water; so you will bring water out of the rock for them, and you will give drink to the assembly and to their animals. So Moses took the staff from before the Lord, as he had commanded him. And Moses and Aaron summoned the assembly before the rock, and he said to them, "You rebels, listen now, shall we bring you out of the water of this rock?" Then Moses raised his hand and struck the rock twice with his staff; and abundant water came out, and the assembly drank, and their animals too. And the Lord said to Moses and Aaron, "Because you did not believe in me to sanctify me before the children of Israel, therefore you shall not bring this assembly into the land that I have given them." These were the waters of contention, over which the children of Israel quarreled with the Lord; and he sanctified himself in them. Then Moses sent ambassadors from Kadesh to the king of Edom, [to tell him]: This is what your brother Israel says: You know all the work we have had; How our fathers went down to Egypt, where we stayed a long time; and how the Egyptians mistreated us and our fathers. And we cried out to the Lord, who, hearing our cry, sent the angel and brought us out of Egypt. Now behold, we are in Kadesh, a city which is at the end of your borders. I beg you that we pass through your country; we will not pass through fields or vineyards, nor will we drink water from any well; we will walk along the royal road; we will not turn aside to the right or to the left until we have passed through your borders.

And Edom said to him: You shall not pass through my land, lest I come out armed against you.

The children of Israel answered him: We will go up by the highway, and if we drink of your water, I and my animals, I will pay you the price; only that I take my passage.

But [Edom] said to him, "You shall not pass through there"; and thereupon Edom went out to meet him with a great multitude, and with armed men.

Thus Edom would not allow Israel to pass through its borders; therefore Israel turned away from it.

And the children of Israel, [namely] the whole assembly, having departed from Kadesh, came to the mountain of Hor.

And the Lord spoke to Moses and Aaron at Mount Hor, near the borders of the land of Edom, saying:

Aaron will be gathered to his people, for he will not enter the land that I gave to the children of Israel, because you rebelled against my commandment at the waters of the dispute.

Take Aaron and Eleazar his son, and bring them up Mount Hor.

Then have Aaron stripped of his clothes, and have Eleazar his son put them on; and Aaron shall be gathered up, and shall die there.

So Moses did as the Lord had commanded, and they went up Mount Hor, with all the assembly seeing him.

And Moses stripped Aaron of his clothes and put them on Eleazar his son; then Aaron died there on the top of the mountain, and Moses and Eleazar came down from the mountain.

And the whole assembly, [namely] the whole house of Israel, seeing that Aaron was dead, they mourned for him thirty days.

When the Canaanite king of Harad, who lived in the South, learned that Israel was coming by way of spies, he fought against Israel and took prisoners.

Then Israel made a vow to the Lord, saying, "If you will deliver this people into my hand, I will destroy their cities."

And the Lord heard the voice of Israel, and delivered the Canaanites into his hand, whom he destroyed like a banished city; and that place was called Hormah.

Then they set out from Mount Hor, heading towards the Red Sea, to surround the land of Edom, and the heart failed the people along the way.

So the people spoke against God and against Moses, saying, "Why have you brought us up out of Egypt to die in this wilderness? There is no bread or water, and our souls are weary of this light bread."

And the Lord sent fiery serpents among the people, and they bit the people, so that a great number of the Israelites died.

Then the people came to Moses and said, "We have sinned, for we have spoken against the Lord and against you. Call on the Lord to take the snakes away from us." And Moses prayed for the people.

And the Lord said to Moses, "Make a fiery serpent and put it on a pole; and it shall come to pass that everyone who is bitten, when he looks at it, shall be healed."

So Moses made a bronze serpent and put it on a pole; and it came to pass that when some serpent had bitten a man, he would look at the bronze serpent, and he was healed.

From then on, the children of Israel departed and camped in Oboth.

And having departed from Oboth, they camped in Hije-habarim, in the desert which is opposite Moab, toward the rising sun.

Then, having left from there, they camped near the Zéred stream.

And having departed from there, they camped on this side of the Arnon, which is in the desert, coming out of the border of the Amorites; for the Arnon is the border of Moab, between the Moabites and the Amorites.

That is why it is said in the Book of the Battles of the Lord: Vaheb in Suphah, and the torrents in Arnon.

And the course of the torrents which tends towards the place where Har is situated, and which goes to the borders of Moab.

And from there they came to Beer; this is the well to which the Lord said to Moses, "Assemble the people, and I will give them water."

Then Israel sang this song: Come up, O well; sing praises to it, one after another.

This is the well that the Lords dug, that the leaders of the people with the Lawgiver dug with their staffs. And from the desert [they came] to Mattana.

And from Mattana to Nahaliel; and of Nahaliel in Bamoth.

And from Bamoth in the valley which is in the territory of Moab, on the summit of Pisgah, and which looks towards Jesimon.

Then Israel sent ambassadors to Sihon, King of the Amorites, [to] tell him:

Let me pass through your country; we will not turn aside into the fields, nor into the vineyards, and we will not drink water from your wells; but we will walk along the royal road, until we have passed through your borders.

But Sihon did not allow Israel to pass through his land; and he gathered all his people, and went out against Israel in the desert, and came as far as Jahaz, and fought against Israel.

But Israel put him to the sword, and conquered his land, from Arnon to Jabbok, [and] to the children of Hammon; for the border of the children of Hammon was strong.

And Israel took all the cities that were there, and settled in all the cities of the Amorites, in Heshbon, and in all the cities of its territory.

Now Heshbon was the city of Sihon, King of the Amorites, who had first made war on the King of Moab, and had taken from him all his country as far as Arnon.

That is why it is said in the proverb: Come to Heshbon. Let the city of Sihon be rebuilt and repaired.

For fire came out of Heshbon, and flame from the city of Sihon; it consumed Har of the Moabites, [and] the Lords of Bamoth at Arnon.

Woe to you, Moab; people of Chemos, you are lost; he has given up his sons who were escaping and his daughters into captivity to Sihon, King of the Amorites.

We defeated them with arrows. Heshbon perished as far as Dibon; we routed them as far as Nophah, which reaches as far as Medeba.

So Israel dwelt in the land of the Amorites.

Then Moses sent people to reconnoiter Jazer, and they took the cities under his jurisdiction and dispossessed the Amorites who were there.

Then they turned and went up the road to Bashan; and Hog, King of Bashan, came out with all his people in battle to meet them in Edrehi.

And the Lord said to Moses, "Do not be afraid of him, for I have given him into your hand, along with all his people and his land; and you shall do to him as you did to Sihon, king of the Amorites, who lived in Heshbon."

So they defeated him and his children and all his people, so that not one of them remained; and they took possession of his land.

Then the children of Israel departed, and camped in the countryside of Moab, beyond the Jordan of Jericho.

Now Balach son of Zippor saw all the things that Israel had done to the Amorite;

And Moab was greatly afraid of the people, because they were so numerous; and he was extremely agitated because of the children of Israel.

And Moab said to the elders of Midian, "Now this multitude will devour everything around us, as an ox devours the grass of the field." Now at that time Balach son of Zippor was king of Moab.

Who sent messengers to Balaam son of Behor in Pethor, which is on the river, in the land of the children of his people, to call to him, saying, Behold, a people has come out of Egypt; behold, they cover the face of the earth, and they are encamped near me.

Now come then, I pray you, curse this people for me, for they are more powerful than I; perhaps I will be the strongest, and we will defeat them, and I will drive them out of the land; for I know that he whom you bless will be blessed, and he whom you curse will be cursed.

So the elders of Moab went with the elders of Midian, having in their hands enough to pay the diviner, and they came to Balaam, and reported to him the words of Balak.

And he answered them, "Stay here tonight, and I will give you an answer as the Lord has spoken to me." So the Moabite lords stayed with Balaam.

And God came to Balaam and said, "Who are these men you have with you?"

And Balaam answered God, "Balach son of Zippor, king of Moab, has sent to me, [saying]:

Here is a people who came out of Egypt, and covered the face of the earth; come now, curse them for me; perhaps I can fight them, and drive them out.

And God said to Balaam, "You shall not go with them and you shall not curse this people, for they are blessed."

And Balaam, having risen early in the morning, said to the lords who had been sent by Balak: Return to your country; for the Lord has refused to let me go with you.

So the lords of the Moabites arose and returned to Balak and said, "Balaam has refused to come with us."

And Balak sent even more Lords, and more honorable ones than the first.

When they came to Balaam, they said to him: This is what Balak son of Zippor says: I beg you, let nothing hinder you from coming to me;

For surely I will reward you greatly, and I will do all that you tell me; so I pray you come, curse this people for me.

And Balaam answered and said to Balak's servants, "Even if Balak were to give me his house full of gold and silver, I could not transgress the commandment of the Lord my God to do anything, whether small or great."

However, I beg you to remain here again tonight, and I shall know what more the Lord has to say to me.

And God came to Balaam at night and said to him, "Since these men have come to call you, get up and go with them; but whatever you do, you shall do only what I tell you."

So Balaam got up in the morning, saddled his donkey, and went with the Lords of Moab.

But God's anger was kindled because he was going away, and the Angel of the Lord stood in the road to oppose him; now he was riding on his donkey, and he had with him two of his servants.

And the donkey saw the Angel of the Lord standing in the road, with his drawn sword in his hand, and she turned aside from the road and went through the fields; and Balaam struck the donkey to make her return to the road.

But the Angel of the Lord stood in a path of vineyards, which had a partition on this side and a partition on the other.

And the donkey, having seen the Angel of the Lord, pressed herself against the wall, and pressed Balaam's foot against the wall; therefore he continued to strike her.

And the Angel passed on, and stopped in a narrow place, where there was no way to turn right or left.

And the donkey, seeing the Angel of the Lord, lay down under Balaam; and Balaam became very angry, and struck the donkey with his staff.

Then the Lord made the donkey speak, and she said to Balaam, "What have I done to you, that you have beaten me three times?"

And Balaam answered the donkey: Because you have mocked me, would that I had a sword in my hand, for I would kill you right now.

And the donkey said to Balaam, "Am I not your donkey, on which you have ridden from the day I came to be yours until this day? Have I been accustomed to doing this to you?" And he answered, "No."

Then the Lord opened Balaam's eyes, and he saw the Angel of the Lord standing in the road, with his drawn sword in his hand; and he bowed down and prostrated himself on his face.

And the Angel of the Lord said to him, "Why have you struck your donkey three times already? Behold, I have come out to oppose you, because your way is crooked before me."

But the donkey saw me and turned away from me three times already; otherwise, if she had not turned away from me, I would have killed you already, and left her alive.

Then Balaam said to the Angel of the Lord, "I have sinned, for I did not know that you stood in the way against me; and now if it displeases you, I will turn back."

And the Angel of the Lord said to Balaam, "Go with these men, but only say what I tell you." So Balaam went with the lords sent by Balak.

When Balak heard that Balaam was coming, he went out to meet him in the city of Moab, on the border of Arnon, at the end of the border.

And Balak said to Balaam, "Did I not send to you before to call you? Why have you not come to me? Could I not reward you?"

And Balaam answered Balak, "Behold, I have come to you; but can I now say anything [of my own accord]? I will only say what God puts in my mouth."

And Balaam went with Balak, and they came to the city of Huzoth.

And Balak sacrificed oxen and sheep, and sent some to Balaam and to the lords who had come with him.

And when morning came, he took Balaam, and brought him up to the high places of Bahal, and from there he saw one of the outskirts of the people.

And Balaam said to Balak, "Build me seven altars here, and prepare for me here seven calves and seven rams."

And Balak did as Balaam had said; and Balak and Balaam offered a calf and a ram on each altar.

Then Balaam said to Balak, "Stand by your burnt offering, while I go away; perhaps the Lord will come to meet me, and I will tell you all that he has shown me." So he withdrew to a secluded place.

And God came to meet Balaam, and [Balaam] said to him: I have erected seven altars, and I have sacrificed a calf and a ram on each altar.

And the Lord put the word in Balaam's mouth, and said to him, "Go back to Balak, and speak to him thus."

So he returned to him; and behold, he stood beside his burnt offering, both he and all the Lords of Moab.

Then [Balaam] uttered his sententious speech, and said: Balak, King of Moab, has brought me from Aram, from the mountains of the East, [saying to me]: Come, curse Jacob for me; come, [I said], hate Israel.

[But] how can I curse him? The Mighty [God] has not cursed him; and how can I hate him? The Lord has not hated him.

For I will look down on it from the top of the rocks, and I will behold it from the hills. Behold, this people will dwell apart, and will not be placed among the nations.

Who can count the dust of Jacob, and the number of the fourth part of Israel? Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my end be like theirs!

Then Balak said to Balaam, "What have you done to me? I took you to curse my enemies, and behold, you have blessed them expressly."

And he answered, and said, "Should I not be careful to say what the Lord has put in my mouth?"

Then Balak said to him, "Come, I pray you, with me to another place from where you can see it, [for] you saw only one end of it, and you did not see the whole of it; curse it for me from there."

Then, having led him to the territory of Zophim towards the summit of Pisgah, he built seven altars, and offered a calf and a ram on each altar.

Then [Balaam] said to Balak, "Stand here beside your burnt offering, while I go to meet [God], as [I have done before]."

So the Lord came to meet Balaam and put the word in his mouth, saying, "Go back to Balak and speak this to him."

And he came to Balak, and behold, he was standing beside his burnt offering, and the lords of Moab with him. And Balak said to him, "What has the Lord spoken?"

Then he uttered his sententious speech aloud, and said: Arise, Balach, and listen; son of Zippor, give ear to me.

The Mighty God is not a man, that he should lie, nor a son of man, that he should repent; he has spoken, and will he not do it? he has spoken, and will he not confirm it?

Behold, I have received [the word] to bless; since he has blessed, I will not revoke it.

He has not seen iniquity in Jacob, nor perversity in Israel; the Lord his God is with him, and there is in him a royal song of triumph.

The Mighty [God] who brought them out of Egypt is like the forces of the Unicorn.

For there are no enchantments against Jacob, nor divinations against Israel. At this time it will be said of Jacob and Israel, "What has the Mighty One [God] done?"

Behold, this people shall rise like an old lion, and shall exult like a lion in its strength; it shall not lie down until it has eaten the prey, and drunk the blood of the slain.

Then Balak said to Balaam, "Well, do not curse him, but at least do not bless him."

And Balaam answered Balak, [and said]: Is this not what I told you, that whatever the Lord said, I would do?

Balak said to Balaam, "Come now, I will lead you to another place; perhaps God will be pleased if you curse him from there."

So Balak led Balaam to the top of Peor, which looks out towards Jesimon.

And Balaam said to him, "Build me seven altars here, and prepare for me here seven calves and seven rams."

So Balak did as Balaam had told him; then he offered a calf and a ram on each altar.

Now Balaam, seeing that the Lord wanted to bless Israel, did not go as at other times to seek enchantments, but he turned his face toward the desert.

And lifting up his eyes, he saw Israel standing in rows according to their tribes; and the Spirit of God was upon him.

And he uttered his sententious speech aloud, and said: Balaam, son of Behor, said, and the man who has the open eye, said;

He who hears the words of the Mighty God; who sees the vision of the Almighty; who falls to the ground, and whose eyes are opened, says:

How beautiful are your tabernacles, O Jacob! [and] your pavilions, O Israel!

They spread out like streams, like gardens beside a river, like aloe trees that the Lord planted, like cedars beside the water.

Water will drip from his buckets, and his seed will be among many waters, and his King will be exalted above Agag, and his kingdom will be highly exalted.

The Mighty God who brought him out of Egypt is like the forces of the Unicorn; he will consume the nations that are his enemies, he will break their bones, and pierce them with his arrows.

He bowed down, he lay down like a lion in his strength, and like an old lion; who can rouse him? Whoever blesses you will be blessed, and whoever curses you will be cursed.

Then Balak became very angry with Balaam, and clapped his hands; and Balak said to Balaam, I called you to curse my enemies, and behold, you have already blessed them expressly three times.

Now flee back to your own country. I said I would give you a great reward, but behold, the Lord has withheld it from you.

And Balaam answered Balak, "Did I not tell your ambassadors whom you sent to me: If Balak gave me his house full of silver and gold, I could not transgress the commandment of the Lord, to do good or evil on my own; but whatever the Lord says, I will say.

Now therefore, behold, I am going to my people; come, I will give you counsel, [and I will tell you] what this people will do to your people in the last time.

Then he uttered his sententious speech aloud, and said: Balaam, son of Behor, said, and the man with the open eye said:

He who hears the words of the Mighty One, and who has knowledge of the Sovereign, and who sees the vision of the Almighty, who falls to the ground, and whose eyes are opened, says:

I see it, but not now; I look at it, but not closely. A star will come forth from Jacob, and a scepter will rise out of Israel: it will pierce the corners of Moab, and destroy all the children of Seth.

Edom will be possessed, and Seir will be possessed by its enemies, and Israel will fare valiantly.

And there will be one of Jacob who will rule, and who will destroy the remnant of the city.

He also saw Hamalech, and uttered his sententious speech aloud, and said: Hamalech [is] a beginning of nations, but in the end he will perish.

He also saw the Kenite, and he uttered his sententious speech aloud, and said: Your dwelling is in a rough place, and you have made your nest in the rock;

However, Cain will be ravaged, until Assur takes you into captivity.

He continued to utter his sententious speech aloud, and he said: Woe to him who will live when the Mighty God does these things.

And the ships will come from the district of Kittim, and will afflict Assyria and Heber, and it too will be destroyed.

Then Balaam got up and went back to his own country; and Balak also went his own way.

So Israel remained in Shittim, and the people began to commit fornication with the daughters of Moab.

For they invited the people to the sacrifices of their gods, and the people ate there and bowed down before their gods.

And Israel mated with Bahal-Pehor; therefore the anger of the Lord was kindled against Israel.

And the Lord said to Moses, "Take all the leaders of the people and hang them before the Lord in the sun, and the fierce anger of the Lord will turn away from Israel."

Moses then said to the judges of Israel: Let each of you put to death the men under your care who have joined Bahal-Pehor.

And behold, a man of the children of Israel came, and brought to his brethren a Midianite woman, in the presence of Moses and in the presence of all the congregation of the children of Israel, as they wept at the gate of the Tabernacle of meeting.

When Phinehas, son of Eleazar, son of Aaron the Priest, saw this, he stood up from the midst of the assembly and took a javelin in his hand.

And he went into the tent to the Israelite man, and pierced them both through the stomach, the Israelite man and the woman; and the plague was stopped from the children of Israel.

But twenty-four thousand died from this plague.

And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

Phinehas, son of Eleazar, son of Aaron the priest, turned away my anger from the children of Israel, because he was zealous for me among them, and I did not consume the children of Israel with my zeal.

Therefore, tell him: Behold, I give him my covenant of peace.

And the covenant of perpetual priesthood shall be for him and for his descendants after him, because he was zealous for his God and made atonement for the children of Israel.

And the name of the Israelite man killed, who was killed with the Midianite woman, was Zimri, son of Salu, head of a family of Simeonites.

And the name of the Midianite woman who was killed was Cozbi, daughter of Zur, a leader of the people, and of a family of Midianites.

The Lord also spoke to Moses, saying:

Press the Midianites close and strike them.

For they first overpowered you with their schemes, by which they caught you in the matter of Pehor, and in the matter of Cozbi, daughter of one of the leaders of the Midianites, their sister, who was killed on the day of the plague that came about because of Pehor.

Now it came to pass after that plague, that the Lord spoke to Moses, and to Eleazar, the son of Aaron, the priest, saying:

Take a census of the whole congregation of the children of Israel, from the age of twenty years, and above, according to the houses of their fathers, [namely] of all those of Israel who are able to go to war.

Moses and Eleazar the priest then spoke to them in the countryside of Moab, by the Jordan at Jericho, saying:

[Let a census be taken] from the age of twenty years, and above, as the Lord commanded Moses and the children of Israel, when they came out of the land of Egypt.

And the name of Asher's daughter was Serah.

These are the families of Asher's children, according to their census, who were fifty-three thousand four hundred.

The children of Naphtali, according to their families: From Jahzeel, the family of the Jahzeelites; from Guni, the family of the Gunites.

From Jetser, the family of the Jitsrites; from Sillem, the family of the Sillemites.

These were the families of Naphtali, according to their families, and their number was forty-five thousand four hundred.

These were the numbers of the children of Israel, who were six hundred and one thousand seven hundred and thirty.

And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

The country will be divided among them by inheritance, according to the number of names.

To those who are more numerous you shall give more inheritance, and to those who are less numerous you shall give less inheritance; to each shall be given his inheritance according to the number of his number.

However, let the country be divided by lot, [and] let them take their inheritance according to the names of the Tribes of their fathers.

Each person's inheritance will be according to what fate shows, and consideration will be given to both the greatest and the smallest number.

And these are the numbered of Levi according to their families; of Gershon, the family of the Gershonites; of Kohath, the family of the Kohathites; of Merari, the family of the Merarites.

These are the families of Levi: the family of the Libnites, the family of the Hebronites, the family of the Mahlites, the family of the Musites, the family of the Korhites. Now Kohath fathered Hamram.

And the name of Hamram's wife was Jochebed, daughter of Levi, who was born to Levi in Egypt, and she bore to Hamram Aaron, Moses, and Miriam their sister.

And to Aaron were born Nadab, Abihu, Eleazar, and Ithamar.

And Nadab and Abihu died offering strange fire before the Lord.

And all the Levites counted were twenty-three thousand, all males, from the age of one month and above, who were not counted with the [other] children of Israel, for they were not given any inheritance among the children of Israel.

These were the ones who were counted by Moses and Eleazar the Priest, who took a census of the children of Israel in the fields of Moab, near the Jordan of Jericho.

Among them were none of those who had been numbered by Moses and Aaron the Priest when they took the census of the children of Israel in the desert of Sinai.

For the Lord had said of them that they would surely die in the wilderness; and so not one of them remained except Caleb, son of Jephunneh, and Joshua, son of Nun.

Now the daughters of Zelophehad, son of Hopher, son of Gilead, son of Machir, son of Manasseh, from the families of Manasseh, son of Joseph, approached; and these are the names of these daughters: Mahlah, Noah, Hoglah, Milcah, and Tirzah.

They presented themselves before Moses, before Eleazar the priest, before the leaders, and before all the assembly, at the entrance of the Tabernacle of Meeting, [and] said:

Our father died in the desert, who however was not in the company of those who gathered against the Lord, [namely] in the assembly of Korah; but he died in his sin, and he had no son.

Why should our father's name be cut off from his family because he has no sons? Give us a possession among our father's brothers.

And Moses brought their case before the Lord.

And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

The daughters of Zelophehad speak wisely. You will surely give them an inheritance to possess among their father's brothers, and you will pass on their father's inheritance to them.

You shall also speak to the children of Israel [and] say to them: When a man dies without having sons, you shall pass his inheritance on to his daughter.

If he has no daughter, you shall give his inheritance to his brothers.

And if he has no brothers, you shall give his inheritance to his father's brothers. If his father has no brother, you shall give his inheritance to his relative, the closest of his family, and he shall possess it; and this shall be an ordinance to the children of Israel according to which they shall judge, as the Lord commanded Moses.

The Lord also said to Moses, "Go up to this mountain of Abiram, and see the land that I have given to the children of Israel."

You will look upon it, and then you too will be gathered to your people, as your brother Aaron was gathered.

Because you rebelled against my command in the Desert of Zin, in the dispute of the assembly, and did not sanctify me over the waters before them; these are the waters of the dispute at Kadesh, in the Desert of Zin.

And Moses spoke to the Lord, saying:

May the Lord, the God of the spirits of all flesh, appoint some man over the assembly.

Who goes out and comes in before them, and leads them out and comes in; and let the assembly of the Lord not be like sheep without a shepherd.

Then the Lord said to Moses, "Take Joshua son of Nun, who is a man in whom is the Spirit, and lay your hand on him."

You shall present him before Eleazar the Priest, and before all the assembly; and you shall instruct him in their presence.

And you shall make your authority known to him, so that all the congregation of the children of Israel may listen to him.

And he shall present himself before Eleazar the Priest, who shall inquire for him by the judgment of Urim before the Lord; and at his word they shall go out, and at his word they shall come in, he, and the children of Israel with him, and all the assembly.

So Moses did as the Lord had commanded him, and took Joshua, and presented him before Eleazar the priest, and before all the assembly.

Then he laid his hands on him and instructed him, as the Lord had commanded through Moses.

The Lord also spoke to Moses, saying:

Command the children of Israel, and say to them: You shall take care of my offerings, which are my food, [namely] my sacrifices made by fire, which are my pleasing aroma, to offer them to me at their time.

You shall therefore tell them: This is the offering made by fire which you shall offer to the Lord: two lambs a year old without blemish, each day, as a continual burnt offering.

You shall sacrifice one of the lambs in the morning, and the other lamb between the two vespers;

And one tenth part of an ephah of fine flour for the cake, kneaded with one fourth part of a hin of virgin oil.

This is the continual burnt offering that was made on Mount Sinai, a pleasing aroma, an offering made by fire to the Lord.

And its sprinkling shall be a fourth part of a hin for each lamb, and you shall pour the sprinkling of ale to the Lord in the holy place.

And you shall sacrifice the other lamb between the two vespers; you shall make the same cake as in the morning, and the same sprinkling, as a burnt offering, a pleasing aroma to the Lord.

But on the Sabbath day you shall offer two lambs a year old without blemish, and two-tenths of fine flour kneaded with oil for the cake, with its sprinkling.

This is the Sabbath burnt offering for every Sabbath, besides the continual burnt offering with its sprinkling.

And at the beginning of your months you shall offer as a burnt offering to the Lord two calves from the flock, one ram, and seven lambs a year old, without blemish;

And three-tenths of fine flour kneaded with oil, for the cake for each calf, and two-tenths of fine flour kneaded with oil, for the cake for the ram.
And a tenth of fine flour mixed with oil, for the cake for each lamb, as a burnt offering, a pleasing aroma, and as a sacrifice made by fire to the Lord.
And their sprinkling shall be half a hin of wine for each calf, and a third part of a hin for the ram, and a fourth part of a hin for each lamb, this is the burnt offering of the beginning of each month, according to all the months of the year.
They shall also sacrifice to the Lord a young goat [as a sin offering], besides the continual burnt offering, and its sprinkling.
And on the fourteenth day of the first month shall be the Passover to the Lord.
And on the fifteenth day of the same month shall be the solemn feast; unleavened bread shall be eaten for seven days.
On the first day there will be a holy convocation; you shall do no servile work.
And you shall offer a burnt offering to the Lord, [namely] two calves from the flock, and one ram, and seven lambs a year old, which shall be without blemish.
Their cake will be made of fine flour kneaded with oil; you will offer three-tenths of it for each calf, and two-tenths for the ram;
You will also offer a tenth for each of the seven lambs.
And a goat [as an offering] for sin to make atonement for you.
You shall offer these things, besides the morning burnt offering, which is the continual burnt offering.
You shall offer according to these things in each of these seven days the meat of the sacrifice made by fire as a pleasing aroma to the Lord; this shall be offered in addition to the continual burnt offering, and its sprinkling.
And on the seventh day you shall have a holy convocation; you shall do no servile work.
And on the day of the first fruits, when you offer the new cake to the Lord, at the end of your weeks, you shall have a holy convocation; you shall do no servile work.
And you shall offer as a burnt offering, a pleasing aroma to the Lord, two calves from the flock, one ram, and seven lambs a year old.
And their cake will be of fine flour kneaded with oil, three-tenths for each calf, and two-tenths for the ram.
And one-tenth for each of the seven lambs.
And a young goat, to make propitiation for you.
You shall offer them besides the continual burnt offering and its cake; they shall be without blemish, with their sprinklings.
And on the first day of the seventh month you shall have a holy convocation; you shall do no servile work; it shall be a day of jubilation for you.
And you shall offer as a burnt offering, a pleasing aroma to the Lord, a calf from the flock, a ram, and seven lambs a year old without blemish.
And their cake will be of fine flour kneaded with oil, three-tenths for the calf, two-tenths for the ram;
And a tenth for each of the seven lambs;
And a young male goat as a sin offering, to make atonement for you.
Besides the burnt offering of the beginning of the month and its cake, and the continual burnt offering and its cake, and their sprinklings, according to their ordinance, as a pleasing aroma of a sacrifice made by fire to the Lord.
And on the tenth day of this seventh month you shall have a holy convocation, and you shall afflict your souls; you shall do no work.
And you shall offer as a burnt offering, a pleasing aroma to the Lord, a calf from the flock, a ram, and seven lambs a year old, which shall be without blemish;
And their cake will be of fine flour kneaded with oil, three-tenths for the calf, and two-tenths for the ram.
And one-tenth for each of the seven lambs.
A young goat [also as a sin offering], besides [the sin offering], which is made on the day of atonement, and the continual burnt offering and its cake, with their sprinklings.

And on the fifteenth day of the seventh month you shall have a holy convocation, you shall do no servile work, and you shall celebrate the solemn feast to the Lord for seven days.

And you shall offer as a burnt offering, which shall be a sacrifice made by fire as a pleasing aroma to the Lord, thirteen calves taken from the flock, two rams, [and] fourteen lambs a year old, which shall be without blemish;

And their cake will be made of fine flour kneaded with oil, three-tenths for each of the thirteen calves, and two-tenths for each of the two rams,

And one-tenth for each of the fourteen lambs.

And a young goat [as a sin offering], besides the continual burnt offering, its cake, and its sprinkling.

And on the second day you shall offer twelve calves taken from the flock, two rams, [and] fourteen lambs a year old, without blemish;

With the cakes and the sprinkling for the calves, for the rams, and for the lambs, according to their number, [and] as it should be done.

And a young goat [as a sin offering], besides the continual burnt offering, and its cake, with their sprinklings.

And on the third day you shall offer eleven calves, two rams, [and] fourteen lambs a year old, without blemish;

And the cakes and the sprinklings for the calves, for the rams and for the lambs, shall be according to their number, [and] as they should be done.

And a goat [as a sin offering], besides the continual burnt offering, its cake, and its sprinkling.

And on the fourth day you shall offer ten calves, two rams, [and] fourteen lambs a year old, without blemish;

The cakes and the sprinkling for the calves, for the rams, and for the lambs, shall be according to their number, [and] as it should be done.

And a young goat [as a sin offering], besides the continual burnt offering, its cake, and its sprinkling.

And on the fifth day you shall offer nine calves, two rams, [and] fourteen lambs a year old, without blemish.

And the cakes and the sprinklings for the calves, for the rams, and for the lambs, shall be according to their number, and as they should be done.

And a goat [as a sin offering], besides the continual burnt offering, its cake, and its sprinkling.

And on the sixth day you shall offer eight calves, two rams and fourteen lambs a year old, without blemish;

And the cakes, and the sprinkling for the calves, for the rams, and for the lambs shall be according to their number, [and] as it should be done.

And a goat [as a sin offering], besides the continual burnt offering, its cake, and its sprinkling.

And on the seventh day you shall offer seven calves, two rams, [and] fourteen lambs a year old without blemish;

And the cakes and the sprinkling for the calves, for the rams, and for the lambs, shall be according to their number, [and] as it should be done.

And a goat [as a sin offering], besides the continual burnt offering, its cake, and its sprinkling.

And on the eighth day you shall have a solemn assembly; you shall do no servile work.

And you shall offer as a burnt offering, which shall be a sacrifice made by fire as a pleasing aroma to the Lord, one calf, one ram, [and] seven lambs a year old without blemish;

The cakes and the sprinklings for the calf, for the ram, and for the lambs, shall be according to their number, and as they must be done;

And a goat [as a sin offering], besides the continual burnt offering, its cake, and its sprinkling.

You shall offer these things to the Lord at your solemn feasts, besides your vows, and your freewill offerings, according to your burnt offerings, your cakes, your sprinklings, and your peace offerings.

And Moses spoke to the children of Israel according to all the things that the Lord had commanded him.

Moses also spoke to the leaders of the tribes of the children of Israel, saying, "This is what the Lord has commanded."

When a man makes a vow to the Lord, or makes an oath, expressly binding himself upon his soul, he shall not break his word, [but] he shall do according to all things which have gone out of his mouth.

But when a woman makes a vow to the Lord, and has expressly bound herself in her youth, [while still] in her father's house;

And that her father will have heard her vow, and her obligation by which she will have bound herself upon her soul, and that her father will have said nothing to her; all her vows will be valid, and every obligation by which she will have bound herself upon her soul will be valid.

But if her father disowns her on the day he hears it, none of her vows and none of the obligations she has sworn to herself will stand, and the Lord will forgive her, because her father has disowned her.

If, having a husband, she has [bound herself] by some vow, or by something that she has lightly uttered from her mouth, by which she has bound herself on her soul;

If her husband heard it, and on the very day he heard it he said nothing to her, her vows will be valid, and the obligations by which she bound herself on her soul will be valid.

But if on the day her husband hears it he disavows her, he will have broken the vow by which she bound herself, and what she lightly uttered with her mouth, in which she bound herself upon her soul; the Lord will forgive her.

But the vow of the widow, or of the divorced woman, [and] everything to which she has bound herself on her soul, shall be valid against her.

If [still] in her husband's house she has made a vow, or if she has expressly bound herself on her soul by oath;

And if her husband, having heard it, said nothing to her and did not disavow her, all her vows will be valid, and every obligation she has bound herself to on her soul will be valid.

But if her husband expressly broke them on the day he heard them, nothing that came out of her mouth, whether her vows or an obligation made on her soul, will be valid, because her husband broke them; and the Lord will forgive her.

Her husband will either ratify or break every vow and every obligation made by oath, to afflict the soul.

If her husband said absolutely nothing to her from one day to the next, he will have ratified all her vows and all her obligations, he will have, [I say], ratified them, because he said nothing to her on the day he heard her.

But if he expressly broke them after he had heard them, he will bear the iniquity of his wife.

These are the ordinances that the Lord gave to Moses concerning a man and his wife, and a father and his daughter, while he was still in his father's house in his youth.

The Lord also spoke to Moses, saying:

Take vengeance on the children of Israel against the Midianites, and then you will be gathered to your people.

Moses then spoke to the people, saying, "Let some of you prepare for war and go against Midian to execute the Lord's vengeance on Midian."

You shall send to war a thousand [men] from each Tribe, from all the tribes of Israel.

So, from among the thousands of Israel, a thousand men from each Tribe were given, who were twelve thousand men equipped for war.

And Moses sent them to war, [namely] a thousand from each Tribe, and with them Phinehas, son of Eleazar the Priest, who had the vessels of the Sanctuary, and the trumpets of sound in his hand.

So they went to war against Midian, as the Lord had commanded Moses, and they killed all of its males.

They also killed the Kings of Midian, besides the others who were killed there, [namely] Evi, Rekem, Zur, Hur, and Rebah, five Kings of Midian; they also put Balaam son of Behor to the edge of the sword.

And the children of Israel took captive the women of Midian, with their little children, and plundered all their cattle and flocks, and all that was in their power.

They burned all their cities, their homes, and all their castles;

And they took all the plunder and all the spoils, both of men and of livestock.

Then they brought the prisoners, the plunder, and the spoil to Moses and Eleazar the Priest, and to the assembly of the children of Israel, at the camp in the fields of Moab, which are near the Jordan of Jericho.

Then Moses and Eleazar the Priest, and all the leaders of the assembly, went out to meet them outside the camp.

And Moses became very angry with the captains of the army, the commanders of thousands, and the commanders of hundreds, who were returning from that war exploit.

And Moses said to them, "Have you not kept all the women alive?"

These are the ones who, at Balaam's word, gave the children of Israel the opportunity to sin against the Lord at Pehor, which brought the plague upon the assembly of the Lord.

Now kill every male among the little children, and kill every woman who has had sexual relations with a man.

But you shall keep alive all the young girls who have not had the company of a man. Furthermore, remain outside the camp for seven days. Whoever kills anyone, or touches anyone who has been killed, must purify themselves on the third and seventh days, both you and your captives.

You shall also purify all your garments, and all that is made of leather, and all articles of goat's hair, and all wooden vessels.

And Eleazar the Priest said to the fighting men who had gone into battle: This is the ordinance and the Law which the Lord commanded Moses.

Generally gold, silver, bronze, iron, tin, lead;

Everything that can pass through the fire, you shall pass through the fire, and it will be clean; only it shall be purified with sprinkling water; but you shall pass through water everything that cannot pass through the fire.

You will also wash your clothes on the seventh day, and you will be clean, then you will go into the camp.

And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

Take an inventory of the spoils, and of everything that was taken away, both people and animals, you and Eleazar the Priest, and the leaders of the elders of the congregation.

And divide the spoils equally between the combatants who went to war, and the entire assembly.

You shall also raise up for the Lord a tribute of the fighting men who went to battle, [namely] five hundred and one, both persons and oxen, donkeys and sheep.

It will be taken from their half, and you shall give it to Eleazar the Priest, as an offering raised to the Lord.

And from the [other] half that belongs to the children of Israel, you shall take fifty-one of them, both persons and oxen, donkeys, sheep and all [other] animals, and you shall give it to the Levites who have the charge of guarding the pavilion of the Lord.

And Moses and Eleazar the Priest did as the Lord had commanded Moses.

Now the spoils that remained from the plunder that the people who had gone to war had made were six hundred and seventy-five thousand sheep;

Of seventy-two thousand oxen;

Of sixty-one thousand donkeys.

And as for the women who had not had the company of a man, [they were] in all thirty-two thousand souls.

And half of the spoils, [namely] the share of those who had gone to war, amounted to three hundred and thirty-seven thousand five hundred sheep.

Whose tribute to the Lord, in respect of sheep, was six hundred and seventy-five.

And to thirty-six thousand oxen; of which the tribute to the Lord, as regards the oxen, was seventy-two oxen.

And to thirty thousand five hundred donkeys; of which the tribute to the Lord, as regards the donkeys, was sixty-one donkeys.

And to sixteen thousand people; whose tribute to the Lord was thirty-two people.

And Moses gave to Eleazar the priest the tribute of the Lord's exalted offering, as the Lord had commanded him.

And the other half belonged to the children of Israel, which Moses had taken from the men who had gone to war.

Now, of that half which belonged to the assembly, and which amounted to three hundred and thirty-seven thousand five hundred sheep;

Thirty-six thousand oxen;

Thirty thousand five hundred donkeys;

And to sixteen thousand people;

From this half, [I say], which belonged to the children of Israel, Moses took fifty-one, both persons and beasts, and gave them to the Levites who had the charge of guarding the pavilion of the Lord, as the Lord had commanded him.

And the captains who were in charge of thousands of the army, both the commanders of thousands and the commanders of hundreds, approached Moses,

And they said to him, "Your servants have counted the fighting men under our command, and not one is missing."

That is why we offer the Lord's offering, each one of us what we found we had, gold jewelry, garters, bracelets, rings, earrings, and necklaces, to make atonement for ourselves before the Lord.

And Moses and Eleazar the Priest received from them the gold, [namely] every piece of work.

And all the gold of the raised offering that was presented to the Lord by the commanders of thousands and the commanders of hundreds, amounted to sixteen thousand seven hundred and fifty shekels.

[But] the soldiers each kept for themselves what they had looted.

So Moses and Eleazar the Priest took commanders of thousands and commanders of hundreds of that gold, and brought it to the Tabernacle of Meeting, as a memorial for the children of Israel, before the Lord.

Now the children of Reuben and the children of Gad had a great many livestock, and in very great quantity; and having seen the land of Jazer, and the land of Gilead, behold, [they perceived that] that place was suitable for keeping livestock.

So the children of Gad and the children of Reuben came and spoke to Moses and Eleazar the priest and to the leaders of the assembly, saying:

Hataroth, and Dibon, and Jahzer, and Nimrah, and Heshbon, and Elhaleh, and Shebam, and Nebo, and Behon;

This land, which the Lord struck down before the assembly of Israel, is a land suitable for keeping livestock, and your servants have livestock.

So they said, "If we have found favor in your sight, let this land be given to your servants as a possession; [and] do not make us cross the Jordan."
But Moses answered the children of Gad and the children of Reuben, "Will your brothers go to war, and will you remain here?"
Why do you discourage the children of Israel from going over to the land that the Lord has given them?
That is what your fathers did when I sent them from Kadesh-barne to scout the land. For they went up to the valley of Eschol, and saw the land, and then they made the children of Israel lose heart, so that they would not enter the land that the Lord had given them.
Therefore the anger of the Lord was kindled that day, and he swore, saying:
If the men who came up out of Egypt, from the age of twenty years and above, see the land for which I swore to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob; for they did not persevere in following me.
Except for Caleb, son of Jephunneh the Kenisyan, and Joshua son of Nun; for they persevered in following the Lord.
So the anger of the Lord was kindled against Israel, and he made them wander in the wilderness forty years, until the whole generation that had done what was displeasing to the Lord was consumed.
And behold, you have placed yourselves in the place of your fathers, like a race of sinful men, to increase the fierceness of the Lord's anger against Israel.
If you turn away from him, he will continue to leave him in the desert, and you will destroy all this people.
But they approached him and said, "We will build partitions here for our flocks, and the cities will be for our families."
And we will prepare ourselves to march swiftly before the children of Israel, until we have brought them into their place; but our families will remain in the walled cities, because of the inhabitants of the land.
We will not return to our homes until each of the children of Israel has taken possession of his inheritance;
And we will possess nothing in inheritance with them beyond the Jordan, nor further; because our inheritance will have fallen to us on this side of the Jordan toward the east.
And Moses said to them, "If you do this, and prepare yourselves before the Lord to go to war;
And let each of you, equipped, cross the Jordan before the Lord, until he has driven his enemies out from before him;
And let the land be subjugated before the Lord, and then let you return, then you will be innocent before the Lord and before Israel; and this land will be yours to possess before the Lord.
But if you do not do this, behold, you will have sinned against the Lord; and know that your sin will find you.
Therefore, build cities for your families and enclosures for your flocks, and do as you have said.
Then the children of Gad and the children of Reuben spoke to Moses, saying, "Your servants shall do as my Lord has commanded."
Our little children, our wives, our flocks, and all our animals will remain here in the cities of Gilead.
And your servants will pass by, each armed, to go to war before the Lord, ready to fight, as my Lord has spoken.
Then Moses commanded concerning them Eleazar the Priest, Joshua son of Nun, and the heads of the fathers of the Tribes of the children of Israel;
And he said to them, "If the children of Gad and the children of Reuben cross the Jordan with you, all armed and ready to fight before the Lord, and the land is subjugated to you, then you shall give them the land of Gilead as a possession.”

But if they do not go over armed with you, they will have a possession among you in the land of Canaan.

And the children of Gad, and the children of Reuben answered, saying, We will do as the Lord has spoken to your servants.

We will go over armed before the Lord to the land of Canaan, so that we may possess for our inheritance what is beyond the Jordan.

So Moses gave to the children of Gad, and to the children of Reuben, and to the half-tribe of Manasseh, son of Joseph, the kingdom of Sihon, king of the Amorites; and to the kingdom of Hog, king of Bashan, the land with its cities, according to the boundaries of the cities of the land around.

Then the children of Gad rebuilt Dibon, Hataroth, Haroher, Hatroth-Sophan, Jahzer, Jogbeha, Beth-nimrah and Beth-haran were walled cities. They also made partitions for the flocks.

And the children of Reuben rebuilt Heshbon, Elhaleh, Kirjathajim, Nebo, and Bahal-mehon, and Sibmah; whose names they changed, and they gave names to the cities which they rebuilt.

Now the descendants of Machir, son of Manasseh, went to Gilead, and took it, and dispossessed the Amorites who were there.

So Moses gave Gilead to Machir, son of Manasseh, who lived there.

Jair, son of Manasseh, also went away and took their towns and called them Jair's towns.

And Nobah went away, and took Kenath with the cities under its jurisdiction, and called it Nobah after himself.

These are the accounts of the children of Israel, who came out of the land of Egypt, in their bands, under the leadership of Moses and Aaron.

For Moses wrote down their displacements, by their tramplings, according to the commandment of the Lord; these are therefore their tramplings according to their displacements.

So the children of Israel set out from Rahmeses on the fifteenth day of the first month, the day after the Passover, and they went out with a show of hands, in the sight of all the Egyptians.

And the Egyptians buried those whom the Lord had struck down among them, [namely] all the firstborn; even the Lord had executed his judgments on their gods.

And the children of Israel, having departed from Rahmeses, camped at Succoth.

And having left Succoth, they camped at Etham, which is at the end of the desert.

And having departed from Etham, they turned against Pi-hahiroth, which is opposite Bahal-tsephon, and encamped before Migdol.

And having departed from before Pi-hahiroth, they passed through the sea into the desert, and traveled three days' journey through the desert of Etham, and camped at Marah.

And having departed from Marah, they came to Elim, where there were twelve springs of water, and seventy palm trees, and they camped there.

And having left Elim, they camped near the Red Sea.

And having departed from the Red Sea, they camped in the desert of Sin.

And having departed from Alus, they camped at Rephidim, where there was no water for the people to drink.

And having departed from Rephidim, they camped in the desert of Sinai.

And having left the Sinai desert, they camped at Kibroth-taava.

And having departed from Kibroth-taava, they camped at Hazeroth.

And having departed from Hazeroth, they camped at Rithma.

 And having left Libna, they camped at Rissa.
 And having left Rissa, they camped near Kehelath.
 And having set out from towards Chehelath, they camped in the mountain of Sepher.
 And having set out from the mountain of Sepher, they camped at Harada.
 And having left Harada, they camped at Makheloth.
 And having left Mithka, they camped at Hasmona.
 And having departed from Hasmona, they camped at Moseroth.
 And having left Moséroth, they camped at Béné-jahakan.
 And having left Béné-jahakan, they camped at Hor-guidgad.
 And having left Hor-guidgad, they camped near Jotbath.
 And having departed from before Jotbath, they camped at Habrona.
 And having left Habrona, they camped at Hetsjon-guéber.
 And having departed from Hezion-geber, they camped in the desert of Zin, which is Kadesh.
 And having departed from Kadesh, they camped in the mountain of Hor, [which is] at the end of the land of Edom.
 And Aaron the Priest went up Mount Hor, according to the command of the Lord, and died there in the fortieth year after the children of Israel had come out of the land of Egypt, on the first day of the fifth month.
 And Aaron was one hundred and twenty-three years old when he died on Mount Hor.
 Then the Canaanite, King of Harad, who lived towards the South in the land of Canaan, learned that the children of Israel were coming.
 And having set out from the mountain of Hor, they camped at Tsalmona.
 And having left Tsalmona, they camped at Punon.
 And having left Punon, they camped at Oboth.
 And having departed from Oboth, they camped at Hije-habarim, on the borders of Moab.

 And having left Hijim, they camped at Dibon-gad.
 And having left Dibon-gad, they camped at Halmon near Diblatajim.
 And having set out from Halmon towards Diblatajim, they camped at the mountains of Habarim against Nebo.
 And having departed from the mountains of Habarim, they camped in the countryside of Moab, near the Jordan of Jericho.
 And they camped by the Jordan, from Beth-jesimoth to Abel-shittim, in the countryside of Moab.
 And the Lord spoke to Moses in the fields of Moab by the Jordan of Jericho, saying: Speak to the children of Israel, and say to them: Since you are about to cross the Jordan [to enter] the land of Canaan;
 Drive out from before you all the inhabitants of the land, and destroy all their paintings, ruin all their cast images, and demolish all their high places.
 And take possession of the land and live in it; for I have given you the land to possess.
 You will inherit the land by lot according to your families. To those who are more numerous you will give more inheritance, and to those who are fewer you will give less inheritance; each will have according to what was allotted to them by lot, and you will inherit according to the tribes of your fathers.
 But if you do not drive out the inhabitants of the land from before you, it will come to pass that those of them whom you have left behind will be like thorns to your eyes, and like pricks at your sides, and they will press you close in on the land in which you dwell.
 And it will come to pass that I will do to you exactly as I intended to do to them.

The Lord also spoke to Moses, saying:

Command the children of Israel, and say to them: Because you are going to enter the land of Canaan, this [will be] the land that will fall to you as an inheritance, the land of Canaan according to its borders.

Your southern border will extend from the Desert of Zin along Edom; so that your southern border will begin at the end of the Salt Sea towards the East.

And this border will turn from the South towards the ascent of Hakrabbim, and will pass as far as Zin; and it will end on the side of the South, at Kadesh-barneh, and will also go out to Hazar-addar, and will pass as far as Hazmon.

And this border will turn from Hatzmon to the Wadi of Egypt; and it will end at the sea.

And as for the western border, you will have the great sea, and its boundaries; this will be your western border.

And this will be your northern border; from the great sea you will mark the mountain of Hor as your boundary.

And from Mount Hor you shall mark as your boundary the entrance to Hamath; and this border shall extend towards Zedad.

And this border will extend to Ziphron, and it will end at Hazar-henan; this will be your northern border.

Then you will mark out your boundaries towards the East from Hazar-henan towards Sepham.

And this border will descend from Sepham to Riblat, on the eastern side of Hajin; and this border will descend and extend along the sea from Kinnereth to the east.

And this border will go down to the Jordan, and extend to the salt sea; such will be the land that you will have according to its boundaries all around.

And Moses commanded the children of Israel, saying: This is the land which you shall inherit by lot, which the Lord has commanded to be given to nine Tribes, and to half of one Tribe.

For the Tribe of the children of Reuben according to the families of their fathers, and the Tribe of the children of Gad, according to the families of their fathers, took their inheritance; [and] the half-Tribe of Manasseh also took its inheritance. Two tribes, [I say], and half of a Tribe, took their inheritance this side of the Jordan from Jericho, on the side of the Levant.

And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

These are the names of the men who will divide the land among you: Eleazar the priest, and Joshua son of Nun.

You will also take one of the leaders from each Tribe to divide the land.

And these are the names of these men. For the Tribe of Judah, Caleb, son of Jephunneh.

For the Tribe of the children of Simeon, Samuel, son of Hammiud.

For the Tribe of Benjamin, Elidad, son of Kislou.

For the Tribe of the children of Dan, the one who is its leader, Bukki, son of Jogli.

The children of Joseph, for the Tribe of the children of Manasseh, whose leader is Hanniel, son of Ephod.

For the Tribe of the children of Ephraim, the one who is its leader, Kemuel, son of Siphthan.

For the Tribe of the children of Zebulun, the one who is its leader, Elizaphan, son of Parnach.

For the Tribe of the children of Issachar, the one who is its leader, Paltiel, son of Hazan.

For the Tribe of the children of Asher, whose leader is Ahihud, son of Selomi.

And for the Tribe of the children of Naphtali, the one who is its leader, Pedahel, son of Hammiud.

These are the ones whom the Lord commanded to divide the inheritance among the children of Israel in the land of Canaan.

And the Lord spoke to Moses in the fields of Moab by the Jordan of Jericho, saying: Command the children of Israel to give some of their inheritance to the Levites to live in. You shall also give them the suburbs surrounding these cities.

They will therefore have the cities to live in; and the suburbs of these cities will be for their cattle, for their possessions, and for all their animals.

The suburbs of the cities that you will give to the Levites shall be a thousand cubits all around from the outside wall of the city.

And you shall measure from outside the city on the east side, two thousand cubits; and on the south side, two thousand cubits; and on the west side, two thousand cubits; and on the north side, two thousand cubits; and the city shall be in the middle: these shall be the suburbs of their cities.

And of the cities that you will give to the Levites, there shall be six of refuge, which you shall establish so that the murderer may flee there; and besides these you shall give them forty-two cities.

All the cities that you will give to the Levites shall be forty-eight cities; you shall give them with their suburbs.

And as for the cities that you will give from the possession of the children of Israel, you will give more [from the portion of] those who have more, and you will give less [from the portion of] those who have less, each one will give of his cities to the Levites in proportion to the inheritance that he will possess.

Then the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

Speak to the children of Israel, and say to them: When you have crossed the Jordan to enter the land of Canaan;

Establish cities for yourselves as cities of refuge, so that the murderer who accidentally kills someone may flee there.

And these cities will be your refuge from him who has the right to avenge blood, and the murderer will not die until he has appeared in judgment before the assembly.

Of those cities that you will have given, there will be six of refuge for you.

Of these you shall establish three on this side of the Jordan, and you shall establish the other three in the land of Canaan, which shall be cities of refuge.

These six cities will serve as a refuge for the children of Israel, and for the stranger, and for the foreigner residing among them, so that whoever kills anyone unintentionally may flee there.

But if a man strikes another man with an iron instrument, and he dies, he is a murderer; the murderer shall be punished with death.

And if he struck him with a stone that he had in his hand, so that the man might die, and he dies, he is a murderer; the murderer shall be punished with death.

Likewise, if he struck him with a wooden instrument that he had in his hand, by which that man could die, and he dies, he is a murderer; the murderer shall be punished with death.

And he who has the right to avenge [the blood] will put the murderer to death; when he meets him, he may put him to death.

If he pushed him out of hatred, or if he threw something at him with premeditated intent, and he dies as a result;

Or if out of enmity he struck him with his hand, and he died, he who struck him shall be punished with death, for he is a murderer; he who has the right to take vengeance [for blood] may put him to death when he meets him.

But if by chance, without enmity, he pushed him, or if he threw something at him, but without intention;

Or some stone without having seen it, and that he dies from it, having made it fall on him, and that he dies from it, if he was not his enemy, and if he did not seek his destruction;

Then the assembly will judge between the one who struck, and the one who has the right to take vengeance [for bloodshed], according to these laws.

And the assembly shall deliver the murderer from the hand of him who has the right to avenge [blood], and shall bring him back to the city of his refuge, from which he had fled, and he shall remain there until the death of the high priest, who shall have been anointed with the holy oil.

But if the murderer leaves in any way outside the boundaries of the city of his refuge, where he had fled;

And if the one who has the right to avenge [blood] finds him outside the boundaries of the city of his refuge, and kills the murderer, he will not be guilty of murder. For he must remain in the city of his refuge until the death of the high priest; but after the death of the high priest the murderer shall return to the land of his possession.

And these things shall be for you as judgments in your generations, in all your dwellings.

He who puts a murderer to death shall do so on the testimony of two witnesses; but a single witness shall not be admitted as a testimony against anyone to put him to death.

You shall not take any price for the life of the murderer, because being wicked he deserves death; and he shall be put to death.

Nor shall you accept any price to let him flee to the city of his refuge; nor to let him return to live in the land until the death of the Priest.

And you shall not defile the land where you are; for blood defiles the land; and there shall be no atonement for the land for the blood which has been shed in it, except by the blood of him who shed it.

You shall not defile the land in which you are going to dwell, [and] in the midst of which I shall dwell; for I am the Lord who dwells in the midst of the children of Israel.

Now the heads of the fathers of the family of the children of Gilead, son of Machir, son of Manasseh, from among the families of the children of Joseph, approached and spoke before Moses and before the leaders who were the heads of the fathers of the children of Israel,

And they said: The Lord has commanded my Lord to give the land to the children of Israel as an inheritance by lot; and my Lord has received a command from the Lord to give the inheritance of Zelophehad our brother to his daughters.

If they are married to any of the children of the [other] Tribes of Israel, their inheritance shall be taken from the inheritance of our fathers, and shall be added to the inheritance of the Tribe of which they shall be; thus it shall be taken from the inheritance which has fallen to us by lot.

Even when the time of the Jubilee comes for the children of Israel, their inheritance will be added to the inheritance of the Tribe to which they belong; thus their inheritance will be cut off from the inheritance of our fathers.

And Moses commanded the children of Israel, according to the commandment of the mouth of the Lord, saying: What the Tribe of the children of Joseph says is true.

This is what the Lord commanded concerning the daughters of Zelophehad, saying: They shall marry whomever they please, but they shall be married into one of the families of the Tribe of their fathers.

Thus the inheritance will not be transferred between the children of Israel from Tribe to Tribe; for each of the children of Israel will hold to the inheritance of the Tribe of his fathers.

And every daughter who inherits any possession from among the Tribes of the children of Israel shall be married to someone from the family of her father's Tribe, so that each of the children of Israel may inherit the inheritance of his fathers.

Therefore, the inheritance will not be transferred from one Tribe to another, but each of the Tribes of the children of Israel will hold on to its inheritance.

The daughters of Zelophehad did as the Lord had commanded Moses.

For Mahla, Tirzah, Hogla, Milcah, and Noah, daughters of Zelophehad, married their uncles' children.

So they were married to those who were from the families of the children of Manasseh, son of Joseph; and their inheritance remained in the Tribe of their father's family.

These are the commandments and judgments that the Lord commanded through Moses to the children of Israel in the fields of Moab, near the Jordan of Jericho.

These are the words that Moses spoke to all Israel this side of the Jordan in the wilderness, in the open country, which is opposite the Red Sea, between Paran, Tophel, Laban, Hazereth, and Dizahab.

It takes eleven days from Horeb, by way of the mountain of Seir, to Kadesh-Barne. Now it came to pass in the fortieth year, on the first day of the eleventh month, that Moses spoke to the children of Israel according to all that the Lord had commanded him to say to them.

After he had defeated Sihon, King of the Amorites, who dwelt in Heshbon; and Hog, King of Bashan, who dwelt in Hastaroth [and] in Edrei.

Moses [therefore] began to proclaim this law this side of the Jordan, in the land of Moab, saying:

The Lord our God spoke to us at Horeb, saying: You have stayed long enough in this mountain.

Turn, and depart, and go to the mountain of the Amorites, and to all the surrounding places, in the countryside, in the mountains, and in the plain, and toward the South, and to the seashore, to the land of the Canaanites, and to Lebanon as far as the great river, the river Euphrates.

Look, I have set the land before you; go in and possess the land that the Lord swore to your fathers, to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, to give to them and to their descendants after them.

And I spoke to you at that time, and said to you: I cannot carry you alone.

The Lord your God has multiplied you, and today you are like the stars of heaven, so great is your number.

May the Lord, the God of your fathers, make you increase a thousand times more than you are, and bless you, as he has promised you.

How could I alone bear your sorrows, your burdens, and your lawsuits?

Choose wise, skillful, and respected men from among your tribes, and I will appoint them as your leaders.

And you answered me and said: It is good to do what you said.

So I took leaders from your Tribes, wise and respected men, and appointed them as leaders over you, governors over thousands, hundreds, fifties, and tens, and officers according to your Tribes.

Then I commanded your judges at that time, saying: Hear [the disputes that will be] between your brothers, and judge fairly between a man and his brother, and between the stranger who is with him.

You will not show partiality to the person on trial; you will hear the small as well as the great; you will fear no one, for the judgment belongs to God; and you will bring before me the case that is too difficult for you, and I will hear it.

And at that time I commanded you all the things that you should do.

Then we departed from Horeb, and we walked through all that great and dreadful wilderness which you saw, by the way of the mountain of the Amorites, as the Lord our God had commanded us, and we came as far as Kadesh-barne.

So I tell you: You have come to the mountain of the Amorites, which the Lord our God is giving us.

See, the Lord your God is setting the land before you; go up and possess it, just as the Lord, the God of your fathers, said to you: Do not be afraid, and do not be discouraged.

And you all came to me, and said: Let us send men ahead of us to reconnoiter the land, and to bring us back news of the way we should go up, and of the cities we should go to.

And this speech seemed good to me, so I took twelve men from among you, [namely] one man from each Tribe.

And they set out on their way, and having gone up into the mountain they came to the Escol stream, and surveyed the land.

And they took some of the fruit of the land in their hands and brought it to us; they gave us news and said to us, "The land that the Lord our God is giving us is good."

But you refused to go up, and you rebelled against the command of the Lord your God.

And you murmured in your tents, saying, "Because the Lord hated us, he brought us out of the land of Egypt, in order to deliver us into the hands of the Amorites to destroy us."

Where would we go up? Our brothers have melted our hearts, saying: The people are greater than we, and taller in stature; the cities are large and enclosed up to the heavens; and we have even seen the children of the Hanakins there.

But I tell you: Do not be afraid, and do not fear them.

The Lord your God, who goes before you, will himself fight for you, just as you saw him do for you in Egypt;

And in the desert, where you saw how the Lord your God carried you, as a man carries his son, all the way you walked, until you arrived at this place.

But despite this you still do not believe in the Lord your God;

Who went before you on the way, to find you a place to camp, walking by night in the pillar of fire, to give you light on the way you were to walk; and by day, in the cloud.

And the Lord heard the voice of your words, and became very angry, and swore, saying:

If none of the men of this wicked generation see this good country that I swore to give to your fathers.

If not Caleb, son of Jephunneh; he will see it, and I will give to him and his children the land on which he walked, because he persevered in following the Lord.

Even the Lord was angry with me because of you, saying, "And you also shall not enter it."

Joshua, son of Nun, who serves you, will enter it; strengthen him, for he is the one who will lead the children of Israel to possess this land.

And your little children, of whom you said that they would be prey; your children, [I say], who today do not know what good or evil is; they shall enter it, and I will give them this land, and they shall possess it.

But you, turn back and go into the desert by way of the Red Sea.

And you answered, and said to me: We have sinned against the Lord; we will go up and fight, as the Lord our God has commanded us; and each of you took up your weapons, and you set out to go up the mountain.

And the Lord said to me, "Tell them, 'Do not go up and do not fight (for I am not among you), so that you will not be defeated by your enemies.'"

This is what I told you, but you did not listen to me, and you rebelled against the command of the Lord, and you were proud, and went up on the mountain.

And the Amorite, who lived on that mountain, came out against you, and pursued you, as bees do, and defeated you from Seir to Hormah.

And when you returned you wept before the Lord, but the Lord did not listen to your voice, nor did he pay attention to you.

So you stayed in Kadesh for several days, according to the number of days you had stayed there.

So we turned back and went to the desert by the way of the Red Sea, as the Lord had told me, and we circled for a long time near Mount Seir.

And the Lord spoke to me, saying:

You have circled enough near this mountain, turn towards the North.

And command the people, saying: You are about to cross the border of your brothers, the descendants of Esau who live in Seir, and they will be afraid of you, but be on your guard.

Have no quarrel with them; for I will not give you anything of their land, not even enough to set the sole of your foot on, because I have given Esau the mountain of Seir as an inheritance.

You will buy food from them at a price of money, and you will eat it; you will also buy water from them at a price of money, and you will drink it.

For the Lord your God has blessed you in all the work of your hands; he has known the way that you have taken in this great wilderness, [and] the Lord your God has been with you these forty years, [and] you have lacked nothing.

Now we turned away from our brothers the children of Esau, who dwelt in Seir, from the way of the country, from Elath, and from Hezejongeber; and [from there] we turned away and passed by the way of the desert of Moab.

And the Lord said to me, "Do not treat the Moabites as enemies, and do not go to war with them; for I will not give you any of their land as an inheritance, because I have given Har as an inheritance to the children of Lot."

The Emins used to live there; they were a great people, and numerous, and of tall stature like the Hanakins.

And indeed they were known to the Rephaim as the Hanakins, and the Moabites called them Emins.

The Horites also formerly dwelt in Seir, but the children of Esau dispossessed them and destroyed them from before them, and they settled there in their place, as Israel did in the land of their inheritance which the Lord gave them.

[But] now get up, and cross the Zered stream; and we crossed the Zered stream.

Now the time that we traveled from Kadesh-barneh, until we crossed the Zered stream, was thirty-eight years, until all that generation, [namely] the fighting men, was consumed from the midst of the camp, as the Lord had sworn to them.

Therefore the hand of the Lord was against them to destroy them from the midst of the camp, until he had consumed them.

But it happened that after all the fighting men from among the people had been consumed by death;

The Lord spoke to me and said:

You will cross the border of Moab today, [namely] Har.

You shall approach the children of Hammon; you shall not treat them as enemies, and you shall have no quarrel with them; for I will not give you any of the land of the children of Hammon as an inheritance, because I gave it as an inheritance to the children of Lot.

This [country] was also known as the land of the Rephaim; [because] the Rephaim lived there before, and the Hammonites called them Zamzummins;

They were a great and numerous people, and of tall stature like the Hanakins, but the Lord caused them to be destroyed from before them, and they dispossessed them and lived in their place.

As he had done to the children of Esau who lived in Seir, when he destroyed the Horites before them; and so they dispossessed them, and lived there in their place to this day.

As for the Hauvians, who lived in Hazerim as far as Gaza, they were destroyed by the Caphtorins, who came out of Caphtor and settled in their place.

[The Lord also said]: Arise, and depart, and cross the Arnon River; See, I have given into your hand Sihon, the Amorite king of Heshbon, with his land; begin to take possession of it, and make war against him.

Today I will begin to cast terror and fear of you upon the peoples under all heavens, for when they hear of you they will tremble and be in anguish because of your presence.

So I sent messengers from the Desert of Kedemot to Sihon, King of Heshbon, with words of peace, saying:

I will pass through your country and I will take the main road, without turning aside to the right or to the left.

You will distribute food to me for money, so that I may eat; you will give me water for money, so that I may drink; only that I may pass through it with my feet.

As did the descendants of Esau who dwell in Seir, and the Moabites who dwell in Har, until I crossed the Jordan to enter the land that the Lord our God is giving us.

But Sihon, King of Heshbon, would not let us pass through his country, for the Lord your God had hardened his spirit and stiffened his heart, in order to deliver him into your hands, as it is today.

And the Lord said to me, "See, I have begun to give Sihon and his land to you; begin to possess his land, to hold it as an inheritance."

So Sihon went out against us, he and all his people, to fight in Jahats.

But the Lord our God delivered him into our hands, and we defeated him, his children, and all his people.

And at that time we took all its cities; and we destroyed in the manner of the forbidden all the cities where there were men, women, and little children, and we left no one left behind.

We only plundered the animals for ourselves, and the spoils of the cities we had taken.

From Haroher, which is on the bank of the Arnon River, and the city which is in the river, to Gilead, there was not a city that could protect itself from us; the Lord our God delivered them all into our hands.

But you did not approach the land of the children of Hammon, nor any place that borders the Jabbok stream, nor the cities of the mountain, nor any [place] that the Lord our God had forbidden us [to conquer].

So we turned and went up the road to Bashan, and Hog the King of Bashan came out against us with all his people to fight at Edrehi.

And the Lord said to me, "Do not be afraid of him, for I have given him into your hand, along with all his people and his land, and you shall do to him as you did to Sihon, king of the Amorites, who lived in Heshbon."

So the Lord our God also delivered into our hands Hog the King of Bashan, and all his people, and we defeated him so completely that we left no one left in his power.

At that same time we also took all his cities; [and] there was no city that we did not take from him, [namely] sixty cities, all the land of Argob of the kingdom of Hog in Bashan.

All these cities were enclosed by high walls, gates and bars, and besides that there were a great many unwallled cities.

And we destroyed them in the manner of the forbidden, as we had done to Sihon, King of Heshbon, destroying in the manner of the forbidden all the cities, the men, the women, and the little children.

But we plundered for ourselves all the animals, and the spoils of the cities.

So at that time we took the land of the two Kings of the Amorites, which were on this side of the Jordan, from the Arnon River to Mount Hermon.

[Now] the Sidonians call Hermon, Sirjon; but the Amorites call him Senir.

All the cities of the flatland and all Gilead, and all Bashan as far as Salcah and Edrehi, the cities of the Kingdom of Hog in Bashan.

For Hog King of Bashan was the only one left of the Rephaim. Behold, his bed, which is an iron bed, is it not in Rabbah of the children of Hammon? Its length is nine cubits, and its width four cubits, according to a man's cubit.

At that time therefore we possessed that land; [and] I gave to the Reubenites and the Gadites what is from Haroher, which is on the Arnon River, and half of the mountain of Gilead, with its cities.

And I gave to the half-tribe of Manasseh the rest of Gilead, and all Bashan, which was the kingdom of Hog; all the region of Argob by all Bashan, was called the land of the Rephaim.

Jair son of Manasseh took all the region of Argob, as far as the border of the Gesurites and the Mahacathites, and he named this land Bashan, Jair's towns, after himself, which they have had to this day.

I also gave Galahad to Makir.

But I gave to the Reubenites and the Gadites, from Gilead to the Arnon River, which is enclosed by the river, and its borders to the Jabbok River, which is the border of the children of Hammon;

And the countryside, and the Jordan, and [its] borders from Kinnereth to the sea of the countryside, which is the salt sea, below Ashdod from Pisgar towards the East.

At that time I commanded you, saying: The Lord your God has given you this land to possess; all you valiant men, cross over armed before your brothers, the children of Israel.

Let only your wives, your little children, and your livestock, [for] I know that you have a lot of livestock, remain in the cities that I have given you.

Until the Lord has given rest to your brothers as well as to you, and they too possess the land that the Lord your God is going to give them beyond the Jordan; then you shall each return to your possession, which I have given you.

At that time I also commanded Joshua, saying, "Your eyes have seen all that the Lord your God did to these two kings; the Lord will do the same to all the kingdoms to which you are going."

Do not fear them; for the Lord your God himself fights for you.

At that same time I also asked for mercy from the Lord, saying:

Eternal Lord, you have begun to show your servant your greatness and your mighty hand; for who is the Mighty God in heaven and on earth who can do works like yours, and whose strength is like your strength?

Let me pass over, I pray you, and let me see the good land that is beyond the Jordan, that good mountain, namely, Lebanon.

But the Lord was very angry with me because of you, and did not listen to me; but he said to me, "That is enough; do not speak to me about this matter again."

Go up to the top of this hill, and lift up your eyes to the west, and to the north, to the south, and to the east, and look with your eyes; for you will not cross this Jordan.

But give Joshua charge of it, and strengthen him, and reinforce him; for he is the one who will go over before this people, and who will put them in possession of the land that you will have seen.

So we remained in this valley opposite Beth-Pehor.

And now Israel, listen to these statutes and these rights that I am teaching you, to do them so that you may live, and enter the land that the Lord the God of your fathers is giving you, and possess it.

You shall not add to the word that I command you, nor subtract from it, in order to keep the commandments of the Lord your God which I command you [to keep].

Your eyes have seen what the Lord has done because of Bahal-pehor; for the Lord your God has destroyed from among you every man who went after Bahal-pehor.

But you who clung to the Lord your God, you are all alive today.

Look, I have taught you the statutes and the rights, as the Lord my God commanded me, so that you may do so in the midst of the land into which you are going to enter to possess it.

You will therefore keep them and do them; for this is your wisdom and your understanding before all the peoples, who, hearing these statutes, will say: This great nation is the only wise and understanding people.

For what nation is so great that it has its gods at its side, as we have the Lord our God in all that we call upon him?

And what nation is so great, that it has statutes and ordinances so just as this whole Law that I am setting before you today?

Only take heed to yourself, and carefully guard your soul, lest you forget the things which your eyes have seen, and lest they depart from your heart all the days of your life, but that you teach them to your children, and to your children's children. The day that you stood before the Lord your God at Horeb, after the Lord had said to me, "Assemble the people, so that I may make them hear my words, which they shall learn to fear me all the days that they live on the earth, and to teach them to their children;

And you approached and stood under the mountain. Now the mountain was all ablaze up to the middle of the sky, and there was darkness, a cloud, and gloom. And the Lord spoke to you from the midst of the fire; you heard a voice speaking, but you saw no resemblance to it, only the voice.

And he made you hear of his covenant, which he commanded you to observe, [namely] the ten words which he wrote on two tablets of stone.

The Lord also commanded me at that time to teach you the statutes and the rights, so that you may do them in the land into which you are going to pass to possess it.

Therefore, you must take good care of yourselves, for you have not seen any likeness to the day that the Lord your God spoke to you at Horeb out of the midst of the fire;

Lest you corrupt yourselves and make for yourselves some carved image, or any likeness of male or female;

Or the image of any beast that is on the earth, or the image of any bird that has wings, that flies in the heavens;

Or the image of any reptile that crawls on the earth; or the image of any fish that is in the waters under the earth.

Lest you lift up your eyes to heaven, and see the sun, the moon, and the stars, all the host of heaven, and be moved to bow down to them and serve them; for the Lord your God has given them as an inheritance to all the peoples under all the heavens. And the Lord took you and brought you out of Egypt, out of the iron furnace, so that you might be his people for his inheritance, as it is today.

But the Lord was angry with me because of your words, and he swore that I would not cross the Jordan, nor enter that good land which the Lord your God is giving you as an inheritance.

And indeed I am going to die in this country without crossing the Jordan; but you will cross it, and you will possess that good land there.

Take care that you do not forget the covenant of the Lord your God, which he made with you, and that you do not make for yourselves any carved image, or any likeness of anything, as the Lord your God has forbidden you.

For the Lord your God is a consuming fire; he is the Mighty One, who is jealous.

When you have fathered children, and have had children of your children, and have become accustomed to the land for a long time, if then you become corrupt, and make any carved image, or likeness of anything, and do what displeases the Lord your God, in order to provoke him to anger;

I call heaven and earth to witness against you today that you will surely perish at once in the land you are crossing the Jordan to possess, [and] you will not prolong your days there; but you will be utterly destroyed.

And the Lord will scatter you among the peoples, and only a few of you will remain among the nations, to whom the Lord will cause you to be taken.

And you will be enslaved there to gods that are the work of human hands, of wood and stone, which neither see nor hear, which neither eat nor smell.

But from there you will seek the Lord your God, and you will find him, because you will have sought him with all your heart and with all your soul.

When you are in distress, and all these things have happened to you, then at the last time you will return to the Lord your God and obey his voice.

Because the Lord your God is the strong and merciful God, he will not abandon you, he will not destroy you, and he will not forget the covenant of your fathers that he swore to them.

For inquire of the former times, which were before you, from the day that God created man on the earth, and from one end of the heavens to the other end, whether anything like this great thing has ever been made, or anything like it has ever been heard of.

[Knowledge], that a people heard the voice of God speaking out of the midst of the fire, as you heard it, and that they remained alive.

Or that God had put such a test as to come and take for himself a nation out of the midst of another nation, by trials, signs and wonders, by battles, and by a mighty hand, and by an outstretched arm, and by great and awesome things, according to all that the Lord our God did for you in Egypt, you who saw it.

This was shown to you so that you might know that the Lord is God, and there is no other besides him.

He made you hear his voice from heaven to instruct you, and he showed you his great fire on the earth, and you heard his words from the midst of the fire.

And because he loved your fathers he chose their descendants after them, and brought you out of Egypt from his presence, by his great power.

To drive out from before you nations greater and stronger than you, to bring you into their land, and to give it to you as an inheritance, as it is today.

Know therefore today, and remember in your heart, that the Lord is God in heaven and on earth, and there is no other.

Therefore keep his statutes and his commandments which I command you today, so that you and your children after you may prosper, and that you may prolong your days in the land which the Lord your God is giving you forever.

Then Moses separated three cities on this side of the Jordan toward the rising sun; So that the murderer who had killed his neighbor unintentionally, and without having hated him beforehand, might withdraw there; and that, fleeing to one of those cities, he might have his life saved.

[Knowledge], Bezer in the desert, in the land of the flat country, in [the portion] of the Reubenites; Ramoth in Gilead, in [the portion] of the Gadites; and Golan in Bashan, in [that] of those of Manasseh.

This is the Law that Moses proposed to the children of Israel;

The testimonies, the statutes, and the rights that Moses set forth to the children of Israel, after they had come out of Egypt;

Beyond the Jordan, in the valley opposite Beth-Pehor, in the land of Sihon, king of the Amorites, who lived in Heshbon, whom Moses and the children of Israel had defeated after coming out of Egypt.

And they possessed his land with the land of Hog, King of Bashan, two Kings of the Amorites who were beyond the Jordan, [towards] the rising sun.

From Haroher, which is on the bank of the Arnon stream, to the mountain of Zion, which is Hermon.

And all the countryside this side of the Jordan towards the East, as far as the sea of the countryside, under Ashdod of Pishgah.

So Moses called all Israel together and said to them, "Listen, Israel, to the statutes and ordinances that I am pronouncing to you today, as you hear them, so that you may learn them and keep them to do."

The Lord our God made a covenant with us at Horeb.

God did not make this covenant with our fathers, but with us, who are all alive here today.

The Lord spoke to you face to face on the mountain, out of the midst of the fire.

At that time I stood between the Lord and you to bring you the word of the Lord; because you were afraid of this fire, you did not go up the mountain, [and the Lord] said:

I am the Lord your God, who brought you out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage.

You shall have no other gods before me.

You shall not make for yourself a carved image, or any likeness of anything that is in heaven above, or that is on the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth.

You shall not bow down to them, nor serve them; for I am the Lord your God, the Mighty God who is jealous, and punishes the children for the iniquity of the fathers to the third and fourth generation of those who hate me.

And who shows mercy to a thousand [generations] to those who love me and keep my commandments.

You shall not take the name of the Lord your God in vain, for the Lord will not hold him innocent who takes his name in vain.

Keep the Sabbath day holy, as the Lord your God has commanded you.

You shall work six days, and you shall do all your work;

But the seventh day is a Sabbath to the Lord your God; you shall not do any work on that day, neither you, nor your son, nor your daughter, nor your male or female servant, nor your ox, nor your donkey, nor any of your animals, nor your foreigner who is in your towns, so that your male and female servants may rest as you do.

And remember that you were a slave in the land of Egypt, and that the Lord your God brought you out of there with a mighty hand and an outstretched arm; therefore the Lord your God commanded you to keep the Sabbath day.

Honor your father and your mother, as the Lord your God has commanded you, so that your days may be long, and so that you may prosper in the land that the Lord your God is giving you.

You shall not kill.

And you shall not commit fornication.

And you shall not steal.

And you shall not bear false witness against your neighbor.

You shall not covet your neighbor's wife, you shall not desire your neighbor's house, nor his field, nor his male servant, nor his female servant, nor his ox, nor his donkey, nor anything that is your neighbor's.

The Lord spoke these words to all your assembly on the mountain, out of the midst of the fire, the cloud, and the darkness, with a loud voice, and he spoke no more; then he wrote them on two tablets of stone, which he gave to me.

For it happened that as soon as you heard this voice from the middle of the darkness, because the mountain was all on fire, you approached me, [namely] all the chiefs of your Tribes and your elders;

And you say: Behold, the Lord our God has shown us his glory and his greatness, and we have heard his voice from the midst of the fire; today we have seen that God spoke with man, and that man remained alive.

And now why should we die? For this great fire will consume us; if we hear the voice of the Lord our God again, we will die.

For who is there, whoever he may be, who has heard, as we have, the voice of the living God, speaking out of the midst of the fire, and has remained alive?

Come near, and listen to all that the Lord our God will say; then you shall tell us all that the Lord our God has told you, and we shall hear it, and we shall do it.

And the Lord heard the voice of your words while you were speaking to me, and the Lord said to me, "I have heard the voice of the words of this people, which they have spoken to you; all that they have said, they have said well."

Oh, if only they would always have this same heart to fear me, and to keep all my commandments, so that they and their children might prosper forever.

Go, tell them: Go back to your tents.

But you, stay here with me, and I will tell you all the commandments, statutes, and rights that you shall teach them, so that they may do them in the land that I give them to possess.

Therefore, you must be careful to do them as the Lord your God has commanded you; you must not turn aside to the right or to the left.

You shall walk in all the way that the Lord your God has commanded you, so that you may live, and prosper, and prolong your days in the land that you shall possess.

These are the commandments, statutes, and rights that the Lord your God has commanded me to teach you, so that you may do them in the land that you are going to cross over to possess.

So that you may fear the Lord your God, keeping all these statutes and commandments that I command you all the days of your life, you, and your son, and your son's son, and that your days may be prolonged.

You will therefore listen to them, O Israel! and you will be careful to do them, so that you may prosper, and that you may greatly multiply in the land flowing with milk and honey, as the Lord, the God of your fathers, has said.

Listen, Israel, the Lord our God, the Lord is one.

You shall therefore love the Lord your God with all your heart, with all your soul, and with all your strength.

And these words that I command you today shall be in your heart.

You shall teach them carefully to your children, and you shall talk about them when you sit in your house, when you walk along the road, when you lie down, and when you get up.

And you shall bind them as a sign on your hands, and they shall be like frontlets between your eyes.

You shall also write them on the doorposts of your house and on your gates.

And it will come to pass that when the Lord your God brings you into the land that he swore to your fathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, to give you; into the great and good cities that you did not build;

In houses full of all goods that you did not fill; near wells dug that you did not dig; near vineyards and olive groves that you did not plant; you will eat and be satisfied.

[But] be careful that you do not forget the Lord who brought you out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage.

You shall fear the Lord your God, you shall serve him, and you shall swear by his name.

You shall not walk after other gods, among the gods of the peoples who will be around you.

For the strong and jealous [God], who is the Lord your God, is in your midst; lest the anger of the Lord your God be kindled against you, and he destroy you from the face of the earth.

You shall not put the Lord your God to the test, as you did at Massah.

You shall carefully observe the commandments of the Lord your God, and his testimonies, and his statutes which he has commanded you.

You shall therefore do what the Lord approves and finds right and good, so that you may prosper, and enter into the good land of which the Lord swore to your fathers, and possess it.

By driving out all your enemies from before you, as the Lord has spoken.

When your child asks you in the future, saying, "What do these testimonies, and these statutes, and these ordinances mean, which the Lord our God commanded you?"

Then you will tell your child: We were slaves of Pharaoh in Egypt, and the Lord brought us out of Egypt with a mighty hand;

And the Lord performed great and harmful signs and wonders in Egypt, against Pharaoh and all his house, as we have seen.

And he brought us out of there, to bring us into the land which he had sworn to our fathers to give us;

Thus the Lord commanded us to observe all these statutes, fearing the Lord our God, so that we may always prosper and our lives be preserved, as it is today.

And this will be our righteousness, [namely] when we have been careful to do all these commandments before the Lord our God, as he has commanded us.

When the Lord your God has brought you into the land that you are about to enter to possess, and has driven out many nations from before you, [namely], the Hittites, the Girgashites, the Amorites, the Canaanites, the Perizzites, the Hivites, and the Jebusites, seven nations greater and mightier than you;

And that the Lord your God will have delivered them into your hand: then you shall strike them, and you shall not fail to destroy them in the manner of the curse; you shall make no covenant with them, and you shall show them no mercy.

You shall not unite with them in marriage; you shall not give your daughters to their sons, nor shall you take their daughters for your sons.

For they would turn your sons away from me, and they would serve other gods; thus the anger of the Lord would be kindled against you, and would destroy you at once.

But you shall treat them in this way; you shall demolish their altars, you shall break their statues, you shall cut down their groves, and you shall burn their carved images in the fire.

For you are a people holy to the Lord your God; the Lord your God has chosen you to be a people precious to him out of all the peoples that are on the face of the earth;

It was not that you were more numerous than any other people, and that because of this the Lord loved you and chose you; for you were fewer in number than any other people.

But it is because the Lord loves you, and keeps the oath which he swore to your fathers, that the Lord rescued you with a mighty hand, and redeemed you from the house of bondage, from the hand of Pharaoh, King of Egypt.

Know therefore that the Lord your God is God, the Mighty God, the faithful one, who keeps the covenant and the gift to a thousand generations of those who love him and keep his commandments.

And he repays those who hate him, [who repays] each one to their face, to make them perish; he will not keep it long from the one who hates him, he will repay him to his face.

Therefore, pay attention to the commandments, statutes, and rights that I am commanding you today, so that you may do them.

And it will come to pass that if, after hearing these ordinances, you keep them and do them, the Lord your God will keep unto you the covenant and the grace which he swore unto your fathers.

And he will love you, and bless you, and multiply you; and he will bless the fruit of your womb, and the fruit of your land, your wheat, your new wine, and your oil, and the offspring of your cows, and the lambs of your flock, in the land which he swore to your fathers to give you.

You will be blessed more than all peoples; [and] there will be no barren male or female among you, nor among your animals.

The Lord will turn away from you all sickness, and he will not bring upon you any of the evil afflictions of Egypt that you have known, but he will bring them upon all those who hate you.

You shall therefore destroy all the peoples that the Lord your God gives over to you; your eye shall not spare them; and you shall not serve their gods, for that would be a snare to you.

If you say in your heart, "These nations are more numerous than I am, how can I dispossess them?"

Do not be afraid of them; [but] remember well what the Lord your God did to Pharaoh and to all the Egyptians;

Of these great trials which your eyes have seen, of the signs and wonders, and of the mighty hand, and of the outstretched arm by which the Lord your God brought you out [of Egypt]; so the Lord your God will do to all these peoples of whom you would be afraid.

Even the Lord your God will send hornets against them, until those who remain and those who have hidden from your sight are destroyed.

You shall not be afraid because of them; for the Lord your God, the mighty, great, and awesome God, is in your midst.

But the Lord your God will gradually uproot these nations from before you; you will not be able to overcome them at first, lest the beasts of the field multiply against you.

But the Lord your God will deliver them before you and terrify them with great terror until he has destroyed them.

And he will deliver their kings into your hands, and you will destroy their name from under heaven; and no one will be able to stand before you until you have exterminated them.

You shall burn in the fire the carved images of their gods; and you shall not covet or take for yourself the silver or gold that is on them, lest you be ensnared by it, for it is an abomination in the sight of the Lord your God.

Thus you shall not bring an abomination into your house, so that you do not become forbidden like that, [but] you shall abhor it exceedingly; and hate it exceedingly, for it [is] forbidden.

Be careful to do all the commandments that I am giving you today, so that you may live and multiply and enter the land that the Lord swore to your fathers, and possess it.

And remember all the way the Lord your God led you these forty years in the wilderness, to humble you and test you, to know what was in your heart, whether you would keep his commandments or not.

So he humbled you and made you hungry, but he filled you with manna, which neither you nor your ancestors had known, to teach you that man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that comes from the mouth of God.

Your garment has not aged on you, and your foot has not been trodden upon during these forty years.

Know therefore in your heart that the Lord your God disciplines you, as a man disciplines his child.

And keep the commandments of the Lord your God, to walk in his ways, and to fear him.

For the Lord your God will bring you into a good land, a land of streams of water, springs and deep pools, which flow out into the fields and mountains;

A land of wheat, barley, vines, fig trees, and pomegranates; a land of olive trees that bear oil, and a land of honey;

A land where you will not eat bread in want, [and] where you will lack nothing; a land whose stones [are] iron, and from whose mountains you will mine bronze.

You will eat and be satisfied, and you will bless the Lord your God for the good land he has given you.

Be careful that you do not forget the Lord your God, by not keeping his commandments, his rights, and his statutes that I am commanding you today.

And lest they eat and be satisfied and build fine houses and dwell in them;

And your large and small livestock being increased, and your silver and gold being multiplied, and all that you have being increased;

Then do not let your heart be lifted up, and do not forget the Lord your God, who brought you out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage.

Who made you walk through this great and terrible desert, [desert] of serpents, even [of] fiery serpents, and of scorpions, arid, where there is no water; [and] who brought you out of the water from a rock that was a pure flint,

Who gives you to eat in this desert the manna which your fathers did not know, in order to humble you, and to test you, in order to do you good at last.

And that you do not say in your heart: My power and the strength of my hand have obtained these abilities for me.

But you will remember the Lord your God, for it is he who gives you the power to acquire wealth, in order to confirm his covenant, which he swore to your fathers, as it is today.

But if you in any way forget the Lord your God, and go after other gods, and serve them, and bow down to them, I declare against you that you shall surely perish. You will perish like the nations that the Lord is destroying before you, because you have not obeyed the voice of the Lord your God.

Listen, Israel, today you are going to cross the Jordan to enter into nations greater and stronger than you, into cities great and walled up to heaven, to possess them; To a great and lofty people; [to] the children of Hanak, whom you know, and of whom you have heard it said: Who will be able to stand before the children of Hanak?

Know therefore today that the Lord your God, who passes before you, is a consuming fire. He will destroy them and subdue them before you; you will dispossess them and destroy them suddenly, as the Lord has told you.

Do not say in your heart when the Lord your God has driven them out from before you: It is because of my righteousness that the Lord has brought me into this land to possess it; for it is because of the wickedness of those nations that the Lord will drive them out from before you.

It is not for your righteousness or for the uprightness of your heart that you are entering their land to possess it; but it is because of the wickedness of those nations that the Lord your God is driving them out from before you; and in order to confirm the word that the Lord swore to your fathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. Know therefore that it is not for your righteousness that the Lord your God is giving you this good land to possess; for you are a stiff-necked people.

Remember, [and] do not forget that you greatly angered the Lord your God in this wilderness, [and] that from the day you came out of the land of Egypt until you arrived at this place, you have rebelled against the Lord.

Even at Horeb you greatly angered the Lord; therefore the Lord was angry with you, to destroy you.

When I went up into the mountain to receive the stone tablets, the tablets of the covenant that the Lord had made with you, I stayed in the mountain forty days and forty nights, neither eating bread nor drinking water.

And the Lord gave me two tablets of stone, written with the finger of God, and what was written on them were all the words that the Lord had spoken when he spoke with you on the mountain, out of the midst of the fire, on the day of the assembly.

And it came to pass that at the end of forty days and forty nights, the Lord gave me the two tablets of stone, which are the Tablets of the Covenant.

Then the Lord said to me, "Get up, go down quickly from here; for your people whom you brought out of Egypt have become corrupt; they have quickly turned aside from the way that I commanded them, and have made themselves a molten image."

The Lord also spoke to me, saying, "I have looked at this people, and behold, it is a stiff-necked people."

Leave me alone, and I will destroy them and blot out their name from under heaven, but I will make you into a nation more powerful and greater than this one.

So I withdrew and went down from the mountain. Now the mountain was all on fire, and I had the two Tablets of the Covenant in my two hands.

Then I looked, and behold, you had sinned against the Lord your God, and you had made yourselves a molten calf; you had quickly turned aside from the way that the Lord had commanded you.

Then I seized the two Tablets, threw them with both hands, and broke them before your eyes.

Then I prostrated myself before the Lord for forty days and forty nights, as before, without eating bread or drinking water, because of all your sin that you had committed, doing what was displeasing to the Lord, to provoke him to anger.

For I feared the anger and wrath with which the Lord was kindled against you to destroy you; and the Lord answered me again that time.

The Lord was also very angry with Aaron to destroy him, but at that time I also prayed for Aaron.

Then I took your sin that you had committed, [namely] the calf, and I burned it in the fire, I pounded it thoroughly until it was reduced to powder, and I threw the powder into the stream that flowed down from the mountain.

You also greatly angered the Lord in Taberah, Massah, and Kibrothtaavah.

And when the Lord sent you from Kadesh-barneh, saying, Go up and possess the land that I have given you, then you rebelled against the command of the Lord your God; you did not believe him, and you did not obey his voice.

You have been rebellious against the Lord from the day I knew you.

So I bowed down before the Lord for forty days and forty nights, during which I bowed down, because the Lord had said that he would destroy you.

And I prayed to the Lord, and I said to him, O Lord God! Do not destroy your people, and your inheritance which you redeemed by your greatness, [and] which you brought out of Egypt with a mighty hand.

Remember your servants Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob; do not look at the harshness of this people, nor at their wickedness, nor at their sin;

Lest the inhabitants of the land from which you brought us out should say: Because the Lord could not bring them into the land of which he had spoken to them, and because he hated them, he brought them out [from Egypt] to kill them in this wilderness.

However, they are your people and your inheritance, whom you brought out [from Egypt] by your great power and outstretched arm.

At that time the Lord said to me, "Cut for yourself two tablets of stone like the first ones, and come up to me on the mountain, and then make yourself an ark of wood."

And I will write on these Tablets the words that were on the first Tablets that you broke, and you shall put them in the Ark.

So I made an ark of Shittim wood, and I cut two tablets of stone like the first ones; and I went up into the mountain, having the two tablets in my hand.

And he wrote in these Tablets, as he had written the first time, the ten words which the Lord had spoken to you on the mountain, out of the midst of the fire, on the day of the assembly; then the Lord gave them to me.

I returned, I went down from the mountain; I put the Tablets in the Ark that I had made, and they remained there, as the Lord had commanded me.

The children of Israel set out from Beeroth Bene-Jahakan to go to Moserah. Aaron died there and was buried there, and Eleazar his son became priest in his place.

From there they marched towards Gudgod, and from Gudgod they [went] towards Jotbath, which is a land of torrents of water.

Now at that time the Lord had separated the Tribe of Levi to carry the Ark of the covenant of the Lord, to stand before the face of the Lord, to minister to him, and to bless in his Name, to this day.

Therefore Levi has no portion or inheritance with his brothers; [but] the Lord is his inheritance, as the Lord your God has spoken to him.

So I stood on the mountain, as at the first time, for forty days and forty nights; and the Lord answered me again that time; [so] the Lord would not destroy you.

But the Lord said to me, "Get up, go ahead of this people, so that they may enter the land I swore to their ancestors to give them, and possess it."

Now therefore, O Israel! what does the Lord your God require of you, except to fear the Lord your God, to walk in all his ways, to love him, and to serve the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul?

By keeping the commandments of the Lord, and his statutes, which I command you today, so that you may prosper.

Behold, the heavens, and the heavens of heavens, belong to the Lord your God; the earth also, and all that is in it.

[But] the Lord was pleased with your fathers only, to love them, and he chose you, their descendants after them, from among all the peoples; as it is today.

Circumcise, therefore, the foreskin of your heart, and do not stiffen your neck any longer.

For the Lord your God is the God of gods and the Lord of lords, the Strong, the great, the mighty, and the awesome; who does not show partiality, nor does he accept bribes;

Who gives justice to the orphan and the widow, who loves the stranger, to give him food and clothing.

Therefore you will love the stranger, for you were strangers in the land of Egypt. You shall fear the Lord your God, you shall serve him, you shall cling to him, and you shall swear by his name.

He is your praise, and he is your God; he has done for you these great and awesome things that your eyes have seen.

Your ancestors went down to Egypt, seventy souls in number; and now the Lord your God has made you like the stars of heaven, so great are you.

Therefore, love the Lord your God, and always keep what he wants you to keep, his statutes, his laws, and his commandments.

And know today that it is not your children who have known, and who have seen the punishment of the Lord your God, his greatness, his mighty hand, and his outstretched arm;

And his signs, and the works that he did in the midst of Egypt, against Pharaoh King of Egypt, and against all his land;

And what he did to the army of Egypt, to their horses and chariots, when he caused the waters of the Red Sea to cover them as they pursued you; for the Lord has destroyed them to this day;

And what he did for you in that desert, until you arrived at this place;

And what he did to Dathan and Abiram, the children of Eliab, the son of Reuben, [and] how the earth opened its mouth and swallowed them up, with their families and their tents, and all that was in their power, in the midst of all Israel;

But it is your eyes that have seen all the great works that the Lord has done.

You shall therefore keep all the commandments which I command you today, so that you may be strengthened, and that you may enter into possession of the land, into which you are going to possess it.

And so that you may prolong your days in the land that the Lord swore to your fathers to give them and their descendants, a land flowing with milk and honey.

For the land which you are about to enter to possess is not like the land of Egypt, from which you came, where you sowed your seed, and watered it with your foot, like a herb garden.

But the land you are about to cross over to possess is a land of mountains and plains, and it is watered by rain from the heavens.

It is a land that the Lord your God cares for, on which the Lord your God continually has his eyes, from the beginning of the year to its end.

Therefore, if you strictly obey my commandments, which I am giving you today, to love the Lord your God and to serve him with all your heart and with all your soul,

Then I will give your land the rain it needs in its season, the early and late rains, and you will gather in your wheat, your fine wine, and your oil.

I will also make grass grow in your field for your cattle; you will eat and be satisfied.

Be careful, lest your heart be deceived, and you turn away, and serve other gods, and bow down before them;

And may not the anger of the Lord be kindled against you, and may he not shut up the heavens so that there is no rain, and the earth does not yield its fruit, and you do not perish at once in this good land that the Lord is giving you.

Therefore, fix these words that I speak to you in your heart and in your understanding, and bind them as a sign on your hands, and let them be as frontlets between your eyes,
And teach them to your children, talking about them whether you sit in your house, or whether you walk along the road, or whether you lie down, or whether you get up.
You shall also write them on the doorposts of your house and on your gates.
So that your days and the days of your children may be multiplied in the land that the Lord swore to your fathers to give them, [that they may be multiplied] like the days of heaven on earth.
For if you carefully keep all these commandments that I command you to do, loving the Lord your God, walking in all his ways, and clinging to him;
Then the Lord will drive out all those nations from before you, and you will possess the land of the nations that are greater and mightier than you.
Every place where you set the sole of your foot shall be yours; your borders shall be from the desert to Lebanon; [and] from the river, which is the river Euphrates, to the Western Sea.
No one will be able to stand against you; the Lord your God will put the fear and terror of you throughout all the land on which you walk, as he has spoken to you.
Look, today I offer you both blessing and curse;
The blessing, if you obey the commandments of the Lord your God, which I am giving you today;
The curse, if you do not obey the commandments of the Lord your God, and if you turn aside from the way that I command you today, to walk after other gods that you have not known.
And when the Lord your God has brought you into the land that you are going to possess, then you shall pronounce the blessings, while you are on Mount Gerizim, and the curses, while you are on Mount Ebal.
Are not these mountains beyond the Jordan, on the road that leads to the setting sun, in the land of the Canaanites who dwell in the countryside, opposite Gilgal, near the plains of Moreh?
For you are about to cross the Jordan to enter the land that the Lord your God is giving you to possess; you will possess it and live in it.
Therefore, you will be careful to complete all the statutes and rights that I am proposing to you today.
These are the statutes and rights which you shall observe carefully, to do, when you are in the land which the Lord the God of your fathers has given you to possess, all the time that you live in this land.
You shall utterly destroy all the places where these nations, whose land you will possess, have served their gods, on the high mountains, and on the hillsides, and under every green tree.
You will also demolish their altars, you will break their statues, you will burn their groves with fire, you will smash the carved images of their gods to pieces, and you will destroy their name from that place.
You shall not do so to the Lord your God;
But you shall seek him where he dwells, and you shall go to the place that the Lord your God will choose out of all your tribes, to put his name there.
And you shall bring there your burnt offerings, your sacrifices, your tithes, and the offering lifted up from your hands, your vows, your freewill offerings, and the firstborn of your herds and flocks.
And you shall eat there before the Lord your God, and you shall rejoice, you and your families, in all the things which you have put your hand to, and in which the Lord your God has blessed you.
You will not do as we are doing here today, each according to their own wishes.
For you have not yet come to rest, and to the inheritance that the Lord your God is giving you.

You will therefore cross the Jordan, and you will live in the land that the Lord your God will give you as an inheritance, and he will give you rest from all your enemies who are around you, and you will live there securely.

And there will be a place that the Lord your God will choose to make his Name dwell there; you shall bring there all that I command you, your burnt offerings, your sacrifices, your tithes, the offering lifted up from your hands, and all the dearest things that you have vowed to the Lord.

And you shall rejoice in the presence of the Lord your God, you and your sons, and your daughters, your male and female servants, and the Levite who is in your towns, for he has no portion or inheritance with you.

Be careful not to offer up your burnt offerings in every place you see.

But you shall offer your burnt offerings in the place that the Lord will choose in one of your tribes, and you shall do there all that I command you.

However, you may kill animals and eat their flesh according to all the desires of your soul, in whatever city you dwell in, according to the blessing of the Lord your God, which he will have given you; both the unclean and the clean may eat of it, as one eats deer and stag.

Only you shall not eat the blood; but you shall pour it out on the earth like water.

You shall not eat in any city of your dwelling the tithes of your wheat, nor of your wine, nor of your oil, nor the firstborn of your herd and flock, nor what you have vowed, nor your freewill offerings, nor the offering lifted up from your hands; But you shall eat them before the Lord your God, in the place which the Lord your God will choose, you, your son, your daughter, your male servant, your female servant, and the Levite who is within your towns, and you shall rejoice before the Lord your God in that which you have laid your hand upon.

Take care, as long as you live on earth, not to abandon the Levite.

When the Lord your God has enlarged your territory, as he has spoken to you, and you say, "I will eat meat," because your soul has desired to eat meat, you may eat it according to all the desires of your soul.

If the place that the Lord your God will choose to put his Name there is far from you, then you shall slaughter some of your herd and flock that the Lord your God has given you, as I have commanded you, and you shall eat it in whatever town you dwell in, according to all the desires of your soul.

You may eat it just as one eats deer and stag. Both the unclean and the clean may eat it.

Only beware of eating blood; for the blood is the life; and you shall not eat the life with the flesh.

You shall not eat of it, but you shall pour it out on the earth like water.

You shall not eat of it, so that you and your children after you may prosper, when you have done what the Lord approves and finds right.

But you shall take the things which you have consecrated, which are with you, and what you have vowed, and you shall come to the place which the Lord will choose.

And you shall offer your burnt offerings, their flesh and their blood, on the altar of the Lord your God; but the blood of your [other] sacrifices shall be poured out on the altar of the Lord your God, and you shall eat the flesh of it.

Keep and listen to all these words that I command you, so that you and your children after you may prosper forever, when you have done what the Lord your God approves of, and finds good and right.

When the Lord your God has destroyed the nations before you, into whose land you are going to possess, and you have possessed it and are dwelling in their land,

Be careful, lest you be ensnared after them when they have been destroyed from before you; and lest you seek their gods, saying, As these nations served their gods, so I will do also.

You shall not do so to the Lord your God; for these nations have done to their gods all that is an abomination to the Lord, and that he hates; for they have even burned their sons and daughters in the fire to their gods.

You will take care to do everything I command you. You will add nothing to it, and you will subtract nothing from it.

If a prophet or one who dreams dreams arises among you, and performs some sign or wonder before you;

And let that sign or miracle of which he will have spoken to you come to pass, if he says to you: Let us go after other gods which you have not known, and let us serve them.

You shall not listen to the words of that prophet, nor to that dreamer of dreams, for the Lord your God is testing you to know whether you love the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul.

You shall walk after the Lord your God, you shall fear him, you shall keep his commandments, you shall obey his voice, you shall serve him, and you shall cling to him.

But that prophet or dreamer of dreams shall be put to death; because he has spoken of rebellion against the Lord your God, who brought you out of the land of Egypt, and redeemed you from the house of bondage, to lead you out of the way that the Lord your God commanded you to walk in; thus you shall exterminate the wicked from among you. When your brother, the son of your mother, or your son, or your daughter, or your beloved wife, or your close friend, who is as your soul, entices you, saying to you secretly, "Let us go and serve other gods," which neither you nor your fathers have known;

Among the gods of the peoples who are around you, whether near or far from you, from one end of the earth to the other:

Do not be lenient with him, do not listen to him, do not spare your eye from him, do not show him mercy, and do not hide him away.

But you will not fail to put him to death; your hand will be the first against him to put him to death, and then the hand of all the people.

And you shall stone him to death, because he sought to turn you away from the Lord your God, who brought you out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage.

So that all Israel may hear and be afraid, and that such a wicked deed may never again be done in your midst.

When you hear that in one of your cities that the Lord your God is giving you to live in, they will say:

Some wicked scoundrels have gone out from among you, who have stirred up the inhabitants of their city, saying, "Let us go and serve other gods," which you have not known.

Then you will search, you will inquire, you will carefully investigate; and if you find that what has been said is true and certain, and that such an abomination has been committed in your midst;

You shall surely put the inhabitants of this city to the edge of the sword; and you shall destroy it in the manner of the forbidden, with everything in it, [putting] even its animals to the edge of the sword.

And you shall gather in the middle of its place all its plunder, and you shall burn entirely with fire that city and all its plunder before the Lord your God; and it shall be a heap of ruins forever, never to be rebuilt.

And nothing of the forbidden shall remain in your hand, so that the Lord may turn from the fierceness of his anger, and have mercy on you, and be gracious to you, and multiply you, as he swore to your fathers.

Because you will have obeyed the voice of the Lord your God, to keep all his commandments that I command you today, so that you may do what the Lord your God approves and finds right.

You are the children of the Lord your God. Do not make any cuts or shave between your eyes for anyone who has died.

For you are a people holy to the Lord your God, and the Lord has chosen you out of all the peoples on earth to be a precious people to him.

You shall not eat any abominable thing.

These are the four-footed animals you may eat: the ox, the offspring of sheep and goats;

The deer, the fallow deer, the buffalo, the chamois, the roe deer, the wild ox, and the camel-parrot.

You may therefore eat from among the four-footed animals, from all those that have a divided hoof, a cloven foot, and that chew the cud.

But you shall not eat those that chew the cud [only], or that have a divided hoof and a cloven foot [only]; such as the camel, the hare, and the rabbit; for they chew the cud well, but they do not have a divided hoof; they shall be unclean for you.

The pig too, for it has divided hooves, but it does not chew the cud; it shall be unclean for you. You shall not eat any of their flesh, nor even touch their dead flesh.

You may eat of this from among all that is in the waters; you may eat of all that has fins and scales.

But you shall not eat anything that does not have fins or scales; it shall be unclean for you.

You will eat every bird clean.

But these are the ones you shall not eat: the eagle, the osprey, the falcon.

The Vulture, the Kite, and the Goshawk, according to their species;

And every raven, according to its kind;

The Owl, the Tawny Owl, the Cuckoo, and the Sparrowhawk, according to its species;

The Owl, the Owl, the Swan,

The Cormorant, the Pelican, the Diver,

The Stork, and the Heron according to their kind; and the Hoopoe, and the Bat.

And every flying reptile will be unclean for you; you shall not eat it.

But you may eat anything that flies, and anything that is clean.

You shall not eat any animal that dies of itself, but you may give it to the foreigner residing in your towns, and he may eat it, or you may sell it to a foreigner; for you are a people holy to the Lord your God. You shall not boil a young goat in its mother's milk.

You shall not fail to give a tithe of all the produce of what you have sown, which comes from your field, each year.

And you shall eat before the Lord your God, in the place which he will choose to make his Name dwell there, the tithes of your wheat, of your wine, of your oil, and the firstborn of your herd and flock, so that you may learn to fear the Lord your God always.

But when the way becomes so long that you cannot carry them, because the place that the Lord your God will choose to put his name there will be too far from you, when the Lord your God has blessed you;

Then you will convert them into silver, you will take the silver with you, and you will go to the place that the Lord your God will choose.

And you shall use the money for whatever your soul desires, whether herd or flock, wine or beer, and for whatever else your soul desires; and you shall eat it in the presence of the Lord your God, and you shall rejoice, you and your family.

You shall not abandon the Levite who is within your gates, because he has no portion or inheritance with you.

At the end of the third year you shall take all the tithes of your produce from that year, and you shall put them in your gates.

Then the Levite who has no portion or inheritance with you, and the foreigner, the orphan, and the widow who are in your towns, shall come and eat and be satisfied; so that the Lord your God may bless you in all the work of your hand to which you apply yourself.

Every seven years you will celebrate [the year of] release.

And this is the way [to celebrate the year] of release. Let every man who has the right to demand anything, that he may demand of his neighbor, grant release, and not demand it of his neighbor or his brother, when the release has been proclaimed, in honor of the Lord.

You may demand from the foreigner; but when you have to deal with your brother, you shall give him respite;

So that there may be no poor person among you; for the Lord will surely bless you in the land that the Lord your God is giving you as an inheritance to possess.

[Provided] only that you obey the voice of the Lord your God, and that you take care to do these commandments that I command you today.

Because the Lord your God has blessed you as he promised, you will lend on pledge to many nations, but you will not borrow on pledge. You will rule over many nations, but they will not rule over you.

When one of your brothers is poor among you, in any place of your dwelling, in the land that the Lord your God is giving you, you shall not harden your heart, nor tighten your hand against your brother, who is poor.

But you will not fail to open your hand to him, and to lend him on pledge, as much as he needs for his poverty, in which he will find himself.

Take heed to yourself, that you do not have in your heart any evil intention, and [that] you do not say: The seventh year, which is the year of release, is approaching; and that your eye being evil against your poor brother, so as not to give him anything, he does not cry out to the Lord against you, and that there is not sin in you.

You will not fail to give to him, and your heart will not give to him reluctantly; for because of this the Lord your God will bless you in all your work, and in everything that you lay your hand on.

For there will not be a lack of poor people in the land; therefore I command you, saying: Do not fail to open your hand to your brother, [namely], to the afflicted, and to the poor of your people in your land.

When one of your brothers, whether Hebrew or Hebrew woman, is sold to you, he shall serve you six years; but in the seventh year you shall set him free from your house.

And when you send him away free from your home, you shall not send him away empty. You shall not fail to load him with something from your flock, from your threshing floor, and from your winepress; you shall give him some of that with which the Lord your God has blessed you.

And remember that you were a slave in the land of Egypt, and that the Lord your God redeemed you from there; and that is why I am commanding you this today.

But if it happens that he says to you, "I must not leave your house," because he loves you and your home, and is happy with you;

Then you shall take an awl, and pierce his ear against the door, and he shall be your servant forever; you shall do the same to your maidservant.

Do not be distressed to send him away from you, for he has served you six years, which is double the wages of a hired servant; and the Lord your God will bless you in all that you do.

You shall consecrate to the Lord your God every firstborn male that is born of your herd or flock. You shall not plow with the firstborn of your cow, nor shear the firstborn of your sheep.

You and your family shall eat it every year in the presence of the Lord your God, in the place that the Lord will choose.

But if he has any defect, [whether] lame or blind, or has any other bad defect, you shall not sacrifice him to the Lord your God;

But you will eat it in your dwelling place. Both the unclean and the clean will eat it, as one eats deer and stag.

Only you shall not eat its blood, [but] you shall pour it out on the earth like water.

Observe the month when the ears of grain ripen, and keep the Passover to the Lord your God; for in the month when the ears of grain ripen, the Lord your God brought you out of Egypt by night.

And sacrifice the Passover to the Lord your God of the herd and the flock, in the place that the Lord will choose to make his Name dwell there.

You shall not eat leavened bread with her; for seven days you shall eat unleavened bread, the bread of affliction, because you came out of the land of Egypt in haste, so that all the days of your life you may remember the day that you came out of the land of Egypt.

No leaven shall be seen in you throughout all your land for seven days, and none of the flesh of the sacrifice that you make on the evening of the first day shall be left until morning.

You may not sacrifice the Passover in any of the places of your dwelling that the Lord your God gives you;

But [only] in the place that the Lord your God will choose to make his Name dwell there; there you shall sacrifice the Passover in the evening, as soon as the sun has set, precisely at the time that you came out of Egypt.

And having cooked it, you shall eat it at the place that the Lord your God will choose; and in the morning you shall return and go to your tents.

For six days you shall eat unleavened bread, and on the seventh day, which is the solemn assembly to the Lord your God, you shall do no work.

You shall count seven weeks; you shall begin to count [these] seven weeks from the time you began to put the sickle in the harvest.

Then you shall celebrate the solemn feast of weeks to the Lord your God, presenting the freewill offering of your hand, which you shall give, according to how the Lord your God has blessed you.

And you shall rejoice before the Lord your God, you, your son, your daughter, your male servant, your female servant, and the Levite who is within your towns; the foreigner, the orphan, and the widow who are among you, in the place that the Lord your God will choose to make his Name dwell there.

And you will remember that you were a slave in Egypt, and you will be careful to observe these statutes.

You shall hold the solemn Feast of Tabernacles for seven days, after you have gathered [the income] from your threshing floor and your winepress.

And you shall rejoice in your solemn feast, you, your son, your daughter, your male servant and your female servant, the Levite, the foreigner, the orphan, and the widow who are within your gates.

You shall celebrate for seven days the solemn feast to the Lord your God, in the place which the Lord will choose, when the Lord your God has blessed you in all your harvest, and in all the work of your hands; and you shall be joyful.

Three times a year every male among you shall appear before the Lord your God at the place he will choose: at the Feast of Unleavened Bread, at the Feast of Weeks, and at the Feast of Tabernacles. But no one shall appear before the Lord empty-handed.

[But] each one shall give in proportion to what he has, according to the blessing of the Lord your God, which he has given you.

You shall appoint judges and officials in all your cities, which the Lord your God is giving you, according to your tribes, so that they may judge the people with righteous judgment.

You shall not turn away from justice, nor show partiality. You shall not accept a bribe, for a bribe blinds the eyes of the wise and corrupts the words of the righteous.

You shall follow justice exactly, so that you may live, and possess the land that the Lord your God is giving you.

You shall not plant any grove of any kind of tree beside the altar of the Lord your God, which you have made for yourself.

You shall not set up a pillar for yourself; the Lord your God hates such things.

You shall not sacrifice to the Lord your God any ox, sheep, or goat that has any blemish or defect in it; for it is an abomination to the Lord your God.

When there is found among you in any of your cities that the Lord your God is giving you, whether man or woman, who does what is hateful to the Lord your God, by transgressing his covenant;

And who goes and serves other gods and bows down to them, whether to the sun or to the moon or to all the host of heaven, which I have not commanded;

And that this has been reported to you, and that you have learned of it, then you shall inquire about it precisely, and if you find that what has been said is true, and that it is certain that such an abomination has been done in Israel;

Then you shall bring out to your gates that man or that woman who has done this wicked thing; that man, [I say], or that woman, and you shall stone them to death.

On the testimony of two or three witnesses, a person who is to be punished with death shall be put to death, [but] he shall not be put to death on the testimony of only one witness.

The hands of the witnesses will be the first against him to put him to death, then the hands of all the people; and so you will remove this wicked man from among you.

When a matter seems too difficult for you to judge between murder and murder, between cause and cause, between wound and wound, which are matters of litigation within your gates; then you shall arise and go up to the place that the Lord your God will choose;

And you shall come to the priests who are of the race of Levi, and to the judge who will be at that time, and you shall question them, and they shall tell you what is right.

And you shall do exactly as they have told you from the place that the Lord has chosen, and you shall be careful to do all that they have taught you.

You shall do exactly as they have taught you the law, and according to the law they have declared to you, and you shall not turn aside to the right or to the left from what they have told you.

But the man who acts proudly and refuses to obey the priest who stands there to serve the Lord your God, or the judge, that man shall die, and you shall remove that wicked man from Israel.

So that all the people may hear it and be afraid, and that in the future they may not act proudly.

When you have entered the land that the Lord your God is giving you, and you possess it and dwell in it, if you say, "I will set up a king over me, like all the nations that are around me";

You shall surely appoint as king the one whom the Lord your God chooses; you shall appoint as king a man from among your brothers; and you shall not appoint over you a man who is not your brother.

Only he will not make a herd of horses, and he will not bring the people back to Egypt to make a herd of horses; for the Lord has said to you: You shall never return to that way again.

He will not take many wives, so that his heart will not be corrupted; and he will not amass much silver or much gold.

And as soon as he sits on the throne of his Kingdom, he shall write for himself in a book a copy of this Law, [which he shall take] from the Priests who are of the race of Levi.

And this book shall remain with him, and he shall read in it all the days of his life, so that he may learn to fear the Lord his God, and to take heed to all the words of this Law, and to these statutes, to do them.

So that his heart may not be lifted up above his brothers, and that he may not turn aside from this commandment either to the right or to the left; [and] so that he may prolong his days in his reign, he and his sons, in the midst of Israel. The priests who are of the race of Levi, even the whole tribe of Levi, shall have no portion or inheritance with the rest of Israel, [but] they shall eat the sacrifices of the Lord made by fire, and his inheritance.

They will therefore have no inheritance among their brothers. The Lord is their inheritance, as he has promised them.

Now this is the right that the Priests shall take from the people, [that is] from those who offer any sacrifice, whether ox, or sheep, or goat, [that] the shoulder, the jaws, and the belly shall be given to the Priest.

You shall give them the firstfruits of your wheat, your wine and your oil, and the firstfruits of the fleece of your sheep.

For the Lord your God has chosen him out of all the tribes, to serve in the name of the Lord, he and his sons forever.

Now when the Levite comes from any place of your dwelling, from any place in Israel where he resides, and comes according to all his soul's desire, to the place that the Lord will choose,

He will serve in the name of the Lord his God, like all his fellow Levites, who stand in the presence of the Lord.

They will eat an equal portion with the others, in addition to what each one may have from what he has sold to his fathers' families.

When you enter the land that the Lord your God is giving you, you shall not learn to do according to the abominations of those nations.

There shall not be found among you anyone who makes his son or his daughter pass through the fire, nor any diviner who practices divination, nor any teller of the weather, nor any augur, nor any sorcerer;

Neither an enchanter who uses enchantments, nor a man who consults the spirit of python, nor a fortune teller, nor anyone who questions the dead.

For whoever does these things is an abomination to the Lord; and because of these abominations the Lord your God is driving out those nations from before you.

You shall act in integrity before the Lord your God.

For those nations whose land you are about to possess listen to prognosticators and soothsayers; but as for you, the Lord your God has not allowed you to act in this way.

The Lord your God will raise up for you a prophet like me from among your brothers; you shall listen to him.

According to all that you asked of the Lord your God at Horeb on the day of the assembly, saying, "Let me not hear the voice of the Lord my God again, nor see this great fire again, lest I die."

Then the Lord said to me: They have spoken well what they have said.

I will raise up for them a prophet like you from among their brothers, and I will put my words in his mouth, and he will tell them everything I command him.

And it will come to pass that whoever does not listen to my words, which he has spoken in my Name, I will hold him accountable.

But the Prophet who acts so proudly as to say something in my Name that I have not commanded him to say, or who speaks in the name of other gods, that Prophet will die.

But if you say in your heart, "How will we know the word that the Lord has not spoken?"

When that prophet speaks in the name of the Lord, and the thing [he has predicted] does not happen or come to pass, that is the word that the Lord did not speak to him; [but] the prophet spoke it presumptuously; therefore do not be afraid of him.

When the Lord your God has exterminated the nations whose land the Lord your God is giving you, and you possess their land and dwell in their cities and houses;

Then you shall separate three cities in the midst of the land that the Lord your God is giving you to possess.

You shall prepare the way, and divide into three parts the lands of your country, which the Lord your God is giving you as an inheritance; and it shall be so that every murderer may flee there.

Now this is how the murderer who has retreated there shall be treated, so that he may live. He who has struck his neighbor unintentionally, without having hated him beforehand;

As if someone had gone with his neighbor into a forest to cut wood, and extending his hand with the axe to cut wood, it happens that the head slips out of the handle, and so strikes his neighbor, that he dies; he will flee to one of those cities, so that he may live.

Lest he who has the right to avenge blood should pursue the murderer while his heart is inflamed, and overtake him if the path is too long, and strike him dead, although he was not worthy of death, because he did not hate his neighbor before.

That is why I command you, saying: Divide into three cities.

If the Lord your God enlarges your territory, as he swore to your ancestors, and gives you all the land he promised to give to your ancestors.

Provided that you take care to do all these commandments that I am giving you today, so that you may love the Lord your God and always walk in his ways; then you shall add three more cities to yourself, besides these three;

So that the blood of the innocent may not be shed in the midst of your land, that the Lord your God may give you as an inheritance, and that you may not be guilty of murder.

But when a man who hates his neighbor has set ambushes for him, and risen up against him, and struck him down, and he has fled to one of these cities.

Then the elders of his city will send and bring him out of there, and deliver him into the hands of the one who has the right to avenge blood, so that he may die.

Your eye will not spare him; but you will avenge the blood of the innocent in Israel, and you will prosper.

You shall not move your neighbor's boundary markers that your predecessors have planted in the inheritance that you will possess, in the land that the Lord your God is giving you to possess.

One witness alone will not be valid against a man, in any crime or sin whatsoever, in any sin that has been committed; but on the word of two or three witnesses the matter will be valid.

When a false witness rises up against someone, to testify against him the crime of revolt;

Then these two men who have a dispute between them shall appear before the Lord, in the presence of the priests and judges who will be there at that time;

And the Judges will inquire precisely; and if it turns out that this witness is a false witness, who has testified falsely against his brother;

You shall do to him as he intended to do to his brother; and in this way you shall remove the wicked man from among you.

And others who hear this will be afraid, and in the future they will not do such wicked things in your midst.

Your eye will not spare him; but there will be life for life, eye for eye, tooth for tooth, hand for hand, foot for foot.

When you go to war against your enemies, and you see horses and chariots, and a people greater than you, do not be afraid of them, for the Lord your God who brought you up out of the land of Egypt is with you.

And when the time comes to approach and fight, the Priest will come forward and speak to the people,

And he will say to them: Hear, O Israel: You are approaching today to fight against your enemies; do not be fainthearted, do not be afraid, do not be dismayed, do not be terrified because of them.

For the Lord your God goes with you to fight for you against your enemies, [and] to preserve you.

Then the officers shall speak to the people, saying: Who is he who has built a new house, and has not dedicated it? Let him go, and return to his house, lest he die in battle, and another dedicate it.

And who is the one who has planted a vineyard, and has not yet gathered its fruit? Let him go, and return to his house, lest he die in battle, and another gather its fruit.

And who is the man who has betrothed a woman and not married her? Let him go and return to his home, lest he die in battle and another marry him.

And the officers will continue to speak to the people, and will say: If anyone is timid and cowardly, let him go away and return to his home, lest the heart of his brothers melt like his own.

And as soon as the officers have finished speaking to the people, they will place the leaders of the bands at the head of each troop.

When you approach a city to wage war against it, you shall offer it peace.

And if she gives you a peaceful response and opens [the gates] to you, then all the people found within will be your tributaries and subjects.

But if she does not deal with you, and wages war against you, then you shall lay siege to her.

And when the Lord your God has delivered it into your hands, you shall put to the sword all the men who are found there.

[Reserving] only the women and the little children. And as for the animals and everything else in the city, [namely] all its plunder, you shall plunder it for yourself; and you shall eat the plunder of your enemies, which the Lord your God will have given you.

You shall do this to all the cities that are far from you; which are not cities of these nations;

But you shall not allow anyone to live who is from the cities of these peoples that the Lord your God is giving you as an inheritance.

For you shall not fail to destroy them in the manner of the forbidden, [namely] the Hittites, the Amorites, the Canaanites, the Perizzites, the Hivites, the Jebusites, as the Lord your God has commanded you.

So that they may not teach you to do according to all the abominations which they have done to their gods, and that you may not sin against the Lord your God.

When you besiege a city for many days, attacking it to take it, you shall not destroy its trees with an axe, because you may eat of them; therefore you shall not cut them down; for the tree of the field [is] a man, to enter the stronghold.

But you shall only destroy and cut down the trees that you know are not fruit trees; and you shall build forts against the city that is waging war against you, until it is subdued.

When a man is found in the land that the Lord your God is giving you to possess, who has been killed and is lying in a field, [and] it is not known who killed him;

Then your elders and your judges shall go out and measure from the man who was killed to the cities that are all around him.

Then the elders of the nearest town to the man who was killed shall take a young cow from the herd, which has not been used, [and] which has not been pulled while under the yoke;

And the elders of that city will bring the young cow down to a rough valley, where they neither plow nor sow, and there they will cut the young cow's neck in the valley.

And the priests, the sons of Levi, shall approach; for the Lord your God has chosen them to do his service, and to bless in the Name of the Lord; and so that by their word every cause and every plague may be defined.

And all the elders of that city, who are closest to the man who was killed, shall wash their hands over the young cow whose neck was cut off in the valley,

And they will speak out and say: Our hands did not shed this blood; our eyes did not see it [shed].

O Lord! Be merciful to your people Israel whom you have redeemed, and do not hold them accountable for the innocent blood [that has been shed] in the midst of your people Israel; and the murder shall be atoned for them.

And you shall cleanse the innocent blood from your midst, because you have done what the Lord approves and finds just.

When you have gone to war against your enemies, and the Lord your God has delivered them into your hands and you have taken some of them captive;

If you see among the prisoners some beautiful woman, and having conceived affection for her, you wish to take her for your wife;

Then you will bring her to your house, and she will shave her head and do her nails;

And she shall take off the clothes she wore when she was taken captive; and she shall remain in your house, and mourn her father and her mother for a month; then you shall come to her, and you shall be her husband, and she shall be your wife.

If it happens that you no longer like her, you shall send her back according to her will, but you shall not be able to sell her for money, nor trade in her because you will have humiliated her.

When a man has two wives, one loved and the other hated, and they bear him children, both the one who is loved and the one who is hated, and the firstborn son is of the one who is hated;

When the day comes that he divides what he has among his children, then he cannot make the son of the beloved the firstborn in preference to the son of the hated, who was born first.

But he will acknowledge the son of the hated woman for her firstborn, giving him a portion of two of all that is found to belong to him; for he is the beginning of his strength; the birthright belongs to him.

When a man has a wicked and rebellious child who does not obey the voice of his father or the voice of his mother, and they have disciplined him, but he still does not listen to them;

Then the father and mother shall take him, and bring him to the Elders of his city, and to the gate of his place;

And they will say to the elders of his city, "This is our son who is wicked and rebellious; he does not obey our voice, he is greedy and a drunkard."

And all the people of the city shall stone him, and he shall die; and thus you shall remove the wicked man from among you, so that all Israel may hear of it, and be afraid.

When a man has committed some sin deserving of death, and he is put to death, and you hang him on a tree;

His dead body shall not remain on the wood overnight, but you shall not fail to bury him the same day, for he who is hanged is cursed by God; therefore you shall not defile the land which the Lord your God is giving you as an inheritance.

When you see your brother's ox or sheep or goat straying, you shall not hide from them; [and] you shall not fail to bring them back to your brother.

If your brother does not remain near you, or if you do not know him, you shall take them even into your house, and they shall be with you, until your brother looks for them, and then you shall give them back to him.

You shall do the same with his donkey, and you shall do the same with his garment, and you shall do the same with everything that your brother has lost, and that you have found, having been lost, you shall not be able to hide from it.

If you see your brother's donkey or ox fallen on the road, you shall not hide from them, [and] you shall not fail to help them up together with him.

A woman shall not wear a man's garment, nor shall a man wear a woman's garment; for whoever does these things is an abomination to the Lord your God.

When you come across a bird's nest on a road, on some tree, or on the ground, with young birds or eggs, and the mother sitting on the young or eggs, you shall not take the mother with the young;
But you must not fail to let the mother go, and you will take the little ones for yourself, so that you may prosper and prolong your days.
When you build a new house, you shall make defenses all around your roof, so that you do not make your house guilty of bloodshed, if someone falls from it.
You shall not sow in your vineyard different kinds of grain; lest the whole thing, [namely] the grain which you have sown, and the yield of your vineyard, be defiled.
You shall not plow with a donkey and an ox mated together.
You shall not wear clothing made of different materials, [that is], of wool and linen together.
You shall make strips on the four sides of your robe, with which you shall cover yourself.
When a man takes a wife, and after going to her he hates her,
And that he imputes something to her which gives cause to speak by spreading some bad rumor against her, and saying: I took this woman, and when I approached her, I did not find her virginity;
Then the girl's father and mother shall take and produce the marks of her virginity before the Elders of the city at the gate.
And the girl's father will say to the Elders: I gave my daughter to this man as a wife, and he has come to hate her;
And behold, he imposed upon her a thing which gives cause for speaking, saying: I did not find that your daughter was a virgin; however, these are the signs of the virginity of my daughter, and they shall spread the cloth before the Elders of the city.
Then the elders of that city will take the husband and punish him.
And because he will have spread a bad rumor against a virgin of Israel, they shall condemn him to a hundred pieces of silver, which they shall give to the father of the girl; and she shall be his wife, and he shall not be able to divorce her as long as he lives.
But if what he said, that the young girl was not found to be a virgin, is true;
Then they shall bring the girl out to the door of her father's house, and the men of her town shall stone her to death; for she has committed an outrage in Israel, by committing fornication in her father's house; and thus you shall purge the evil from among you.
When a man is found lying with a married woman, both of them shall die, the man who lay with the woman, and the woman also; and you shall remove the evil from Israel.
When a virgin girl is betrothed to a man, and someone finds her in the city and lies with her;
You shall bring them both out to the gate of the city, and you shall stone them to death; the young girl, because she did not cry out while in the city; and the man, because he raped his neighbor's wife; and you shall purge the evil from among you.
If someone finds a young woman in the fields who is engaged to be married, and forces himself on her, then the man who lay with her shall die alone.
But you shall do nothing to the girl; the girl has not committed a sin worthy of death; for this case is like someone rising up against his neighbor and taking his life.
Because when she found her in the fields, the betrothed girl cried out, and no one rescued her.
When someone finds a young virgin girl who is not betrothed, and takes her, and lies with her, and they are found in the act;
The man who has slept with her shall give the girl's father fifty pieces of silver, and she shall be his wife, because he has humiliated her; he shall not be able to leave her as long as he lives.

No one shall take his father's wife, nor uncover his father's robe.

He who is a eunuch, whether from being crushed or from being cut, shall not enter the assembly of the Lord.

The bastard shall not enter the assembly of the Lord, nor shall his tenth generation enter the assembly of the Lord.

The Hammonite and the Moabite shall not enter the assembly of the Lord; not even their tenth generation shall enter the assembly of the Lord forever.

Because they did not meet you with bread and water on the way when you came out of Egypt; and also because they hired Balaam son of Behor, from the city of Pethor in Mesopotamia, to curse you.

But the Lord your God would not listen to Balaam; the Lord your God turned the curse into a blessing, because the Lord your God loves you.

You will never seek, as long as you live, their peace or their good fortune.

You shall not abhor an Edomite, for he is your brother; you shall not abhor an Egyptian, for you were a stranger in his land.

The children born to them in the third generation will enter the assembly of the Lord.

When you go armed against your enemies, guard yourself against all evil.

If there is anyone among you who is not clean, because of some accident that happened to him at night, then he shall leave the camp, [and] he shall not enter the camp; And in the evening he will wash himself with water, and as soon as the sun has set, he will return to the camp.

You will have some place outside the camp, and you will go out there.

And you shall have a pickaxe among your utensils; and when you want to sit outside, you shall dig with this pickaxe, and then you shall return after covering what has come out of you.

For the Lord your God walks in the midst of your camp to deliver you, and to deliver your enemies before you; therefore let all your camp be holy, so that they do not see any impurity in you, and turn away from you.

You shall not hand over to his master a servant who has escaped from his master to you;

But he will remain with you in your midst, in the place he will choose in one of your cities, wherever he pleases; you shall not grieve him.

There shall be no prostitute among the daughters of Israel, nor any fornicating male prostitute among the sons of Israel.

You shall not bring into the house of the Lord your God for any vow the wages of a harlot, or the price of a dog; for these two things are an abomination before the Lord your God.

You shall not lend to your brother at usury, whether at usury of money, or at usury of food, or at usury of anything else that is lent at usury.

You may lend at interest to a foreigner, but you shall not lend at interest to your brother, so that the Lord your God may bless you in everything you undertake in the land you are entering to possess.

When you have made a vow to the Lord your God, you shall not delay in fulfilling it; for the Lord your God will surely demand it of you; thus there would be sin in you.

But when you refrain from vowing, there will be no sin in you for that reason.

You shall be careful to do what you have spoken with your mouth, as you have voluntarily vowed to the Lord your God, what you have, [I say], spoken with your mouth.

When you enter your neighbor's vineyard, you may eat as much grapes as you like, until you are satisfied; but you shall not put any in your vessel.

When you enter your neighbor's grain field, you may pluck some ears of grain with your hand, but you shall not put a sickle into your neighbor's grain.

When a man takes a wife and marries her, if she does not find favor in his eyes because he has found something indecent in her, he shall give her a written certificate of divorce, and having put it in her hand, he shall send her out of his house.

And when she has left her home and gone away, she has married another husband; If this last husband hates her, and gives her a written certificate of divorce, and puts it in her hand, and sends her away from his house, or if this last husband who had taken her as [his] wife dies;

Then her first husband, who had divorced her, will not be able to take her back as his wife, after having caused her to defile herself; for that is an abomination before the Lord; so you will not bring sin upon the land that the Lord your God is giving you as an inheritance.

When a man has newly married, he shall not go to war, nor shall any burden be imposed upon him; but he shall be exempt from it in his house for a year, and shall rejoice with the wife whom he has taken.

We will not take the two millstones as a pledge, not even the top millstone, because we would be taking [our neighbor's] life as a pledge.

When someone is found who has stolen from one of his brothers, the children of Israel, and has trafficked in him and sold him, that thief shall die, and you shall purge the evil from among you.

Beware of the plague of leprosy, so that you may carefully observe and do all that the priests, who are of the descendants of Levi, will teach you; you shall be careful to do according to what I have commanded them.

Remember what the Lord your God did to Mary on the way after you left Egypt.

When you have the right to demand from your neighbor something that is owed to you, you shall not enter his house to take his pledge;

But you will stand outside, and the man from whom you demand payment will bring the pledge to you outside.

And if the man is poor, you shall not go to bed still having his pledge;

But you must not fail to return the pledge to him as soon as the sun sets, so that he may sleep in his garment and bless you; and this will be credited to you as righteousness before the Lord your God.

You shall not wrong a poor and needy mercenary, whether from among your brothers or from among the foreigners who reside in your land, in any of your dwellings.

You shall give him his wages on the same day [that he has worked], before the sun sets, for he is poor, and this is what his soul expects; so that he does not cry out to the Lord against you, and you do not sin [in this].

Fathers shall not be put to death for their children, nor shall children be put to death for their fathers; but each shall die for their own sin.

You shall not do injustice to the foreigner or to the orphan, and you shall not take the widow's garment as a pledge.

And you will remember that you were a slave in Egypt, and that the Lord your God redeemed you from there; therefore I command you to do these things.

When you reap your harvest in your field, and you have forgotten a handful of ears of grain in your field, you shall not go back to get them; [but] they shall be for the foreigner, for the orphan, and for the widow; so that the Lord your God may bless you in all the works of your hands.

When you thresh your olive trees, you shall not go back to search branch by branch; [but what remains] shall be for the foreigner, for the orphan, and for the widow.

When you harvest your vineyard, you shall not glean the grapes that remain after you; but they shall be for the foreigner, the orphan, and the widow.

And you will remember that you were a slave in the land of Egypt; that is why I command you to do these things.

When there has been a dispute between some, and they come to trial to be judged, the righteous will be acquitted, and the wicked condemned.

If the wicked man deserved to be beaten, the judge will have him thrown to the ground and beaten before him with a certain number of blows, according to the severity of his crime.

He shall therefore have him beaten with forty blows, and no more, lest if he continues to beat him beyond these blows the wound become excessive, and your brother be treated too unworthily before your eyes.

You shall not muzzle your ox when it treads out the grain.

When there are brothers living together, and one of them dies without children, then the wife of the dead man shall not marry outside the family to a stranger; but her brother-in-law shall come to her and take her as his wife, and marry her as his brother-in-law.

And the firstborn whom she bears shall succeed in place of the dead brother, and shall bear his name, so that his name shall not be blotted out of Israel.

If it does not please that man to take his sister-in-law, then his sister-in-law shall go up to the gate to the Elders, and say: My brother-in-law refuses to uphold the name of his brother in Israel, and will not marry me by right of brother-in-law.

Then the elders of his city will call him and speak to him; and if he remains firm and says, "I do not want to take it";

Then his sister-in-law will approach him in front of the Elders, and will take off his sandal, and spit in his face, and speaking, she will say: This is what will be done to the man who does not build his brother's house.

And his name will be called in Israel, the house of the one whose sandal was removed.

When some have a quarrel with one another, if the wife of one comes forward to rescue her husband from the one who is beating him, and reaches out her hand and seizes him by his private parts;

Then you will cut off his hand; and your eye will not spare him.

You will not have in your bag two kinds of stones [for weighing], one large and one small.

There shall not be in your house two kinds of Ephah, a great one and a small one; But you shall have accurate and just stones [to weigh]; you shall also have an accurate and just Ephah, so that your days may be prolonged in the land that the Lord your God is giving you.

For whoever does these things, whoever commits injustice, is an abomination to the Lord your God.

Remember what Hamalech did to you on the way, when you were leaving Egypt;

How he came to meet you on the way, [and] charged at the rear all the weak who followed you, when you were weary and harassed, and had no fear of God.

When the Lord your God has given you rest from all your enemies around you, in the land that the Lord your God is giving you as an inheritance to possess, then you shall blot out the memory of Hammalek from under heaven; do not forget it.

When you have entered the land that the Lord your God is giving you as an inheritance, and you possess it and dwell in it;

Then you shall take some of the firstfruits of all the fruits of the earth, and you shall bring them from the land that the Lord your God is giving you, and having put them in a basket, you shall go to the place that the Lord your God will choose to make his Name dwell there.

And you shall come to the priest who is in office at that time, and say to him, "I declare today before the Lord your God that I have come to the land which the Lord swore to our fathers to give us."

And the priest shall take the basket from your hand, [and] set it before the altar of the Lord your God.

Then you shall speak, and say before the Lord your God: My father was a poor wretched Syrian; he went down to Egypt with a few people; he sojourned there, and became a great, powerful, and numerous nation.

Then the Egyptians mistreated us, afflicted us, and imposed harsh servitude upon us.

And we cried out to the Lord, the God of our fathers; and the Lord heard our voice, and looked upon our affliction, our toil, and our oppression, And he brought us out of Egypt with a mighty hand and an outstretched arm, with great fear, and with signs and wonders.

Since then he has led us to this place, and given us this land, which is a land flowing with milk and honey.

Now therefore, behold, I have brought the firstfruits of the fruits of the land which you have given me, O Lord! Thus you shall set the basket before the Lord your God, and worship before the Lord your God.

And you shall rejoice in all the good that the Lord your God has given you and your household, you and the Levite and the foreigner who is among you.

When you have finished collecting all the tithes of your income in the third year, which is the year of tithes, you shall give them to the Levite, the foreigner, the orphan, and the widow; they shall eat of it in the places of your dwelling, and they shall be satisfied.

And you shall say in the presence of the Lord your God: I have carried out from [my] house what was holy, and I have given it to the Levite, to the stranger, to the orphan, and to the widow, according to all your commandments that you have commanded me; I have not transgressed any of your commandments, nor have I forgotten them.

I did not eat any of it in my affliction, nor did I remove any of it to apply to any unclean use, nor did I give any for a dead person; I obeyed the voice of the Lord your God; I did according to all that you commanded me.

Look down from your holy dwelling, [look down] from heaven, and bless your people Israel, and the land that you have given us, as you swore to our fathers, which is a land flowing with milk and honey.

Today the Lord your God commands you to establish these statutes and ordinances.

Therefore, be careful to do them with all your heart and with all your soul.

Today you have demanded that the Lord be your God, and you [promised] that you will walk in his ways, and that you will keep his statutes, his commandments and his ordinances, and that you will obey his voice.

Therefore the Lord has commanded you today, that you be a precious people to him; as he has spoken to you, and that you keep all his commandments.

And he will exalt you greatly above all the nations he has created, to be praised, renowned, and glorious; and you shall be a people holy to the Lord your God, as he has spoken.

Now Moses and the Elders of Israel commanded the people, saying, "Keep all the commandments that I command you today."

It is that on the day you cross the Jordan to enter the land that the Lord your God is giving you, you shall set up large stones for yourself and coat them with lime; Then you shall write on them all the words of this Law, when you have crossed over, so that you may enter the land that the Lord your God is giving you, a land flowing with milk and honey; as the Lord, the God of your fathers, has spoken to you.

When you have crossed the Jordan, you shall set up these stones on the mountain of Ebal, as I command you today, and you shall plaster them with lime.

You shall also build there an altar to the Lord your God, an altar of stones, [I say], on which you shall not lift any iron tool.

You shall build the altar of the Lord your God with whole stones, and on this [altar] you shall offer burnt offerings to the Lord your God.

You shall also offer peace offerings there, and eat there, and rejoice before the Lord your God.

And you shall write on these stones all the words of this law, expressing them clearly.

And Moses and the priests, who are of the race of Levi, spoke to all Israel, saying,

"Listen and hear, Israel, today you have become the people of the Lord your God."

You will therefore obey the voice of the Lord your God and you will do these commandments and statutes that I am commanding you today.

Moses also commanded the people that day, saying:

These will stand on Mount Gerizim to bless the people, when you have crossed the Jordan, [namely] Simeon, Levi, Judah, Issachar, Joseph, and Benjamin;

And these men, Reuben, Gad, Asher, Zebulun, Dan, and Naphtali, shall stand on the mountain of Ebal to curse.

And the Levites shall speak, and say aloud to all the men of Israel:

Cursed be the man who makes a carved image, or a cast image, for it is an abomination to the Lord, the work of the hands of a craftsman, and who sets it up in a secret place; and all the people shall answer, and say, Amen.

Cursed be he who has despised his father or his mother; and all the people shall say: Amen.

Cursed be he who carries away his neighbor's boundary markers; and all the people shall say: Amen.

Cursed be he who leads a blind man astray on the road; and all the people shall say: Amen.

Cursed be he who does injustice to the foreigner, the orphan, and the widow; and all the people shall say: Amen.

Cursed is he who lies with his father's wife, for he uncovers the hem of his father's robe; and all the people shall say, Amen.

Cursed be he who lies with an animal; and all the people shall say: Amen.

Cursed be he who lies with his sister, the daughter of his father, or the daughter of his mother; And all the people shall say: Amen.

Cursed be he who lies with his mother-in-law; and all the people shall say: Amen.

Cursed be he who strikes his neighbor in secret; and all the people shall say: Amen.

Cursed be he who takes any bribe to put an innocent man to death; and all the people shall say: Amen.

Cursed is he who does not persevere in the words of this Law, to do them; and all the people shall say: Amen.

But it will come to pass that if you strictly obey the voice of the Lord your God, and take care to do all his commandments which I command you today, the Lord your God will exalt you greatly above all the nations of the earth.

And all these blessings here will come upon you and reach you when you obey the voice of the Lord your God.

You will be blessed in the city, and you will also be blessed in the country.

The fruit of your womb will be blessed, and the fruit of your land, and the fruit of your livestock; the offspring of your cows, and the lambs of your flock.

Your basket will be blessed; and your kneading trough too.

You will be blessed when you come in, and you will also be blessed when you go out.

The Lord will cause your enemies who rise up against you to be defeated before you; they will come out against you by one way, and they will flee before you by seven ways.

The Lord will command the blessing to be with you, in your barns, and in everything you put your hand into; and he will bless you in the land that the Lord your God is giving you.

The Lord your God will establish you as a holy people for himself, as he has sworn to you, if you keep the commandments of the Lord your God and walk in his ways.

And all the peoples of the earth will see that the Name of the Lord is invoked upon you, and they will fear you.

And the Lord your God will make you abound in prosperity, [multiplying] the fruit of your womb, and the fruit of your livestock, and the fruit of your land, in the land that the Lord swore to your fathers to give you.

The Lord will open for you his rich storehouse, the heavens, to give rain to your land in its season and to bless all the work of your hands; and you will lend to many nations, but you will not borrow.

The Lord will put you at the head, and not at the tail, and you will be above, and not below; when you obey the commandments of the Lord your God that I am giving you today, so that you may be careful to do them;

And that you do not turn aside to the right or to the left from any of the words that I command you today, to follow other gods, [and] to serve them.

But if you do not obey the voice of the Lord your God, to be careful to do all his commandments and statutes that I am commanding you today, then all these curses will come upon you and overtake you.

You will be cursed in the city, and you will also be cursed in the fields.

Your basket will be cursed, and your kneading trough too.

The fruit of your womb will be cursed, and the fruit of your land; the offspring of your cows, and the lambs of your flock.

You will be cursed when you enter, and you will also be cursed when you leave.

The Lord will send upon you curses, terror, and confusion in all that you lay your hand upon and do, until you are destroyed and perish [quickly], because of the wickedness of the deeds by which you have forsaken me.

The Lord will cause death to cling to you until he has consumed you from the land you are going to possess.

The Lord will strike you with wasting disease, fever, scorching heat, sword, drought, and mildew, which will pursue you until you perish.

And your heavens, which will be over your head, will be of bronze; and the earth which will be under you will be of iron.

The Lord will give you, instead of the rain your land needs, fine dust and powder will fall on you from heaven until you are destroyed.

And the Lord will cause you to be defeated before your enemies. You will go out against them one way, and you will flee from them seven ways; and you will be a wanderer through all the kingdoms of the earth.

And your dead bodies will be food for all the birds of the air and the beasts of the earth, and no one will frighten them away.

The Lord will strike you with the boils of Egypt, with hemorrhoids, with scabies, and with itching, from which you cannot be cured.

The Lord will strike you with madness, blindness, and stupidity.

You will grope about at midday, like a blind man gropes in the dark; you will not bring your undertakings to a happy success, you will do nothing but suffer injustice and plunder; and there will be no one to protect you.

You will betroth a woman, but another will sleep with her; you will build houses, but you will not dwell in them; you will plant vineyards, but you will not gather their fruit for yourself.

Your ox will be slaughtered before your eyes, but you will not eat any of it; your donkey will be taken from you and will not be returned to you; your sheep will be given to your enemies, and you will have no one to rescue them.

Your sons and daughters will be given to another people, and your eyes will see it and be consumed all day long by [looking] towards them; and you will have no power in your hand.

And the people you have not known will eat the fruit of your land and all your labor; and you will do nothing but suffer injustice and extortion every day.

And you will be out of your mind because of the things you will see with your eyes.

The Lord will strike you with painful boils on your knees and thighs, from which you cannot be healed; [he will strike you] from the sole of your foot to the crown of your head.

The Lord will drive you and your king, whom you have set over you, to a nation that neither you nor your ancestors have known, and there you will serve other gods, wood and stone.

And you will be there a cause of astonishment, mockery, and invective among all the peoples to whom the Lord has brought you.

You will sow much seed in your field, but you will gather little, for the locusts will consume it.

You shall plant vineyards and cultivate them, but you shall not drink their wine, nor shall you gather any of their fruit, for the worms shall eat its fruit.

You will have olive trees in all your districts, but you will not anoint yourself with oil, for your olive trees will lose their fruit.

You will father sons and daughters, but they will not be yours, for they will go into captivity.

The cockchafers will spoil all your trees, and the fruit of your land.

The stranger who is in your midst will rise above you very high, and you will descend very low.

He will lend to you, but you will not lend to him; he will be at the head, and you will be at the tail.

And all these curses will come upon you, and pursue you, and overtake you, until you are destroyed; because you did not obey the voice of the Lord your God, to keep his commandments and his statutes which he commanded you.

And these things will be in you and in your offspring as signs and wonders forever.

And because you did not serve the Lord your God with joy and gladness of heart, despite the abundance of all things;

You will serve your enemy, whom the Lord will send against you, in hunger, in thirst, in nakedness, and in want of everything; and he will put an iron yoke on your neck until he has destroyed you.

The Lord will raise up against you from afar, from the ends of the earth, a nation that will fly like an eagle; a nation whose language you will not understand.

A shameless nation, which will have no regard for the person of the old man, and which will have no pity for the child.

She will eat the fruit of your animals and the fruits of your land until you are destroyed. She will leave you nothing, whether wheat, wine, oil, the offspring of your cows, or the sheep of your flock, until she has ruined you.

And it will besiege you in all your cities, until your highest and strongest walls, on which you have relied throughout your land, fall to the ground. It will besiege, I say, all your cities throughout the land that the Lord your God will give you.

You will eat the fruit of your womb, the flesh of your sons and daughters whom the Lord your God has given you, in the siege and in the distress with which your enemy will afflict you.

The most tender and delicate man among you will look with a wicked eye upon his brother and his beloved wife, and the rest of his children whom he has set aside; Not to give any of them the flesh of his children, which he will eat; because nothing will have remained for him at all, because of the siege and distress with which your enemy will press you in all your cities.

The most tender and delicate woman among you, who would not have dared to put the sole of her foot on the earth, out of delicacy and softness, will look with a malicious eye upon her beloved husband, her son, and her daughter;

And the cloth of her little child that will come out from between her feet, and the children that she will bear; for she will eat them secretly in the lack of all things, because of the siege and distress with which your enemy will press you in all the cities.

If you do not take care to do all the words of this Law, which are written in this book, fearing the glorious and awesome Name of the Lord your God;

Then the Lord will make your plagues and the plagues of your offspring strange plagues, great and lasting plagues, malignant and prolonged diseases.

And he will bring back upon you all the sufferings of Egypt, of which you were afraid, and they will cling to you.

Even the Lord will bring on you every disease and every plague not written in the book of this Law, until you are destroyed.

And you will remain few in number, though you were like the stars of heaven, so numerous were you; because you did not obey the voice of the Lord your God.

And it will come to pass that as the Lord rejoiced over you, in doing good to you, and in multiplying you, so the Lord will rejoice over you in destroying you, and in annihilating you; and you will be uprooted from the land into which you go to possess it.

And the Lord will scatter you among all peoples, from one end of the earth to the other; and there you will serve other gods, which neither you nor your fathers have known, gods of wood and stone.

You will have no rest among those nations; not even the sole of your foot will find rest; for the Lord will give you there a trembling heart, and faintness of eyes, and anguish of soul.

And your life will hang in the balance before you; and you will be in terror night and day, and will not be secure in your life.

You will say in the morning, "Who will show me in the evening?" and in the evening you will say, "Who will show me in the morning?" because of the terror that will frighten your heart, and because of the things that you will see with your eyes.

And the Lord will bring you back to Egypt in ships, to travel the way I told you: You will never see it again; and there you will sell yourselves to your enemies as male and female slaves, and no one will buy you.

These are the words of the covenant that the Lord commanded Moses to make with the children of Israel in the land of Moab, in addition to the covenant that he had made with them at Horeb.

So Moses called all Israel together and said to them, "You have seen all that the Lord did in your presence in the land of Egypt, to Pharaoh and to all his servants, and to all his land.

The great trials that your eyes have seen, these signs, and these great miracles.

But the Lord has not given you a heart to hear, nor eyes to see, nor ears to hear, until this day.

And I led you for forty years through the desert, without your clothes growing old on you, and without your sandals growing old on your feet.

You have not eaten bread, nor drunk wine, nor beer, so that you may know that I am the Lord your God.

And you came to this place, and Sihon, King of Heshbon, and Hog, King of Bashan, came out to meet us to fight us, and we defeated them.

And we took their land, and gave it as an inheritance to the Reubenites, the Gadites, and the half-tribe of Manasseh.

Therefore you shall keep the words of this covenant, and you shall do them, so that you may prosper in all that you do.

Today you all appear before the Lord your God, the heads of your tribes, your elders, your officers, and every man of Israel;

Your little children, your wives, and your stranger who is in the midst of your camp, from your woodcutter to your water-drawer;

So that you may enter into the covenant of the Lord your God, which he is making with you today, and into the abhorrence of the oath that he is making you swear;

So that he may establish you today to be his people, and be to you God, as he has told you, and as he swore to your fathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.

And it is not only with you that I make this covenant, and this abhorrence of the oath that you take;

But it is as much with him who is here with us today before the Lord our God as with him who is not here with us today.

For you know how we lived in the land of Egypt, and how we traveled among the nations, among whom you also traveled.

And you have seen their abominations, and their dung gods, [the gods] of wood and stone, of silver and gold which are among them.

[Take care] that there is not among you any man, nor woman, nor family, nor tribe that turns its heart away today from the Lord our God, to go and serve the gods of these nations, [and] that there is not among you any root that produces gall and wormwood.

And let it not happen that anyone, hearing the words of this desecration of the oath that you take, does not bless himself in his heart, saying: I shall have peace, though I live according to what I have decided in my heart; so as to add drunkenness to the alteration.

The Lord will refuse to forgive him; the Lord's anger and jealousy will burn against that man, and all the curse of the oath that you are taking, which is written in this book, will remain on him, and the Lord will blot out the name of that man from under heaven.

And the Lord will separate him from all the tribes of Israel to his calamity, according to all the curses of the oath of the covenant which is written in this book of the Law.

And the generation to come, your children who will come after you, and the foreigner who will come from a distant country, will say when they see the plagues of this land, and its diseases, with which the Lord will afflict it;

And that all the land of that land will be nothing but sulfur, salt, and burning; it will not be sown, nor will it sprout, nor will any grass come out of it, as in the subversion of Sodom, and Gomorrah, and Admah, and Zeboiim, which the Lord destroyed in his anger and in his fury;

All nations will say, "Why has the Lord done this to this land? What is the intensity of this great anger?"

And the answer will be: It is because they abandoned the covenant of the Lord, the God of their fathers, which he made with them when he brought them out of the land of Egypt.

For they went away and served other gods and worshiped them, gods they had not known, and none of whom had given them anything.

Because of this, the anger of the Lord was kindled against this land, to bring upon it all the curses written in this book.

And the Lord uprooted them from their land in his anger, and in his fury, and in his great indignation, and drove them out into another country, as [it appears] today.

The hidden things belong to the Lord our God; but the things revealed belong to us and to our children forever, so that we may do all the words of this Law.

But it will come to pass that when all these things have come upon you, whether the blessing or the curse, which I have foretold to you, and when you have remembered them in your heart, among all the nations to which the Lord your God has driven you;

And that you will have turned back to the Lord your God, and that you and your children will have listened, with all your heart and with all your soul, to his voice, according to all that I command you today;

The Lord your God will also restore your fortunes and have compassion on you; he will gather you again from all the peoples among whom the Lord your God had scattered you.

Though your scattered people may be at the ends of the heavens, the Lord your God will gather you from there and take you from there.

The Lord your God, [I say], will bring you back to the land that your fathers possessed, and you will possess it; he will do you good, and make you increase more than he made your fathers increase.

And the Lord your God will circumcise your heart and the heart of your descendants, so that you will love the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul, that you may live.

And the Lord your God will inflict all these curses of the oath that you have taken upon your enemies and upon those who hate you, who have persecuted you.

So you will return, and you will obey the voice of the Lord, and you will do all his commandments that I command you today.

And the Lord your God will make you abound in prosperity from all the work of your hand, from the fruit of your belly, from the fruit of your animals, and from the fruit of your ground: for the Lord your God will again rejoice over you with prosperity, as he rejoiced over your fathers.

When you obey the voice of the Lord your God, keeping his commandments and his ordinances written in this book of the Law; when you return to the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul.

For this commandment that I am giving you today is not too high for you, nor is it far off.

He is not in heaven, to say, "Who is it that will ascend into heaven for us and bring it to us, that we may hear it and do it?"

He is not also beyond the sea to say, "Who is it that will cross over to the other side of the sea and bring it to us, so that we may hear it and do it?"

For this word is very near you, in your mouth and in your heart to do it.

Look, I have set before you today both life and good, and death and evil.

For I command you today to love the Lord your God, to walk in his ways, to keep his commandments, his ordinances, and his rights, so that you may live and multiply, and that the Lord your God may bless you in the land that you are going to possess.

But if your heart turns away, and you do not obey [these commandments], and you give yourself over to bowing down before other gods and serving them;

I declare to you today that you will certainly perish, and that you will not prolong your days in the land to which you are crossing the Jordan, in order to enter and possess it.

I call heaven and earth to witness against you today that I have set before you life and death, blessings and curses; therefore choose life, so that you and your offspring may live;

By loving the Lord your God, by obeying his voice, and by holding fast to him; for he is your life, and the length of your days, so that you may dwell in the land that the Lord swore to your fathers, to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, to give them.

Then Moses went away and spoke these words to all Israel;

And he said to them, "I am now sixty years old, and I can no longer go or come in; therefore the Lord has said to me, 'You shall not cross this Jordan.'"

The Lord your God will himself pass before you; he will exterminate those nations before you, and you will possess their land; [and] Joshua is the one who must pass before you, as the Lord has spoken.

And the Lord will do to them as he did to Sihon and Hagar, kings of the Amorites, and to their lands, whom he exterminated.

And the Lord will deliver them into your hands, and you shall do to them entirely according to the commandment that I have given you.

Therefore be strong and courageous; do not be afraid or terrified because of them, for the Lord your God goes with you; he will never leave you nor forsake you.

And Moses called Joshua, and said to him in the presence of all Israel, "Be strong and courageous, for you shall go with this people into the land which the Lord swore to their fathers to give them, and you shall cause them to possess it."

For the Lord, who goes before you, will himself be with you; he will not leave you nor forsake you; therefore do not be afraid, and do not be dismayed.

Now Moses wrote this Law, and gave it to the Priests, the children of Levi, who carried the Ark of the covenant of the Lord, and to all the Elders of Israel.

And Moses commanded them, saying: Every seven years, at the appointed time of the year of release, in the Feast of Tabernacles;

When all Israel has come to appear before the Lord your God at the place he will choose, then you shall read this Law before all Israel, while they hear it. Having gathered together the people, men and women, and their little children, and your foreigner who is in your gates, so that they may hear it, and learn to fear the Lord your God, and take care to do all the words of this Law. And let their children, who have not known of it, hear it, and learn to fear the Lord your God all the days you live in the land for which you are crossing the Jordan to possess.

Then the Lord said to Moses, "Behold, the day of your death is near. Summon Joshua and present yourselves at the tabernacle of meeting, so that I may instruct him in his office." So Moses and Joshua went and presented themselves at the tabernacle of meeting.

And the Lord appeared above the Tabernacle in the pillar of cloud; and the pillar of cloud stood at the entrance of the Tabernacle.

And the Lord said to Moses, "Behold, you are going to sleep with your fathers, and this people shall rise up and play the harlot after the gods of the foreigners who are in the land to which they are going, to be among them, and they shall forsake me, and break my covenant which I made with them."

On that day my anger will burn against him; I will abandon them, I will hide my face from them, he will be exposed as prey, many evils and anguish will find him; and he will say on that day: Is it not because my God is not in my midst that these evils have found me?

On that day, [I said], I will completely hide my face because of all the evil he will have done, because he will have turned away to other gods.

Now therefore, write this song and teach it to the children of Israel; put it in their mouths, so that this song may be a witness for me against the children of Israel.

For I will bring him into the land flowing with milk and honey, which I swore to his fathers, and he will eat and be satisfied and fattened; then he will turn away to other gods, and they will serve them, and they will anger me with contempt, and break my covenant.

And it will come to pass that when many evils and anxieties have found them, this song will testify against them as a witness; because it will not be forgotten, nor will it be on the mouth of their posterity; for I know their imagination, [and] what they are already doing today, before I bring them into the land on which I have sworn.

So Moses wrote this song on that day, and taught it to the children of Israel.

And the Lord commanded Joshua son of Nun, saying, "Be strong and courageous, for you shall bring the children of Israel into the land to which I have sworn to them; and I will be with you."

And it came to pass that when Moses had finished writing the words of this Law in a book, without missing anything;

He commanded the Levites who carried the Ark of the covenant of the Lord, saying: Take this Book of the Law and place it beside the Ark of the Covenant of the Lord your God, and it will be there as a witness against you.

For I know your rebellion and your stiff neck. Behold, even though I am with you today, you have rebelled against the Lord; how much more will you be after my death?

Summon to me all the elders of your tribes and your officers, and I will speak these words when they hear them, and I will call heaven and earth to witness against them.

For I know that after my death you will surely become corrupt and turn away from the way I have commanded you; but in the end you will suffer harm because you have done what is displeasing to the Lord, provoking him to anger with the works of your hands.

So Moses recited the words of this song without missing a word, with the whole assembly of Israel hearing it.
Give ear, heavens, and I will speak; let the earth hear the words of my mouth.
My teaching will be like rain; my word will drip like dew, like light rain on young grass, and like heavy rain on mature grass.
For I will call upon the Name of the Lord; ascribe greatness to our God.
The work of the Rock is perfect; for all his ways are justice. The Mighty One is truthful and without iniquity; just and upright is he.
They have corrupted themselves towards him; their stain is not a stain of his children; they are a perverse and stubborn generation.
Is this how you repay the Lord, you foolish and unwise people? Is he not your father, who acquired you? He made you and fashioned you.
Remember the days of old, consider the years of each generation; ask your father, and he will teach you; and your elders, and they will tell you.
When the Sovereign divided the nations, when he separated the children of men from one another, he established the boundaries of the peoples according to the number of the children of Israel.
For the Lord's portion is his people, and Jacob is his allotted inheritance.
He found him in a desert country, and in a hideous place, where there was nothing but howling desolation; he led him by circuitous routes, he guided him, [and] kept him as the apple of his eye.
Like the eagle stirs its nest, broods over its young, spreads its wings, welcomes them, [and] carries them on its wings;
The Lord alone led him, and there was no foreign god with him.
He made him ride over the high places of the earth, and he ate the fruits of the fields, and he made him suck honey from the rock, and [made] oil flow from the hardest rocks.
[He made him eat] the butter of cows, and the milk of sheep, and the fat of lambs and sheep born in Bashan, and [the fat] of goats, and the finest wheat, and you drank the wine that was the blood of the grape.
But the righteous man grew fat and kicked; you grew fat and stout and thick; and he left God who made him, and he dishonored the rock of his salvation.
They aroused him to jealousy with foreign [gods]; they angered him with abominations.

They sacrificed to idols, which are not gods; to gods they had not known, [gods] new, which have recently come, whom your fathers did not fear.
You have forgotten the Rock that begot you, and you have forgotten the Mighty God who formed you.
And the Lord saw it, and was angry, because his sons and daughters had provoked him to anger.
And he said: I will hide my face from them, I will see what their end will be; for they are a perverse generation, children in whom no one can trust.
They have stirred me to jealousy by what is not the Mighty [God], and they have provoked my anger by their vanities; thus I will stir them to jealousy by a [people] that is not a people; and I will provoke them to anger by a foolish nation.
For the fire was kindled in my anger, and burned to the depths of the lowest places, and devoured the earth and its fruit, and set ablaze the foundations of the mountains.
I will use all kinds of evils against them, and I will unleash all my arrows upon them.
They will be consumed by famine, and eaten away by burning coals, and by bitter destruction; and I will send against them the teeth of beasts, and the venom of serpents that crawl on the dust.
The sword coming from outside will deprive them of each other; and terror, coming from the chambers, will ravage the young man and the virgin; the nursing child, and the decrepit man.

I would have said: I will scatter them [to all] corners [of the earth], and I will abolish their memory from among men;

If I did not fear the indignation of the enemy, [and] if perhaps it did not happen that their adversaries should not recognize each other, if perhaps they should not say: Our hand has been exalted, and the Lord has not done all this.

For they are a nation that is destroyed by [their] plans, and there is no understanding in them.

Oh, if only they had been wise! If only they had been prudent in this, and if only they had considered their ultimate end!

How could one pursue a thousand, or two put ten thousand to flight, if it were not that their rock had sold them, and the Lord had surrounded them?

For their rock is not like our rock, and our enemies themselves will be the judges of that.

For their vine is from the vine of Sodom, and from the soil of Gomorrah, [and] their clusters are clusters of gall, they have bitter grapes.

Their wine is dragon venom, and the cruel gall of an asp.

Is it not locked away in my house, [and] sealed in my treasures?

Vengeance belongs to me, and retribution, at the time their foot slips; for the day of their calamity is near, and the things that must happen to them are hastening.

But the Lord will judge his people and will have mercy on his servants when he sees that the strength has departed and that there is nothing left, nothing hoarded or abandoned.

And he will say: Where are their gods, the rock to which they used to retreat?

Eating the fat of their sacrifices and drinking the wine of their sprinkling. Let them rise up, and let them help you, and let them be your refuge.

Look now that it is I, myself, and there is no god with me; I kill, and I give life; I wound, and I heal, and there is no one who can deliver out of my hand.

For I lift my hand to heaven, and I say: I am alive forever.

If I sharpen the edge of my sword, and if my hand grasps judgment, I will turn vengeance upon my adversaries, and I will repay those who hate me.

I will make my arrows drunk with blood, and my sword will devour flesh, [I will make my arrows drunk] with the blood of the slain and the captives, [starting with] the leader, in vengeance of the enemy.

Nations, rejoice with his people; for he will avenge the blood of his servants, and he will turn vengeance upon his enemies, and make atonement for his land and his people.

Then Moses came and spoke all the words of this song, while the people listened to him, and Joshua son of Nun.

And when Moses had finished speaking all these words to all Israel,

He said to them, "Put your hearts on all these words that I command you today to give your children, so that they may be careful to do all the words of this Law."

For this is not a word that is offered to you in vain, but it is your life; and by this word you will prolong your days in the land to which you are crossing the Jordan to possess.

On that same day the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

Go up to this mountain of Habarim, to the mountain of Nebo, which is in the land of Moab, opposite Jericho; then look at the land of Canaan, which I am giving as a possession to the children of Israel.

And you will die on the mountain you are going up, and you will be gathered to your people, as Aaron your brother died on Mount Hor, and was gathered to his people.

Because you sinned against me in the midst of the children of Israel at the waters of the dispute at Kadesh in the wilderness of Zin; for you did not sanctify me in the midst of the children of Israel.

That is why you will see the land opposite you, but you will not enter it, the land,

[I say], that I am giving to the children of Israel.

This is the blessing with which Moses, a man of God, blessed the children of Israel before his death.

He said therefore: The Lord came from Sinai, and dawned upon them in Seir; he shone forth from Mount Paran, and came forth from among the ten thousand holy ones, and from his right hand went forth a fire of the law to them.

And indeed he loves the peoples, all his Saints [are] in your hand; and they stood at your feet to receive your words.

Moses gave us the Law, which is the inheritance of the assembly of Jacob;

And he was King among the upright men, when the leaders of the people assembled with the Tribes of Israel.

Let Ruben live, and let him not die, even though his men are few in number.

And this is what [Moses] said concerning Judah: O Lord, hear the voice of Judah, and bring him back to his people; let his hands be sufficient for him, and let you be his help against his enemies.

He also said concerning Levi: Your Thummims and your Urim belong to the man who is your beloved, whom you tested at Massah, [and] against whom you quarreled at the waters of Meribah.

He is the one who says of his father and mother, "I have not seen him"; and he has not known his brothers, nor has he known his children; for they have kept your words, and they will keep your covenant.

They will teach your ordinances to Jacob, and your Law to Israel; they will put incense in your nostrils, and every sacrifice that is completely consumed by fire on your altar.

O Lord, bless his troops, and let the work of his hands be pleasing to you. Pierce the loins of those who rise up against him, and of those who hate him, as soon as they rise up.

He said concerning Benjamin: The beloved of the Lord will surely dwell with him; he will cover him all day long, and will stand between his shoulders.

And he said concerning Joseph: His land is blessed by the Lord, with the most exquisite things in heaven, with the dew, and with the deep that is below;

And of the most exquisite things that the sun produces, and of the most excellent things that the moon produces;

And from the clump of ancient mountains, and from what is most exquisite on the hillsides of eternity;

And of the most exquisite things on earth, and of its abundance; and may the favor of him who stood at the bush come upon the head of Joseph, upon the summit, [I say], of the head of the Nazarene among his brothers.

His beauty is like that of a firstborn bull, and his horns like the horns of a unicorn; with them he will gore all peoples to the ends of the earth. These are the ten thousand of Ephraim, and these are the thousands of Manasseh.

He also said concerning Zebulun: Rejoice, Zebulun, when you go out; and you, Issachar, in your tents.

They will summon the peoples to the mountains, there they will offer sacrifices of righteousness; for they will draw the abundance of the sea, and the most hidden things in the sand.

He also says, concerning Gad: Blessed is he who enlarges Gad; he dwells like an old lion, and he tears off arm and head.

He looked at the beginning [of the land to have it] for himself, because there was hidden the portion of the Lawgiver, and he came with the leaders of the people; he did the justice of the Lord, and his judgments with Israel.

And he said, touching DAN: Dan is a young lion, he will leap from Basan.

He also said concerning NEPHTHALI: Naphtali, filled with favor and with the blessing of the Lord, possesses the West and the South.

He also said concerning Asher: Asher shall be blessed with children; he shall be pleasing to his brothers; [and] he shall even dip his foot in oil.

Your bars will be of iron and bronze, and your strength will last as long as your days.

O Righteous One, there is no [God] like the [God] Mighty, who [comes] to your aid, borne upon the heavens and upon the clouds in his Majesty.

It is a refuge that the God who is from all times, and [to be] under the eternal arms; for he has driven out your enemies from before you, and he said: Destroy.

Israel will therefore dwell alone, surely; Jacob's eye will be on a land of wheat and wine, and its heavens will drop down dew.

Oh, how happy you are, Israel! Who is a people like you, whom the Lord has kept, the shield of your help, and the sword by which you were exalted? Your enemies will be humbled, and you will trample their highest places underfoot.

Then Moses went up from the countryside of Moab to Mount Nebo, to the top of the hill opposite Jericho, and the Lord showed him all the land, from Gilead to Dan,

With all the land of Naphtali, and the land of Ephraim and Manasseh, and all the land of Judah, as far as the Western Sea;

And the South, and the countryside of the plain of Jericho, the city of palm trees; as far as Zohar.

And the Lord said to him, "This is the land of which I swore to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob, saying, 'I will give it to your offspring; I have shown it to you with your eyes, but you shall not enter it.'"

So Moses, the servant of the Lord, died there in the land of Moab, according to the command of the Lord.

And he buried him in the valley in the land of Moab, opposite Beth-Pehor; and no one has known his grave to this day.

Now Moses was six hundred years old when he died; his sight was not impaired, and his strength had not passed away.

And the children of Israel wept for Moses thirty days in the fields of Moab, and thus the days of weeping and mourning for Moses were completed.

And Joshua, son of Nun, was filled with the Spirit of wisdom, because Moses had laid his hands on him; and the children of Israel obeyed him, and did as the Lord had commanded Moses.

And there has never arisen in Israel a prophet like Moses, who knew the Lord face to face;

According to all the signs and wonders that the Lord sent him to perform in the land of Egypt, before Pharaoh, and all his servants, and all his land;

According to all this mighty hand, and all these great and awesome works, which Moses did in the sight of all Israel.

Now it came to pass after the death of Moses the servant of the Lord, that the Lord spoke to Joshua son of Nun, who had served Moses, saying:

Moses my servant is dead; now therefore, arise, cross this Jordan, you and all this people, to enter the land that I am giving to the children of Israel.

I have given you every place where you set the sole of your foot, as I told Moses.

Your borders will be from this desert and this Lebanon, as far as this great river, the river Euphrates; all the land of the Hittites as far as the great sea, in the west.

No one will be able to stand against you all the days of your life; I will be with you as I was with Moses; I will never leave you nor forsake you.

Be strong and courageous; for it is you who will lead this people to possess the land which I swore to their fathers that I would give to them.

Only be strong and more courageous, so that you may be careful to do according to all the Law which Moses my servant commanded you; do not turn aside from it to the right hand or to the left, so that you may prosper wherever you go.

This Book of the Law shall not depart from your mouth, but you shall meditate on it day and night, so that you may be careful to do all that is written in it; for then you will make your undertakings prosperous, and then you will have good success. Have I not commanded you, [and said], be strong and courageous? Do not be afraid, and do not be terrified at anything; for the Lord your God is with you wherever you go. After this, Joshua commanded the officers of the people, saying:

Go through the camp, and command the people, and tell them: Prepare your provisions; for in three days you will cross this Jordan, to go in and possess the land that the Lord your God is giving you, so that you may possess it.

Joshua also spoke to the Reubenites, the Gadites, and the half-tribe of Manasseh, saying:

Remember the word that Moses, the servant of the Lord, commanded you, saying: The Lord your God has given you rest, and has given you this land.

Your wives [therefore], your little children, and your animals shall remain in the land that Moses gave you on this side of the Jordan; but you shall cross over armed before your brothers, all you who are strong and valiant, and you shall be their help;

Until the Lord has given rest to your brothers, as he has given you, and they too possess the land that the Lord your God is giving them; then you shall return to the land of your possession, and you shall possess it; [namely] that which Moses the servant of the Lord gave you on this side of the Jordan, toward the rising of the sun.

And they answered Joshua, saying, "We will do everything you have commanded us, and we will go wherever you send us."

We will obey you as we obeyed Moses; only may the Lord your God be with you, as he was with Moses.

Anyone who rebels against your command and does not obey your words in everything you command will be put to death; only be strong and courageous.

Now Joshua, son of Nun, had sent two men from Shittim to spy secretly on [the land], and he had told them: Go, look at the land, and Jericho. So they went, and came to the house of a harlot woman named Rahab, and slept there.

Then they told the King of Jericho: "Here are some men who came here tonight from the children of Israel to scout out the land."

And the King of Jericho sent to Rahab, saying, "Bring out the men who came to you and entered your house, for they came to spy out the whole land."

Now the woman had taken these two men and hidden them; and she said, "It is true that men came to my house, but I did not know where they [came from];

And as the door was being closed at nightfall, those men went out. I don't know where they went; pursue them quickly, for you will overtake them.

But she had made them climb onto the roof, and had hidden them in flax shives that she had arranged on the roof.

And some people pursued them along the road to the Jordan as far as the fords; and the gate was shut after those who were pursuing them had gone out.

But before they went to bed, she went up to them on the roof;

And he said to them, "I know that the Lord has given you the land, and that the terror of your name has fallen upon us, and that all the inhabitants of the land have become cowards because of you."

For we have heard that the Lord dried up the waters of the Red Sea from before you when you came out of the land of Egypt; and what you did to the two kings of the Amorites who were beyond the Jordan, to Sihon and Hog, whom you destroyed as if they were forbidden.

We heard it, and our heart melted, and since then no man has had courage because of you; for the Lord your God is the God of heaven above and of the earth below.

Now therefore, I beg you, swear to me by the Lord that since I have shown you mercy, you will also show mercy to my father's house, and that you will give me sure signs,

That you will save the lives of my father and mother, my brothers and sisters, and all who belong to them, and that you will protect us from death.

And these men answered him: We ourselves will answer for you until death, provided that you do not betray us in this matter; and when the Lord has given us the land we will deal with you freely and truthfully.

So she lowered them with a rope through the window; for her house was on the wall [of the city], and she lived on the wall [of the city].

And she said to them, "Go to the mountain, lest those who pursue you find you, and hide there for three days until those who pursue you return; and after that you may go on your way."

But these men had told him: We [will be] thus discharged from this oath that you made us take;

Behold, when we enter the land, you shall tie this scarlet cord in the window through which you let us down, and you shall take to yourself, into this house, your father and your mother, your brothers, and all your father's household.

And whoever goes out of the door of your house, his blood will be on his own head, and we will be free of it; but whoever is with you in the house, his blood will be on our heads if anyone lays a hand on him.

If you find us involved in this matter, we will be released from the oath you made us take.

And she answered, "Let it be as you have said." Then she let them go, and they went away; and she tied the scarlet cord to the window.

And they walked on and came to the mountain, and stayed there three days, until those who pursued them returned, and those who pursued them searched all the way, but they did not find them.

So these two men returned, and came down from the mountain, and crossed over, and came to Joshua, son of Nun, and told him all the things that had happened to them.

And they said to Joshua, "Surely the Lord has given the whole land into our hands; and indeed all the inhabitants of the land have lost heart because of us."

Now Joshua got up early in the morning; they departed from Shittim, they came to the Jordan, he and all the children of Israel, and they lodged there that night, before they crossed over.

And after three days the officers passed through the camp;

And they commanded the people, saying: As soon as you see the Ark of the covenant of the Lord your God, and the priests of the descendants of Levi carrying it, you shall set out from your quarter and walk after it.

And so that you do not approach it, there shall be between you and it a distance of about two thousand cubits, so that you may know the way by which you should walk; for you have not before passed by this way.

Joshua also said to the people: Consecrate yourselves; for the Lord will do wonderful things among you tomorrow.

Joshua also spoke to the priests, saying, "Take up the Ark of the Covenant and go on ahead of the people." So they took up the Ark of the Covenant and went on ahead of the people.

Now the Lord had said to Joshua, "Today I will begin to exalt you in the sight of all Israel, so that they may know that as I was with Moses, I will be with you."

You shall therefore command the priests who carry the Ark of the Covenant, saying to them: As soon as you come to the bank of the water of the Jordan, you shall stop at the Jordan.

And Joshua said to the children of Israel, "Come near here and listen to the words of the Lord your God."

Then Joshua said: This is how you will know that the Mighty, Living God is among you, and that he will certainly drive out from before you the Canaanites, the Hittites, the Hivites, the Perizzites, the Girgashites, the Amorites, and the Jebusites.

Behold, the Ark of the covenant of the Ruler of all the earth is about to pass before you through the Jordan.

Now then, choose twelve men from the Tribes of Israel, one man from each Tribe. And it shall come to pass that as soon as the soles of the feet of the Priests who bear the Ark of the Lord, the Ruler of all the earth, are set in the waters of the Jordan, the waters of the Jordan shall be cut off, the waters, [I say], which come down from above, and they shall stand still in a heap. And it came to pass that when the people had set out from their tents to cross the Jordan, the priests who carried the Ark of the Covenant were before the people. And as soon as those who carried the Ark arrived at the Jordan, and the feet of the priests who carried the Ark were wet at the water's edge (for the Jordan is full of water all the time of harvest). The waters that came down from above stopped and piled up a great distance from the city of Adam, which is next to Zarethan; and those [from below], which went down to the sea of the field, which is the salt sea, gave way and flowed away, and the people passed opposite Jericho. But the priests who carried the Ark of the covenant of the Lord stood firm on dry ground in the middle of the Jordan, while all Israel crossed over on dry ground, until all the people had finished crossing the Jordan. Now it came to pass when all the people had finished crossing the Jordan, because the Lord had spoken to Joshua; [and had] said to him: Take twelve men from the people, [namely] one man from each Tribe; And command them, saying: Take from here out of the middle of the Jordan, from the place where the priests stand firm, twelve stones, which you shall carry with you, and set them down in the place where you will lodge tonight. Joshua called the twelve men he had appointed from among the children of Israel, one man from each Tribe; And he said to them, "Pass over before the Ark of the Lord your God, in the middle of the Jordan, and let each of you lift up a stone on his shoulder, according to the number of the Tribes of the children of Israel; So that this may be a sign among you; [and] when your children ask their fathers in the future, saying, "What do these stones mean?" Then you will answer them that the waters of the Jordan were held up before the Ark of the covenant of the Lord, that the waters, [I say], of the Jordan were stopped when it crossed the Jordan; therefore these stones will serve as a memorial to the children of Israel forever. So the children of Israel did as Joshua had commanded. They took twelve stones from the middle of the Jordan, as the Lord had commanded Joshua, according to the number of the tribes of the children of Israel, and carried them to the place where they were to lodge, and set them there. Joshua also set up twelve stones in the middle of the Jordan, at the place where the feet of the priests who carried the Ark of the Covenant had stood; [and] they have remained there to this day. The priests who carried the Ark stood in the middle of the Jordan until everything the Lord had commanded Joshua to say to the people was fulfilled, according to all the things Moses had commanded Joshua; and the people hastened to cross over. And when all the people had finished crossing, then the Ark of the Lord crossed over, and the priests before the people. And the children of Reuben, and the children of Gad, and half of the Tribe of Manasseh crossed over armed before the children of Israel, as Moses had told them. They passed, [I said], towards the fields of Jericho about forty thousand men in war gear, before the Lord, to fight. On that day the Lord exalted Joshua in the sight of all Israel, and they feared him as they had feared Moses all the days of his life. Now the Lord had spoken to Joshua, saying: Command the priests who carry the Ark of the Testimony to bring up out of the Jordan.

And Joshua had commanded the priests, saying, "Go up out of the Jordan."

Now as soon as the priests, who carried the ark of the covenant of the Lord, had gone up out of the middle of the Jordan, and the priests had set the soles of their feet on dry ground, the waters of the Jordan returned to their place, and flowed as before, over all the banks.

So the people went up out of the Jordan on the tenth day of the first month, and they camped in Gilgal, east of Jericho.

Joshua also set up in Gilgal the twelve stones which they had taken from the Jordan.

And he spoke to the children of Israel, and said to them, "When your children ask their fathers in the future, and say to them, 'What do these stones mean?'"

You will teach it to your children, saying, 'Israel crossed this Jordan on dry ground.'

For the Lord your God dried up the waters of the Jordan before you until you had crossed over, just as the Lord your God had done to the Red Sea, which he dried up before us until we had crossed over.

So that all the peoples of the earth may know that the hand of the Lord is strong; [and] so that you may always fear the Lord your God.

Now it came to pass that as soon as all the kings of the Amorites who were west of the Jordan, and all the kings of the Canaanites who were by the sea, heard that the Lord had dried up the waters of the Jordan before the children of Israel until they had crossed over, their hearts melted, and there was no more courage in them because of the children of Israel.

At that time the Lord said to Joshua, "Make sharp knives and circumcise the Israelites a second time."

And Joshua made sharp knives for himself, and circumcised the children of Israel on the hill of the foreskins.

Now the reason Joshua circumcised them was that all the people who had come out of Egypt, all the males, [I say], men of war, had died in the desert on the way, after they had come out of Egypt.

And that all the people who had gone out had been circumcised, but they had not circumcised any of the people born in the desert on the way, after they had come out of Egypt.

For the children of Israel had walked in the desert for forty years, until all the people of the fighting men who had come out of Egypt had been consumed, [and] who had not obeyed the voice of the Lord; to whom the Lord had sworn that he would not let them see the land which the Lord had sworn to their fathers that he would give us, and which is a land flowing with milk and honey.

And he had raised up in their place their children, whom Joshua circumcised, because they were uncircumcised; for they had not been circumcised on the way.

And when all the people had been circumcised, they remained in their place in the camp until they were healed.

And the Lord said to Joshua, "Today I have rolled away the reproach of Egypt from you." And that place has been called Gilgal to this day.

So the children of Israel camped in Gilgal, and celebrated the Passover on the fourteenth day of the month, at evening, in the fields of Jericho.

And on the day after Passover, they ate grain from the land, [namely] unleavened bread and roasted grain, on that same day.

And the manna ceased the next day, after they had eaten grain from the land; and the children of Israel had no more manna, but they ate the produce of the land of Canaan that year.

Now it came to pass, when Joshua was near Jericho, that he lifted up his eyes and looked; and behold, opposite him stood a man with his sword drawn in his hand; and Joshua went to him, and said to him, Are you for us, or for our enemies?

And he said, "No; but I am the commander of the Lord's army, who has now come." And Joshua fell on his face to the ground and worshiped, and said to him, "What does my Lord say to his servant?"

And the commander of the Lord's army said to Joshua, "Take off your sandal from your feet, for the place on which you are standing is holy." And Joshua did so.

Now Jericho was shut up, and remained carefully shut, because of the children of Israel; no one went out of it, nor did anyone go in.

And the Lord said to Joshua, "See, I have delivered Jericho and its king into your hands, and his mighty men."

All of you, men of war, will march around the city, circling it once: you will do this for six days.

And seven priests shall carry seven ram's horns before the Ark; but on the seventh day you shall march around the city seven times, and the priests shall blow the horn.

And when they sound the ram's horn, as soon as you hear the sound of the horn, all the people will give a great shout of joy, and the wall of the city will fall down beneath them, and the people will go up, each one facing the other.

Joshua son of Nun then called the priests and said to them, "Bring up the Ark of the Covenant, and let seven priests take seven ram's horns before the Ark of the Lord."

He also said to the people: Go over and march around the city, and let all who are armed pass before the Ark of the Lord.

And when Joshua had spoken to the people, the seven priests who carried the seven ram's horns before the Lord passed by and blew the horns, and the Ark of the covenant of the Lord followed them.

And those who were armed went in front of the priests who blew the trumpets; but the rearguard followed behind the Ark; they blew the trumpets as they marched.

Now Joshua had commanded the people, saying, You shall not shout for joy, nor make your voice heard, nor shall a single word come out of your mouth, until the day I tell you, Shout for joy; then you shall do it.

So he made the Ark of the Lord go around the city, circling all around once, then they returned to the camp and stayed there.

Then Joshua got up early in the morning, and the priests carried the Ark of the Lord.

And the seven priests who carried the seven ram's horns before the Ark of the Lord walked, and as they went they blew the horns; and those who were armed went in front of them; then the rearguard followed the Ark of the Lord; they blew the horns as they walked.

So they went around the city once on the second day, and returned to the camp. They did the same for six days.

But when the seventh day came, they got up early in the morning at daybreak, and they went around the city seven times in the same way; on that day only they went around the city seven times.

And at the seventh time, as the Priests blew the trumpets, Joshua said to the people, "Shout for joy, for the Lord has given you the city."

The city will be set aside by the Lord, along with everything in it; only Rahab the harlot will live, she and all who are with her in the house, because she carefully hid the messengers we sent.

But whatever the case may be, beware of the prohibition, lest you bring a prohibition upon yourselves by taking of the prohibition, and bring a prohibition upon the camp of Israel, and disturb it.

But all the silver and gold, and the vessels of bronze and iron, shall be consecrated to the Lord; they shall go into the treasury of the Lord.

So the people shouted for joy, and the trumpets were blown. And when the people heard the sound of the trumpets and gave a great shout of joy, the wall fell down beneath them; and the people went up into the city, each one facing the other, and they took it.

And they put to death all in the city, from man to woman, from child to old man, even to ox, sheep, and donkey.

But Joshua said to the two men who had scouted the land, "Go into the house of that harlot woman and bring her out of there, along with everything that belongs to her, as you swore to her."

So the young men who had scouted [the land] went in and brought out Rahab, her father, her mother, her brothers, and all that belonged to her, and they also brought out all the families that belonged to her, and put them out of the camp of Israel. Then they burned the city and everything in it with fire; only they put the silver and gold and the vessels of bronze and iron into the treasury of the House of the Lord.

So Joshua saved the life of Rahab the harlot, and of her father's house, and of all who belonged to her; and she has lived in the midst of Israel to this day, because she had hidden the messengers whom Joshua had sent to spy out Jericho.

And at that time Joshua swore, saying: Cursed before the Lord is the man who begins to rebuild this city of Jericho; he shall found it on his firstborn, and he shall set up its gates on his youngest.

And the Lord was with Joshua; and his fame spread throughout the land.

But the children of Israel were guilty concerning the ban: for Hachan son of Carmi, son of Zabdi, son of Zerah, of the Tribe of Judah, took some of the ban, and the anger of the Lord was kindled against the children of Israel.

For Joshua sent men from Jericho to Ai, which was near Bethaven on the east side of Bethel, and spoke to them, saying, "Go up and explore the land." So these men went up and explored Ai.

And when they returned to Joshua, they said to him, "Do not let all the people go up, but let about two or three thousand men go up, and let them defeat Ai. Do not tire all the people [by sending them] there; for they are few."

So about three thousand men of the people went up there, but they fled from before those of Hai.

And those from Hai killed about thirty-six of them; for they pursued them from the front of the gate to Sebarim, and struck them down in a descent; and the heart of the people melted, and became like water.

Then Joshua tore his clothes and fell facedown before the Ark of the Lord until evening, he and the elders of Israel, and they threw powder on their heads.

And Joshua said, "Alas, O Lord God, why have you brought this people across the Jordan so magnificently, to deliver us into the hands of the Amorites and destroy us? Oh, that we had not been determined to remain, and had not remained beyond the Jordan!"

Alas! Lord, what shall I say, since Israel has turned its back on its enemies?

The Canaanites and all the inhabitants of the land will hear of it, and they will surround us, and they will cut off our name from the earth; and what will you do to your great Name?

Then the Lord said to Joshua, "Get up! Why do you throw yourself face down like that?"

Israel has sinned; they have transgressed my covenant that I commanded them, even they have taken of the forbidden things; even they have stolen them; even they have lied, and even they have put it in their possessions.

Therefore, the children of Israel will not be able to stand against their enemies; they will turn their backs on their enemies, for they have become a curse. I will no longer be with you unless you exterminate the curse from among you.

Arise; consecrate the people, and say: Consecrate yourselves for tomorrow; for thus says the Lord, the God of Israel: There is something accursed among you, O Israel!

You will not be able to stand before your enemies until you remove the accursed from among you.

You shall therefore approach in the morning according to your Tribes; and the Tribe that the Lord has taken shall approach according to the families; and the family that the Lord has taken shall approach according to the houses; and the house that the Lord has taken shall approach according to the heads.

Then the one who has been seized in the ban shall be burned with fire, he and all that is his; because he has transgressed the covenant of the Lord, and has committed an outrage in Israel.

Joshua therefore rose early in the morning, and brought Israel near according to their Tribes; and the Tribe of Judah was captured.

Then he brought the families of Judah near, and he seized the family of those who had descended from Zerah. Then he brought the family of those who had descended from Zerah near, one by one, and Zabdi was seized.

And when he had brought his house near by the head, Hacan son of Carmi, son of Zabdi, son of Zerah, of the Tribe of Judah, was captured.

Then Joshua said to Hachan, "My son, please give glory to the Lord, the God of Israel, and confess to him; and please tell me what you have done; do not hide it from me."

And Hacan answered Joshua, and said, "I have sinned, it is true, against the Lord, the God of Israel, and I have done such and such a thing."

I saw among the spoils a beautiful cloak from Sinhar, two hundred shekels of silver, and a gold ingot weighing fifty shekels; I coveted them, [I] took them; and behold, these things [are] hidden in the ground in the middle of my tent, and the silver is under the cloak.

Then Joshua sent messengers who ran to that tent; and behold, the cloak was hidden in Hachan's tent, and the silver under the cloak.

So they took them from the middle of the tent, and brought them to Joshua, and to all the children of Israel, and they spread them out before the Lord.

Then Joshua and all Israel with him, taking Hachan son of Zerah, and the silver, and the robe, and the ingot of gold, and his sons, and his daughters, and his oxen, and his donkeys, and his sheep, and his tent, and all that was his, brought them to the valley of Hachor.

And Joshua said, "Why have you troubled us? The Lord will trouble you today." And all the Israelites stoned him to death and burned them with fire after they had stoned them.

And they piled a great heap of stones over it, [which remains] to this day. And the Lord relented from his fierce anger; therefore that place has been called to this day the Valley of Hachor.

Then the Lord said to Joshua, "Do not be afraid or discouraged. Take with you all the people fit for war, and go up against Ai; see, I have delivered into your hand the king of Ai, his people, his city, and his land."

And you shall do to Ai and its king as you did to Jericho and its king: only you shall plunder its spoils and livestock for yourselves. Set ambushes behind the city.

Joshua therefore arose with all the people fit for war, to go up against Ai, and Joshua chose thirty thousand strong and valiant men, and sent them out by night.

And he commanded them, saying: See, you who will be lying in ambush behind the city, do not go far from the city, but be ready.

And I, and all the people who are with me, will approach the city, and when they come out to meet us, as [they did] the first time, we will flee from before them.

So they will come out after us, until we have drawn them out of the city; for they will say: They are fleeing from us as before; because we will flee from them.

But you will rise from the ambush and take possession of the city, for the Lord your God will deliver it into your hands.

And when you have taken it, you shall set it on fire; you shall do according to the word of the Lord. See, I have commanded you.

Joshua therefore sent them, and they went and lay in ambush, and stood between Bethel and Ai, west of Ai; but Joshua remained that night with the people.

Then Joshua got up early in the morning and counted the people; and he and the elders of Israel went up before the people to Hai.

And all the people fit for war, who [were] with him, went up, and approached, and they came opposite the city, and encamped on the side of the North of Hai; and the valley was between him and Hai.

He also took about five thousand men, whom he ambushed between Bethel and Hai, west of Hai.

And the people placed all the camp that was on the north side against the city, and the ambush on the west side of the city; and that night Joshua advanced into the valley.

Now it happened that as soon as the King of Hai saw him, the men of the city hurried and rose early in the morning, and at the appointed time the King and all his people went out into the countryside against Israel to fight him. Now he did not know that there were people lying in ambush against him behind the city.

Then Joshua and all Israel [feigning to be] defeated when they met them fled by way of the desert.

Therefore all the people who were in the city were gathered together with a loud cry to pursue them; and they pursued Joshua; and they were thus drawn out of the city; So that not a single man remained in Hai or in Bethel who did not go out after Israel; they left the city open, and they pursued Israel.

Then the Lord said to Joshua, "Stretch out the standard that is in your hand toward Ai, for I will give it into your hand." So Joshua stretched out the standard that was in his hand toward the city.

And those who were lying in ambush immediately got up from the place where they were; they began to run as soon as [Joshua] had stretched out his hand; they came into the city, took it, and they hastened to set fire to the city.

And the people of Hai turned behind them and looked; and behold, the smoke of the city rose up to the sky: and there was no strength in them to flee: and the people who were fleeing towards the desert turned against those who were pursuing them.

And Joshua and all Israel, seeing that those who were in ambush had taken the city, and that the smoke of the city was rising, turned around and struck down the people of Hai.

The others also came out of the city against them; thus they were [surrounded] by the Israelites, some on this side and some on the other; and they were so beaten that not one was left alive, or who escaped.

They also captured the King of Hai alive, and presented him to Joshua.

And when the Israelites had finished killing all the inhabitants of Ai in the open country, in the desert where they had pursued them, and all had fallen by the edge of the sword, until they were completely defeated, all the Israelites turned towards Ai, and struck it with the edge of the sword.

And all those who fell that day, both men and women, were twelve thousand, all people of Hai.

And Joshua did not withdraw his hand, which he had raised high with the standard, until all the inhabitants of Hai had been completely defeated in the manner of the prohibition.

Only the Israelites plundered the animals and the spoils of that city for themselves, according to what the Lord had commanded Joshua.

Joshua therefore burned Hai, and made it a perpetual heap [of ruins], and a desert, to this day.

Then he had the King of Hai hanged on a gallows until evening time: and as the sun was setting, Joshua gave orders that his dead body be taken down from the gallows, and thrown at the entrance of the city gate, and a great heap of stones was placed over him, [which has remained] to this day.

Then Joshua built an altar to the Lord, the God of Israel, on the mountain of Aebal;

As Moses the servant of the Lord had commanded the children of Israel, as it is written in the Book of the Law of Moses. He made this altar of whole stones on which no one had wielded an iron tool; and they offered burnt offerings on it to the Lord, and sacrificed peace offerings.

He also wrote there on stones a copy of the Law of Moses, which [Moses] had written down before the children of Israel.

And all Israel, and its elders, and its officers, and its judges were on this side and beyond the Ark, opposite the priests who are of the race of Levi, carrying the Ark of the covenant of the Lord, both the foreigners and the natural Hebrews; half of them being against the mountain of Gerizim, and the other half against the mountain of Ebal, as Moses the servant of the Lord had commanded, to bless the people of Israel for the first time.

And after that he read aloud all the words of the Law, both the blessings and the curses, according to all that is written in the Book of the Law.

There was nothing that Moses had commanded that Joshua did not read aloud before all the assembly of Israel, the women, the little children, and the strangers conversing among them.

Now when all the kings who were west of the Jordan, in the hill country and in the plain and along the whole shore of the great sea as far as Lebanon, [namely] the Hittites, the Amorites, the Canaanites, the Perizzites, the Hivites, and the Jebusites, had heard [these things],

They all gathered together to wage war against Joshua and Israel, by common agreement.

But the inhabitants of Gibeon having heard what Joshua had done at Jericho and at Hai;

They used cunning, for they set out on the road, and imitated the ambassadors, and took old sacks on their donkeys, and old wineskins that had been broken, and that had been patched up.

And they had old, patched shoes on their feet, and old clothes on them; and all the bread they had stored up was dry and moldy.

And when they came to Joshua at the camp in Gilgal, they said to him and to the leaders of Israel, "We have come from a distant land; now therefore make a treaty with us."

And the leaders of Israel answered these Hivites: Perhaps you live among us; and how then can we make a treaty with you?

But they said to Joshua, "We are your servants." Then Joshua said to them, "Who are you, and where do you come from?"

They answered him, "Your servants have come from a very distant country because of the fame of the Lord your God; for we have heard of his fame, and all the things that he did in Egypt;

And all that he did to the two Kings of the Amorites, who were beyond the Jordan, to Sihon King of Heshbon, and to Hog King of Bashan who [resided] in Hastaroth.

And our elders and all the inhabitants of our country said to us these same words: Take provisions with you for the journey, and go to meet them, and say to them: We are your servants, and now make a covenant with us.

This is our bread. We took it from our homes while it was still warm for our provisions, on the day we left to come to you; but now behold, it has become dry and moldy.

And these are the wineskins that we had filled new, and now they have burst; and our clothes and our sandals are worn out from the long journey.

So these men had taken provisions; but they did not consult the mouth of the Lord.

For Joshua made peace with them, and concluded with them [this] covenant, that he would let them live; and the leaders of the assembly swore an oath to them.

But three days after the alliance was made with them, they learned that these were their neighbors, and that they lived among them.

For the children of Israel departed, and came to their cities on the third day. Now their cities were Gibeon, Chephirah, Beeroth, and Kiriath-jeharim.

And the children of Israel did not strike them, because the leaders of the assembly had sworn to them by the Lord, the God of Israel; but all the assembly grumbled against the leaders.

Then all the leaders said to the whole assembly: We have sworn to them by the Lord, the God of Israel; therefore we cannot touch them now.

Let us do this for them, and let them live, so that there may be no anger against us because of the oath we swore to them.

The leaders then told them that they would live; but they were employed in cutting wood and drawing water for the whole assembly, as the leaders told them.

For Joshua called them and spoke to them, saying, "Why have you deceived us by saying, 'We are far from you, yet you dwell among us?'"

Therefore, now you are cursed, and there will always be slaves among you, and woodcutters, and water drawers for the house of my God.

And they answered Joshua, and said, "After it was accurately reported to your servants that the Lord your God had commanded Moses his servant that the whole land should be given to you, and that all the inhabitants of the land should be exterminated before you, we were extremely afraid for our lives because of you, and we did this.

And now we are in your hands, do with us as you see fit and justly do with us.

So he did this to them, and he delivered them from the hand of the children of Israel, so that they did not kill them.

And on that day Joshua appointed them as woodcutters and water drawers for the congregation and for the altar of the Lord, to this day in the place that he would choose.

Now when Adoni-zedek, King of Jerusalem, heard that Joshua had taken Ai, and had completely destroyed it in the manner of the ban, having done to Ai and to its King, as he had done to Jericho and to its King, and that the inhabitants of Gibeon had made peace with the Israelites, and were among them;

There was much fear, because Gibeon was a great city, like a royal city, and it was greater than Hai; and [because] all its men were strong.

Therefore Adoni-zedek, King of Jerusalem, sent to Horem King of Hebron, and to Biream King of Jarmuth, and to Japhiah King of Lachish, and to Debir King of Heglon, to tell them:

Come up to me, and give me help so that we may strike Gibeon; for she has made peace with Joshua and with the children of Israel.

So five Kings of the Amorites, [namely], the King of Jerusalem, the King of Hebron, the King of Jarmuth, the King of Lachish, and the King of Heglon, assembled and went up with all their armies, and encamped against Gibeon, and made war against him.

Therefore those from Gibeon sent word to Joshua at the camp at Gilgal, saying, "Do not withdraw your hands from your servants; come up quickly to us, and protect us, and give us help; for all the kings of the Amorites who live in the mountains have gathered together against us."

Joshua therefore went up from Gilgal, and with him all the people [who were] fit for war, and all the mighty men.

And the Lord said to Joshua, "Do not be afraid of them, for I have given them into your hand, and not one of them shall survive before you."

Joshua therefore came quickly to them; [and] went up from Gilgal all night.

And the Lord routed them before Israel, who made a great slaughter of them near Gibeon; and pursued them along the way of the mountain of Beth-horon, and defeated them as far as Hazekah, and as far as Makkedah.

And as they fled from before Israel, and were on the descent of Beth-horon, the Lord hurled large stones from heaven upon them as far as Hazekah, and they died there; and there were still more who died from the hailstones than those whom the children of Israel killed with the sword.

Then Joshua spoke to the Lord on the day that the Lord delivered the Amorite to the children of Israel, and said in the presence of Israel: Sun, stand still over Gibeon, and you Moon, over the valley of Aijalon.

And the sun stood still, and the moon also stood still, until the people had taken revenge on their enemies. Is this not written in the Book of the Righteous? So the sun stood still in the middle of the heavens and did not hasten to set for about a whole day.

And there was no day like it before or since, the Lord answering the voice of a man; for the Lord fought for the Israelites.

And Joshua and all Israel with him returned to the camp at Gilgal.

Moreover, those five kings had fled and hidden in a cave at Makkedah.

And it was reported to Joshua, saying: The five kings were found hiding in a cave at Makkedah.

And Joshua had said: Roll large stones to the entrance of the cave, and place some men near it to guard it.

But you, do not stop, pursue your enemies, and defeat them to the last one, [and] do not let them enter their cities; for the Lord your God has delivered them into your hands.

And when Joshua with the children of Israel had finished making a very great slaughter of them, until they had completely destroyed them, and those of them who had escaped had withdrawn to the walled cities;

All the people returned in peace to the camp to Joshua at Makkedah; [and] no one stirred his tongue against any of the children of Israel.

Then Joshua said, "Open the entrance to the cave, and bring these five kings out of the cave to me."

And they did so, and they brought out of the cave these five kings: the king of Jerusalem, the king of Hebron, the king of Jarmuth, the king of Lachish, and the king of Heglon.

And after they had brought these five kings out of the cave to Joshua, Joshua called all the men of Israel, and said to the captains of the fighting men who had gone with him, "Come near, put your feet on the necks of these kings"; and they came near, and put their feet on their necks.

Then Joshua said to them, "Do not be afraid or discouraged; be strong and courageous, for the Lord will do the same to all your enemies against whom you are fighting."

And after that Joshua struck them down, and put them to death, and hung them on five gallows; and they remained hanging on those gallows until evening.

And as the sun was setting, Joshua gave orders that they be taken down from the gallows and thrown into the cave where they had hidden; and large stones were placed at the entrance of the cave [which have remained there] to this day.

Joshua also took Makkedah that same day, and struck it with the edge of the sword, and defeated its king and its inhabitants in the manner of the curse, and left no one who was in that city to escape; and he did to the king of Makkedah as he had done to the king of Jericho.

After that Joshua and all Israel with him went from Makkedah to Libnah, and fought at Libnah.

And the Lord also delivered it into the hands of Israel, with its King, and struck it with the edge of the sword, and left not a single person who was in that city; and he did to its King as he had done to the King of Jericho.

Then Joshua and all Israel with him crossed from Libnah to Lachish, and encamped before it, and made war against it.

And the Lord delivered Lachish into the hands of Israel, who took it on the second day, and struck it with the edge of the sword, and all the people who were in it, as he had done to Libnah.

Then Horam King of Gezer went up to help Lachish; and Joshua struck him and his people, so that he did not leave a single man alive.
After this Joshua and all Israel with him crossed over from Lachish to Heglon; and they encamped before it, and made war against it;
And they took it that very day, and struck it with the edge of the sword; and [Joshua] defeated in the manner of the forbidden on that very day all the people who were there, as he had done at Lachish.

Then Joshua and all Israel with him went up from Heglon to Hebron, and they made war against him.

And they took it, and struck it with the edge of the sword, with its King, and all its cities, and all the people who were in it; he left none of them alive, as he had done to Heglon; and he defeated it in the manner of the ban, and all the people who were in it.

Then Joshua and all Israel with him turned back to Debir, and they made war against him.

And he captured it, along with its king and all its cities; and they struck them down with the edge of the sword, and utterly destroyed all the people who were in them; he left not one alive. He did to Debir and its king as he had done to Hebron, and as he had done to Libnah and its king.

Joshua therefore struck down all that land, the hill country, the South, the plain, the slopes of the mountains, and all their kings; he left none of them alive; and he destroyed every living person in the manner of a banished slain, as the Lord the God of Israel had commanded.

[Thus] Joshua defeated them from Kadesh-barneh to Gaza, and all the land of Goshen, as far as Gibeon.

So he took both those kings and their land; because the Lord, the God of Israel, fought for Israel.

After that Joshua and all Israel with him returned to the camp at Gilgal.

And as soon as Jabin, King of Hazor, heard of these things, he sent word to Jobab King of Madon, and to the King of Shiron, and to the King of Achsaph,

And to the Kings who [dwelt] towards the North, in the mountains and in the countryside, [towards] the South of Kinnaroth, and in the plain, and at Naphoth-Dor towards the West;

To the Canaanite who was in the East and in the West, to the Amorite, to the Hittite, to the Perizzite, to the Jebusite in the mountains, and to the Hivite under Hermon in the land of Mizpah.

So they went out, and all their armies with them, a great people, like the sand on the seashore, in their multitude; there were also horses and chariots in very great numbers.

All these kings having made an appointment, came and encamped together near the waters of Merom, to fight against Israel.

And the Lord said to Joshua, "Do not be afraid of them; for tomorrow, about this time, I will deliver them all, mortally wounded, before Israel; you shall hamstring their horses, and burn their chariots with fire."

Joshua and all the fighting men with him came quickly against them at the waters of Merom, and attacked them.

And the Lord delivered them into the hand of Israel, and they defeated them and pursued them as far as Sidon the great, and as far as the waters of Masrephoth, and as far as the field of Mizpah, toward the east, and they defeated them so that they left none of them escape.

And Joshua did to them as the Lord had told him; he hamstrung their horses and burned their chariots with fire.

And as Joshua returned at that time, he took Hazor, and struck its king with the sword; for Hazor had previously been the capital of all those kingdoms.

They also put all the people who were there to the edge of the sword, destroying them in the manner of the ban; not a single person was left alive, and Hazor was burned with fire.

Joshua also took all the cities of those kings, and all their kings, and put them to the edge of the sword, [and] he destroyed them in the manner of the ban, as Moses the servant of the Lord had commanded.

But Israel did not burn any of the cities, which remained in their state, except for Hazor, which Joshua burned.

And the children of Israel plundered for themselves all the spoil of those cities, and the beasts; only they put to the edge of the sword all the men, until they had exterminated them; they left no one alive.

As the Lord had commanded Moses his servant, so Moses commanded Joshua; and Joshua did so; so that he omitted nothing of all that the Lord had commanded Moses.

Joshua therefore took all that land, the hill country, and all the land of the Negev, with all the land of Goshen, the plain, and the countryside, the hill country of Israel, and its plain.

From the mountain of Halak, which rises towards Sehir, even as far as Bahal-Gad in the countryside of Lebanon, under the mountain of Hermon. He also took all their kings, and defeated them, and put them to death.

Joshua waged war for several days against all those kings.

There was no city that made peace with the children of Israel, except the Hivites who lived in Gibeon; they took them all by war.

For it was from the Lord that they hardened their hearts to go out into battle against Israel, so that he would destroy them as he had forbidden them, showing them no mercy, but utterly exterminating them, as the Lord had commanded Moses.

At that time Joshua also came and exterminated the Canaanites from the mountains, from Hebron, Debir, Hanab, and from all the mountains of Judah, and from all the mountains of Israel; Joshua, [I say], destroyed them in the manner of the ban, with their cities.

None of the Canaanites remained in the land of the children of Israel; only those who remained were in Gaza, Gath, and Ashdod.

Joshua therefore took all the land, according to all that the Lord had said to Moses, and gave it as an inheritance to Israel, according to their portions, and their Tribes; and the land was at peace, without war.

Now these were the kings of the land whom the children of Israel struck down, and whose land they possessed beyond the Jordan toward the rising sun, from the Arnon Valley to Mount Hermon, and all the countryside toward the East.

[Knowing] Sihon, King of the Amorites, who lived in Heshbon, and who ruled from Haroher which [is] on the edge of the Arnon stream, and [from] the middle of the stream, and half of Gilead, even as far as the Jabbok stream, which is the border of the children of Hammon;

And [from] the countryside to the Sea of Kinnaroth towards the East, and to the Sea of the Country, which is the Salt Sea, towards the East, to the road to Beth-jesimoth; and from the South below Ashdod of Pithul.

And the lands of Hog, King of Bashan, who was of the remnant of the Rephaim, [and] who lived in Hestaroath and in Edrei;

And who ruled in the mountain of Hermon, and in Salcah, and throughout Bashan, as far as the borders of the Geshurites and the Mahacathites, and half of Gilead, the border of Sihon, King of Heshbon.

Moses the servant of the Lord, and the children of Israel defeated them; and Moses the servant of the Lord gave it as a possession to the Reubenites, and to the Gadites, and to half of the Tribe of Manasseh.

And these are the kings of the land that Joshua and the children of Israel struck down on this side of the Jordan toward the west, from Bahal-Gad in the countryside of Lebanon, as far as the mountain of Halak which goes up toward Seir, and that Joshua gave to the Tribes of Israel as a possession, according to their portions;

[Country consisting] of mountains, plains, countryside, hills, desert, and southern lands; the Hittites, the Amorites, the Canaanites, the Perizzites, the Hivites, and the Jebusites.

A King of Jericho; a King of Hai, which was next to Bethel;

A King of Jerusalem; a King of Hebron;

A King of Jarmuth; a King of Lachish;

A King of Heglon; a King of Gezer;

A King of Debir; a King of Geder;

A King of Horma; a King of Harad;

A King of Libnah; a King of Hadullam;

A King of Makkedah; a King of Bethel;

A King of Tappuah; a King of Hepher;

A King of Aphek; a King of Sharon;

A King of Madonna; a King of Hazor;

A King of Simron-Meron; a King of Acsaph;

A King of Tahanac; a King of Megiddo;

A King of Kedesh; a King of Jokneham of Carmel;

A King of Dor, near Naphoth-Dor; a King of Gojim, near Gilgal;

One King of Tirtsa; thirty-one Kings in all.

Now when Joshua was old, very advanced in years, the Lord said to him, "You are now old, very advanced in years, and there is still a very large land to possess."

This is the land that remains, all the Philistine territories, and all of Gezuri.

From Sihor, which is in front of Egypt, even to the borders of Hekron toward the North; this is known of the Canaanites; [namely] the five governments of the Philistines, which are that of Gaza, that of Ashdod, that of Ashkelon, that of Gath, and that of Hekron, and the Hauvians.

On the south side, all the land of the Canaanites, and Mehara which belongs to the Sidonians, as far as Aphek, as far as the borders of the Amorites.

The land also which belongs to the Giblians, and all of Lebanon; towards the rising sun, from Bahal-Gad, under the mountain of Hermon, to the entrance of Hamath.

All the inhabitants of the mountain from Lebanon to the waters of Masrephoth; all the Sidonians; I myself will drive them out from before the children of Israel; only have them cast out [the lots], so that it may be Israel's inheritance, as I commanded you.

Now therefore divide this land as an inheritance to the nine Tribes, and to half of the Tribe of Manasseh;

With which the Reubenites and the Gadites took their inheritance; which Moses gave them beyond the Jordan to the East, as Moses the servant of the Lord gave it to them;

From Haroher, which is on the bank of the Arnon stream, and the city which is in the middle of the stream, and all the flat land of Medeba, as far as Dibon.

And all the cities of Sihon, King of the Amorites, who reigned in Heshbon, as far as the borders of the children of Hammon;

And Gilead, and the borders of the Gesurites and Mahacathites, and all the mountain of Hermon, and all Bashan as far as Salcah;

The whole Kingdom of Hog in Bashan, which Hog reigned in Hastaroth and in Edrei, [and] had remained of the remnant of the Rephaim, whom [Kings] Moses defeated and dispossessed.

(Now the children of Israel did not dispossess the Geshurites and the Mahacathites; but the Geshurites and the Mahacathites have lived among Israel to this day.)

However, he gave no inheritance to the Tribe of Levi; the sacrifices of the Lord, the God of Israel, made by fire being their inheritance, as he had told them.

Moses therefore gave an inheritance to the Tribe of the children of Reuben according to their families.

And their boundaries were from Haroher which is on the bank of the Arnon stream, and the city which is in the middle of the stream, and all the flat land which is near Medeba.

Heshbon and all its cities, which were in the open country; Dibon, and Bamoth-Bahal, and Beth-Bahal-mehon.

And Jahatza, and Kedemoth, and Mephahath.

And Kirjathajim, and Sibma, and Tseretsahar in the mountain of the valley.

And Beth-pehor, and Ashdoth of Pishgah, and Beth-jesimoth.

And all the cities of the lowland, and all the Kingdom of Sihon, King of the Amorites who reigned in Heshbon; whom Moses defeated, with the chiefs of Midian, Evi, Rekem, Zur, Hur, and Rebah, Princes under Sihon, [and] living in the land.

The children of Israel also put Balaam son of Behor, the diviner, to the sword, along with the others who were killed there.

And the boundary markers of the children of Reuben were the Jordan and its boundary marker. This was the inheritance of the children of Reuben according to their families, [namely] those cities and their villages.

Moses also gave [an inheritance] to the Tribe of Gad for the children of Gad, according to their families.

And their land was Jazer, and all the cities of Gilead, and half of the land of the children of Hammon, as far as Haroher, which is opposite Rabbah.

And from Heshbon to Ramath-mitzpeh, and Betonim, and from Mahanajim to the borders of Debir.

And in the valley, Beth-haram, and Beth-nimra, and Succoth, and Zaphon; the rest of the Kingdom of Sihon King of Heshbon, the Jordan, and its boundary, to the end of the Sea of Kinnereth, beyond the Jordan, toward the East.

Such was the inheritance of the children of Gad, according to their families, [namely] those cities and their villages.

Moses also gave to half of the Tribe of Manasseh [an inheritance], which remained with the half of the Tribe of the children of Manasseh, according to their families.

Their country was from Mahanajim, all Bashan, [and] all the Kingdom of Hog, King of Bashan, and all the towns of Jair that are in Bashan, sixty cities.

And half of Gilead, and Hastaroth, and Edrei, cities of the Kingdom of Hog in Bashan, were to the children of Machir, son of Manasseh, [namely] to half of the children of Machir, according to their families.

These are the lands that Moses, while in the fields of Moab, had divided as an inheritance, from beyond the Jordan of Jericho, towards the East.

But Moses gave no inheritance to the Tribe of Levi; [for] the Lord, the God of Israel, is their inheritance, as he had spoken to them.

These are the lands that the children of Israel received as an inheritance in the land of Canaan, which Eleazar the Priest, and Joshua, son of Nun, and the heads of the fathers of the Tribes of the children of Israel divided among them as an inheritance.

According to the lot of their inheritance, as the Lord had commanded through Moses, [namely] to nine Tribes, and to half of one Tribe.

For Moses had given an inheritance to two tribes, and to half a tribe beyond the Jordan, but he had not given an inheritance among them to the Levites.

Because the children of Joseph, [namely], Manasseh and Ephraim, made two tribes; and no portion was given to the Levites in the land, except the cities to live in with their suburbs for their flocks, and for [the rest of] their property.

The children of Israel did as the Lord had commanded Moses, and they divided the land.

Now the children of Judah came to Joshua in Gilgal; and Caleb son of Jephunneh Kenizzite said to him, "You know the word that the Lord spoke about me and about you to Moses the man of God in Kadesh-barne." "I was forty years old when Moses the servant of the Lord sent me from Kadesh-barne to spy out the land, and I reported back to him the thing just as it was in my heart. And my brothers who had gone up with me were melting the hearts of the people; but I persevered in following the Lord my God. And Moses swore on that day, saying: If the land on which your foot has walked is not yours as an inheritance, and to your children forever, because you have persevered in following the Lord my God. But now, behold, the Lord has kept me alive according to what he had spoken; it has been forty-five years since the Lord spoke this word to Moses, when Israel was walking in the wilderness, and now, behold, I am today eighty-five years old. And I am still today as strong as I was the day Moses sent me, and I now have the same strength I had then for fighting, and for going back and forth. Now therefore give me this mountain, of which the Lord spoke that day; for you heard that day that the Hanakins dwell there, and that there are large fortified cities; perhaps the Lord will be with me, and I will dispossess them, as the Lord has spoken.

Joshua therefore blessed him, and gave Hebron as an inheritance to Caleb, son of Jephunneh. That is why Hebron belonged to Caleb, son of Jephunneh Kenizzite, as an inheritance to this day, because he had persevered in following the Lord, the God of Israel. Now the name of Hebron was formerly Kirjath-Arbah, and [Arbah] had been a very great man among the Hanakins. And the land was at peace without war. This was the fate of the Tribe of the children of Judah according to their families. At the borders of Edom, the desert of Zin towards the South, was the last extremity [of their land] towards the South. So much so that their border on the southern side was the last stretch of the salt sea, from the arm that looks towards the South. And it was to go out towards the South of the Hakrabbim ascent, and pass through Zin; and, going up from the South of Kadesh-barne pass through Hebron; then going up towards Addar turn towards Karkah; Then, passing towards Hazmon, go out to the Wadi of Egypt; so that the extremities of this border would reach the sea. This will be, [said Joshua], your border on the south. And the border towards the East will be the salt sea to the end of the Jordan; and the border on the North side will be from the arm of the sea, which is at the end of the Jordan. And this border will go up to Bethhogla, and will pass on the north side of Bethharaba; and this border will go up to the stone of Bohan, son of Reuben. Then this border will go up to Debir, from the valley of Hachor, even to the North, facing Gilgal; which is opposite the ascent of Adummim, which is to the South of the stream; then this border will pass to the waters of Hen-semès, and its extremities will go to Hen-roguel. Then this border will go up through the valley of the son of Hinnom, to the side of Jebusi towards the South, which is Jerusalem; then this border will go up to the top of the mountain, which is opposite the valley of Hinnom, towards the West, [and] which is at the end of the valley of Rephaim, towards the North. And this border will run from the top of the mountain to the fountain of the waters of Nephtoah, and out to the cities of the mountain of Hebron; then this border will run to Bahala, which is Kirjath-jeharim. And this border will turn from Bahala towards the West, to the mountain of Sehir; then it will pass to the side of the mountain of Jeharim towards the North, which [is] Kesalon; then going down to Beth-shemes, it will pass to Timna. And this border will go out to the side of Hekron, towards the North, and this border will align itself towards Sikkeron; then having passed the mountain of Bahala, it will go out to Jabneel; so that the ends of this border will go to the sea. Now the border on the west side will be what is toward the great sea, and its limits.

These were the borders of the children of Judah on all sides, according to their families.

Moreover, to Caleb, son of Jephunneh, a portion had been given in the midst of the children of Judah, according to the commandment of the Lord made to Joshua, [namely] Kiriath-Arbah, [now Arbah was] father of Hanak; [and Kiriath-Arbah] is Hebron.

And Caleb dispossessed from there the three sons of Hanak, [namely] Shesai, Ahiman, and Talmai, the children of Hanak.

And from there he went up to the inhabitants of Debir, whose name was formerly Kirjath-sepher.

And Caleb said: I will give my daughter Hacsah as a wife to the one who defeats Kirjath-sepher and takes her.

And Hothniel son of Kenaz, brother of Caleb, took her; and [Caleb] gave him his daughter Hacsah as a wife.

And it came to pass that as she was going away, she urged him to ask her father for a field; then she impetuously got down from her donkey, and Caleb said to her, "What's the matter with you?"

And she replied, "Give me a present; since you have given me a dry land, give me also springs of water." And he gave her the upper springs and the lower springs.

This is the inheritance of the Tribe of the children of Judah according to their families.

The cities at the southernmost edge of the Tribe of the Children of Judah, near the borders of Edom, were Kabtzeel, Heder, Jagur,

Kina, Dimona, Hadhada,

Libna, Hether, Hasan,

Jiphtah, Asna, Netsib,

Kehila, Aczib and Maresa; nine cities, and their villages.

Hekron, and the cities within its jurisdiction, and its villages.

From Hekron, extending even towards the sea, all those which [are] joining the district of Ashdod, and their villages.

And in the mountains, Samir, Jattir, Soco,

In the desert, Beth-haraba, Middin, Secaca,

Nibsan, and the city of salt, and Henguédi: six cities and their villages.

Moreover, the children of Judah could not dispossess the Jebusites who lived in Jerusalem; therefore the Jebusite has remained with the children of Judah in Jerusalem to this day.

Then the lot fell to the children of Joseph, from the Jordan of Jericho to the waters of Jericho towards the East, which is the desert; going up from Jericho through the mountain to Bethel.

And this border was to go from Bethel to Luz, then pass over the borders of Arkien as far as Hataroth.

And it was to descend, pulling towards the West, to the borders of the Japhletian, to the borders of Lower Beth-horon, and to Gezer; so that its extremities were to reach the sea.

Thus the children of Joseph, [namely] Manasseh and Ephraim, took their inheritance.

Now the boundary of the children of Ephraim according to their families was such that the boundary of their inheritance towards the East was Hataroth-addar, as far as Beth-horon the high.

And this border was to go out to the sea at Michmethah [on the side] of the North; and this border was to turn towards the East as far as Tahanath-Shilho, and passing on the side of the East, go to Janoah;

Then go down from Janoah to Hataroth, and to Naharath, and meet at Jericho, and go out to the Jordan.

And this border was to extend from Tappuah toward the sea, as far as the Wadi Kanah; so that its extremities were to reach the sea. This was the inheritance of the Tribe of the children of Ephraim, according to their families;

With the cities that were set apart for the children of Ephraim from the inheritance of the children of Manasseh; all these cities, [I say], with their villages.

But they did not dispossess the Canaanites who lived in Gezer; therefore the Canaanites have lived among Ephraim to this day; but they have been tributaries and slaves.

There was also a fate for the Tribe of Manasseh, who was the firstborn of Joseph. As for Machir, the firstborn of Manasseh, [and] father of Gilead, because he was a warlike man, he had Gilead and Bashan.

Then the rest of the descendants of Manasseh suffered this fate, according to their families: the descendants of Abihazer, the descendants of Helek, the descendants of Ashriel, the descendants of Shekem, the descendants of Hephher, and the descendants of Semidah. These were the male descendants of Manasseh, son of Joseph, according to their families.

Now Zelophehad son of Hephher son of Gilead, son of Machir, son of Manasseh, had no sons, but daughters; and these are their names: Mahlah, Noah, Hoglah, Milcah, and Tirzah;

They came and presented themselves before Eleazar the Priest, and before Joshua son of Nun, and before the leaders [of the people], saying, "The Lord commanded Moses that we should be given an inheritance among our brothers; therefore they were given an inheritance among their father's brothers, according to the commandment of the Lord.”

And ten portions fell to Manasseh, besides the land of Gilead and Bashan, which were beyond the Jordan.

For the daughters of Manasseh had an inheritance among his children; and the land of Gilead belonged to the rest of the children of Manasseh.

Now the border of Manasseh was on the side of Asher, coming to Michmethah, which was in front of Shechem; then this border was to go to the right hand towards the inhabitants of Hen-Tappuah.

Now the land of Tappuah belonged to Manasseh; but Tappuah, which was near the borders of Manasseh, belonged to the children of Ephraim.

From there, this border was to descend to the Wadi Kanah, extending south of the Wadi. These cities belong to Ephraim, among the cities of Manasseh. Furthermore, the border of Manasseh was along the northern bank of the Wadi, and its extremities were to reach the sea.

What was towards the South belonged to Ephraim, and what was towards the North belonged to Manasseh, and it had the sea as its boundary; and, on the North side [the borders] met in Asher, and in Issachar, on the East side.

For Manasseh had in the quarters of Issachar and Asher, Beth-shean, and the towns of its jurisdiction; and Ibleham, and the towns of its jurisdiction; and the inhabitants of Dor, and the towns of its jurisdiction; and the inhabitants of Hendor, and the towns of its jurisdiction; and the inhabitants of Tahanach, and the towns of its jurisdiction; and the inhabitants of Megiddo, and the towns of its jurisdiction, which are three regions.

Moreover, the children of Manasseh could not dispossess [the inhabitants] of those cities, but the Canaanites dared to remain in the same land.

But since the children of Israel had become strong, they made the Canaanites tributaries; however, they did not dispossess them entirely.

Now the sons of Joseph spoke to Joshua, saying, “Why have you given me only one lot and one portion as an inheritance, since I am a great people, and the Lord has blessed me thus far?”

And Joshua said to them, “If you are such a great people, go up to the forest and cut it down, and make room for yourselves in the land of the Perizzites and the Rephaim, if the mountain of Ephraim is too narrow for you.”

And the children of Joseph answered: This mountain will not be sufficient for us, and all the Canaanites who dwell in the land of the valley have iron chariots, for those who dwell in Beth-shean, and in the towns around it, and for those who dwell in the valley of Jezrehel.

Joshua then spoke to the house of Joseph, [namely] to Ephraim and Manasseh, saying: You are a great people, and you have great strength; you will not have a portion alone.

For you shall have the mountain; [and] because it is a forest, you shall cut it down, and its extremities shall belong to you; for you shall dispossess the Canaanites of it, although they have iron chariots, and they are powerful.

Now the whole congregation of the children of Israel assembled at Shiloh, and they set up the Tabernacle of Meeting there, after the land had been subdued under them. But there remained among the children of Israel seven Tribes, to whom their inheritance had not been distributed.

And Joshua said to the children of Israel, “How long will you cowardly continue to move on to possess the land that the Lord, the God of your fathers, has given you?”

Choose three men from each Tribe from among you, whom I will send; they shall set out, they shall cross the land, and they shall trace a figure of it according to their inheritance, and then they shall return to me.

They will divide it into seven portions, Judah will remain within its borders on the south side; and the house of Joseph will remain within its borders on the north side.

So you draw up a diagram of the land in seven parts, and bring it here to me; then I will cast lots for you here before the Lord our God.

For there is no portion for the Levites among you, because the priesthood of the Lord is their inheritance. As for Gad and Reuben, and half the tribe of Manasseh, they took their inheritance beyond the Jordan, toward the east, which Moses the servant of the Lord gave them.

So these men got up and went away; and Joshua commanded those who were going away to make a figure of the land, saying to them, "Go and cross the land, and make a figure of it, and then come back to me, and I will cast lots for you here before the Lord at Shiloh."

So these men went away and traveled through the land, and made a figure of it in a book according to the cities in seven parts; then they returned to Joshua at the camp in Shiloh.

And Joshua cast lots for them at Shiloh before the Lord; and Joshua divided the land there among the children of Israel according to their portions.

And the lot of the Tribe of the children of Benjamin, according to their families, was decided, and the land of their lot fell to them between the children of Judah and the children of Joseph.

And their northern border was from the Jordan; and this border was to go up beside Jericho toward the north, then up into the mountains leading westward; so that its extremities were to reach the desert of Beth-aven.

Then this border was to pass from there to Luz, beside Luz, which is Bethel, pulling towards the South; and this border was to go down to Hatroth-addar, near the mountain which is on the South side of lower Beth-horon.

And this border was to align and turn at the western corner [which faces] towards the south, from the mountain that is opposite Beth-horon, towards the south; so that its extremities were to extend to Kiriath-bahal, which is Kiriath-jeharim, the city of the children of Judah. This is the western side.

But the southern side is from the end of Kirjath-jeharim; and this border was to go out towards the West, then it was to go out to the fountain of the waters of Nephtoah.

And this border was to go down to the end of the mountain which is opposite the valley of the son of Hinnom, [and] which is in the valley of the Rephaim, towards the North; and go down through the valley of Hinnom to the side of Jebusi towards the South, then go down to Henroguel.

And it was to align itself on the side of the North, and go out to Hen-sémes, and from there to Gueliloth, which is opposite the ascent of Adummim, and go down to the stone of Bohan, son of Reuben;

And pass by what is opposite Haraba towards the North, and go down to Haraba.

Then this border was to pass by Beth-hogla towards the North; so that the extremities of this border were to extend to the arm of the salt sea, towards the North, to the end of the Jordan towards the South. This was the southern border.

And the Jordan was to form its eastern boundary. This was the inheritance of the children of Benjamin, according to its borders all around, according to their families.

Now the cities of the Tribe of the children of Benjamin, according to their families, were to be Jericho, Beth-hogla, Hemekketsis,

Beth Haraba, Zemaraim, Bethel,

Hauvin, Para, Hophra,

Kephar-hammonai, Hophni, and Gebah; twelve cities, and their villages.

Gibeon, Rama, Beeroth,

Mitspé, Képhira, Motsa,

Rekem, Jirpeël, Taréala,

Zelah, Eleph, Jebusi (which is Jerusalem), Gibahath, and Kiriath; fourteen cities and their villages. This was the inheritance of the children of Benjamin according to their families.

The second lot fell to Simeon, for the Tribe of the children of Simeon according to their families, and their inheritance was among the inheritance of the children of Judah.

And they inherited Beer-sebah, Sebah, Molada,

Hatsar-suhal, Bala, Hetsem,

Eltolad, Bethul, Horma,

Ziklag, Beth-marcaboth, Hazar-susa,

Beth-lebaoth and Saruhen; thirteen cities and their villages.

Hajin, Rimmon, Hether, and Hasan; four cities and their villages.

And all the villages that were around those cities as far as Balath-beer, which is Ramah in the South. This was the inheritance of the Tribe of the children of Simeon, according to their families.

The inheritance of the children of Simeon was taken from the lot of the children of Judah; for the share of the children of Judah was too great for them; therefore the children of Simeon had their inheritance among their own.

The third lot went up for the children of Zebulun, according to their families; and the boundary of their inheritance was as far as Sarid.

And their border was to go up towards the district towards the sea, even as far as Marhala, then meet at Dabbeseth, and from there to the stream which is opposite Jokneham.

Or [this border] was to return from Sarid towards the East, to the rising sun towards the borders of Kisloth-tabor, then out towards Dabrath, and up to Japhiah;

Then from there pass towards the East, to the Levant, to Guitta-hépher which is Hittakatsin, then exit, to Rimmon-Methoar, which is Neha.

Then this border was to turn towards the North at Hannathon; and its extremities were to extend into the valley of Jiphtahel.

With Kattath, Nahalal, Simron, Jidelah, and Beth-lehem; there were twelve cities, and their villages.

This was the inheritance of the children of Zebulun according to their families; these cities, and their villages.

The fourth lot fell to Issachar, for the children of Issachar, according to their families.

And their region was that which is towards Jezrehel, Kesullot, and Sunem,

Hapharjim, Zion, Anaharath,

Rabbith, Kisjon, Ebets,

Remeth, Hen-gannim, Hen-hadda and Beth-patsets.

And the border was to meet at Tabor and towards Sabazim, and at Beth-shemes; so that the extremities of their border were to reach the Jordan; sixteen cities, and their villages.

Such was the legacy of the Tribe of the children of Issachar, according to their families, those cities, and their villages.

The fifth lot fell to the Tribe of the children of Asher, according to their families.

And their border was Helkath, Hali, Beten, Achsaph, Alammelech, Hamhad and Miséal; and it was to meet at Carmel, [in the quarter] towards the sea, and at Sihor towards Benath.

Then it was to return towards the rising sun, to Beth-dagon, and meet in Zebulun, and in the valley of Jiphtahel towards the North, [and at] Beth-hemek and Nehiel; then go out to the left towards Cabul.

And Hebron, and Rehob, and Hammon, and Cana, as far as Sidon the great.

Then the border was to return to Rama, even as far as Tsor, a fortified city; then this border was to return to Hosa; so that its extremities were to extend to the quarter which is towards the sea, from the portion extending towards Aczib;

With Hummah, and Aphek, and Rehob; twenty-two cities, and their villages.

Such was the inheritance of the Tribe of the children of Asher, according to their families; those cities and their villages.

The sixth lot fell to the children of Naphtali, for the children of Naphtali, according to their families.

And their border was from Heleph, [and] from Allon to Zahanim, and Adami-nekeb, and Jabneel to Lakkum, so that its extremities were to reach the Jordan.

Then this border was to turn back westward, toward Aznoth-Tabor, and from there outward to Hukkok; so that on the south side it was to meet in Zebulun, and on the west side it was to meet in Asher. Now the Jordan was at the rising of the sun as far as Judah.

Moreover, the walled cities were Tsiddim, Tser, Hammath, Rakkath, Kinnereth, Adama, Rama, Hazor, Kedes, Edrehi, Hen-Hatsor, Jireon, Migdal-el, Harem, Beth-hanath and Beth-semes; nineteen cities and their villages.

This was the inheritance of the Tribe of the children of Naphtali, according to their families; these cities, and their villages.

The seventh lot fell to the Tribe of the children of Dan according to their families.

And the land of their inheritance was Zorah, Estaol, Hirsemesh,

Sahalabim, Ajalon, Jithla,

Elon, Timnatha, Hekron,

Elteké, Guibbethon, Bahalath,

Jehud, Bene-berak, Gath-rimmon,

Me-jarkon, and Rakkon, with the boundaries that are opposite Japho.

Now the land that had fallen to the children of Dan was [too small] for them; therefore the children of Dan went up and fought against Lesem, and took it, and struck it with the edge of the sword, and possessed it, and dwelt there; and they called Lesem Dan, after the name of Dan their father.

This was the inheritance of the Tribe of the children of Dan according to their families; these cities, and their villages.

Moreover, after the land had been divided according to its borders, the children of Israel gave an inheritance among themselves to Joshua son of Nun.

According to the Lord's command, they gave him the city he asked for, Timnath-serah in the hill country of Ephraim; and he built the city and lived there.

These were the inheritances that Eleazar the Priest, and Joshua son of Nun, and the heads of the fathers of the Tribes of the children of Israel divided by lot in Shiloh, before the Lord, at the entrance of the Tabernacle of Meeting, and they completed the division of the land.

Then the Lord spoke to Joshua, saying:

Speak to the children of Israel, and [tell them]: Establish for yourselves the cities of refuge of which I have spoken to you by means of Moses.

So that the murderer who killed someone unknowingly, without thinking, may flee there, and they will be a refuge for you from him who has the right to avenge blood.

And the [murderer] shall flee to one of those cities, and shall stand at the entrance of the city gate, and he shall tell his reasons to the Elders of that city, who shall listen to him, [and] receive him into their city, and give him a place, so that he may dwell with them.

And when the one who has the right to avenge blood pursues him, they will not hand him over to him; since he killed his neighbor without thinking, and he did not hate him beforehand;

But he shall remain in that city until he stands before the assembly in judgment, [even] until the death of the high priest who will be at that time; then the murderer shall return, and come to his city and to his house, to the city from which he fled.

So they dedicated Kedesh in Galilee in the hill country of Naphtali; and Shechem in the hill country of Ephraim, and Kiriath-Arbah, which is Hebron, in the hill country of Judah.

And beyond the Jordan from Jericho towards the East they commanded from the Tribe of Reuben, Bezer in the desert in the flat land, and Ramoth in Gilead, from the Tribe of Gad, and Golan in Bashan, from the Tribe of Manasseh.

These were the cities assigned to all the children of Israel, and to the stranger residing among them, so that whoever had killed someone in ignorance might flee there, and not die at the hand of him who has the right to avenge blood, until he appeared before the assembly.

Now the leaders of the Levite fathers came to Eleazar the priest, to Joshua son of Nun, and to the leaders of the fathers of the tribes of the children of Israel, And they spoke to them at Shiloh in the land of Canaan, saying: The Lord commanded through Moses that we should be given cities to live in, and their suburbs for our livestock.

And so the children of Israel gave these cities with their suburbs to the Levites from their inheritance, according to the commandment of the Lord.

And lots were cast for the families of the Kohathites. Now it fell by lot to the descendants of Aaron the Priest who were of the Levites, thirteen cities, of the Tribe of Judah, and of the Tribe of Simeon, and of the Tribe of Benjamin.

And it fell by lot to the rest of the children of Kohath ten cities of the families of the Tribe of Ephraim, and of the Tribe of Dan, and of half of the Tribe of Manasseh.

And the children of Gershon received by lot thirteen cities, families of the Tribe of Issachar, and of the Tribe of Asher, and of the Tribe of Naphtali, and of the half-Tribe of Manasseh in Bashan.

And the children of Merari, according to their families, [had] twelve cities, from the Tribe of Reuben, and from the Tribe of Gad, and from the Tribe of Zebulun.

So the children of Israel gave by lot to the Levites those cities with their suburbs, according to what the Lord had commanded through Moses.

So they gave from the Tribe of the children of Judah, and from the Tribe of the children of Simeon, these cities, which will be named after them.

And they were for those of the children of Aaron, who were families of the Kohathites, children of Levi, for the first lot was for them.

So they were given Kiriath-Arbah; [now Arbah was] the father of Hanak, [and] Kiriath-Arbah is Hebron, in the hill country of Judah, with its suburbs all around.

But as for the territory of the city, and its villages, they were given to Caleb, son of Jephunneh, for his possession.

So they gave to the sons of Aaron the Priest as cities of refuge for the murderer, Hebron, with its suburbs, and Libnah, with its suburbs.

And Jattir, with its suburbs, and Estemoab, with its suburbs,

And Holon, with its suburbs, and Debir, with its suburbs,

And Hajin, with its suburbs, and Jutta, with its suburbs; and Beth-semes, with its suburbs; nine cities of these two Tribes.

And from the Tribe of Benjamin, Gibeon, with its suburbs, and Gebah, with its suburbs, Hanathoth, with its suburbs, and Halmon, with its suburbs; four cities.

All the cities of the children of Aaron the Priests, were thirteen cities, with their suburbs.

Now as for the families of the children of Kohath the Levites, who were the remnant of the children of Kohath, there were in their lot some cities of the Tribe of Ephraim.

So they gave them as cities of refuge for the murderer, Shechem, with its suburbs, in the hill country of Ephraim, and Gezer with its suburbs.

And Kibzajim, with its suburbs, and Beth-horon, with its suburbs; four cities.
And from the Tribe of Dan, Eltekeh, with its suburbs; Gibbethon, with its suburbs, Ajalon, with its suburbs, Gath-rimmon, with its suburbs; four cities.
And from the half-tribe of Manasseh, Tahanach, with its suburbs; and Gath-rimmon, with its suburbs, two cities.

[Thus] ten cities in all, with their suburbs, were for the families of the children of Kohath, who were left behind.

They also gave some of the half-tribe of Manasseh to the children of Gershon, who were families of the Levites, as cities of refuge for the murderer, Golan in Bashan, with its suburbs, and Behestera, with its suburbs; two cities.

And from the Tribe of Issachar, Kisjon, with its suburbs, Dobrath, with its suburbs, Jarmuth, with its suburbs, Hengannim, with its suburbs; four cities.

And from the Tribe of Asher, Miseal, with its suburbs, Haddon, with its suburbs, Helkath, with its suburbs, and Rehob, with its suburbs; four cities.

And from the Tribe of Naphtali, as cities of refuge for the murderer, Kedes in Galilee with its suburbs, Hammoth-Dor, with its suburbs, and Kartan, with its suburbs; three cities.

All the cities [therefore] of the Gershonites according to their families, were thirteen cities, and their suburbs.

They also gave some of the Tribe of Zebulun to the families of the descendants of Merari, who were the remaining Levites: Jokneham with its suburbs, Karta with its suburbs,

Dimnah, with its suburbs, and Nahalal, with its suburbs; four cities.

And from the Tribe of Reuben, Betser, with its suburbs, and Jahasa, with its suburbs;

Kedemoth, with its suburbs, and Mephahat, with its suburbs; four cities.

And from the Tribe of Gad, as cities of refuge for the murderer, Ramoth-gilead, with its suburbs, and Mahanajim, with its suburbs,

Hesbon, with its suburbs, and Jahzer, with its suburbs; four cities in all.

All these cities were given to the children of Merari, according to their families, who were the remnant of the families of the Levites; and their lot was twelve cities.

All the cities of the Levites that were among the possession of the children of Israel, were forty-eight, and their suburbs.

Each of these cities had its suburbs around it; it [must have been] so with all of these cities.

So the Lord gave to Israel all the land that he had sworn to give to their fathers; and they possessed it and lived in it.

And the Lord gave them complete rest all around, according to all that he had sworn to their fathers; and there was not one of all their enemies who remained before them; [but] the Lord delivered all their enemies into their hands.

Not one word of all the good promises that the Lord had made to the house of Israel fell short; everything came to pass.

Then Joshua summoned the Reubenites, the Gadites, and the half-tribe of Manasseh.

And he said to them, "You have kept everything that Moses the servant of the Lord commanded you, and you have obeyed my word in everything that I commanded you."

You have not abandoned your brothers, although you have been with them for a long time, until this day; but you have been careful to observe the commandment of the Lord your God.

Now the Lord your God has given rest to your brothers, as he promised them. Now therefore return and go to your homes in the land you possess, which Moses the servant of the Lord gave you beyond the Jordan.

Only be very careful to do the commandment of the Law which Moses the servant of the Lord commanded you, [which is], that you love the Lord your God, and that you walk in all his ways, and that you keep his commandments, and that you cling to him, and serve him with all your heart and with all your soul.

Then Joshua blessed them and sent them away; and they went to their homes.
Now Moses had given to half the tribe of Manasseh [their inheritance] in Bashan; and Joshua gave to the other half [their inheritance] with their relatives west of the Jordan. Furthermore, Joshua sent them back to their homes and blessed them,
He spoke to them, saying: You are returning to your homes with great riches, and with a very large quantity of livestock, with silver, gold, bronze, iron, and clothing, in very great abundance; divide the spoil of your enemies with your brothers.
So the children of Reuben, and the children of Gad, and the half-tribe of Manasseh returned, and departed from Shiloh, which is in the land of Canaan, with the children of Israel, to go to the land of Gilead, to the land of their possession, which they had been given to enjoy, according to what the Lord had commanded by means of Moses.

Now they came to the borders of the Jordan, which were in the land of Canaan; and the children of Reuben, and the children of Gad, and the half-tribe of Manasseh built there an altar, adjoining the Jordan, which was a very impressive altar.

And the children of Israel heard that the children of Reuben, and the children of Gad, and the half-tribe of Manasseh have built an altar facing the land of Canaan, on the border of the Jordan, on the side of the children of Israel.

So the children of Israel heard this; and the whole assembly of the children of Israel gathered at Shiloh to go up to battle against them.

However, the children of Israel sent Phinehas, son of Eleazar, the priest, to the children of Reuben, and to the children of Gad, and to the half-tribe of Manasseh, in the land of Gilead;

And with him ten Lords; [namely] a Lord from each house of the fathers of all the Tribes of Israel; for there was in all the thousand of Israel a head from each house of their fathers.

So these men came to the children of Reuben and to the children of Gad, and to the half-tribe of Manasseh in the land of Gilead, and spoke to them, saying:

Thus said the whole assembly of the Lord: What is this crime that you have committed against the God of Israel, turning away today from the Lord, building yourselves an altar, to rebel today against the Lord?

Was the iniquity of Pehor a small thing to us, from which we have not yet fully cleansed ourselves to this day, although it has brought a plague upon the assembly of the Lord?

Are you turning away from the Lord today, and rebelling against the Lord today, so that tomorrow his anger will be kindled against all the congregation of Israel?

However, if the land of your possession is defiled, cross over to the land of the Lord's possession, in which the Lord's pavilion is set, and have your possession among us, and do not rebel against the Lord, and do not be rebellious against us, by building yourselves an altar besides the altar of the Lord our God.

Hacan, son of Zerah, did he not commit a crime by taking of the forbidden things, and did not the anger [of the Lord] burn against all the assembly of Israel? And yet this man did not die alone for his iniquity.

But the children of Reuben, and the children of Gad, and the half-tribe of Manasseh answered, and said to the leaders of the thousands of Israel:

The Mighty One, the God, the Eternal One, the Mighty One, the God, the Eternal One, knows himself, and Israel itself will know whether it is in rebellion, and whether it is to commit a crime against the Eternal One; [in that case] do not protect us today.

If we have built an altar to turn away from the Lord, and if it was to offer burnt offerings, or cakes, or if it was to make peace offerings, may the Lord himself call us to account.

And if rather we did not do it, for fear of this, [knowing] that your children might one day speak thus to our children, and say to them: What have you to do with the Lord, the God of Israel?

Because the Lord has set the Jordan as a boundary between us and you, children of Reuben and children of Gad, you have no share in the Lord. And so your children would one day cause our children to cease fearing the Lord.

That is why we said: Let us now build an altar, not for burnt offering or sacrifice;

But so that it may serve as a testimony between us and you, and between our generations after us, to minister to the Lord before him in our burnt offerings and sacrifices, and in our peace offerings; and so that in the future your children may not say to our children, "You have no share in the Lord."

That is why we said: When they speak this word to us, or to our generations in the future, we will say to them: See the likeness of the altar of the Lord which our fathers made, not for burnt offering or sacrifice, but to be a witness between us and you.

God forbid that we should rebel against the Lord, and turn away today from the Lord, by building an altar for burnt offering, for grain offering, and for sacrifice, besides the altar of the Lord our God, which is before his pavilion.

Now after Phinehas the Priest, and the leaders of the assembly, the heads of the thousands of Israel who were with him, had heard the words which the children of Reuben, and the children of Gad, and the children of Manasseh spoke to them, they were satisfied.

And Phinehas son of Eleazar the priest said to the Reubenites, the Gadites, and the Manassehites, "Now we know that the Lord is among us, because you have not committed this crime against the Lord; for from that time on you have delivered the Israelites from the hand of the Lord."

So Phinehas, son of Eleazar the priest, and those lords returned from the children of Reuben and from the children of Gad; from the land of Gilead to the land of Canaan, to the children of Israel, and reported the matter to them.

And the thing pleased the children of Israel; and the children of Israel blessed God, and no longer spoke of going up in battle against them to destroy the land where the children of Reuben and the children of Gad lived.

And the children of Reuben, and the children of Gad called the altar Hed; for, [they said], it is witness between us that the Lord is God.

Now it came to pass several days later, when the Lord had given rest to Israel from all their enemies around, Joshua was old, very advanced in years.

And Joshua summoned all Israel, its elders, its leaders, its judges, and its officers, and said to them, "I have become old, very advanced in years."

You have also seen all that the Lord your God has done to all these nations, because of you; for the Lord your God is the one who fights for you.

See, I have divided among you by lot as an inheritance according to your Tribes, [the land of] these nations that remain, from the Jordan, and [the land of] all the nations that I have exterminated, to the great sea, toward the setting sun.

And the Lord your God will drive them out from before you and dispossess them, and you will possess their land as an inheritance, as the Lord your God has spoken to you.

Therefore, be stronger and stronger to keep and do all that is written in the Book of the Law of Moses, so that you will not turn aside to the right hand or to the left; And that you do not mingle with these nations that remain among you; that you do not mention the name of their gods; and that you do not make anyone swear [by them], and that you do not serve them, and do not bow down before them.

But cling to the Lord your God, as you have done until this day.

That is why the Lord drove out great and powerful nations from before you; and as for you, no one has survived before you to this day.

One man among you will put a thousand to flight; for the Lord your God is the one who fight for you, as he has spoken to you.

Therefore, take careful heed to yourselves, that you love the Lord your God.

Otherwise, if you turn away from them in any way and attach yourself to the remnant of these nations, [namely] to those who have remained with you, and you make an alliance with them, and you mingle with them, and they with you;

Know for certain that the Lord your God will no longer dispossess these nations before you; but they will be a snare and a trap for you, a plague at your side, and thorns in your eyes, until you perish from this good land that the Lord your God has given you.

Now behold, I am going today the way of all the earth; and you shall know in all your heart, and in all your soul, that not one word has failed of all the good words which the Lord your God has spoken of you; all has come to pass, not one word has failed. And it will come to pass that, just as all the good words that the Lord your God had spoken to you have come true, so the Lord will bring upon you all the evil words, until he has exterminated you from this good land that the Lord your God has given you.

When you have transgressed the covenant of the Lord your God, which he commanded you, and have gone to serve other gods and bowed down to them, the anger of the Lord will be kindled against you, and you will immediately perish from this good land that he has given you.

Joshua also assembled all the Tribes of Israel at Shechem, and summoned the Elders of Israel, and its leaders, and its judges, and its officers, who presented themselves before God.

And Joshua said to all the people, "Thus says the Lord, the God of Israel: Your fathers, Tereh the father of Abraham, and the father of Nahor, formerly dwelt beyond the river, and served other gods.

But I took your father Abraham from beyond the river, and I led him throughout all the land of Canaan, and I multiplied his descendants, and gave him Isaac.

And I gave to Isaac, Jacob, and Esau; and I gave to Esau the mountain of Seir, to possess it; but Jacob and his children went down to Egypt.

Then I sent Moses and Aaron, and I struck Egypt, as I did in the midst of it; then I brought you out of it.

So I brought your fathers out of Egypt, and you came to the [districts] which are towards the sea; and the Egyptians pursued your fathers with chariots and horsemen, as far as the Red Sea.

Then they cried out to the Lord, and he put darkness between you and the Egyptians, and brought the sea back upon them, and covered them; and your eyes saw what I did against the Egyptians; then you remained a long time in the desert.

Then I brought you to the land of the Amorites, who lived beyond the Jordan; and they fought against you, but I delivered them into your hands, and you took possession of their land, and I exterminated them from before you.

Balak also, son of Zippor, King of Moab, arose and made war against Israel; and sent word to Balaam, son of Behor, to curse you;

But I would not listen to Balaam; he most expressly blessed you, and I delivered you from the hand of Balak.

And you crossed the Jordan, and came near Jericho, and the Lords of Jericho, and the Amorites, the Perizzites, the Canaanites, the Hittites, the Girgashites, the Hivites, and the Jebusites made war against you, and I delivered them into your hands.

And I sent hornets before you, which drove them out from before you, [like] the two kings of those Amorites. It was not by your sword or by your bow.

And I gave you land that you had not plowed, and cities that you had not built, and you live in them; and you eat [the fruits] of the vines and olive trees that you did not plant.

Therefore, now fear the Lord and serve him in integrity and truth. Put away the gods your ancestors served beyond the river and in Egypt, and serve the Lord.

If it is displeasing to serve the Lord, choose for yourselves this day whom you will serve, whether the gods that your fathers who were beyond the river served, or the gods of the Amorites, in whose land you dwell; but as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord.

Then the people answered, and said, "God forbid that we should abandon the Lord to serve other gods!"

For the Lord our God is the one who brought us and our fathers up out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage, and who performed these great signs before our eyes, and who protected us all the way we went, and among all the peoples among whom we passed.

And the Lord drove out before us all the peoples, and even the Amorites who lived in this land; therefore we will serve the Lord, for he is our God.

And Joshua said to the people, "You cannot serve the Lord, for he is the holy God, the Mighty One, who is jealous; he will not forgive your rebellion or your sins."

When you have forsaken the Lord and served the gods of foreigners, he will turn against you and harm you, and he will consume you after having done you good.

And the people said to Joshua, "No; but we will serve the Lord."

And Joshua said to the people, "You are witnesses against yourselves that you yourselves have chosen the Lord to serve him." And they answered, "We are witnesses."

Therefore, now put away the gods of the foreigners who are among you, and turn your heart to the Lord, the God of Israel.

And the people answered Joshua, "We will serve the Lord our God and obey his voice."

Joshua therefore made a covenant with the people that day; and he proposed statutes and ordinances to them in Shechem.

And Joshua wrote these words in the book of the Law of God. He also took a large stone and lifted it up there under an oak tree that was in the sanctuary of the Lord.

And Joshua said to all the people, "Behold, this stone shall be a testimony for us; for it has heard all the words of the Lord which he has spoken to us; and it shall be a testimony against you, lest it happen that you should lie against your God."

Then Joshua sent the people away, each to their inheritance.

Now it came to pass after these things that Joshua, son of Nun, servant of the Lord, died, being one hundred and ten years old.

And he was buried within the boundaries of his inheritance, at Timnath-serah, which is in the mountain of Ephraim, on the northern side of the mountain of Gahas.

And Israel served the Lord all the days of Joshua, and all the days of the elders who outlived Joshua, who had known all the works of the Lord, which he had done for Israel.

They also buried at Shechem the bones of Joseph, which the children of Israel had brought from Egypt, in a place in the field which Jacob had bought for a hundred pieces of silver from the children of Hamor, the father of Shechem; and they became an inheritance for the children of Joseph.

And Eleazar, son of Aaron, died, and was buried on the hillside of Phinehas his son, who had been given to him in the hill country of Ephraim.

Now it came to pass that after the death of Joshua the children of Israel inquired of the Lord, saying, "Who of us shall go up first against the Canaanites to make war against them?"

And the Lord answered, "Judah will go up; behold, I have given the land into their hands."

Then Judah said to Simeon his brother, "Come up with me into my portion, and we will go to war against the Canaanites; and I will also go with you into your portion." So Simeon went with him.

So Judah went up, and the Lord delivered the Canaanites and the Perizzites into their hands; and they defeated ten thousand men at Bezek.

Now when they found Adoni-bezek in Bezek, they fought against him, and struck down the Canaanites and the Perizzites.

And Adoni-bezek fled, but they pursued him; and having captured him, they cut off the thumbs of his hands and his feet.

Then Adoni-bezek said: Seventy kings, whose thumbs and toes had been cut off, gathered [bread] under my table; as I did, God has thus repaid me; and having been brought to Jerusalem, he died there.

Now the children of Judah had made war against Jerusalem, and had taken it, and had put [its inhabitants] to the edge of the sword, and set the city on fire.

Then the children of Judah had gone down to wage war against the Canaanites, who lived in the mountains, and in the South, and in the plain.

Judah therefore went against the Canaanites who lived in Hebron; now the name of Hebron was formerly Kiriath-Arbah; and he struck down Shesai, Ahiman and Talmai.

And from there he had gone against the inhabitants of Debir, the name of which was formerly Kirjath-sepher.

And Caleb had said: Whoever strikes Kirjath-sepher and takes it, I will give him my daughter Hacsah as a wife.

And Hothniel, son of Kenas, Caleb's younger brother, took her; and [Caleb] gave him his daughter Hacsah as a wife.

And it came to pass that as she was going away, she urged him to ask her father for a field; then she impetuously got down from her donkey; and Caleb said to her, "What is the matter with you?"

And she answered him, "Give me a present; since you have given me a dry land, give me also springs of water." So Caleb gave her the springs in the upper part of the city and the springs in the lower part.

Now the children of the Kenite, Moses' father-in-law, had gone up from the city of palm trees with the children of Judah to the wilderness of Judah, which is in the South of Harad; because they had walked and lived with the people.

Then Judah went with Simeon his brother, and they attacked the Canaanites who lived in Zephath, and destroyed it like a banished thing; therefore the city was called Hormah.

Judah also took Gaza with its borders; Ashkelon with its borders; and Hekron with its borders.

And the Lord was with Judah, and they drove out the inhabitants of the mountain: but they did not drive out the inhabitants of the valley, because they had iron chariots.

And Hebron was given to Caleb, as Moses had said; and he dispossessed the three sons of Hanak.

As for the children of Benjamin, they did not dispossess the Jebusite who lived in Jerusalem; therefore the Jebusite has lived with the children of Benjamin in Jerusalem to this day.

Those also from the house of Joseph went up against Bethel, and the Lord was with them.

And those of the house of Joseph made Bethel known, whose name was formerly Luz.

And the spies saw a man coming out of the city, to whom they said, "We beg you to show us a way in to get into the city, and we will spare you."

So he showed them a place through which they could enter the city, and they put it to the sword; but they let that man and all his family go.

Then this man went to the land of the Hittites, built a city there, and called it Luz, which is its name to this day.

Manasseh also did not dispossess Beth-sehan, nor the towns within its jurisdiction, nor Tahanach, nor the towns within its jurisdiction; nor the inhabitants of Dor, nor the towns within its jurisdiction; nor the inhabitants of Ibleham, nor the towns within its jurisdiction, nor the inhabitants of Megiddo, nor the towns within its jurisdiction; and the Canaanites still dared to dwell in that land.

It is true that when Israel became stronger, it made the Canaanites tributaries; but it did not dispossess them entirely.

Ephraim also did not dispossess the Canaanites who lived in Gezer; but the Canaanites lived with him in Gezer.

Zebulun did not dispossess the inhabitants of Kitron, nor the inhabitants of Nahalol; but the Canaanites lived with him and were his tributaries.

Asher did not dispossess the inhabitants of Hachoh, nor the inhabitants of Sidon, nor of Ahlab, nor of Achzib, nor of Helba, nor of Aphik, nor of Rehob.

But the Asherites lived among the Canaanites who inhabited the land; for they did not dispossess them.

Naphtali did not dispossess the inhabitants of Beth-shemes, nor the inhabitants of Beth-hanath, but he lived among the Canaanites who lived in the land; and the inhabitants of Beth-shemes, and of Beth-hanath became his tributaries.

And the Amorites kept the children of Dan tightly confined in the mountain, and they did not allow them to come down into the valley.

And these Amorites dared to live again in Har-Heres, in Aijalon, and in Sahalbim; but the hand of the house of Joseph having become stronger, they were made tributaries.

Now the land of the Amorites [was] from the ascent of Hakrabbim, from the rock, and above.

Then the Angel of the Lord went up from Gilgal to Bochim and said, "I brought you up out of Egypt and into the land of which I swore to your fathers, and I said, 'I will never break my covenant that I made with you.'"

And you too will not make a covenant with the inhabitants of this land; you will demolish their altars; but you have not obeyed my voice; what have you done?

And I also said: I will not drive them out from before you, but they will be at your side, and their gods will be a snare to you.

And it came to pass that as soon as the Angel of the Lord had spoken these words to all the children of Israel, the people lifted up their voices and wept.

That is why they called that place Bokim; and there they sacrificed to the Lord.

Now Joshua had sent the people away, and the children of Israel had gone each to their inheritance, to possess the land.

And the people had served the Lord all the days of Joshua, and all the days of the elders who outlived Joshua, [and] who had seen all the great works of the Lord, which he had done for Israel.

Then Joshua, son of Nun, the servant of the Lord, died at the age of one hundred and ten years.

And he was buried within the boundaries of his inheritance at Timnath-Heres, in the hill country of Ephraim, on the northern side of the hill country of Gahas.

And all that generation was also gathered with their fathers; then another generation arose after them, which did not know the Lord, nor the works that he had done for Israel.

So the children of Israel did what was evil in the sight of the Lord, and served the Bahalites.

And having abandoned the Lord, the God of their fathers, who had brought them out of the land of Egypt, they went after other gods, from among the gods of the peoples who were around them, and they bowed down before them; thus they angered the Lord.

So they abandoned the Lord and served Bahal and Hasteroth.

And the anger of the Lord was kindled against Israel, and he delivered them into the hands of people who plundered them; and he sold them into the hand of their enemies all around, so that they could no longer stand before their enemies.

Wherever they went, the hand of the Lord was against them for evil, as the Lord had spoken, and as the Lord had sworn to them, and they were in great distress.

And the Lord raised up judges for them, who delivered them from the hand of those who plundered them.

But they would not even listen to their Judges; they prostrated themselves after other gods; they bowed down before them; they immediately turned away from the way in which their fathers had walked, obeying the commandments of the Lord; but they did not do so.

Now when the Lord raised up judges for them, the Lord was also with the judge, and he delivered them from the hand of their enemies all the days of the judge; for the Lord relented because of the weeping they uttered because of those who oppressed and afflicted them.

Then it happened that when the Judge died, they again became more corrupt than their fathers, going after other gods to serve them and prostrate themselves before them; they did not diminish their evil conduct or their obstinate course.

Therefore the anger of the Lord was kindled against Israel, and he said: Because this nation has transgressed my covenant which I commanded their fathers, and they have not obeyed my voice;

Therefore, I will no longer dispossess any of the nations that Joshua left behind when he died;

In order to test Israel by them, [and see] whether they will keep the way of the Lord to walk in it, as their fathers kept it, or not.

So the Lord left those nations without dispossessing them immediately, and he did not deliver them into the hands of Joshua.

Now these are the nations that the Lord left to test Israel by them, [namely] all those who had not known about all the wars of Canaan;

So that at least future generations of the children of Israel might know and learn what war is; at least those who previously had known nothing about it.

[These nations were] the five Philistine governments, and all the Canaanites, Sidonians, and Hivites who lived in the mountains of Lebanon, from Mount Bahal-hermon to the entrance of Hamath.

[These nations], I say, served to test Israel, to see if they would obey the commandments of the Lord, which he had given to their fathers through Moses.

So the children of Israel dwelt among the Canaanites, the Hittites, the Amorites, the Perizzites, the Hivites, and the Jebusites.

And they took their daughters as wives, and they gave their daughters to their sons, and served their gods.

So the children of Israel did what was evil in the sight of the Lord; they forgot the Lord their God, and served the Bahalites and the groves.

Therefore the Lord's anger burned against Israel, and he sold them into the hand of Cusan-rishathaim, king of Mesopotamia. And the Israelites served Cusan-rishathaim for eight years.

Then the children of Israel cried out to the Lord, and the Lord raised up for them a Deliverer who delivered them, [namely] Hothniel, the son of Kenas, the younger brother of Caleb.

And the Spirit of the Lord was upon him, and he judged Israel, and went out into battle, and the Lord delivered Cusan-rishathajim, King of Aram, into his hand; and his hand was strengthened against Cusan-rishathajim.

And the land had rest for forty years. Then Hothniel, son of Kenas, died.

And the children of Israel again did what was evil in the sight of the Lord; and the Lord strengthened Heglon, king of Moab, against Israel, because they had done what was evil in the sight of the Lord.

And [Heglon] gathered around him the children of Hammon and Hammalek, and he went out and struck down Israel, and they took possession of the city of palm trees.

And the children of Israel were enslaved to Heglon, King of Moab, for eighteen years.

Then the Israelites cried out to the Lord, and the Lord raised up a deliverer for them, Ehud son of Gera the Benjamite, whose right hand was clasped. And the Israelites sent a present by him to Heglon king of Moab.

Now Ehud had made himself a double-edged sword, about a cubit long, which he had fastened under his clothes on his right thigh.

And he presented the gift to Heglon, King of Moab; and Heglon was a very fat man. Now it happened that when he had finished presenting the gift, he escorted the people who had brought the gift away.

But [Ehud] returned from the stone quarries, which [were] towards Gilgal, and said, "O King! I have something to tell you in secret." And he replied, "Be silent," and all those who were with him left.

And Ehud approached him, who was sitting alone in his Summer Room, and said to him: I have a word to tell you from God. Then [the King] rose from the throne.

And Ehud, extending his left hand, took the sword from above his right thigh, and thrust it into his stomach;

And the handle went in after the blade, and the grease pressed so tightly against the blade that he could not pull the sword out of his belly; and dung came out of it.

After that Ehud went out through the porch, closing the doors of the room behind him, which he locked with the key.

So he went out; and the servants of Heglon came and looked, and behold, the doors of the chamber were locked; and they said: No doubt he is attending to his business in his Summer Chamber.

And they waited until they were ashamed; and seeing that he would not open the doors of the chamber, they took the key and opened it; and behold, their Lord lay dead on the ground.

But Ehud escaped while they were having fun, and passed the stone quarries, and fled to Sehira.

And when he entered there, he sounded the trumpet in the mountain of Ephraim, and the children of Israel went down with him into the mountain; and he went before them.

And he said to them, "Follow me, for the Lord has delivered the Moabites, your enemies, into your hands." So they went down after him, and seized the fords of the Jordan against the Moabites, letting no one pass through.

And at that time they struck down about ten thousand Moabites, all of them fit for service and valiant, and not one of them escaped.

So on that day Moab was subdued under the hand of Israel; and the land had rest for eighty years.

And after him was [in his place] Samgar, son of Hanath, who struck down six hundred Philistines with an ox goad, and delivered Israel.

But the children of Israel again went on doing what was evil in the sight of the Lord after Ehud died.

Therefore the Lord sold them into the hand of Jabin, king of Canaan, who reigned in Hazor, [and] of whose army Sisera was the commander, who lived in Haroseth of the Nations.

And the children of Israel cried out to the Lord; for [Jabin] had nine hundred iron chariots, and he had violently oppressed the children of Israel for twenty years.

At that time Deborah the prophetess, wife of Lappidoth, was judging Israel.

And Deborah stood under a palm tree between Ramah and Bethel in the hill country of Ephraim; and the children of Israel went up to her to be judged.

So she sent for Barak, son of Abinoham of Kedez of Naphtali, and said to him, "Did not the Lord, the God of Israel, command, [and say?] Go, [and] gather men on the mountain of Tabor, and take with you ten thousand men from the children of Naphtali, and from the children of Zebulun.

And I will draw to you to the Kishon Valley Sisera, commander of Jabin's army, with his chariots and his multitude of men, and I will deliver him into your hand.

And Barak said to him, "If you come with me, I will go; but if you do not come with me, I will not go."

And she replied, "I will certainly go with you; but you will have no honor on the way you go, for the Lord will sell Sisera into the hand of a woman." So Deborah got up and went with Barak to Kedes.

And Barak, having gathered Zebulun and Naphtali at Kedes, brought up ten thousand men after him; and Deborah went up with him.

Now Heber Kenite, of the descendants of Hobab, Moses' father-in-law, having separated from Cain, had pitched his tents as far as the oak grove of Zahanaim, which is near Kedesh.

And it was reported to Sisera that Barak, son of Abinoham, had gone up to Mount Tabor.

And Sisera assembled all his chariots, [namely] nine hundred iron chariots, and all the people who were with him, from Haroseth of the Nations to the Wadi Kishon.

And Deborah said to Barak, "Get up, for this is the day on which the Lord has delivered Sisera into your hand. Has not the Lord gone out before you?" So Barak went down from Mount Tabor, and ten thousand men followed him.

And the Lord struck down Sisera, and all his chariots, and all the army, with the edge of the sword before Barak; and Sisera got down from the chariot and fled on foot.

And Barak pursued the chariots and the army as far as Haroseth of the Nations; and all of Sisera's army was put to the edge of the sword; not one of them remained.

And Sisera fled on foot to the tent of Jahel, wife of Heber Kenite; for there was peace between Jabin, king of Hazor, and the house of Heber Kenite.

And Jahel went out to meet Sisera and said to him, "My lord, withdraw, withdraw to me; do not be afraid." So he withdrew to her tent, and she covered him with a blanket.

Then he said to her, "Please give me a little water to drink, for I am thirsty." And she opened a jug of milk, gave him a drink, and covered him.

He also told him: Remain at the entrance of the tent, and in case someone comes and asks you, saying, 'Is anyone here?' then you shall answer, 'No.'

And Jahel, wife of Heber, took a tent peg, and taking a hammer in her hand, she came gently to him; and drove a peg into his temple, which went into the ground while he slept soundly, for he was very tired; and thus he died.

And behold, Barak was pursuing Sisera, and Jahel came out to meet him and said to him, "Come, and I will show you the man you seek." And Barak went to her, and behold, Sisera was lying dead, with the nail in his temple.

On that day God humiliated Jabin, King of Canaan, before the children of Israel.

And the power of the children of Israel advanced and grew stronger and stronger against Jabin, King of Canaan, until they had exterminated him.

On that day Deborah, together with Barak son of Abinoham, sang, saying:

Bless the Lord for having done such vengeance in Israel, [and] for having been led willingly.

You kings, listen; you princes, give ear; I, I will sing to the Lord, I will sing psalms to the Lord, the God of Israel.

O Eternal One! When you went out from Seir, when you marched from the territory of Edom, the earth shook, even the heavens melted, the clouds, I say, melted into waters.

The mountains poured out from before the Lord, this Sinai [poured out] from before the Lord, the God of Israel.

In the days of Samgar, son of Hanath, in the days of Jahel, the highways were no longer beaten down, and those who went by the roads went by winding paths.

The unwallled cities in Israel were no longer inhabited; they were not inhabited until I, Deborah, arose to be a mother in Israel.

Was [Israel] choosing new gods? Then war was at the gates. Was he seen with a shield or a spear in forty thousand of Israel?

My heart goes out to the rulers of Israel, who volunteered from among the people. Bless the Lord.

You who ride on white donkeys, [and] who sit in the seat of justice, and you who go out on the roads, speak.

When the sound of the archers has ceased in the places where water was drawn, let them speak there of the righteous acts of the Lord, and of the righteous acts of his unwallled cities in Israel; then the people of God shall go down to the gates.

Awake, awake, Deborah; awake, awake, says the Song, arise Barak, and lead into captivity those whom you have made captive, you son of Abinoham.

[The Lord] then made the survivors rule, the people over the magnificent; the Lord made me rule over the strong.

Their roots are from Ephraim to Hamalech; Benjamin [was] after you among your peoples; from Machir came the Governors; and from Zebulun those who wield the pen of the Scribe.

And the leaders of Issachar were with Deborah, and Issachar and Barak; he was sent with his entourage into the valley; there were great considerations in their hearts at the separations of Reuben.

Why did you stand between the bars of the stables to hear the cries of the flocks? There were many consultations in their hearts at the separations of Reuben.

Gilead remained beyond the Jordan; and why did Dan stay at the ships? Asher stayed at the ports of the sea, and he remained in his harbors.

But for Zebulun, it is a people who have exposed their soul to death; and Naphtali also, on the heights of the countryside.

The kings came, they fought; the kings of Canaan fought at Tahanach, by the waters of Megiddo; but they gained no money.

They fought from the heavens, the stars, [I say], fought from their place of course against Sisera.

The Kishon River swept them away, the Kedumim River, the Kishon River; my soul, you have trampled down strength.

Then the hooves of the horses were broken by the beating of the hooves, by the beating, [I say], of the hooves of his mighty [horses].

"Curse Meroz," said the Angel of the Lord, "curse, curse its inhabitants, because they did not come to the aid of the Lord, to the aid of the Lord, with the mighty ones."

Blessed be Jahel, wife of Heber Kenite, above all women; blessed be she above the women [who dwell] in the tents.

He asked for water, she gave him milk; she presented him with cream in the cup of the magnificent.

She put her left hand to the nail and her right hand to the workmen's hammer; she struck Sisera, and split his head open; she pierced and went through his temples.

He bowed down between [Jahel's] feet, he fell, he was stretched out between Jahel's feet, he bowed down, he fell; [and] in the place where he bowed down, he fell there completely disfigured.

Sisera's mother looked out of the window and cried out through the latticework: "Why is his chariot delayed? Why are his chariots going so slowly?"

And the wisest of her ladies answered her; and she too answered herself:

Did they not find it? They divide the spoils; one daughter, two daughters to each head. The colored [clothing] spoils belong to Sisera, the embroidered colored spoils; the embroidered colors in two places, around the necks of those who were plundered.

May all your enemies perish, O Lord, and may those who love you be like the sun when it rises in its strength. And the land had rest for forty years.

But the children of Israel did what was evil in the sight of the Lord; and the Lord gave them into the hand of Midian for seven years.

And the hand of Midian was strengthened against Israel, [and] because of the Midianites the children of Israel made for themselves hollows in the mountains, and caves, and strongholds.

For it happened that when Israel had sown, Midian would come up with Hamalech and the Orientals, and they would come up against him.

And making a camp against them they ravaged the fruits of the land as far as Gaza, and left nothing left in Israel, neither food, nor small livestock, nor oxen, nor donkeys.

For they and their flocks went up, and they came with their tents in as many numbers as locusts, so that they and their camels were without number; and they came to the land to ravage it.

Therefore Israel was greatly impoverished by Midian, and the children of Israel cried out to the Lord.

And it came to pass that when the children of Israel cried out to the Lord concerning Midian,

The Lord sent a prophet to the children of Israel, who said to them, "Thus says the Lord, the God of Israel: I brought you up out of Egypt, and I delivered you from the house of bondage;

And I delivered you from the hand of the Egyptians, and from the hand of all who oppressed you, and drove them out from before you, and gave you their land.

I also told you: I am the Lord your God, you shall not fear the gods of the Amorites, in whose land you dwell; but you have not obeyed my voice.

Then the angel of the Lord came and sat under an oak tree in Hophra, which belonged to Joash the Abihazerite. And Gideon his son was threshing wheat in the winepress to save it from the Midianites.

Then the Angel of the Lord appeared to him and said, "Most mighty man, the Lord is with you."

And Gideon answered him, "Alas, my lord! [Is it possible] that the Lord is with us? Why then has all this happened to us? And where are all the wonders that our fathers told us about, saying, 'Did not the Lord bring us up out of Egypt?' But now the Lord has abandoned us and given us into the hand of the Midianites."

And the Lord, looking at him, said, "Go in the strength you have and deliver Israel from the hand of the Midianites. Have I not sent you?"

And he answered him, "Alas, my Lord! How shall I deliver Israel? Behold, my thousand is the poorest in Manasseh, and I am the least in my father's house."

And the Lord said to him, "Because I am with you, you will strike down the Midianites as if they were one man."

And he answered him, "If I have found favor in your sight, please give me a sign that it is you who is speaking with me."

Please do not leave here until I return to you and bring my gift and place it before you. And he said, "I will stay here until you return."

Then Gideon went home and prepared a young goat, and unleavened cakes from an ephah of flour; put the meat in a basket, the broth in a pot, and brought them to him under the oak tree and presented them to him.

And the Angel of God said to him, "Take this meat and these unleavened cakes, and put them on this rock, and pour over the broth"; and he did so.

Then the Angel of the Lord stretched out the staff that was in his hand and touched the flesh and the unleavened cakes, and fire went up from the rock and consumed the flesh and the unleavened cakes; then the Angel of the Lord departed from before him.

And Gideon saw that it was the Angel of the Lord, and he said, "Ah, Lord God; is this why I saw the Angel of the Lord face to face?"

And the Lord said to him, "It is well with you; do not be afraid, you will not die."

And Gideon built an altar there to the Lord, and called it The Lord of Peace. And that altar remains to this day in Hophra of the Abihezerites.

Now it came to pass that night that the Lord said unto him: Take a bull from among the oxen which are thy father, namely the second bull, which is seven years old; and demolish the altar of Bahal which is thy father, and cut down the grove which is beside it;

And build an altar to the Lord your God on the top of this stronghold, in a suitable place. You shall take this second bull, and offer it as a burnt offering, along with the trees of the grove that you cut down.

So Gideon took ten of his servants and did as the Lord had told him; and because he feared his father's house and the people of the city, if he had done it by day, he did it by night.

And the people of the city rose early in the morning, and behold, the altar of Bahal had been demolished, and the grove which was beside it had been cut down, and the second bull was offered as a burnt offering on the altar which had been built.

And they said to one another, "Who did this?" And having inquired and sought, they said, "Gideon the son of Joash did this."

Then the people of the city said to Joash, "Bring out your son, and let him die; for he has demolished the altar of Bahal, and cut down the grove that was beside it."

And Joash answered all who came to him, "Are you going to take up Bahal's cause? Are you going to save him? Whoever takes up his cause will be put to death by morning. If he is a god, let him plead his cause, since his altar has been torn down."

And on that day he called Gideon to Jerubbahal, and said, "Let Bahal plead his case because [Gideon] has demolished his altar."

Now all the Midianites, the Hamalekites, and the Easterners all gathered together, and having crossed the Jordan, they camped in the valley of Jezrehel.

And the Spirit of the Lord came upon Gideon; and he blew the trumpet, and the Abihezerites gathered around him.

He also sent messengers throughout all [the Tribe of] Manasseh, who also gathered around him; then he sent messengers to Asher, Zebulun, and Naphtali, who went up to meet them.

And Gideon said to God, "If you are to deliver Israel by means of me, as you have said,

Behold, I am going to put a fleece on the threshing floor; if the dew is on the fleece alone, and the dryness is throughout the place, then I shall know that thou shalt deliver Israel by means of me, as thou hast spoken unto me.

And so it happened, for having gotten up early the next morning, and having squeezed this fleece, he brought out a cupful of dewwater.

Gideon said again to God: Let not your anger burn against me, and I will speak only this once; I pray you, let me make a test in the fleece only this once more; I pray you that there should be nothing dry but the fleece, and let the dew be on all the place [of the threshing floor].

And God did so that night; for there was nothing dry except the fleece, and the dew was on all the place of the threshing floor.

Jerubbahal, who is Gideon, rose early in the morning, and all the people who were with him, and they encamped by the spring of Harod, and they had the camp of Midian on the north side, toward the hill of Moreh in the valley.

But the Lord said to Gideon, "The people who are with you are too many for me to give Midian into their hand, lest Israel boast against me, saying, 'My hand has delivered me.'"

Now therefore, proclaim to the people, and say, "Whoever is timid and afraid, let him return, and go early in the morning to the mountain of Gilead." And twenty-two thousand of the people returned; and ten thousand remained.

And the Lord said to Gideon, "There are still too many people; bring them down to the water, and there I will choose them for you; and the one of whom I tell you, this one shall go with you, he shall go with you; and the one of whom I tell you, this one shall not go with you; he shall not go."

So he brought the people down to the water; and the Lord said to Gideon, "Anyone who laps the water with his tongue, like a dog laps, you shall set apart; and [you shall also set apart] all those who bend down on their knees to drink.

And the number of those who lapped the water in their hand, [bringing it] to their mouth, was three hundred men; but all the rest of the people bowed down on their knees to drink water.

Then the Lord said to Gideon, "I will deliver you by means of these three hundred men who lapped [the water], and I will deliver Midian into your hand. Let all the people depart, each to his own place."

So the people took provisions and their trumpets in their hands. And Gideon sent all the men of Israel back to their tents, but kept the three hundred men. Now the camp of Midian was below, in the valley.

And it came to pass that night that the Lord said to him, "Arise, go down to the camp, for I have given it into your hand."

And if you are afraid to go down there, then go down to the camp, you and Purah your servant.

And you will hear what they say, and your hands will be strengthened, and then you will go down to the camp. So he went down with Purah his servant to the first guard post of the camp.

Now Midian, and Hamalech, and all the Eastern peoples, were spread out in the valley like locusts, there were so many of them, and their camels were without number, like the sand that is on the seashore, there were so many of them.

So when Gideon arrived there, behold, a man was telling his companion a dream, and said to him, Behold, I had a dream; it seemed to me that a loaf of barley bread rolled toward the camp of Midian, and came to the tents, and struck them, so that they fell off, and it overturned them, [rolling] down from the top [of the mountain], and they fell.

Then his companion answered, and said, "This is none other than the sword of Gideon, son of Joash, a man of Israel. God has given Midian and all this camp into his hand."

And when Gideon heard the account of the dream, and its interpretation, he bowed down; and returning to the camp of Israel, he said, "Arise, for the Lord has given the camp of Midian into your hands."

Then he divided the three hundred men into three bands, and gave each of them trumpets in their hands, and empty jugs, and torches in the jugs.

And he said to them, "Watch out for me and do as I do; when I come to the end of the camp, you will do as I do."

When I and all who are with me blow the trumpet, then you also shall blow the trumpets around all the camp, and you shall say: THE SWORD OF THE LORD, AND OF GIDEON.

Gideon, therefore, and the hundred men who were with him, came to the end of the camp, just as the second watch had been posted; the watchmen had only just been posted when they sounded the trumpets; and they broke the jugs which were in their hands.

So the three bands sounded trumpets and broke the jugs, holding torches in their left hands and trumpets in their right hands to sound them, and they shouted: THE SWORD OF THE LORD, AND OF GIDEON.

And they stood each in his place around the camp; and the whole army ran to and fro, crying out and fleeing.

For as the three hundred men blew their trumpets, the Lord turned the sword of each man against his companion, throughout the whole camp. And the army fled as far as Beth-sittah, toward Zererah, to the border of Abelmeholah, toward Tabbat.

And the men of Israel, [namely] from Naphtali and Asher, and from all Manasseh, gathered together, and pursued Midian.

So Gideon sent messengers throughout the hill country of Ephraim, saying, "Go down to meet the Midianites and be the first to seize the waters of the Jordan as far as Beth-barah." So the men of Ephraim gathered together and seized the waters of the Jordan as far as Beth-barah.

And they took two of the leaders of Midian, Horeb and Zeeb, and they killed Horeb at the rock of Horeb; but they killed Zeeb at the winepress of Zeeb; and they pursued Midian, and brought the heads of Horeb and Zeeb to Gideon, beyond the Jordan. Then the men of Ephraim said to him, "What do you mean by not calling us when you went to war against Midian?" And they became very angry with him. And he answered them, "What have I done now compared to what you have done? Are not the gleanings of Ephraim better than the vintage of Abihazer?" God has delivered into your hands the chiefs of Midian, Horeb and Zeeb; and what could I have done in comparison to what you have done? And their spirit was appeased toward him when he had spoken thus to them. Now Gideon arrived at the Jordan and crossed it, he and the three hundred men who were with him, who, though weary, pursued [the enemy]. That is why he said to the people of Succoth: Please give some loaves of bread to the people who follow me, for they are weary; and so I will pursue Zebah and Zalmunah, the kings of Midian. But the leaders of Succoth replied: Are the palms of Zebah and Zalmunah now in your hand, that we should give bread to your army? And Gideon said, "When the Lord has delivered Zebah and Zalmunah into my hand, I will then thresh your flesh with desert thorns and thistles." Then from there he went up to Penuel, and he spoke the same words to the people of Penuel. And the people of Penuel answered him as the people of Succoth had answered.

He also spoke to the men of Penuel, saying: When I return in peace, I will demolish this tower. Now Zebah and Zalmunah were at Karkor, and their armies with them, about fifteen thousand men, who were all those who had remained of the whole army of the Orientals; for six twenty thousand men who drew the sword had fallen dead. And Gideon went up by the way of those who dwell in tents, on the eastern side of Nobah and Jogbehah, and defeated the army, which thought itself secure. And as Zebah and Zalmunah fled, he pursued them, and captured the two kings of Midian, Zebah and Zalmunah, and routed the entire army. Then Gideon son of Joash returned from the battle on the ascent of Heres. And taking a boy from Succoth, he questioned him; [and] this boy gave him in writing the principals of Succoth, and its Elders, [numbering] seventy-seven men. And he came to the people of Succoth, and said to them: Here are Zebah and Zalmunah, about whom you insulted me, saying: Are the palms of Zebah and Zalmunah now in your hand, that we should give bread to your weary people? So he took the elders of the city, and thorns from the desert, and thistles, and he crushed the men of Succoth with them. But he had demolished the tower of Penuel, and put the people of the city to death. Then he said to Zebah and Zalmunah, "What were these men like whom you killed on Tabor?" They replied, "They were exactly like you; each one of them looked like a king's son." And he said to them, "They were my brothers, my mother's children; as surely as the Lord lives, if you had saved their lives, I would not have killed you." Then he said to Jether his firstborn, "Get up, kill them!" But the boy did not draw his sword, for he was afraid, because he was still a young boy. Then Zebah and Zalmunah said, "Get up and attack us, for as a man is, so is his strength." So Gideon got up and killed Zebah and Zalmunah, and took the necklaces that were on their camels' necks. And the Israelites all said to Gideon with one accord, "Rule over us, both you and your son, and your son's son; for you have delivered us from the hand of Midian." And Gideon answered them, "I will not rule over you, nor will my son rule over you; the Lord will rule over you." But Gideon said to them, "I will make one request of you, that each of you give me the rings he received from the spoils; for the enemies had gold rings, because they were Ishmaelites.”

And they replied: We will give them most gladly; and spreading out a cloak, they each threw into it the rings they had obtained from the spoils.

And the weight of the gold rings that he had requested was one thousand seven hundred [shekels] of gold, without the necklaces, the boxes of perfume, and the scarlet garments that were on the Kings of Midian, and without the chains that were on the necks of their camels.

Then Gideon made it into an Ephod; and put it in his city, which was Hophra; and all Israel prostituted themselves after him in that place; which became a snare to Gideon and to his house.

So Midian was humbled before the children of Israel, and did not lift up his head again; and the land had rest forty years in the days of Gideon.

Jerubbahal, then the son of Joash, came [to his city] and stayed in his house.

Now Gideon had seventy sons, who came from his own hip, because he had many wives.

And his concubine, who was in Shechem, also bore him a son, and he named him Abimelech.

Then Gideon, son of Joash, died at a good old age, and was buried in the tomb of Joash his father at Hophra of the Abihaezerites.

And it came to pass after Gideon died, that the children of Israel turned aside, and prostituted themselves after the Bahalites, and established themselves as Bahal-berith for God.

So the children of Israel did not remember the Lord their God, who had delivered them from the hand of all their enemies who surrounded them.

And they did not show any kindness to the house of Jerubbahal Gideon, according to all the good he had done for Israel.

And Abimelech, son of Jerubbahal, went to Shechem to his mother's brothers, and spoke to them and to all the family of his mother's father's house, saying:

Please tell all the Lords of Shechem these words: Which seems best to you, that seventy men, all descendants of Jerubbahal, should rule over you, or that one man should rule over you? Remember that I am your own flesh and blood.

His mother's brothers then spoke all these words on his behalf, the Lords of Shechem hearing it; and their hearts inclined toward Abimelech; for they said, he is our brother.

And they gave him seventy pieces of silver from the house of Bahal-berith, with which Abimelech recruited men who had nothing and were vagrants, who followed him.

And he came to his father's house at Hophra, and killed on one stone his brothers, the sons of Jerubbahal, who were seventy men; but Jotham, the youngest son of Jerubbahal, remained behind, because he had hidden himself.

And all the lords of Shechem gathered together, with all the house of Millo, and they came, and established Abimelech as king by the oak grove which is in Shechem.

And it was reported to Jotham, who went away and stood on the top of Mount Gerizim, and raising his voice, he cried out to them, saying: Listen to me, Lords of Shechem, and let God hear you.

The trees went [one day] with all haste to anoint a King over them, and they said to the olive tree: Reign over us.

But the olive tree answered them: Would they make me give up my fat, by which God and men are honored, so that I might go and fret over the [other] trees?

Then the trees said to the fig tree: Come, [and] reign over us.

And the fig tree answered them: Would they make me give up my sweetness and my good fruit, so that I might go and fret over the [other] trees?

Then the trees said to the vine, “Come, and reign over us.”

And the vine replied: Would they make me give up my good wine, which gladdens God and men, so that I might go and fret over the [other] trees?

Then all the trees said to the thorn: Come, and reign over us.

And the thorn answered the trees: If you anoint me King over you in truth, come and take refuge in my shade; if not, let fire come out of the thorn and devour the cedars of Lebanon.

Now therefore, if you have acted with sincerity and integrity in appointing Abimelech as king, and if you have dealt well with Jerubbahal and his house, and have done to him according to what he has obliged you to do by his actions.

(For my father fought for you, and risked his life, and delivered you from the hand of Midian.

But you have risen up today against my father's house, and have killed his children, seventy men, on a stone, and have made Abimelech, the son of his maidservant, king over the lords of Shechem, because he is your brother.

If, I say, you have acted today with sincerity and integrity toward Jerubbahal and his house, rejoice in Abimelech, and let him also rejoice in you.

Otherwise, let fire come out from Abimelech and consume the lords of Shechem and the house of Millo; and let fire come out from the lords of Shechem and the house of Millo and consume Abimelech.

Then Jotham fled by stagecoach and went to Beer, and remained there because of his brother Abimelech.

And Abimelech ruled over Israel for three years.

But God sent an evil spirit between Abimelech and the Lords of Shechem; and the Lords of Shechem were unfaithful to Abimelech.

So that the violence done to the seventy sons of Jerubbahal, and their blood, might return to Abimelech their brother, who had killed them; and to the Lords of Shechem who had joined his hand in killing his brothers.

So the lords of Shechem set ambushes for him on the mountaintops, and they plundered all who passed by them on the road. This was reported to Abimelech.

Then Gahal, son of Hebed, came with his brothers, and they entered Shechem; and the Lords of Shechem trusted in him.

Then they went out to the fields, harvested their vineyards, and trod [the grapes], and feasted; and they entered the house of their God, and they ate and drank, and cursed Abimelech.

Then Gahal son of Hebed said, "Who is Abimelech, and who is Shechem, that we should serve Abimelech? Is he not the son of Jerubbahal? And is not Zebul his overseer?"

Serve the men of Hamor, Shechem's father. Why should we serve this man?"

Would to God that this people would be given to me under my leadership, and I would drive out Abimelech. And he said to Abimelech, "Increase your army and go out."

And Zebul, the captain of the city, heard the words of Gahal, son of Hebed, and his anger was kindled.

Then he cleverly sent messengers to Abimelech, saying: Behold, Gahal son of Hebed, and his brothers, have entered Shechem; and behold, they are arming the city against you.

Now therefore, get up in the night, you and the people who are with you, and lay ambushes in the fields.

And in the morning, around sunrise, you shall rise early and rush upon the city; and behold, [Gahal] and the people who are with him will come out against you, and you shall do to him as you find the way.

So Abimelech got up by night, and all the people who were with him, and they set ambushes against Shechem, and [divided them] into four bands.

Then Gahal, son of Hebed, came out and stood at the entrance of the city gate; and Abimelech and all the people who were with him rose from the ambush.

And Gahal, having seen this people, said to Zebul: Look, people are coming down from the top of the mountains. And Zebul said to him: You see the shadows of the mountains, as if they were men.

And Gahal spoke again, and said: Look, people are coming down from the middle of the country, and a band is coming from the way of the oak grove of the diviners.

And Zebul said to him, "Where is your boasting now, when you said, 'Who is Abimelech, that we should serve him?' Is this not the people you despised? Now go out, I pray you, and fight against them."

Then Gahal went out leading the Lords of Shechem, and fought against Abimelech. And Abimelech pursued him as he fled from him, and many fell dead at the entrance of the gate.

And Abimelech stopped at Arumah; and Zebul drove out Gahal and his brothers, so that they would no longer remain in Shechem.

And it happened the very next day that the people went out into the fields; this was reported to Abimelech;

He took some of the people and divided them into three bands, and ambushed them in the fields, and having seen that the people were coming out of the city, he rose up against them and defeated them.

For Abimelech and the band that was with him spread out and stood at the entrance of the city gate, but the other two bands fell upon all those who were in the fields and defeated them.

So Abimelech fought against the city all that day, and took the city, and killed the people who were in it, and having razed the city, sowed salt there.

And all the Lords of the Tower of Shechem, having learned of this, withdrew to the stronghold, which was the house of the God Berith.

And it was reported to Abimelech that all the Lords of the Tower of Shechem had assembled [in the fort].

Then Abimelech went up Mount Zalmon, he and all the people who were with him; and Abimelech took an axe and cut down a branch of a tree, and having put it on his shoulder, carried it, and said to the people who were with him: Have you seen what I have done? Hurry, do as I have done.

Each person from all the people cut off a branch, and they followed Abimelech, and placed [these branches] all around the fort, and set them on fire, burning the fort down. And all the people of the Tower of Shechem died, about a thousand in number, both men and women.

Then Abimelech went to Tebets, set up camp there, and took it.

Now there was in the middle of the city a strong tower, into which all the men and women, and all the lords of the city, fled, and having closed the gates behind them, they went up onto the roof of the tower.

Then Abimelech came to the Tower, attacked it, and approached the gate of the Tower to burn it with fire.

But a woman threw a piece of millstone on Abimelech's head, and smashed his skull. He called incessantly to the boy who carried his armor and said to him, "Draw your sword and kill me, lest it be said of me, 'A woman killed him.'" So his boy pierced him, and he died.

And when the Israelites saw that Abimelech was dead, they each went to their own place.

So God repaid Abimelech for the evil he had done to his father, by killing his seventy brothers;

And all the wickedness of the men of Shechem; God, [I say], turned it back on their own heads; and thus the curse of Jotham, son of Jerubbahal, came upon them.

After Abimelech, Tolah son of Puah, son of Dodo, a man of Issachar, was raised up to deliver Israel, and he lived in Samir in the hill country of Ephraim.

And he judged Israel for twenty-three years, then he died, and was buried in Samir.

After him Jair Gileadite was raised up, who judged Israel for twenty-two years.

And he had thirty sons, who rode on thirty donkeys, and who had thirty cities, which are called the cities of Jair to this day, which are in the land of Gilead.

And Jair died, and was buried at Kamon.

Then the children of Israel again did what was displeasing to the Lord, and served the Bahalites and Hastaroth, namely, the gods of Syria, the gods of Sidon, the gods of Moab, the gods of the children of Hammon, and the gods of the Philistines; and they forsook the Lord, and served him no more.

Then the anger of the Lord was kindled against Israel, and he sold them into the hand of the Philistines and into the hand of the children of Hammon;

Who oppressed and trampled the children of Israel that year, which was the eighteenth; [namely] all the children of Israel, who were beyond the Jordan in the land of the Amorites, which is in Gilead.

Even the children of Hammon crossed the Jordan to fight against Judah, and against Benjamin, and against the house of Ephraim; and Israel was severely besieged.

Then the children of Israel cried out to the Lord, saying, "We have sinned against you, and indeed we have abandoned our God, and served the Bahalites."

But the Lord answered the children of Israel, "Were you not oppressed by the Egyptians, the Amorites, the descendants of Hammon, and the Philistines?"

The Sidonians, the Hamalekites, and the Mahonites? Yet when you cried out to me, I delivered you from their hands.

But you have abandoned me and served other gods; therefore I will no longer deliver you.

Go, and cry out to the gods you have chosen; let them deliver you in the time of your distress.

But the children of Israel answered the Lord, "We have sinned; do to us as seems good to you; we only pray that you deliver us today."

So they removed the foreign gods from among them and served the Lord, who was moved to compassion for Israel.

Now the children of Hammon gathered together and encamped in Gilead; and the children of Israel also gathered together and encamped at Mizpah.

And the people, [and] the leaders of Gilead said to one another: Who shall be the man who shall begin to fight against the children of Hammon? He shall be leader to all the inhabitants of Gilead.

Now Jephthah Gileadite was a strong and valiant man, but the son of a harlot, however Gilead had fathered him.

And Gilead's wife had borne him sons; and when that woman's sons grew up, they drove Jephthah out, saying to him, "You shall have no inheritance in our father's house, for you are the son of a foreign woman."

So Jephthah fled from his brothers and lived in the land of Tob; and people who had nothing gathered around Jephthah, and they went back and forth with him.

But it happened, some time later, that the children of Hammon went to war against Israel.

And since the children of Hammon were waging war against Israel, the elders of Gilead went to bring Jephthah back from the land of Tob.

And they said to Jephthah, "Come, and be our captain, so that we may fight against the children of Hammon."

And Jephthah answered the elders of Gilead, "Did you not hate me and drive me out of my father's house? Why then have you come to me now that you are in distress?"

Then the elders of Gilead said to Jephthah, "The reason we have now returned to you is so that you may come with us and fight against the children of Hammon, and be our leader, [that is] of all of us who live in Gilead."

And Jephthah answered the elders of Gilead: If you bring me back to fight against the children of Hammon, and the Lord delivers them into my hands, I will be your leader.

And the elders of Gilead said to Jephthah, "May the Lord hear between us if we do not do according to all that you have said."

So Jephthah went with the elders of Gilead, and the people appointed him as their leader and commander; and Jephthah spoke before the Lord at Mizpah all the words that he had spoken.

Then Jephthah sent messengers to the King of the children of Hammon to say to him: What is there between you and me, that you have come against me to wage war in my land?

And the King of the children of Hammon answered Jephthah's messengers: It is because Israel took my land when they came up out of Egypt, from Arnon to Jabbok, even to the Jordan; now therefore give me back those lands amicably.

But Jephthah sent messengers again to the King of the children of Hammon;

They told him: This is what Jephthah said: Israel took nothing from the land of Moab, nor from the land of the children of Hammon.

But after Israel had gone up out of Egypt, through the desert to the Red Sea and had reached Kadesh;

And that he had sent messengers to the King of Edom, saying, "Please let me pass through your country"; but the King of Edom refused to listen; and that he had also sent to the King of Moab, who also refused to listen; and after Israel had stayed at Kadesh,

And having walked through the desert, he had gone around the land of Edom, and the land of Moab, and had come to the land of Moab from the east, he camped beyond the Arnon, and did not enter the borders of Moab; because the Arnon was the border of Moab.

But Israel sent messengers to Sihon, King of the Amorites, who was King of Heshbon, to whom Israel sent this message: We beg you, let us pass through your land to our place.

But Sihon, not trusting Israel to let him pass through his land, gathered all his people, and they camped near Jahaz and fought against Israel.

And the Lord, the God of Israel, delivered Sihon and all his people into the hand of Israel, and Israel defeated them and conquered all the land of the Amorites who lived in that land.

So they conquered all the land of the Amorites from Arnon to Jabbok, and from the desert to the Jordan.

Now that the Lord, the God of Israel, has driven the Amorites out of the sight of his people Israel, would you possess them?

Wouldn't you have possession of what Chemos your god has given you to possess? So we will possess the land of all those whom the Lord our God has driven out from before us.

Now are you in any way better than Balak, son of Zippor, king of Moab? Didn't he contend and fight as hard as he could against Israel?

While Israel remained in Heshbon, and in the towns surrounding it, and in Haroher, and in the towns surrounding it, and in all the towns along the Arnon, for three hundred years, why did you not recover them during that time?

I have not offended you, but you are doing a wicked thing by waging war against me. May the Lord, who is the Judge, judge today between the children of Israel and the children of Hammon.

But the King of the children of Hammon would not listen to the words that Jephthah had made him speak.

The Spirit of the Lord came upon Jephthah, and he passed through Gilead and Manasseh; and he passed as far as Mizpah of Gilead, and from Mizpah of Gilead he passed as far as the children of Hammon.

And Jephthah made a vow to the Lord, and said: If you will deliver the children of Hammon into my hand;

Then everything that goes out of the doors of my house before me, when I return in peace from the land of the children of Hammon, shall be the Lord's, and I shall offer it as a burnt offering.

Jephthah therefore went over to where the children of Hammon were to fight against them; and the Lord delivered them into his hand.

And he made a very great slaughter of them, from Haroher to Minnith, in twenty cities, and as far as the plain of the vineyards; and the children of Hammon were subdued before the children of Israel.

Then, as Jephthah came to Mizpah to his house, behold, his daughter, who was his only child, without any other son or daughter, came out to meet him with drums and flutes.

And it came to pass that as soon as he saw her, he tore his clothes, and said: Aha! my daughter, you have utterly humbled me, and you are of those who trouble me; for I have opened my mouth to the Lord, and I cannot retract it.

And she answered, "My father, have you opened your mouth to the Lord? Do to me according to what has come out of your mouth, since the Lord has avenged you on your enemies, the children of Hammon."

However, she said to her father: Let this be granted to me; let me for two months, so that I may go away, and go down through the mountains, and weep for my virginity, I and my companions.

And he said, "Go," and he let her go for two months. So she went away with her companions and wept over her virginity in the mountains.

And after two months she returned to her father, and he fulfilled the vow he had made to her. Now she had never known a man. And this became a custom in Israel.

Year after year the daughters of Israel went to mourn for the daughter of Jephthah Gileadite, four days a year.

Now the men of Ephraim having gathered together, crossed over to the North, and said to Jephthah, "Why did you cross over to fight against the children of Hammon, and did you not call us to go with you? We will burn your house with fire, and you also."

And Jephthah said to them, "I and my people had a great dispute with the children of Hammon, and when I called to you, you did not deliver me from their hands."

And seeing that you did not deliver me, I risked my life, and I went over to where the children of Hammon were, and the Lord delivered them into my hand; why then have you come up against me today to make war against me?

Then Jephthah, having gathered all the people of Gilead, fought against Ephraim; and those of Gilead defeated Ephraim, because they had said: You [are] escapees from Ephraim, Gilead [is] in the midst of Ephraim, in the midst of Manasseh.

And the Gileadites seized the fords of the Jordan before the Ephraimites arrived there; and when any of the Ephraimites who had escaped said, "Let me cross over," the Gileadites said to him, "Are you an Ephraite?" and he answered, "No."

So they would say to him, "Say Shibboleth," and he would say "Sibboleth," but could not pronounce it. Then they seized him and killed him at the crossing of the Jordan. At that time, forty-two thousand men of Ephraim were killed.

And Jephthah judged Israel six years; then Jephthah the Gileadite died and was buried in one of the cities of Gilead.

After him, Ibzan of Bethlehem judged Israel.

And he had thirty sons and thirty daughters, whom he put out [of his house, by marrying them off], and he took thirty daughters from outside for his sons; and he judged Israel seven years.

Then Ibzan died and was buried in Bethlehem.

After him, Elon Zebulunite judged Israel for ten years.

Then Elon the Zebulunite died and was buried in Ajalon, in the land of Zebulun.

After him, Haddon son of Hillel, the Pirathonite, judged Israel.

He had forty sons and thirty grandsons, who rode on seventy donkeys; and he judged Israel for eight years.

Then Haddon, son of Hillel, the Pirathonite, died and was buried at Pirathon in the land of Ephraim, in the mountain of the Hamalekite.

And the children of Israel again did what was displeasing to the Lord, and the Lord delivered them into the hand of the Philistines for forty years.

Now there was a man from Zorah, of a family of those from Dan, whose name was Manoah, and his wife was barren and had never had a child.

And the Angel of the Lord appeared to that woman and said to her, "Behold, you are barren and have never had a child, but you will conceive and bear a son."

Therefore, take care from now on not to drink wine or beer, and not to eat anything unclean.

For behold, you will conceive and bear a son, and no razor shall touch his head; for the child shall be a Nazirite of God from the womb; and he shall begin to deliver Israel from the hand of the Philistines.

And the woman came and spoke to her husband, saying, "A man of God came to me, whose face was like the face of an angel of God, very venerable, but I did not ask him where he was from, nor did he tell me his name."

But he said to me, "Behold, you will conceive and bear a son. Now therefore drink no wine or beer, and eat nothing unclean; for this child shall be a Nazirite of God from the womb until the day of his death."

And Manoah earnestly prayed to the Lord, and said, Alas, Lord! let the man of God whom you have sent come again, I pray you, to us, and let him teach us what we should do to the child when he is born.

And God answered Manoah's prayer. So the Angel of God came again to the woman as she sat in a field; but Manoah her husband was not with her.

And the woman quickly ran to tell her husband, saying, "Look, the man who came to me the other day has appeared to me."

And Manoah got up and followed his wife; and coming to the man, he said to him, "Are you the man who spoke to this woman?" And he answered, "I am."

And Manoah said, "All that you have said will come to pass; [but] what order shall be given to the child, and what shall he do?"

And the Angel of the Lord answered Manoah, "The woman shall keep herself from all the things of which I have warned her."

She shall eat nothing that comes from the vine, nothing containing wine; and she shall drink neither wine nor ale, nor eat anything unclean. She shall be careful to do all that I have commanded her.

Then Manoah said to the Angel of the Lord, "Please let us detain you, and we will prepare a young goat for you."

And the angel of the Lord answered Manoah, "Even if you detain me, I will not eat your bread; but if you prepare a burnt offering, you shall offer it to the Lord." Now Manoah did not know that it was the angel of the Lord.

And Manoah said to the Angel of the Lord, "What is your name, so that we may give you a present when what you have said comes to pass?"

And the Angel of the Lord said to him, "Why do you inquire about my name, for it is wonderful."

Then Manoah took a suckling goat and a cake, and offered them to the Lord on the rock. And the angel did a wonderful thing in the sight of Manoah and his wife.

It was that the flame went up from above the altar to heaven, and the Angel of the Lord also went up with the flame from the altar; when Manoah and his wife saw this, they fell down with their faces to the ground.

And the angel of the Lord did not appear again to Manoah or to his wife. Then Manoah knew that it was the angel of the Lord.

And Manoah said to his wife, "Surely we will die, because we have seen God."

But his wife answered him, "If the Lord had meant to kill us, he would not have taken the burnt offering and the grain offering from our hand, nor would he have shown us all these things at this time, nor told us the things we heard."

Then this woman gave birth to a son, and she named him Samson; and the child grew up, and the Lord blessed him.

And the Spirit of the Lord began to come upon him at Mahane-dan, between Zorah and Estaol.

Now Samson went down to Timnah and saw there a woman of the daughters of the Philistines.

And when he went up [to his house] he declared to his father and mother, saying, I have seen a woman in Timnah of the daughters of the Philistines; now therefore take her, so that she may be my wife.

And his father and mother said to him, "Is there no woman among the daughters of your brothers, or among all my people, that you should go and take a wife from among the uncircumcised Philistines?" And Samson said to his father, "Take her for me, for she pleases my eyes."

But his father and mother did not know that this was from the Lord; for [Samson] was seeking an opportunity from the Philistines. Now at that time the Philistines ruled over Israel.

So Samson went down with his father and mother to Timnah, and they came to the vineyards of Timnah, and behold, a roaring young lion was coming against him.

And the Spirit of the Lord came powerfully upon Samson, and he tore the lion apart as he had torn a young goat, though he had nothing in his hand; but he did not tell his father or his mother what he had done.

So he went downstairs and spoke to the woman, and she pleased him.

Then returning a few days later to take it, he turned away to see the carcass of the lion, and behold, in the carcass of the lion there was a swarm of bees, and honey.

And he took some in his hand, and went on his way, eating; and when he came to his father and to his mother, he gave some to them, and they ate; but he did not tell them that he had taken this honey from the carcass of the lion.

So his father went down to this woman, and Samson held a feast there; for that was the custom of the young men.

And as soon as they saw him, they took thirty companions, who went with him.

And Samson said to them, "I will now propose a riddle to you; and if you explain it to me during the seven days of the feast, and solve it, I will give you thirty linens, [namely] thirty spare robes."

But if you don't explain it to me, you will give me thirty linens, [namely] thirty changes of robes. And they answered him: Tell us your riddle, and we will listen to it.

And he said to them, "From the one who devoured came meat, and from the strong came sweetness." But they could not solve the riddle in three days.

And on the seventh day, they said to Samson's wife, "Persuade your husband to tell us the riddle, lest we burn you and your father's house in the fire. Did you call us here to have our property, is that not so?"

Samson's wife wept beside him and said, "Surely you hate me and do not love me. Have you not posed a riddle to my people, but have not told it to me?" He answered her, "I have not told it to my father or my mother, and now should I tell it to you?"

She wept beside him during the seven days of the feast, but on the seventh day he told her, because she tormented him; then she told the children of her people.

So the people of the city said to him on the seventh day, before the sun set: What is sweeter than honey, and what is stronger than a lion? And he said to them: If you had not plowed with my heifer you would not have solved my riddle.

And the Spirit of the Lord came upon him, and he went down to Ashkelon, and having killed thirty men of those of Ashkelon, he took their spoils, and gave the change of robes to those who had explained the riddle; and his anger was kindled, and he went up to his father's house.

And Samson's wife was [married] to his companion, who was his close friend.

Now it came to pass a few days later, at the time of the grain harvest, that Samson went to visit his wife, [bringing] her a suckling goat, and he said: I will go to my wife in her chamber; but her father did not allow him to go in;

For he said to her, "I thought you must dislike her, so I gave her to your companion. Is not her younger sister more beautiful than she? I beg you, then, let her be your wife instead of her."

And Samson said to them: Now I will be innocent in the eyes of the Philistines when I harm them.

So Samson went away and took three hundred foxes; he also took torches, and he turned the foxes tail to tail, and put a torch between the two tails, right in the middle. Then he set fire to the torches and released the foxes to the Philistine stalks that were standing; he burned both the stalks and the stalks, even the vines and olive trees.

And the Philistines said, "Who did this?" And they answered, "Samson, the Timnian's son-in-law, because he took his wife and gave her to his companion." So the Philistines went up and burned her and her father in the fire.

Then Samson said to them, "Is this how you do things? However, I will take revenge on you before I stop."

And he completely defeated them, and made a great slaughter of them; then he went down, and stopped in a part of the rock of Hetam.

Then the Philistines went up and encamped in Judah, and spread out into Lehi.

And the men of Judah said, "Why have you come up against us?" They answered, "We have come up to bind Samson, so that we may do to him as he has done to us."

Then three thousand men of Judah went down to the area of the rock of Hetam, and said to Samson, "Do you not know that the Philistines rule over us? Why then have you done this to us?" He answered them, "I have done to them as they have done to me."

They also said to him, "We have come down to bind you, so that we may hand you over to the Philistines." And Samson said to them, "Swear to me that you will not attack me."

And they answered, and said, "No, but we will bind you very well, so that we may deliver you into their hands; but we will not kill you." So they bound him with two new ropes, and brought him up out of the rock.

When he came to Lehi, the Philistines shouted for joy to meet him, and the spirit of the Lord came powerfully upon him, and the cords that were on his arms became like flax that has been burned, and his bonds fell off his hands.

And having found a donkey's jawbone that was not yet dried out, he reached out his hand, took it, and killed a thousand men with it.

Then Samson said: With a donkey's jawbone, a heap, two heaps; with a donkey's jawbone I killed a thousand men.

And when he had finished speaking, he threw down his jawbone from his hand, and named that place Ramath-lehi.

And he became very thirsty, and cried out to the Lord, saying, "You have given this great deliverance into the hand of your servant, and now shall I die of thirst, and fall into the hands of the uncircumcised?"

Then God split open one of the large teeth of this donkey's jaw, and water came out of it; and when [Samson] had drunk, his spirit returned to him, and he regained his strength; therefore that place has been called to this day Hen-hakkore, which is in Lehi.

Now [Samson] judged Israel in the days of the Philistines, twenty years.

Now Samson went to Gaza, and saw there a harlot woman, and went to her.

And they told those in Gaza: Samson has come here; they surrounded him and lay in wait for him all night at the gate of the city, and they remained still all night, saying: [Do not move] until daybreak, and we will kill him.

But Samson, after sleeping until midnight, got up, and took hold of the city gates and the two posts, and having removed them with the pole, he put them on his shoulders and carried them to the top of the mountain opposite Hebron.

After that he loved a woman [who stood] by the Sorek stream, whose name was Delilah.

And the Philistine governors came up to her and said, "Persuade him until you know what his great strength is, and how we can overcome him, so that we may bind him to strike him down; and we will each give you eleven hundred pieces of silver."

Delilah then said to Samson, "Tell me, I pray you, what is the source of your great strength, and how you could be bound so tightly that you could be brought down."

And Samson answered him: If I were bound with seven fresh cords, which were not yet dry, I would become weak, and I would be like another man.

So the Philistine governors sent her seven fresh ropes that were not yet dry, and she bound him with them.

Now there were men lying in wait in her room, and she said to him, "The Philistines are upon you, Samson." Then he broke the ropes, as a net of tow breaks when it feels the fire, and his strength was not known.

Then Delilah said to Samson, "Look, you have mocked me, for you have told me lies; now please tell me how you could be bound."

And he answered him: If I were bound tightly with new straps, which had never been used, I would become weak and be like any other man.

So Delilah took new straps and bound him with them; then she said to him, "The Philistines are upon you, Samson." Now there were men lying in wait in the chamber, and he broke the straps from his arms like a net.

Then Delilah said to Samson, "You have mocked me until now, and you have told me lies; tell me how you would be bound." And he said, "It would be if you had woven seven braids of my head around a robe."

And she put them [into the cloak] with the fastening, then she said, "The Philistines are upon you, Samson." Then he awoke from his sleep and took off the fastening of the cloth with the cloak.

Then she said to him, "How can you say, 'I love you,' when your heart is not with me? You have mocked me three times, and you have not told me what your great strength lies in."

And she tormented him every day with her words, and pressed him so hard that his soul was afflicted until death.

Then he told her all his heart, and said to her, "No razor has ever touched my head; for I am a Nazirite to God from my mother's womb; if I am shaved, my strength will leave me, I will be without strength, and I will be like all other men."

When Delilah saw that he had told her everything, she sent word to the Philistine governors, saying, "Come up now, for he has told me everything." So the Philistine governors came up to her, carrying the money in their hands.

And she lulled him to sleep on her knees, and having called a man, she made him shave off seven braids of hair from his head, and began to strike him down, and his strength left him.

Then she said, "The Philistines are upon you, Samson." And he awoke from his sleep, saying [to himself], "I will go out as at other times, and I will escape [from their hands]"; but he did not know that the Lord had departed from him.

So the Philistines seized him, and gouged out his eyes, and brought him to Gaza, and bound him with two bronze chains; and he ground the millstone in the prison.

And the hair on his head began to grow back to how it had been when he was shaved.

Now the rulers of the Philistines assembled to offer a great sacrifice to Dagon their god, and to rejoice, and they said: Our god has delivered Samson our enemy into our hands.

The people, having seen it, praised their god, saying: Our god has delivered into our hands our enemy, and the destroyer of our country, and the one who has killed so many of us.

But since they were in high spirits, they said, "Bring Samson here so he can make us laugh." So they called Samson and brought him out of the prison; he played for them; and they put him between the pillars.

Then Samson said to the boy who was holding his hand: Put me in such a place that I can touch the pillars on which the house rests, so that I may lean on them.

Now the house was full of men and women, and all the Philistine governors were there. There were also on the roof nearly three thousand people, both men and women, watching Samson perform.

Then Samson called upon the Lord, and said, O Lord God, I pray, remember me; O God! I pray, strengthen me only this once, that I may take revenge on the Philistines for my two eyes.

Samson then embraced the two middle pillars on which the house rested, and held himself to them, one of which was in his right hand, and the other in his left. And he said, "Let me die with the Philistines." So he stretched himself out with all his might, and the temple fell upon the governors and all the people who were in it. And he killed many more people in his death than he had killed in his life.

Then his brothers and all his father's household went down and carried him; and when they came up they buried him between Zorah and Estaol, in the tomb of Manoah his father. Now he judged Israel twenty years.

Now there was a man from the hill country of Ephraim, whose name was Micah; He said to his mother, "The eleven hundred pieces of silver that were taken from you, for which you cursed in my presence—here, I have that silver with me; I took it." Then his mother said, "Blessed be my son by the Lord."

And when he returned the eleven hundred [pieces] of silver to his mother, his mother said, I had dedicated all this silver with my own hand to the Lord for my son, to make a carved image and a cast one, so now I will return it to you.

So after he had returned the money to his mother, she took two hundred [pieces] of it and gave them to the founder, who made a carved image and a cast one; and they were in Mica's house.

So this man, [namely] Mica, had a house of gods, and made an Ephod and Teraphim, and consecrated one of his sons, who served as his Priest.

At that time there was no king in Israel; everyone did what seemed right in their own eyes.

Now there was a young man from Bethlehem of Judah, [a city] of the family of Judah, who was a Levite, and who had been living there;

He departed from that city, Bethlehem of Judah, to dwell wherever he found it convenient, and continuing on his way, he came to the hill country of Ephraim as far as the house of Micah.

And Mica said to him, "Where are you from?" The Levite answered him, "I am from Bethlehem in Judah, and I am going to live wherever I find [my comfort]."

And Micah said to him, "Stay with me, and be my father and priest, and I will give you ten pieces of silver a year, and what your clothes cost, and your food." So the Levite went.

So the Levite agreed to stay with that man, and that young man became like one of his own children to him.

And Mica consecrated the Levite, and this young man served as his priest, and remained in his house.

Then Micah said, "Now I know that the Lord will do good to me, because I have a Levite as my priest."

At that time there was no king in Israel, and at that time the tribe of Dan was seeking an inheritance for itself to dwell in; for until that time none had fallen to it among the tribes of Israel to possess.

Therefore the children of Dan sent five men from their families, of various kinds, valiant men from Zorah and Estaol, to spy out the land and explore it thoroughly; and they said to them, "Go and explore the land thoroughly." So they came to the hill country of Ephraim as far as the house of Micah, and spent the night there.

And when they came to the house of Micah, they recognized the voice of the young Levite man; and turning towards that house, they said to him, "Who brought you here? What are you doing here? And what do you have here?"

And he replied: Mica has done such and such a thing for me; he has given me pledges and I serve as his priest.

They also said: We ask you to consult God, so that we may know whether the journey we are undertaking will prosper.

And the priest said to them, "Go in peace; the Lord has before his eyes the journey that you are undertaking."

So these five men went away and arrived at Laish, and they saw that the people of that city lived in confidence, and lived at rest, and felt secure, like the Sidonians; and that there was no one in the land who troubled them in any way, because they were free from all antiquity; and also they were far from the Sidonians, and had no dealings with anyone.

Then, having returned to their brothers in Zorah and Estaol, their brothers said to them, "What do you report?"

And they answered, "Come, let us go up against them; for we have seen the land, and found it very good; and you are doing nothing? Do not be lazy to go and possess the land."

When you enter it, you will come to a people who stand securely, and to a land of great breadth, for God has given it into your hands; it is a place where nothing is lacking of all that is on the earth.

So he set out from there, from Zorah and Estaol, six hundred armed men from the family of Dan.

And going up, they camped at Kiriath-jeharim, which is in Judah; therefore that place has been called Mahane-dan to this day, and it is behind Kiriath-jeharim.

Then from there they went to the hill country of Ephraim, and came to the house of Micah.

Then the five men who had gone to scout the land of Laish spoke up and said to their brothers, "Do you know that in these houses there is an Ephod and Teraphim, a carved image and a cast image? Now consider what you must do."

So they turned around and went to that place, and came to the house where the young Levite man was, namely, the house of Micah, and greeted him.

Now the six hundred men of the children of Dan, who were under arms, stopped at the entrance of the gate;

But the five men who had gone to spy out the land went up and entered the house, and took the carved image, the Ephod, the Teraphim, and the cast image, while the Priest stood at the entrance of the gate with the six hundred armed men.

So they entered the house of Micah and took the carved image, the Ephod, the Teraphim, and the cast image. And the priest said to them, "What are you doing?"

And they said to him, "Be quiet, and put your hand over your mouth, and come with us, and be our father and priest. Which is better for you, to be priest of the house of one man, or to be priest of a tribe and a clan in Israel?"

And the priest rejoiced in his heart, and having taken the ephod, the teraphim, and the carved image, he stood in the midst of the people.

After that they turned back and continued on their way, and put before them the little children, the livestock, and the baggage.

And when they were far from the house of Micah, those who [remained] in the houses near that of Micah were gathered together with a loud cry; and they reached the children of Dan.

And they shouted after them; but they, turning their faces, said to Mica: What is the matter with you, that you have shouted so loudly to gather people?

He replied, "You have taken away my gods that I made, you have taken the priest, and you have gone away. And what do I have left? How then can you ask me, 'What is the matter with you?'"

And the children of Dan said to him, "Do not raise your voice after us, lest these angry people rush upon you, and you lose your life, and all those of your family."

So Dan's children continued on their way, but Mica, seeing that they were stronger than him, turned his face away and went back to his house.

So, having taken the things that Micah had made, and the priest that he had, they came to Laish, to a people who were at rest and who were secure, and they put them to the edge of the sword, and having set fire to the city, they burned it down.

And there was no one to deliver her; for she was far from Sidon, and had no dealings with anyone, and she was situated in the valley that belonged to the [land of] Beth-rehab: then they built [there] a city, and lived there.

And they named that city Dan, after the name of their father Dan, who was born in Israel, instead of the city which was formerly called Laish.

And the children of Dan set up this carved image, and Jonathan son of Gershon, son of Manasseh, he and his children were priests for the tribe of Dan until the day they departed from the land.

So they set up there the carved image that Micah had made, all the time that the house of God was in Shiloh.

It also happened at that time, when there was no king in Israel, that there was a Levite, living near the hill country of Ephraim, who took a concubine wife from Bethlehem in Judah.

But his concubine played the harlot with him, and went away from him to her father's house in Bethlehem of Judah, and she was there for a few days, namely the space of four months.

Then her husband got up and went after her to speak to her heartily and to bring her back. He also had his servant with him and two donkeys; and she brought him into her father's house; and the young woman's father, seeing him, rejoiced at his arrival.

His stepfather, the young woman's father, therefore detained him [at great urging]; so that he stayed with him for three days; and they ate and drank, and lodged there.

And on the fourth day, having risen early in the morning, he set out to leave; but the father of the young woman said to his son-in-law: Strengthen your heart with a morsel of bread, and then you may go.

So they sat down, and ate and drank together; and the young woman's father said to the husband, "I beg you to stay here again tonight, and let your heart be glad."

And as the husband set out to leave, his father-in-law urged him so much that he turned back; and he spent the night there again.

And on the fifth day he got up early in the morning to leave, and the father of the young woman said, "Please, strengthen your heart"; and they lingered so long that the day was drawing to a close while the two of them were eating [together].

Then the husband set out to leave, he and his concubine, with his servant. And his father-in-law, the young woman's father, said to him, "Now the day is drawing to a close, it is getting late; please stay here the night. The day is over; stay here the night and be glad. Then in the morning you can get up and go on your way to your home."

But the husband did not want to spend the night there; but he got up and went and came as far as opposite Jebus, which is Jerusalem, with his two saddled donkeys and his concubine.

Now as they were near Jebus, and the day was very late, the servant said to his master, "Come on, let us turn aside and go to this city of the Jebusites, so that we may spend the night there."

And his master answered him, "We will not turn aside to any foreign city where there are no children of Israel; but we will pass over to Gibeah."

He also said to his servant: Go on, and we will reach one of these places, and we will spend the night at Gibeah, or at Ramah.

So they went on further and walked, and the sun set as they were near Gibeah, which belongs to Benjamin.

So they turned towards Gibeah to enter it and spend the night; and having entered, they remained in the city square, for there was no one to take them into their home to spend the night there.

And behold, in the evening an old man came from the fields of his labor, and this man was from the hill country of Ephraim, but he lived in Gibeah, whose inhabitants were the children of Jemini.

And raising his eyes he saw this passerby in the city square; and this old man said to him: Where are you going, and where are you coming from?

And he answered him, "We are going from Bethlehem of Judah to the hill country of Ephraim, where I am from, because I had gone as far as Bethlehem of Judah, but now I am going to the house of the Lord, and there is no one here to take me in."

Yet we have straw and fodder for our donkeys, and bread and wine for myself and for your servant, and for the boy who is with your servants; we need nothing.

And the old man said to him: Peace be with you, in any case I will take care of everything you need; [I only ask you] not to spend the night in the place.

So he brought him into his house, and he gave fodder to the donkeys; they washed their feet, ate and drank.

While they were feasting, behold, the people of the city, very corrupt men, surrounded the house, knocking at the door, and they spoke to the old man, master of the house, saying, Bring out this man who came into your house, so that we may know him.

But this man, [namely] the master of the house, came out to them and said, "No, my brothers, do not harm him, I beg you: since this man has entered my house, do not do such an outrageous thing."

Behold, I have a virgin daughter, and [this man] has his concubine; I will bring them out to you now, and you shall rape them, and do with them as you see fit; but do not commit this infamous act against this man.

But these people would not listen to him; therefore this man took his concubine and brought her out to them; and they had sexual relations with her and abused her all night until morning, then they sent her away as the dawn of day was breaking.

So this woman, as the day drew near, returned, and having fallen at the door of the man's house where her Lord was, she remained there until daybreak.

And his Lord got up early in the morning, and having opened the door, he went out to continue on his way; but behold, his concubine wife had fallen at the door of the house, and had her hands on the threshold.

And he said to her, "Get up, let us go"; but she did not answer. So he put her on a donkey and set out on the road and went to her place.

And having come to his house, he took a knife, and seizing his concubine, he divided her and her bones into twelve parts, and sent them to all the cantons of Israel.

And it came to pass that all who saw this said: Such a thing has not been done nor seen from the day the children of Israel came up out of the land of Egypt until this day. Consider this, inquire, and pronounce.

Then all the children of Israel went out, and all the people were assembled as though they were one man, from Dan to Beersheba, and to the land of Gilead, to the Lord at Mizpah.

And the cantons of all the people, all the tribes of Israel, were present at the assembly of the people of God, [numbering] four hundred thousand foot soldiers drawing their swords.

(Now the children of Benjamin heard that the children of Israel had gone up to Mizpah.) So the children of Israel said: Let someone tell us how this disaster happened.

And the Levite, husband of the slain woman, answered and said: Having arrived at Gibeah, which is of Benjamin, I and my concubine, to spend the night there;

The Lords of Guibha rose up against me, and surrounded the house at night against me, intending to kill me; and they so violated my concubine that she died.

Therefore, having taken my concubine, I tore her to pieces, and sent them throughout all the quarters of the inheritance of Israel; for they have committed a very great crime, and an infamous act in Israel.

All of you, children of Israel, deliberate here among yourselves and give your opinion.

And all the people arose, as though they were one man, and they said: None of us will go to his tent, nor will any of us retire to his house.

But now this is what we will do to Gibeah, proceeding against it by casting lots. We will take ten men from a hundred in all the Tribes of Israel, and a hundred thousand, and a thousand ten thousand, who will take provisions for the people, so that when they enter Gibeah of Benjamin, they will deal with it according to all the wickedness it has committed in Israel.

Thus all those of Israel were gathered together against that city, being united as if they were one man.

Then the Tribes of Israel sent men throughout the tribe of Benjamin to say to him, "What wicked deed has been committed among you?"

Now therefore, hand over to us those wicked men who are at Gibeah, so that we may put them to death and purge the evil from the midst of Israel. But the Benjamites would not listen to the voice of their brothers, the children of Israel.

But the Benjamites came out of their cities and assembled at Gibeah to go out into battle against the children of Israel.

And on that day a census was taken of the children of Benjamin who were in those cities, [and there were found] twenty-six thousand men, drawing the sword, not counting the inhabitants of Gibeah, who were also counted, who were seven hundred elite men.

Of all these people there were seven hundred elite men, whose right hand was tightly clasped, all of them pulling the stone with the sling with a hair's breadth, and they did not fail.

And the men of Israel were [all] counted, except those of Benjamin, and there were found four hundred thousand men who drew the sword, all of them fighting men.

So they departed and went up to the house of the Mighty One and inquired of God. The Israelites then asked, "Who among us will go up first to fight against the Benjaminites?" The Lord replied, "Judah will go up first."

Then the children of Israel got up early in the morning and camped near Gibeah.

And those of Israel went out in battle against Benjamin, and arrayed their army against them near Gibeah.

And the children of Benjamin went out from Gibeah, and on that day they put to the ground twenty-two thousand men of those of Israel.

However, the people of Israel regained courage, and again drew up in battle formation in the place where they had drawn up on the first day.

Because the children of Israel had gone up and wept before the Lord until evening, and had inquired of the Lord, saying, "Shall I go near again to fight against the children of Benjamin, my brother?" And the Lord had answered, "Go up against him."

The children of Israel approached the children of Benjamin for the second day.

Benjamin also came out of Gibeah against them on that second day, and they put to the ground another eighteen thousand men of the children of Israel, all of them drawing their swords.

Then all the children of Israel, and all the people, went up and came to the house of the Mighty God, and wept there, and stood there before the Lord, and fasted that day until evening, and offered burnt offerings and peace offerings before the Lord.

Then the children of Israel inquired of the Lord, (now the Ark of the covenant of God was there in those days).

And Phinehas son of Eleazar, son of Aaron, stood before the Lord in those days:) [So they inquired of the Lord] saying, "Shall I go out to battle again against the children of Benjamin, my brother, or shall I refrain?" And the Lord answered, "Go up, for tomorrow I will deliver them into your hands."

And Israel set an ambush around Gibeah.

And the children of Israel went up for the third day against the children of Benjamin, and they arrayed themselves against Gibeah, as at other times.

Then the children of Benjamin went out to meet the people, were drawn out of the city, and began to strike some of the people, about thirty men of Israel who were mortally wounded as at other times, in the roads, one of which goes up to the house of the [God] Strong; and another to Gibeah, among the fields.

And the children of Benjamin said: They are falling defeated before us, as the first time. But the children of Israel said: Let us flee, let us lure them out of the city, into the roads.

All those of Israel, therefore, rising from their place, lined up at Bahal-tamar; and the people of the ambush also came out from their place, [namely] from the meadow of Gibeah.

And ten thousand elite men from all Israel came against Gibeah, and the battle was fierce; and those of [Benjamin] did not perceive that the evil had befallen them. So the Lord defeated Benjamin before the Israelites; and the children of Israel put to the ground that day twenty-five thousand and one hundred men of Benjamin, all of them drawing the sword.

The children of Benjamin saw that they were defeated. Now those of Israel had given way to those of Benjamin; for they were confident in the ambush they had set near Gibeah.

And those who were lying in ambush immediately rushed upon Gibeah; thus those who were lying in ambush marched in procession, and struck down the whole city with the edge of the sword.

Now those from Israel had given a signal to those who were lying in ambush, to send up a great deal of smoke from the city.

Those of Israel had therefore turned their backs in the battle, and Benjamin had begun to strike and wound to death about thirty men of those of Israel; for they were saying: Be that as it may, they are certainly falling defeated before us, as in the first battle.

But when the smoke that had been raised began to rise from the city like a column of smoke, Benjamin looked behind him, and behold, the whole city was rising up in flames toward heaven.

Then the Israelites turned their faces, and the Benjaminites were terrified, for they saw that evil had befallen them.

And they turned their backs on the Israelites toward the desert road; but the army [of Israel] pressed on close. And as for those in the cities, they laid them on the ground, having confined them in their midst.

They surrounded those of Benjamin, and pursued them, and trampled them underfoot from Menuha to the opposite of Gibeah, towards the rising sun.

And there were eighteen thousand of Benjamin's men killed, all valiant men.

Then [those of Benjamin] turning their backs fled towards the desert to the rock of Rimmon, and [those of Israel] gathered five thousand men from it along the roads, and pursuing them closely as far as Gidom, they struck down two thousand men.

All those who fell [dead] on that day of Benjamin were twenty-five thousand men, drawing their swords, [and] all valiant men.

And there were six hundred men of those who had turned their backs, who escaped to the desert at the rock of Rimmon, and who remained at the rock of Rimmon four months.

And the Israelites returned to the children of Benjamin, and struck them down with the edge of the sword, both the men of each city and the animals, and everything that was found in them. They also burned all the cities that were found in them.

But those of Israel had sworn an oath at Mizpah, saying: None of us will give his daughter as a wife to the Benjamites.

Then the people came to the house of the Mighty God, and they remained there until evening in the presence of God; and they raised their voices and wept bitterly, And they said, "O Lord, God of Israel! Why has this happened in Israel, that a tribe of Israel has been cut off today?"

And the next day the people got up early in the morning, and built an altar there, and they offered burnt offerings and peace offerings.

Then the children of Israel said, "Who is there among all the Tribes of Israel who has not gone up to the assembly to the Lord?" For a great oath had been taken against any man who would not go up to the Lord at Mizpah, saying, "Such a man shall be put to death."

For the children of Israel were repenting of what had happened to Benjamin their brother, and were saying today a Tribe has been cut off from Israel.

How will we provide wives for those who remain, since we have sworn by the Lord that we will not give them any of our daughters as wives?

So they said, "Is there anyone from the Tribes of Israel who has not gone up to the Lord at Mizpah?" Now behold, not one of the men of Jabesh-Gilead had come to the camp, to the assembly.

For when they took a census of the people, behold, not one of the inhabitants of Jabesh-gilead was found.

Therefore the assembly sent twelve thousand of the most valiant men there, and commanded them, saying: Go, and strike down the inhabitants of Jabesh-Gilead with the edge of the sword, both the women and the little children.

So this is what you will do: You will exterminate, in the manner of the forbidden, every male, and every woman who has had company with a man.

And they found among the inhabitants of Jabesh-gilead four hundred virgin girls, who had not had the company of a man; and they brought them to the camp at Shiloh, which is in the land of Canaan.

Then the whole assembly sent to speak to the children of Benjamin who were at the rock of Rimmon, and to offer them peace.

At that time the Benjamites returned, and they were given as wives those who had been preserved alive from among the wives of Jabesh-Gilead; but there were not enough for them.

And the people repented of what had been done to Benjamin; for the Lord had broken through the Tribes of Israel.

And the elders of the assembly said, "How shall we provide wives for those who remain, since the women have been cut off from among the Benjamites?"

Then they said: Those who have survived shall possess what belonged to Benjamin, so that a Tribe of Israel shall not be wiped out.

However, we cannot give them wives from among our daughters; for the children of Israel have sworn, saying: Cursed be he who gives a wife to those of Benjamin.

And they said: Behold, the appointed feast of the Lord is at Shiloh, which is toward the north side of Bethel, and at the rising of the road which goes up from Bethel to Shechem, and south of Lebonah.

And they commanded the children of Benjamin, saying, "Go, and set men in ambush at the vineyards."

And when you see the daughters of Shiloh come out to dance with flutes, then you will come out of the vineyards, and each of you will take his wife from among the daughters of Shiloh, and you will go to the land of Benjamin.

And when their fathers or their brothers come to us to plead their case, we will say to them: Have pity on them for our sake, since we have not taken a wife for [each of them] in this war, and you will be guilty if you do not give them one at a time like this.

The children of Benjamin did so, and took women according to their number, from among those who were dancing, whom they abducted; then they went away and returned to their inheritance, and rebuilt cities, and lived there.

So at that time each of the children of Israel went from there to his Tribe, and to his family, and they each withdrew from there to his inheritance.

In those days there was no king in Israel, but everyone did what was right in their own eyes.

Now it came to pass in the days when the Judges were judging, that there was a famine in the land; and a man from Bethlehem of Judah went away, to dwell in some place in the land of Moab, he and his wife, and his two sons.

And the name of this man was Eli-melech, and the name of his wife Nahomi, and the names of his two sons Mahlon and Chilion, Ephrathites, from Bethlehem of Judah; and they came to the land of Moab, and dwelt there.

Now Eli-melech, husband of Nahomi, died and she remained with her two sons; They took Moabite wives for themselves, one named Horpah and the other Ruth; and they remained there about ten years.

Then her two sons, Mahlon and Kiljon, died; thus this woman remained there, deprived of her two sons and her husband.

So she arose with her daughters-in-law to return from the land of Moab; for she heard in the land of Moab that the Lord had visited his people, giving them bread.

So she left the place where she had been staying, and her two daughters-in-law with her, and they set out on the way to return to the land of Judah.

And Nahomi said to his two daughters-in-law, "Go, each of you return to your mother's house; the Lord will deal well with you, as you have dealt well with those who died, and with me."

The Lord will grant each of you rest in her husband's house; and she kissed them; but they lifted up their voices and wept.

And they said to him: But [rather] we will return with you to your people.

And Nahomi answered, "Go back, my daughters; why should you come with me? Do I still have sons in my womb, that you should take them as husbands?"

Go back, my daughters, go away; for I am too old to be remarried; and even if I were to say that I had some hope of it, even if I were to be with a husband this very night, and even if I were to bear sons;

Would you wait for them until they were grown? Would you delay remarrying for their sake? No, my daughters; indeed, I am in greater bitterness than you, because the hand of the Lord has been displayed against me.

Then they raised their voices and wept again; and Horpah kissed his mother-in-law; but Ruth stayed with her.

And [Nahomi] said to him, "Look, your sister-in-law has gone back to her people and her gods; go back after your sister-in-law."

But Ruth answered, "Do not beg me to leave you, to go away from you; for where you go I will go, and where you stay I will stay; your people shall be my people, and your God my God."

Where you die, I will die, and I will be buried there. May the Lord grant me this, and add to it, that only death shall separate me from you.

[Nahomi], therefore, seeing that she was determined to go with her, stopped talking to her about it.

And they both walked on until they came to Bethlehem; and when they entered Bethlehem, the whole town began to talk about him; [and the women] said, "Isn't this Nahomi?"

And she answered them: Do not call me Nahomi, call me Mara. For the Almighty has filled me with bitterness.

I went out full of possessions, and the Lord has brought me back empty. Why then would you call me Naomi, since the Lord has struck me down, and the Almighty has afflicted me?

So Naomi returned, and with her Ruth the Moabite, her daughter-in-law, who had come from the land of Moab; and they entered Bethlehem at the beginning of the barley harvest.

Now Nahomi's husband had there a relative, a strong and valiant man, from the family of Eli-melech, whose name was Boaz.

And Ruth the Moabite said to Nahomi, "Please let me go to the fields and glean some ears of grain after the one before whom I have found favor." And she replied, "Go, my daughter."

So she went away and entered a field, and gleaned after the reapers; and it happened that she came upon a field which belonged to Boaz, who was of the family of Elimelech.

Now behold, Boaz came from Bethlehem, and he said to the reapers, The Lord be with you; and they answered him, The Lord bless you.

Then Boaz said to his servant who was in charge of the harvesters: Whose young girl is this?

And the servant who was in charge of the reapers answered, and said: She is a young Moabite woman, who came with Naomi from the land of Moab.

And she said to us, "Please let me glean and gather a few handfuls after the reapers." So she went in and stayed from morning until now. That was the short time she stayed in the house.

Then Boaz said to Ruth, "Listen, my daughter, do not go to glean in another field, and do not even leave this place; and do not move from here near my young girls." Look at the field where they will harvest, and go after them; have I not forbidden my boys to touch you? And if you are thirsty, go to the boats, and drink from what the boys have drawn.

Then she fell facedown to the ground and prostrated herself before him, saying, "How have I found favor in your sight, that you should know me, since I am a foreigner?"

Boaz answered, and said to her: All that you have done to your mother-in-law since your husband died, has been accurately reported to me; [and] how you left your father, and your mother, and the land of your birth, and came to a people you had not known before.

The Lord rewards your work, and may your wages be full from the Lord, the God of Israel, under whose wings you have come to take refuge.

And she said, "My lord, I find favor in your sight, for you have comforted me, and have spoken according to the heart of your servant; and yet I am not equal to one of your servants."

Boaz said to her again at mealtime: Come here and eat some bread, and dip your piece in the vinegar; and she sat down beside the reapers, and he gave her roasted grain, and she ate it, and was satisfied, and snatched up the rest.

Then she got up to glean; and Boaz commanded his boys, saying: Let her glean even between the sheaves, and do not shame her.

And you will even leave her, as if by mistake, a few handfuls; you will leave them to her, and she will gather them up, and you will not censure her for it.

So she gleaned in the field until evening, and she threshed what she had gathered, and there was about an ephah of barley.

And she took it with her and came to the city; and her mother-in-law saw what she had gleaned. She also took what she had gathered from what she had left over after she had eaten her fill, and gave it to her.

Then her mother-in-law said to her, "Where did you glean today, and where did you do this? Blessed is he who recognized you." And she told her mother-in-law at whose house she had done this, and said, "The man at whose house I did this today is named Boaz."

And Nahomi said to his daughter-in-law, "Blessed be he by the Lord, for he has shown kindness to the living as he did to the dead." Nahomi said to her, "This man is a close relative of ours, and he is one of those who have the right of redemption."

And Ruth the Moabite said: And he also said to me: Do not leave the presence of the boys who belong to me until they have finished all the harvest that belongs to me.

And Nahomi said to Ruth his daughter-in-law, "My daughter, it is good that you go out with his young women, and that you are not found in another field."

So she did not leave Boaz's young women to glean until the barley harvest and the wheat harvest were finished, then she stayed with her mother-in-law.

And Nahomi her mother-in-law said to her, "My daughter, shall I not seek rest for you, so that you may be happy?"

Now then, Boaz, with whose young women you have been, is he not related to us?

Behold, he winnows tonight the barley that has been trodden on the threshing floor.

Therefore wash yourself, and anoint yourself, and put on your [best] clothes, and go down to the threshing floor; [but] do not make yourself known to him until he has finished eating and drinking.

Then when he lies down, know the place where he will lie down; and go in, and uncover his feet, and lie down, and he will tell you what you must do.

And she replied: I will do everything you tell me.

So she went down to the threshing floor and did everything her stepmother had ordered her to do.

And Boaz ate and drank, and having become more cheerful, he came and lay down at the end of a pile of sheaves; and she came very gently, and uncovered her feet, and lay down.

And at midnight the man was terrified, and withdrew [his feet]; for behold, a woman [was] lying at his feet.

And he said to her, "Who are you?" And she answered, "I am Ruth, your servant; spread the corner of your robe over your servant, for you have the right of redemption by lineage."

And he said: My daughter, may the Lord bless you; This last act of kindness that you demonstrate is greater than the first, in not having gone after the young men, poor or rich.

But now, my daughter, do not be afraid, I will do to you all that you tell me, for all the gate of my people know that you are a virtuous woman.

Now it is very true that I have the right of withdrawal by lineage; but there is also another, closer than me, who has the right of withdrawal by lineage.

Spend the night here, and when morning comes, if [this man] wants to exercise his right of pre-emption against you, good, let him do so; but if he does not wish to exercise his right of pre-emption against you, I will exercise it against you; the Lord lives; lie here until morning.

So she remained lying at his feet until morning, then she got up before anyone could recognize one another; for he said: Let no one know that any woman entered the threshing floor.

Then he said, "Give me the cloth that is on you, and hold it [in your hand]"; and she held it, and he measured out six [measures] of barley and put them on her; then he returned to the city.

And she came to her mother-in-law; who said to her, "Who are you, my daughter?" and she told her everything that had happened between her and this man.

And she said: He gave me these six measures of barley; for he told me: You shall not return empty-handed to your mother-in-law.

And [Nahomi] said, "My daughter, stay [here] until you know how the matter will end; for that man will not rest until he has completed the matter today."

So Boaz went up to the gate and sat down. And behold, the one who had the right of redemption by lineage, [and] of whom Boaz had spoken, was passing by; and Boaz [to him] said, "You, so-and-so, turn aside and sit here." And he turned aside and sat down.

And [Boaz] took ten men from among the elders of the city, and said to them, "Sit here"; and they sat down.

Then he said to the one who had the right of redemption by lineage: Nahomi, who has returned from the land of Moab, has sold the portion of the field that belonged to our brother Eli-melech.

And I thought it necessary to let you know, and to say to you: Acquire it in the presence of those who are sitting here, and in the presence of the elders of my people; if you wish to redeem it by right of redemption, redeem it; but if you do not wish to redeem it, tell me, so that I may know: for there is no one else who can redeem it by right of redemption, and I am after you. He answered: I will redeem it by right of redemption.

And Boaz said: On the day that you acquire the field from the hand of Nahomi, you shall also acquire it from Ruth the Moabite, the wife of the deceased, to raise up the name of the deceased in his inheritance.

And the one who had the right of redemption said: I cannot redeem it, lest I squander my inheritance; you take for yourself the right of redemption that I have there; for I cannot redeem it.

Now it was an ancient custom in Israel that in the case of the right of withdrawal of lineage and of subrogation, to confirm the thing the man would take off his shoe, and give it to his neighbor, and this was a testimony in Israel [that one was giving up one's right].

So when the one who had the right of redemption by lineage had said to Boaz: Acquire it for yourself; he took off his sandal.

And Boaz said to the Elders and all the people: You are witnesses today that I have acquired from the hand of Nahomi all that belonged to Eli-melech, and all that was of Kiljon, and of Mahlon.

And that I also acquired Ruth the Moabite, the wife of Mahlon, as my wife, to raise up the name of the deceased in his inheritance, so that the name of the deceased would not be cut off from among his brothers, and from the city of his dwelling; you are witnesses of this today.

And all the people who were at the gate, and the elders, said, "We are witnesses. May the Lord grant that the woman who comes into your house be like Rachel and Leah, who together built up the house of Israel; and may you prosper in Ephrath, and make your name renowned in Bethlehem;

And may your house be like the house of Perez, whom Tamar bore to Judah, through the offspring that the Lord will give you by this young woman!

So Boaz took Ruth, and she became his wife; and he went in to her; and the Lord was gracious to her, and she bore a son.

And the women said to Nahomi, "Blessed be the Lord, who has not let you lack today a man who had the right of redemption from the lineage; and may his name be claimed in Israel."

And may it be to revive your spirit, and to sustain your old age; for your daughter-in-law, who loves you, has borne this child, and she is worth more to you than seven sons.

Then Nahomi took the child and placed him in her bosom, and she nursed him.

And the neighbor women gave him a name, saying, "A son is born to Naomi"; and they called him Obed. He was the father of Jesse, the father of David.

Now these are the generations of Pharez. Pharez fathered Hetsron;

Hezron begot Ram; and Ram begat Hamminadab;

And Hamminadab begat Nahasson; and Nahasson begat Salmon;

And Salmon fathered Boaz; and Boaz fathered Obed;

And Obed begat Jesse, and Jesse begat David.

There was a man from Ramathajim Tsophim, from the mountain of Ephraim, whose name was Elkanah, son of Jeroham, son of Elihu, son of Tohu, son of Zuph the Ephraimite;

He had two wives, one named Anne, and the other Pennina. Pennina had children, but Anne had none.

Now this man went up every year from his city to worship the Lord of hosts, and to sacrifice to him at Shiloh; and there were the two sons of Heli, Hophni and Phinehas, priests of the Lord.

And on the day that Elkanah sacrificed, he gave portions to Pennina his wife, and to all the sons and daughters he had by her.

But he gave Hannah a respectable portion; for he loved Hannah; but the Lord had made her barren.

And [Pennina] who envied her, stung her, even very bitterly, for she made a great noise that the Lord had made her barren.

[Elkanah] did this every year. But when Hannah went up to the house of the Lord, [Pennina] grieved her in the same way, and Hannah wept and would not eat.

And Elkanah her husband said to her, "Hannah, why are you weeping? Why are you not eating? Why is your heart sad? Am I not worth more to you than ten sons?"

And Hannah got up, after eating and drinking at Shiloh, and Eli the Priest was sitting on a seat beside one of the posts of the Tabernacle of the Lord.

Therefore, with her heart full of bitterness, she prayed to the Lord, weeping bitterly.

And she made a vow, saying, O Lord of hosts, if you will indeed look on the affliction of your servant, and remember me, and not forget your servant, but give to your servant a male child, then I will give him to the Lord all the days of his life; and no razor shall touch his head.

And it came to pass, as she continued to pray before the Lord, that Eli took heed to her mouth.

Now Anne was speaking in her heart; she only moved her lips, and her voice was not heard; therefore Heli thought she was drunk.

And Eli said to him, "How long will you be drunk? Go and put your wine down."

But Anne answered, and said, "I am not drunk, my lord; I am a woman afflicted in spirit; I have drunk neither wine nor ale, but I have poured out my soul before the Lord."

Do not consider your servant as worthless; for it is out of the greatness of my pain and affliction that I have spoken until now.

Then Eli answered, and said: Go in peace; and may the God of Israel grant you the request that you have made to him.

And she said, "May your servant find favor in your sight." Then the woman went on her way and ate, and her face was no longer as it had been.

After this they rose early in the morning and worshiped before the Lord; then they returned to their home in Ramah. And Elkanah knew Hannah his wife, and the Lord remembered her.

So it came to pass some time later that Hannah conceived, and gave birth to a son; and she named him Samuel, because, [she said], I asked the Lord for him.

Then Elkanah her husband went up with all her household to offer the Lord the solemn sacrifice and his vow.

But Hannah did not go up; for she said to her husband, "I will not go up until the child is weaned; then I will bring him, so that he may be presented before the Lord, and remain there forever."

And Elkanah her husband said to her, "Do what seems best to you; stay until you have weaned him; only may the Lord fulfill his word." So the woman stayed and nursed her son until she had weaned him.

And as soon as she had weaned him, she took him up with her, [and having taken] three calves, and an ephah of flour, and a barrel of wine, she brought him to the house of the Lord at Shiloh; and the child was very small.

Then they slaughtered a calf, and they brought the child to Eli.

And she said: Alas, my lord! As surely as your soul lives, my lord, I am that woman who stood in your presence to pray to the Lord.

I prayed for this child, and the Lord granted my request.

That is why I have given him to the Lord; he shall be given to the Lord all the days of his life. And he worshiped there before the Lord.

Then Hannah prayed, and said: My heart rejoiced in the Lord; my horn was lifted up by the Lord; my mouth was opened wide against my enemies, because I rejoiced in your salvation.

There is no one holy like the Lord; for there is no one besides you, and there is no Rock like our God.

Do not utter so many proud, haughty words; let not harsh words come out of your mouth; for the Lord is the [God] Mighty of knowledge; it is to him that matters are weighed.

The bow of the strong has been broken; but those who were only faltering have been girded with strength.

Those who were used to being well-fed hired themselves out for bread; but the hungry ceased [to be hungry], and even the barren woman bore seven; and she who had many sons became faint.

The Lord is the one who kills and gives life; who brings down to the grave and brings up again.

The Lord makes poor and makes rich; he humbles and he exalts.

He raises the poor from the dust, and lifts the needy from the dung heap, to seat them with princes, and to give them as an inheritance a throne of glory; for the foundations of the earth are the Lord's, and he has set the habitable earth upon them.

He will guard the feet of his beloved, and the wicked will be silent in the darkness; for man will not prevail by his own strength.

Those who contend against the Lord will be crushed; he will thunder from heaven upon each of them; the Lord will judge the ends of the earth; and he will give strength to his King, and exalt the horn of his anointed.

Then Elkanah went to Ramah to his house, and the boy ministered to the Lord in the presence of Eli the priest.

But the sons of Eli were wicked men; they did not know the Lord.

For the usual practice of those priests toward the people was that, whenever someone offered a sacrifice, the priest's boy would come while the meat was being boiled, carrying a three-pronged fork in his hand.

With which he would strike the cauldron, or the pot, or the kettle, or the pot; [and] the priest would take for himself whatever the fork took away; they did this to all the Israelites who came there to Shiloh.

Even before the fat was smoked, the priest's boy would come and say to the man who was sacrificing, "Give me some meat to roast for the priest; for he will not take boiled meat from you, but raw meat."

If the man replied to him: "Do not fail to smoke the fat right now; and after that take whatever your soul desires," then he would say to him: "In any case, you will give some now; and if you do not give me any, I will take some by force."

And the sin of these young men was very great before the Lord; for the people despised the offering of the Lord.

Now Samuel served before the Lord as a young boy, wearing a linen ephod.

His mother used to make him a little dog, which she brought him every year when she went up with her husband to offer the solemn sacrifice.

And Eli blessed Elkanah and his wife, and said, "May the Lord grant you children by this woman, in return for the loan that was made to the Lord." And they returned home.

And the Lord visited Hannah, who conceived and bore three sons and two daughters; and the boy Samuel grew up in the presence of the Lord.

Now Eli was very old, and he told all Israel what his sons were doing, and that they were sleeping with the women who gathered in groups at the gate of the Tabernacle of Meeting.

And he said to them, "Why are you doing these things? For I hear of your wicked deeds; these things [come to me] from all the people."

Do not do that, my sons; for what I hear about you is not good; you are causing the Lord's people to sin.

If a man sins against another man, the Judge will judge; but if anyone sins against the Lord, who will pray for him? But they did not obey their father's voice, because the Lord wanted to put them to death.

However, the boy Samuel grew and was pleasing to the Lord and to men.

Then a man of God came to Eli and said to him, "This is what the Lord says: 'Did I not clearly reveal myself to your father's house when they were in Egypt, in the house of Pharaoh?'"

I also chose him out of all the Tribes of Israel to be my Priest, to offer on my altar, [and] burn incense, [and] carry the Ephod before me; and I gave to the house of your father all the offerings of the children of Israel made by fire.

Why have you rebelled against my sacrifice and my offering, which I commanded to be made in the Tabernacle? And why have you honored your sons more than me, fattening yourselves on the best of all the offerings of my people Israel?

Therefore the Lord, the God of Israel, says: I had certainly said that your house and the house of your father would walk before me forever; but now the Lord says: It shall not be said that I do this; for I will honor those who honor me, but those who despise me shall be treated with the utmost contempt.

The days are coming when I will cut off your arm and the arm of your father's house, so that there will be no man in your house who will grow old.

And you will see an adversary [established in] the Tabernacle, at the time when [God] sends all kinds of good things to Israel; and there will never be in your house any man who grows old.

And the one [of your descendants] whom I have not cut off from my altar will cause your eyes to fail, and your soul to grieve; and all the children of your house will die in the prime of their lives.

And this will be the sign to you, [knowing] what will happen to your two sons, Hophni and Phinehas, is that they will both die on the same day.

And I will establish for myself a steadfast priest; he will do according to what is in my heart and in my soul; and I will build him a steadfast house, and he will walk forever before my Anointed One.

And it will come to pass that whoever remains of your house will come and bow down before him to have a piece of silver, [and] some bread, and will say: Give me a place, I pray you, in one of the offices of the Priesthood, that I may eat a piece of bread.

Now the boy Samuel was ministering to the Lord in the presence of Eli; and the word of the Lord was rare in those days, and there were no visions appearing.

And it came to pass one day, when Eli was lying down in his place, (but his eyes were beginning to grow dim, and he could not see.)

And before the lamps of God were extinguished, Samuel was also lying down in the Tabernacle of the Lord, in which was the Ark of God;

The Lord called Samuel, and he answered, "Here I am."

And he ran to Eli, and said to him, Here I am, for you called me; but [Eli] said, I did not call you, go back, [and] lie down; and he went back, and lay down.

And the Lord called Samuel again; and Samuel arose and went to Eli and said to him, "Here I am, for you called me." And [Eli] said, "My son, I did not call you; go back and lie down."

Now Samuel did not yet know the Lord, and the word of the Lord had not yet been revealed to him.

And the Lord called Samuel a third time; and [Samuel] got up and went to Eli and said, "Here I am, for you have called me." [And] Eli knew that the Lord was calling the young boy.

Then Eli said to Samuel, "Go and lie down; and if they call you, say, 'Lord, speak, for your servant is listening.'" So Samuel went and lay down in his place.

So the Lord came and stood there, and called as at other times: Samuel, Samuel; and Samuel said: Speak, for your servant is listening.

Then the Lord said to Samuel, "Behold, I am going to do something in Israel, which everyone who hears of it will hear in his own ears."

On that day I will carry out against Eli everything I have said concerning his house; beginning and ending.

For I warned him that I was going to punish his house forever, because of the iniquity which he well knew, which is that his sons made themselves infamous, and he did not restrain them.

That is why I have sworn against the house of Eli; if ever he makes atonement for the iniquity of the house of Eli, by sacrifice or by offering.
And Samuel lay down until morning, and then he opened the doors of the house of the Lord. Now Samuel was afraid to tell Eli about this vision.
But Eli called Samuel and said to him, "Samuel my son," and he answered, "Here I am."

And [Eli] said: What is the word that was spoken to you? Please do not hide it from me. May God reward you, and so add to it, if you hide from me a single word of all that was spoken to you.

So Samuel told him everything that had been said to him, and hid nothing from him.

And [Eli] replied, "It is the Lord; let him do what seems good to him."

Now Samuel grew up, and the Lord was with him, and did not let one of his words fall to the ground.

And all Israel, from Dan to Beersheba, knew that it was certain that Samuel would be a prophet of the Lord.

And the Lord continued to manifest himself in Shiloh; for the Lord manifested himself to Samuel in Shiloh by the word of the Lord.

Now what Samuel had said came to pass in all Israel; for Israel went out in battle to meet the Philistines, and encamped near Ebenezer, and the Philistines encamped at Aphek.

And the Philistines drew up their battle lines to meet Israel, and when they were in the thick of it, Israel was defeated before the Philistines, who killed about four thousand of them in the battle by the countryside.

And when the people returned to the camp, the elders of Israel said, "Why has the Lord defeated us today before the Philistines? Let us bring the Ark of the covenant of the Lord from Shiloh, and let it come among us and deliver us from the hand of our enemies."

So the people sent to Shiloh, and from there they brought the Ark of the covenant of the Lord of hosts, who dwells between the Cherubim; and there were the two sons of Eli, Hophni and Phinehas, with the Ark of the covenant of God.

And it came to pass that as the Ark of the Lord entered the camp, all Israel began to shout so loudly for joy that the earth resounded.

And the Philistines, hearing the sound of these shouts of joy, said, "What does this noise mean, and what is the meaning of this loud shouting in the camp of these Hebrews?" And they knew that the Ark of the Lord had come to the camp.

And the Philistines were afraid, because people were saying, "God has come to the camp"; and they said, "Woe to us! For this has not been in days of old."

Woe to us! Who will deliver us from the hand of these glorious gods? These are the gods who struck the Egyptians in the desert, besides all the other plagues.

Philistines, be strong, and be men, lest you be enslaved to the Hebrews, as they were enslaved to you; therefore be men, and fight.

So the Philistines fought, and the Israelites were defeated, and each fled to his tent; and there was a very great defeat, [for] thirty thousand foot soldiers of Israel remained there.

And the Ark of God was captured, and the two sons of Eli, Hophni and Phinehas, died.

Now a man of Benjamin fled from the battle, and arrived at Shiloh that same day, with his clothes torn, and with dust on his head.

And as he arrived, behold, Eli was sitting on a seat by the roadside, watching intently; for his heart trembled because of the Ark of God. This man came, therefore, bringing the news into the city, and the whole city began to shout.

And Eli, hearing the sound of this cry, said: What does this great tumult mean? And this man hurried to Eli, and told him everything.

Now Eli was ninety-eight years old; and his eyes were completely dim, and he could not see.

So this man said to Eli, "I am the one who comes from the battle, for I have escaped from the battle today." And [Eli] said, "What happened, my son?"

And the one who brought the news answered, and said: Israel has fled before the Philistines, and indeed there has been a great defeat of the people; and your two sons, Hophni and Phinehas, are dead, and the Ark of God has been captured.

And it came to pass that as soon as he had mentioned the Ark of God, [Heli] fell backward from his seat beside the gate, and broke his neck, and died; for this man was old and heavy. Now he had judged Israel forty years.

And his daughter-in-law, the wife of Phinehas, who was pregnant and about to give birth, having heard the news that the Ark of God had been captured, and that her father-in-law and her husband were dead, went into labor and gave birth; for her pains had come upon her.

And as she was dying, those who were attending her said to her, "Do not be afraid; for you have given birth to a son." But she did not answer, and paid no attention to them.

But she named the child I-Cabod, saying: The glory of the Lord has departed from Israel; because the Ark of the Lord was captured, and because of her father-in-law and her husband.

She said, "The glory has been taken away from Israel, for the Ark of God has been captured."

But the Philistines took the Ark of God and brought it from Ebenezer to Ashdod.

So the Philistines took the Ark of God and brought it to the house of Dagon and set it down beside Dagon.

And the next day, when the Ashdodites got up early, behold, Dagon had fallen face down on the ground before the Ark of the Lord; but they took Dagon and put him back in his place.

They got up again early the next morning, and behold, Dagon had fallen face down on the ground before the Ark of the Lord; his head and the two palms of his severed hands were on the threshold, and only the torso of Dagon remained beside [the Ark]. That is why the priests of Dagon, and all who enter his house, do not walk on the threshold of Dagon in Ashdod, to this day.

Then the hand of the Lord fell heavily on the Ashdodites, and made them utterly desolate, and struck them within the foundations in Ashdod, and in all its territory.

Therefore, when those in Ashdod saw that this was happening, they said, "The ark of the God of Israel will not remain with us, for his hand is heavy upon us and upon Dagon our God."

And they sent word and gathered to them all the Philistine governors, and said, "What shall we do with the Ark of the God of Israel?" And they answered, "Let the Ark of the God of Israel be taken to Gath." So they took the Ark of the God of Israel.

But it came to pass that after it had been carried away, the hand of the Lord was upon the city [of Gath] with great terror; and he struck the people of the city from the least to the greatest, so that their foundation was covered.

So they sent the Ark of God to Hekron. Now when the Ark of God entered Hekron, the people of Hekron cried out, saying, "They have diverted the Ark of the God of Israel to us, to kill us and our people!"

Therefore they sent word and gathered together all the Philistine governors, saying, "Let the ark of the God of Israel go and return to its place, lest it cause us and our people to die; for there was a deadly terror throughout the city, and the hand of God was very heavy upon it."

And the men who did not die were struck down from within, so that the cry of the city rose up to heaven.

Therefore, the Ark of the Lord having been in the land of the Philistines for seven months,

The Philistines summoned the priests and the diviners and said to them, "What shall we do with the Ark of the Lord? Tell us how we shall send it back to its place.” And they answered: If you send back the Ark of the God of Israel, do not send it back empty, and do not fail to pay him the sin offering; then you will be healed, or you will know why his hand has not been withdrawn from you.

And they said, “What is the offering that we shall pay him for the sin?” And they answered, “According to the number of the Philistine governments you shall give five foundation stones of gold, and five golden mice; for the same plague has been upon all of you, and upon your governments.”

You shall make images of your foundations, and images of the mice that plague the land, and you shall give glory to the God of Israel. Perhaps he will withdraw his hand from you, and from your gods, and from your land.

And why should you harden your hearts, as Egypt and Pharaoh hardened their hearts? After he had performed marvelous deeds among them, did they not let them go, and they went away?

Now then, take what you need to make a brand new cart, and [take] two young cows that are nursing their calves, on which no yoke has yet been put, and hitch the two young cows to the cart, and bring their little ones back to the house.

Then take the Ark of the Lord and put it on the cart, and put the gold articles that you paid for the sin offering into a small chest beside the Ark, then send it away, and it will go.

And you will take heed to it; if the Ark goes up to Beth-shemes, by the way of its country, [it is the Lord who] has done all this great evil to us; if it [does not go there], then we shall know that his hand has not touched us, [but] that this has happened to us by chance.

And these people did so; they took two young cows that were nursing, they harnessed them to the cart, and they shut their young in the stable.

And they placed on the cart the Ark of the Lord, and the small chest with the golden mice, and the figures of their foundations.

So the young cows went straight on the road to Beth-shemes, keeping to the same path as they walked and lowed; and they did not turn aside to the right or to the left; and the Philistine governors went after them to the border of Beth-shemes.

Now those from Beth-semes were harvesting grain in the valley; and lifting up their eyes, they saw the Ark, and were very glad when they saw it.

And the cart came to the field of Joshua the Beth-semite, and stopped there. Now there was a large stone there, and they split the wood of the cart, and offered the young cows as a burnt offering to the Lord.

For the Levites brought down the Ark of the Lord, and the small chest that was beside it, in which were the works of gold, and placed them on this large stone. On that same day the people of Beth-shemes offered burnt offerings and sacrificed to the Lord.

And the five Philistine governors, having seen [this], returned the same day to Hekron.

And this [here is the number] of the golden foundations that the Philistines gave to the Lord as a sin offering: one for Ashdod; one for Gaza; one for Ashkelon; one for Gath; one for Hekron;

And the golden mice, [according to] the number of all the cities of the Philistines, [namely] of the five Governments, from both the closed cities and the unwalled cities; and [they brought them] to the great stone on which the Ark of the Lord was placed; and which to this day is in the field of Joshua the Beth-semite.

Now [the Lord] struck down some of the people of Beth-shemes, because they had looked into the Ark of the Lord; he struck down, I say, fifty thousand and seventy men of the people; and the people mourned, because the Lord had struck them with a great plague.

Then those from Beth-shemes said, “Who can stand before the Lord, this holy God? And to whom will he ascend [when he departs] from us?”

And they sent messengers to the inhabitants of Kiriath-jeharim, saying, "The Philistines have brought back the Ark of the Lord; come down and bring it up to you."

So those from Kiriath-jeharim came and brought up the Ark of the Lord, and put it in the house of Abinadab on the hillside; and they consecrated Eleazar his son to guard the Ark of the Lord.

Now it came to pass that from the day that the Ark of the Lord was set down in Kiriath-jeharim, a long time passed, namely twenty years, and all the house of Israel groaned after the Lord.

And Samuel spoke to all the house of Israel, saying, "If you return with all your heart to the Lord, then put away the gods of the foreigners and Hastaroth from among you, and commit your heart to the Lord and serve him only, and he will deliver you from the hand of the Philistines."

Then the children of Israel removed the Bahalites and Hastaroth, and they served the Lord alone.

And Samuel said, "Assemble all Israel at Mizpah, and I will pray to the Lord for you."

So they assembled at Mizpah, and drew water from it, which they poured out before the Lord, and they fasted that day, and said, "We have sinned against the Lord." And Samuel judged the children of Israel at Mizpah.

Now when the Philistines heard that the children of Israel were assembled at Mizpah, the governors of the Philistines came up against Israel; and when the children of Israel heard of it, they were afraid of the Philistines.

And the children of Israel said to Samuel, "Do not cease to cry out to the Lord our God for us, that he may deliver us from the hand of the Philistines."

Then Samuel took a suckling lamb and offered it entirely to the Lord as a burnt offering; and Samuel cried out to the Lord for Israel, and the Lord answered him.

So it came to pass, as Samuel was offering the burnt offering, that the Philistines drew near to fight against Israel, but the Lord caused a great thunder to roar upon the Philistines that day, and routed them, and they were defeated before Israel.

And the Israelites went out from Mizpah and pursued the Philistines and struck them down as far as below Beth-car.

Then Samuel took a stone and placed it between Mizpah and the rock; and he called the name of that place Ebenezer, and said, The Lord has helped us to this place.

And the Philistines were subdued, and they did not come again to the land of Israel from that time on; and the hand of the Lord was upon the Philistines all the days of Samuel.

And the cities that the Philistines had taken from Israel returned to Israel, from Hekron to Gath, with their borders. [Samuel therefore] delivered Israel from the hand of the Philistines, and there was peace between Israel and the Amorites.

And Samuel judged Israel all the days of his life.

And every year he went around to Bethel, and to Gilgal, and to Mizpah, and he judged Israel in all those places.

Then he returned to Ramah, because his house was there, and there he judged Israel; and there he built an altar to the Lord.

And it came to pass that when Samuel grew old, he appointed his sons as judges over Israel.

His firstborn son was named Joel; and the second was named Abijah; [and] they judged in Beersheba.

But his sons did not follow his example, for they turned away after dishonest gain; they accepted bribes, and they turned away from justice.

Therefore all the elders of Israel gathered together and came to Samuel at Ramah;

And they said to him, "Behold, you are now old, and your sons do not follow your ways; now appoint over us a king to judge us as all the nations have."

And Samuel was grieved because they had said to him, "Appoint a king over us to judge us," and Samuel petitioned the Lord.

And the Lord said to Samuel, Obey the voice of the people in all that they tell you: for it is not you whom they have rejected, but me whom they have rejected, so that I should not reign over them.

According to all the deeds they have done from the day I brought them up out of Egypt until this day, and they have forsaken me and served other gods; so they are doing to you.

Now therefore obey their voice; but do not fail to protest to them, and to declare to them how the King who will reign over them will treat them.

Thus Samuel spoke all the words of the Lord to the people who had asked him for a king.

He told them, "This is how the King who will reign over you will treat you. He will take your sons and put them on his chariots, among his horsemen, and they will run before his chariot."

[He will take them] also to appoint them as Governors over thousands, and Governors over fifties, to do his plowing, to do his harvest, and to make his instruments of war, and [all] the equipment of his wagons.

He will also take your daughters to train them as perfumers, cooks, and bakers.

He will also take your fields, your vineyards, and the land where your good olive trees are, and he will give them to his servants.

He will tithe what you have sown and what you have harvested, and he will give it to his eunuchs and servants.

He will take your male and female servants, the best of your young men, and your donkeys, and employ them in his work.

He will tithe your flocks, and you will be his slaves.

On that day you will cry out because of the King you have chosen for yourselves, but the Lord will not answer you on that day.

But the people would not agree to Samuel's words, and they said, "No; but there will be a King over us."

We will be like all the other nations; and our King will judge us, he will go out before us, and he will lead our wars.

Samuel then heard all the words of the people, and reported them to the Lord.

And the Lord said to Samuel, "Obey their voice and appoint a king for them." And Samuel said to the Israelites, "Go back, each to his own town."

Now there was a man of Benjamin, whose name was Kish, mighty and valiant; son of Abiel, son of Zehor, son of Becorad, son of Aphiah, son of a Benjamite;

He had a son named Saul, a young man of choice and handsome, so that there was none of the children of Israel more handsome than he, [and] from his shoulders up he was taller than any of the people.

Now the donkeys of Kish, Saul's father, had strayed; and Kish said to Saul his son, "Now take with you one of the servants and get up, and go and look for the donkeys."

So he went through the hill country of Ephraim and through the land of Salisa, but they did not find them. Then they went through the land of Zehalim, but they were not there; then they went through the land of Jemini, but they did not find them.

When they came to the land of Zuph, Saul said to his servant who was with him, "Come, let us return, lest my father cease [being concerned] about the donkeys, and he be concerned about us."

And the servant said to him, "Look, I pray you, there is in this city a man of God, who is a very venerable person; everything he says comes true infallibly; let us go there now, perhaps he will teach us the way we should take."

And Saul said to his servant, "But if we go, what shall we bring to the man of God, for our provisions have failed, and we have no present to bring to the man of God? What do we have with us?"

And the servant answered Saul again, and said, "Behold, I have in my hand a quarter of a shekel of silver, and I will give it to the man of God, and he shall teach us our way."

[Now] it was formerly [the custom] in Israel when they went to consult God, that they said to one another: Come, let us go to the Seer; for he who is [called] today a Prophet, was formerly called the Seer.

And Saul said to his servant, "You are right; come, let us go." And they went to the city where the man of God was.

And as they went up the hill of the city, they found some young girls coming out to draw water, and they said to them, "Is not the Seer here?"

And they answered them, and said, "He is here, there he is before you; hurry now, for he has come to the city today, because there is a sacrifice for the people today in the high place."

As you enter the city, you will find him before he goes up to the high place to eat; for the people will not eat until he comes, because he must bless the sacrifice; and after that those who are invited will eat; so go up now; for you will find him today.

So they went up to the city; and as they entered the city, behold, Samuel, who was going out to go up to the high place, met them.

Now the Lord had made it known and had said to Samuel, one day before Saul came: Tomorrow at this time I will send you a man from the land of Benjamin, and you shall anoint him to be leader over my people Israel, and he shall deliver my people from the hand of the Philistines; for I have looked upon my people, because their cry has reached me.

And as soon as Samuel saw Saul, the Lord said to him, "This is the man I told you about; he is the one who will rule over my people."

And Saul approached Samuel inside the gate, and [said to him]: Please tell me where the house of the Seer is.

And Samuel answered Saul, and said, I am the Seer; come up before me to the high place, and you shall eat with me today; and I will let you go in the morning, and I will tell you all that is on your heart.

As for the donkeys you lost three days ago, do not worry about them, for they have been found. And toward whom does all Israel desire? Is it not toward you and all your father's house?

And Saul answered and said, "Am I not a Benjamite, from the least of the tribes of Israel, and is not my family the smallest of all the families of the tribe of Benjamin? Why then have you spoken to me in this way?"

Samuel then took Saul and his servant, and brought them into the hall, and placed them at the highest end, among the guests, who were about thirty men.

And Samuel said to the cook, "Bring the portion I gave you, [and] of which I told you to keep it to yourself."

Now the cook had lifted up a shoulder, and what was above it, and set it before Saul.

And Samuel said, "Here is what has been reserved; set it before you and eat, for it was reserved for you specifically for this hour, when I said to summon the people."

So Saul ate with Samuel that day.

Then they went down from the high place into the city, and [Samuel] spoke with Saul on the roof.

Then, getting up early in the morning, Samuel called to Saul on the roof and said, "Get up, and I will let you go." So Saul got up, and the two of them went outside, he and Samuel.

And as they were going down to the lower part of the city, Samuel said to Saul, "Tell the servant to go on ahead of us." He went on, but you stand still now, so that I may tell you the word of God.

Now Samuel had taken a flask of oil, which he poured on Saul's head, then he kissed him, and said to him, "Has not the Lord anointed you over his inheritance to be its ruler?"

When you leave me today, you will find two men near Rachel's tomb, on the border of Benjamin at Zelzah, who will tell you: The donkeys that you went to look for have been found; and behold, your father no longer cares about the donkeys, and is distressed about you, saying: What shall I do about my son?

And when you have left that place and have passed on, and have come to the oak grove of Tabor, you will be met by three men going up to God, to the house of the Mighty One; one of them is carrying three young goats, another three loaves of bread, and the other a barrel of wine.

And they will ask you how you are, and they will give you two loaves of bread, which you will receive from their hands.

After that you will come to the hill of God, where the Philistine garrison is; and it will happen that as soon as you enter the city, you will meet a company of Prophets coming down from the high place, having before them a bagpipe, a drum, a flute, and a violin, and they are prophesying.

Then the Spirit of the Lord will come upon you, and you will prophesy with them, and you will be changed into another man.

And when these signs have come to you, do whatever is presented to you; for God is with you.

Then you shall go down before me to Gilgal, and behold, I am going down to you to offer burnt offerings, [and] sacrifice peace offerings; you shall wait there for me seven days, until I come to you, and I shall tell you what you must do.

So it came to pass that as soon as [Saul] had turned his back to leave Samuel, God changed his heart into another, and all these signs happened to him that same day. For when they came to the hillside, behold, a company of prophets came to meet him; and the Spirit of God came upon him, and he prophesied in their midst.

And it came to pass that when all those who had known him before saw that he was with the Prophets, [and] that he was prophesying, the people said to one another, "What has happened to the son of Kish? Is Saul also among the Prophets?"

And someone answered, and said, "And who is their father?" Therefore it became a proverb: "Is Saul also among the Prophets?"

Now [Saul] having ceased to prophesy, came to the high place.

And Saul's uncle said to Saul and his son, "Where have you been?" And he answered, "[We went] to look for the donkeys, but seeing that they were not found, we came to Samuel.

And his uncle said to him: Please tell me what Samuel told you.

And Saul said to his uncle: He assured us that the donkeys were found; but he did not tell him the speech that Samuel had given him concerning the Kingship.

Now Samuel assembled the people before the Lord at Mizpah.

And he said to the children of Israel: Thus says the Lord, the God of Israel: I brought Israel up out of Egypt, and I delivered you from the hand of the Egyptians, and from the hand of all the kingdoms that oppressed you.

But today you have rejected your God, who delivered you from all your troubles and afflictions, and you have said, "No; appoint us a king." Now therefore, present yourselves before the Lord, by your tribes and by your clans.

So Samuel brought all the Tribes of Israel near; and the Tribe of Benjamin was captured.

Afterwards he brought the Tribe of Benjamin near according to their families; and the family of Matri was captured; then Saul son of Kish was captured, whom they sought, but he could not be found.

And they inquired of the Lord again, [saying]: Has not the man come here yet? And the Lord said: Behold, he is hidden among the baggage.

So they ran and pulled him out of there, and he stood in the midst of the people, and he was taller than all the people from shoulders to top.

And Samuel said to all the people, "Do you not see that there is not one among all the people like the one whom the Lord has chosen?" And the people shouted for joy and said, "Long live the King!"

Then Samuel declared to the people the rights of the kingdom, and wrote them in a book, which he placed before the Lord. Then Samuel sent the people away, each to his own house.

Saul also went to his house in Gebah, and the fighting men whose hearts God had touched went with him.

But there were wicked men who said, "How can this man deliver us?" and they despised him and brought him no gift; but he pretended not to hear.

Now Nahs the Hammonite went up and encamped against Jabez the Gileadite. And all the men of Jabez said to Nahs, "Make a treaty with us, and we will serve you."

But Nahas Hammonite answered them: I will make [a covenant] with you on this condition, that I put out the right eye of every one of you, and that I will make this a reproach on all Israel.

And the elders of Jabesh said to him, "Give us seven days of truce, and we will send messengers throughout all the quarters of Israel, and if there is no one to deliver us, we will surrender to you."

So the messengers came to Gibeah-Saul and spoke these words before the people; and all the people raised their voices and wept.

And behold, Saul was returning from the fields behind his oxen; and he said, "What is the matter with these people that they weep like this?" And they recited to him what the people of Jabez had said.

But the Spirit of God came upon Saul when he heard these words, and he was filled with anger.

He took a pair of oxen and cut them into pieces, and sent messengers throughout all the districts of Israel, saying, "This is to be done to the oxen of all who do not go out and follow Saul and Samuel." The fear of the Lord fell upon the people, and they went out as though they were one man.

And [Saul] counted them at Bezek; and there were three hundred thousand men of the children of Israel, and thirty thousand of the people of Judah.

Then they told the messengers who had come, "Tell the people of Jabesh-gilead this: 'You will be delivered tomorrow when the sun is at its strongest.'" So the messengers returned and reported this to the people of Jabesh, who rejoiced.

And those from Jabez said [to the Hammonites]: Tomorrow we will come to you, and you will do to us whatever seems good to you.

And the very next day Saul divided the people into three bands, and they entered the camp in the early morning watch, and they struck down the Hammonites until the heat of the day; and those who remained were so scattered here and there that not two of them remained together.

And the people said to Samuel, "Who is it that says, 'Shall Saul reign over us?' Give us these men, and we will kill them."

Then Saul said, "No one shall be killed this day, because the Lord has delivered Israel this day."

And Samuel said to the people, "Come, let us go to Gilgal, and there we will renew the kingdom."

And all the people went to Gilgal; and there they established Saul as king before the Lord at Gilgal, and there they offered peace offerings before the Lord; and there Saul and all the people of Israel rejoiced greatly.

Then Samuel said to all Israel, "Behold, I have obeyed your word in all that you have said to me, and I have set a king over you."

And now, behold, the King is walking before you, for I am old, and all white with age, and behold, my sons also are with you; and for me I have walked before you, from my youth until this day.

Here I am, answer me before the Lord and before his anointed. Whose ox have I taken? Whose donkey have I taken? Whom have I wronged? Whom have I trampled? From whose hand have I taken rewards to take advantage of him, and I will make restitution to you?

And they answered: You have not oppressed us, nor have you trampled us down, nor have you taken anything from anyone.

He also said to them, "The Lord is witness against you, and his anointed one is witness this day, that you have found nothing in my possession." And they answered, "He is witness."

Then Samuel said to the people, "The Lord is the one who made Moses and Aaron, and who brought your fathers up out of the land of Egypt."

Now therefore present yourselves [here], and I will bring charges against you before the Lord for all the benefits the Lord has done to you and to your fathers.

After Jacob entered Egypt, your ancestors cried out to the Lord, and the Lord sent Moses and Aaron, who brought your ancestors out of Egypt and settled them in this place.

But they forgot the Lord their God, and he delivered them into the hands of Sisera, commander of the army of Hazor, and into the hands of the Philistines, and into the hands of the King of Moab, who made war against them.

Afterwards they cried out to the Lord, saying, "We have sinned, for we have forsaken the Lord and served the Bahalites and Hastaroth. Now therefore, deliver us from the hand of our enemies, and we will serve you."

And the Lord sent Jerubbahal, and Bedan, and Jephthah, and Samuel, and delivered you from the hand of all your enemies around you, and you dwelt in complete safety.

But when you saw that Nahas, king of the children of Hammon, was coming against you, you said to me, "No, but a king will reign over us; although the Lord your God is your king."

So now this is the King whom you have chosen, whom you have asked for, and behold, the Lord has established him as King over you.

If you fear the Lord, and serve him, and obey his voice, and are not rebellious to the commandment of the Lord, then both you and your King who reigns over you will be under the guidance of the Lord your God.

But if you do not obey the voice of the Lord, and if you rebel against the commandment of the Lord, the hand of the Lord will also be against you, as it was against your fathers.

Now stand still, and see this great thing that the Lord is going to do before your eyes.

Is not today the wheat harvest? I will cry out to the Lord, and he will make it thunder and rain; so that you may know and see how great is the evil you have done in the presence of the Lord, in asking for a king for yourselves.

Then Samuel cried out to the Lord, and the Lord caused it to thunder and rain that day; and all the people greatly feared the Lord and Samuel.

And all the people said to Samuel, "Pray to the Lord your God for your servants, that we may not die; for we have added this evil to all our other sins, by asking for a king for ourselves."

Then Samuel said to the people, "Do not be afraid; you have done all this evil, yet do not turn away from the Lord, but serve the Lord with all your heart."

Do not turn away from them, for that would be turning away after worthless things, which would bring you no profit, and which would not deliver you; since they are worthless things.

For the Lord, for the sake of his great name, will not abandon his people; because the Lord has chosen to make you his people.

And as for me, God forbid that I should sin against the Lord and cease to pray for you; but I will teach you the good and right way.

Only fear the Lord, and serve him in truth, with all your heart; for you have seen the magnificent things that he has done for you.

But if you persist in doing wrong, you and your King will be consumed.

Saul reigned for one year, and he reigned two years over Israel.

And Saul chose three thousand men of Israel, of whom two thousand were with him at Michmas and on the mountain of Bethel, and a thousand were with Jonathan at Gebah of Benjamin; and he sent the rest of the people away, each to his tent.

And Jonathan struck the Philistine garrison that was on the hill, and this became known to the Philistines; and Saul had it proclaimed with the sound of the trumpet throughout all the land, saying, Let the Hebrews listen.

So all Israel heard that Saul had struck down the Philistine garrison, and that Israel was now abhorrent to the Philistines. And the people gathered around Saul at Gilgal.

The Philistines also gathered to make war against Israel, having thirty thousand chariots and six thousand horsemen; and the people were like the sand that is on the seashore, so great was their number; so they went up and camped at Michmas, towards the East of Beth-aven.

But the Israelites were greatly distressed; for the people were very discouraged, therefore the people hid in caves, in thickets, in rocks, in strongholds, and in pits.

And the Hebrews crossed the Jordan to the land of Gad and Gilead. Now while Saul was still at Gilgal, all the people, terrified, rallied around him.

And [Saul] waited seven days according to Samuel's command; but Samuel did not come to Gilgal, and the people were turning away from Saul.

And Saul said, "Bring me a burnt offering and peace offerings," and he offered the burnt offering.

Now it came to pass that as soon as he had finished offering the burnt offering, behold, Samuel arrived, and Saul went out to meet him to greet him.

And Samuel said to him, "What have you done?" Saul answered, "Because I saw that the people were turning away from me, and that you did not come at the appointed time, and that the Philistines were gathered at Michmas;

I said, "The Philistines will now come down against me at Gilgal," and I did not plead with the Lord; and after restraining myself for a while, I finally offered the burnt offering.

Then Samuel said to Saul, "You have acted foolishly in not keeping the commandment that the Lord your God commanded you; for now the Lord would have established your kingdom over Israel forever."

But now your kingdom will not be established; the Lord has sought for himself a man after his own heart, and the Lord has commanded him to be the leader of his people, because you have not kept what the Lord commanded you.

Then Samuel arose and went up from Gilgal to Gebah of Benjamin. And Saul counted the people who were with him, who were about six hundred men.

Now Saul and his son Jonathan, and the people who were with them, were staying at Gebah of Benjamin, and the Philistines were encamped at Michmas.

And he brought out three bands from the Philistine camp to do damage; one of these bands took the road to Hophra, towards the land of Suhal.

The other band took the road to Beth-oron; and the third took the road to the border which looks towards the valley of Zebohim, on the side of the desert.

For in all the land of Israel there was no blacksmith to be found; for the Philistines had said: [It must be prevented] that the Hebrews should not make swords or halberds.

That is why all Israel went down to the Philistines, each to sharpen his plowshare, his coulter, his axe, and his hoe;

When their hoes, their coulters, their three-pronged forks, and their axes had spoiled points, even to mend a goad.

Therefore it came to pass that on the day of the battle there was not found a sword or halberd in the hand of any of the people who were with Saul and Jonathan, and there was only Saul and Jonathan in whom one was found.

And the Philistine guard post came out as Micmas passed by.

Now it came to pass that Jonathan, son of Saul, said one day to the boy who carried his armor, "Come, let us go over to the Philistine guardhouse which is beyond this place"; but he did not tell his father.

And Saul stood at the end of the hill under a pomegranate tree at Migron, and the people who were with him were about six hundred men.

And Ahijah, son of Ahitub, brother of Ichabod, son of Phinehas, son of Heli, the Lord's priest in Shiloh, was wearing the ephod; and the people did not know that Jonathan had gone away.

Now between the passes through which Jonathan sought to pass to the Philistine guardhouse, there was a rock on this side, and another rock on the other side; one was called Botsets, and the other Sene.

One of these rocks was located on the north side opposite Micmas; and the other, on the south side opposite Gebah.

And Jonathan said to the boy who carried his armor, "Come, let us go over to the guardhouse of these uncircumcised men; perhaps the Lord will act for us: for the Lord cannot be hindered from delivering, whether by many or by few."

And his armor-bearer said to him, "Do whatever you have in mind; go; behold, I will be with you wherever you wish."

And Jonathan said to him, "Here we are, going over to these people, and we will show ourselves to them."

If they tell us, "Wait until we come to you," then we will stay where we are and will not go up to them.

But if they say, "Come up to us," then we will come up, for the Lord has delivered them into our hands. Let this be a sign for us.

So they both showed themselves to the Philistine guardhouse, and the Philistines said, "Look, the Hebrews are coming out of the holes where they had been hiding."

And those in the guardhouse said to Jonathan and his armor-bearer, "Come up to us, and we will show you something." And Jonathan said to his armor-bearer, "Come up after me, for the Lord has delivered them into the hand of Israel."

And Jonathan went up [climbing] with his hands and feet, with his armor-bearer; then those of the guardhouse fell before Jonathan, and his armor-bearer killed them after him.

And this first defeat which Jonathan and his armor-bearer suffered was of about twenty men, [who were killed in the space] of about half an acre of land.

And there was great terror in the camp, in the countryside, and among all the people; the guardhouse also, and those who had gone to plunder, were terrified, and the country was in turmoil, so that it was like a terror sent from God.

And Saul's watchmen who were at Gibeah of Benjamin looked on; and behold, the multitude was in such great disorder that they trampled each other as they went away.

Then Saul said to the people who were with him, "Now take a muster and see who has gone away from us." So they took a muster, and behold, Jonathan was not there, nor was his armor-bearer.

And Saul said to Ahijah, "Bring the Ark of God near" (for the Ark of God was with the Israelites that day).

But it came to pass that while Saul was speaking to the Priest, the tumult which was in the camp of the Philistines increased more and more; and Saul said to the Priest, Withdraw your hand.

And Saul and all the people who were with him were assembled with a loud cry; and they came to the battle, and behold, the Philistines had their swords drawn against one another, [and there was] a very great fear.

Now the Philistines had Hebrews with them, as they had before, who had come up with them to their camp from the surrounding country, and who immediately joined the Israelites who were with Saul and Jonathan.

And all the Israelites who had hidden in the mountains of Ephraim, having heard that the Philistines were fleeing, pursued them also to fight them.

And on that day the Lord delivered Israel, and they went forth fighting as far as Beth-aven.

But the Israelites were very tired that day; and Saul made the people take this oath, saying: Cursed be the man who eats anything until evening, so that I may take revenge on my enemies; so that all the people tasted nothing.

And all the people of the country came to a forest, where there was honey dripping onto the top of a field.

So the people entered the forest, and behold, honey was flowing out; and there was not one who put his hand to his mouth; for the people were afraid of the oath.

Now Jonathan had not listened to his father when he had made the people swear, and he stretched out the end of the staff that was in his hand, and dipped it in a honeycomb; and he put his hand to his mouth, and his eyes were enlightened.

Then someone from the people spoke up and said to him, "Your father expressly made the people swear an oath, saying, 'Cursed be the man who eats anything today,' even though the people were very tired."

And Jonathan said: My father has troubled the people of the land. See, I pray you, how my eyes have brightened, from having tasted a little of this honey; How much more so if the people had today eaten abundantly of the spoils of their enemies, which they found; for would not the defeat of the Philistines have been greater?

So on that day they struck the Philistines from Michmas to Ajalon, and the people were very weary.

Then he rushed upon the plunder, and they took sheep, oxen, and calves, and slaughtered them on the ground; and the people ate them with the blood.

And they reported it to Saul, saying, "Behold, the people are sinning against the Lord by eating with the blood." And he said, "You have sinned; today roll a large stone over me."

And Saul said, "Go out among the people and tell each of them to bring me their ox and their sheep. You shall slaughter them here and eat them, and you shall not sin against the Lord by eating with the blood." So each of the people brought their ox in hand that night, and they slaughtered them there.

And Saul built an altar to the Lord; this was the first altar that he built to the Lord.

Then Saul said, "Let us go down and pursue the Philistines by night, and plunder them until morning, leaving not a single one alive." They said, "Do whatever seems good to you." But the priest said, "Let us come here to God."

Then Saul inquired of God, [saying]: Shall I go down to pursue the Philistines? Will you deliver them into the hands of Israel? But he gave him no answer that day.

And Saul said, "All you tribes of the people, come near, and know and see by whom this sin has occurred today."

For as surely as the Lord lives, who redeems Israel, even if this had been done by my son Jonathan, he would certainly die. And none of the people answered him a word.

Then he said to all Israel, "Stand on one side, and Jonathan my son and I will stand on the other side." The people answered Saul, "Do what seems best to you."

And Saul said to the Lord, the God of Israel, "Reveal the one who is innocent." And Jonathan and Saul were captured, but the people escaped.

And Saul said, "Cast [lots] between me and Jonathan my son." And Jonathan was seized.

Then Saul said to Jonathan, "Tell me what you have done." And Jonathan told him, "It is true that I tasted a little honey with the tip of my staff that was in my hand; here I am, I shall die."

And Saul said: May God do so to me, and add this to it, if you certainly do not die, Jonathan.

But the people said to Saul, "Should Jonathan, who has accomplished this great deliverance in Israel, die? Never! As the Lord lives, even a hair of his head may fall to the ground, for he has worked with God today." So the people rescued Jonathan, and he did not die. Then Saul returned from pursuing the Philistines, and the Philistines went back to their place.

Saul therefore took possession of the Kingdom of Israel, and made war on all sides against his enemies, against Moab, and against the children of Hammon, and against Edom, and against the Kings of Zobah, and against the Philistines; wherever he turned, he caused trouble.

He also assembled an army, and struck down Hamalech, and delivered Israel from the hand of those who plundered it.

Now the sons of Saul were Jonathan, Ishi, and Malkisuah; and as for the names of his two daughters, the name of the elder was Merab, and the name of the younger, Michal.

And the name of Saul's wife was Ahinoham, daughter of Ahimahaz; and the name of the commander of his army was Abner, son of Ner, Saul's uncle.

And Kish, father of Saul, and Ner, father of Abner, were sons of Abiel.

And there was a great war against the Philistines all the days of Saul; and as soon as Saul saw some strong man, and some valiant man, he took him to his side.

Samuel said to Saul, "The Lord has sent me to anoint you king over my people Israel; now therefore listen to the words of the Lord."

Thus says the Lord of hosts: I have remembered what Hamalech did to Israel, [and] how he opposed him on the way, when he came up out of Egypt.

Now go and strike Hamalech, and destroy in the manner of the forbidden all that he has, and do not spare him; but kill both men and women; both the great and the suckling, both oxen and the small cattle, both camels and donkeys.

Saul therefore assembled the people with a public cry, and took a census of them at Telaim, which was two hundred thousand foot soldiers, and ten thousand men from Judah.

And Saul came as far as the city of Hamalech, and set ambushes in the valley.

And Saul said to the Kenites, "Go away, leave the land of the Hamalekites, lest I surround you with them; for you showed kindness to all the children of Israel when they came up out of Egypt." So the Kenites left the land of the Hamalekites.

And Saul struck down the Hamaleites from Havilah to Shur, which is opposite Egypt.

And he took Agag, King of Hamalech, alive; but he put all the people to the edge of the sword in the manner of the curse.

So Saul and the people spared Agag, and the best sheep, the [best] oxen, the fat cattle, the lambs, and everything that was good; and they did not want to destroy them in the manner of the forbidden; they only destroyed in the manner of the forbidden everything that was of no value, and contemptible.

Then the word of the Lord came to Samuel, saying:

I regret that I made Saul king, for he has turned away from me and has not carried out my words. And Samuel was very grieved, and cried out to the Lord all that night.

Then Samuel got up early in the morning to go out to meet Saul. And it was reported to Samuel, saying, Saul came to Carmel, and behold, he had a place prepared for himself there, but he turned back, and passed beyond, he went down to Gilgal.

When Samuel came to Saul, Saul said to him, "You are blessed by the Lord; I have carried out the word of the Lord."

And Samuel said, "What is this bleating of sheep in my ears, and this lowing of oxen that I hear?"

And Saul answered, They brought them from the Hamalekites; for the people spared the best sheep and the [best] oxen, to sacrifice to the Lord your God; and we destroyed the rest in the manner of the ban.

And Samuel said to Saul, "Stop, and I will tell you what the Lord said to me last night." And he answered him, "Speak?"

Samuel then said, "Is it not true that when you were little in your own eyes, you were made Chief of the Tribes of Israel, and the Lord anointed you King over Israel?"

But the Lord had sent you on this expedition, and had said to you: Go, and destroy these sinners, the Hamaleites, in the manner of the curse, and make war against them, until they are consumed.

And why did you not obey the voice of the Lord, but you rushed upon the plunder and did what was displeasing to the Lord?

And Saul answered Samuel, "Yet I have obeyed the voice of the Lord, and have gone in the way in which the Lord sent me, and have brought Agag king of the Hamalekites, and have destroyed the Hamalekites in the manner of the banished."

But the people took sheep and oxen from the plunder, [as] the firstfruits of the forbidden, to sacrifice to the Lord your God at Gilgal.

Then Samuel said, "Does the Lord delight in burnt offerings and sacrifices, in obeying his voice? Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice, and to heed is better than the fat of sheep;

For rebellion is like the sin of divination, and transgression is an idol and a teraphim. Because you have rejected the word of the Lord, he has also rejected you, so that you are no longer king.

And Saul answered Samuel, "I have sinned because I have transgressed the commandment of the Lord and your words; for I feared the people, and I obeyed their voice."

But now, I beg you, forgive me my sin, and return with me, and I will worship the Lord.

And Samuel said to Saul, "I will not return with you; because you have rejected the word of the Lord, and the Lord has rejected you from being king over Israel."

And as Samuel turned to leave, [Saul] took hold of the edge of his cloak, and it tore.

Then Samuel said to him, "Today the Lord has torn the kingdom of Israel from you and given it to your neighbor, who is better than you."

And indeed; the strength of Israel will not lie, it will not repent; for he is not a man, that he should repent.

And Saul answered, "I have sinned; [but] honor me now, I pray you, in the presence of the elders of my people, and in the presence of Israel, and return with me, and I will worship the Lord your God."

So Samuel returned and followed Saul; and Saul worshiped the Lord.

Then Samuel said, "Bring me Agag, king of Hamalech." And Agag came to him, acting graciously; for Agag said, "Surely the bitterness of death is past."

But Samuel said, "As your sword has bereaved women [of their children], so your mother will be bereaved of children among women." And Samuel hacked Agag to pieces before the Lord at Gilgal.

Then he went to Ramah; and Saul went up to his house at Gibbath-Saul.

And Samuel did not go to see Saul again until the day of his death; although Samuel had mourned for Saul, because the Lord had relented from making Saul king over Israel.

And the Lord said to Samuel, "How long will you mourn for Saul, since I have rejected him from being king over Israel? Fill your horn with oil and come; I will send you to Jesse of Bethlehem, for I have appointed one of his sons to be king."

And Samuel said, "How can I go? For Saul, when he hears of it, will kill me." And the Lord answered, "Take with you a young cow from the herd, and say, 'I have come to sacrifice to the Lord.'"

And you shall invite Jesse to the sacrifice, [and] there I shall tell you what you shall do, and you shall anoint me the one I tell you.

So Samuel did as the Lord had told him, and came to Bethlehem, and the elders of the city ran to meet him in fear, and said, "Have you come only for our benefit?"

And he answered, "I have come only for your good; I have come to sacrifice to the Lord. Consecrate yourselves and come with me to the sacrifice." He also consecrated Jesse and his sons and invited them to the sacrifice.

And it came to pass that as they entered, having seen Eliab, he said, Surely the Lord's anointed is before him.

But the Lord said to Samuel, "Do not look at his appearance or at his height, for I have rejected him; because [the Lord does not look] at what man looks at; for man looks at the outward appearance, but the Lord looks at the heart."

Then Jesse called Abinadab and brought him before Samuel, who said, "The Lord has not chosen this one either."

And Jesse brought Sammah over, and [Samuel] said: The Lord has not chosen this one either.

So Jesse presented his seven sons before Samuel; and Samuel said to Jesse, "The Lord has not chosen these."

Then Samuel said to Jesse, "Are these all your children?" And he said, "There is still the youngest; but behold, he is tending the sheep." Then Samuel said to Jesse, "Send for him, for we will not sit down to eat until he comes here."

So he sent word and brought him in. Now he was ruddy, well-looking, and handsome. And the Lord said [to Samuel], "Get up and anoint him, for this is the one [I have chosen]."

Then Samuel took the horn of oil and anointed him in the presence of his brothers; and from that day the Spirit of the Lord came powerfully upon David. And Samuel arose and went to Ramah.

And the Spirit of the Lord departed from Saul; and the evil spirit [sent] by the Lord troubled him.

And Saul's servants said to him, "Now the evil spirit [sent] from God is troubling you."

May [the King] our Lord tell his servants who are before you to seek a man who knows how to play the violin; and when the evil spirit [sent] from God is upon you, he will play with his hand, and you will be relieved.

Saul then said to his servants, "Please find me a man who knows how to play the instruments well, and bring him to me."

And one of his servants answered, and said, Behold, I have seen a son of Jesse of Bethlehem who knows how to play instruments, and who is strong, valiant, and a warrior, who speaks well, a handsome man, and the Lord is with him.

Then Saul sent messengers to Jesse, saying, "Send me your son David, who is with the sheep."

And Jesse took a donkey [laden] with bread, and a barrel of wine, and a young goat, and sent them by David his son, to Saul.

And David came to Saul, and stood before him; and [Saul] loved him greatly, and he served as his armor-bearer.

And Saul sent word to Jesse: I beg you that David remain in my service; for he has found favor in my sight.

So it happened that when the evil spirit [sent] from God was upon Saul, David would take the violin and play it with his hand; and Saul was relieved and felt well, because the evil spirit would leave him.

Now the Philistines assembled their armies for war, and they assembled at Socoh, which is in Judah, and encamped between Socoh and Hazekah, on the border of Dammim. Saul and the Israelites also gathered together and camped in the Valley of the Oak, and prepared for battle to go out against the Philistines.

Now the Philistines were on a mountain on this side, and the Israelites were on another mountain on the other side; so the valley was between the two.

And there came out of the Philistine camp a man who stood between the two armies, and whose name was Goliath, [of the city] of Gath, six cubits and a handbreadth high.

And he had a bronze helmet on his head, and was armed with a scale breastplate; and his breastplate weighed five thousand shekels of bronze.

He also had bronze greaves on his legs, and a bronze shield between his shoulders. The shaft of his halberd was like a weaver's loom, and the iron of this [halberd] weighed six hundred shekels of iron; and the one who carried his shield walked before him.

So he stood up and called out to the assembled troops of Israel, saying to them, "Why should you come out to draw up yourselves in battle formation? Am I not a Philistine, and are you not servants of Saul? Choose one of you and let him come down to me."

If he is stronger in fighting with me, and kills me, we will be your servants; but if I have the advantage over him, and kill him, you will be our servants, and you will be enslaved to us.

And the Philistine said, "Today I have disgraced the assembled troops of Israel, [by saying to them], 'Give me a man, and we will fight together.'"

[But] Saul and all the Israelites, when they heard the words of the Philistine, were astonished and greatly afraid.

Now there was David, son of an Ephrathite man from Bethlehem of Judah, named Jesse, who had eight sons; he was old, and he was considered among the noblemen in the days of Saul.

And the three oldest sons of Jesse had gone away and followed Saul into this war. The names of his three sons who had gone to war were Eliab, the firstborn; Abinadab, the second; and Shammah, the third.

And David was the youngest, and the three oldest followed Saul.

And David went back and forth from Saul to tend his father's sheep in Bethlehem.

And the Philistine came approaching morning and evening, and stood there for forty days.

And Jesse said to David his son, "Now take for your brothers an ephah of this roasted wheat, and these ten loaves, and carry them quickly to the camp for your brothers."

You will also take these ten cheeses of milk to the captain of their thousand, and you will visit your brothers [to find out] if they are well, and you will bring me marks of them.

Now Saul, and they, and all those of Israel were in the valley of the oak, fighting against the Philistines.

David therefore got up early in the morning, and left the sheep in the care of the shepherd, then having taken his charge, went away, as his father Jesse had commanded him, and he arrived at the place where the camp was; and the army had come out where it was arrayed in battle, and there was a great shout because of the battle.

For the Israelites and the Philistines had lined up army against army.

Then David unloaded his baggage, leaving it in the hands of the one who was guarding the baggage, and ran to the place where the pitched battle was, and having arrived there, he asked his brothers if they were well.

And as he was speaking with them, behold, a man came up who stood between the two armies, whose name was Goliath, a Philistine from the city of Gath, [coming out] of the army of the Philistines, and uttered the same words that he had uttered before, and David heard them.

And all the Israelites, seeing this man, fled from him in great fear.

And everyone in Israel said, "Have you not seen this man who has come up? He has come up to disgrace Israel; and if anyone is found to strike him, the King will reward him abundantly, and give him his daughter, and will exempt his father's house [from all burdens] in Israel."

Then David spoke to the people who were there with him, saying, "What good will be done for the man who strikes down this Philistine and removes the disgrace from Israel? For who is this uncircumcised Philistine that he should thus dishonor the pitched battles of the living God?"

And the people repeated these same words to him; and said to him, "This is the good that will be done to the man who struck him."

And when Eliab, his elder brother, heard that he was speaking to these people, his anger burned against David, and he said to him, "Why have you come down here? And with whom have you left those few sheep in the wilderness? I know your pride and the wickedness of your heart, for you have come down to see the battle."

And David replied, "What have I done now? Is there nothing to it?"

Then he turned away from that one to another, and said the same words to him; and the people answered him in the same way as the first time.

And the words that David had spoken were heard and reported to Saul, and he summoned him.

And David said to Saul, "Let no one's heart fail because of this man; your servant will go and fight against this Philistine."

But Saul said to David, "You cannot go out against this Philistine to fight against him; for you are only a young boy, and he has been a warrior from his youth."

And David answered Saul, "Your servant was tending his father's sheep, when a lion and a bear came and carried off a sheep from the flock."

But I went out after them, I struck them, and I snatched [the sheep] from their mouths; and as they rose up against me, I seized them by the jaw, I struck them, and I killed them.

Your servant has killed both a lion and a bear; and this uncircumcised Philistine shall be like one of them; for he has dishonored the arrayed troops of the living God.

David said again, "The Lord who delivered me from the paw of the lion and from the paw of the bear will deliver me from the hand of this Philistine." Then Saul said to David, "Go, and the Lord be with you."

And Saul armed David with his armor, and put his bronze helmet on his head, and had him armed with a breastplate.

Then David fastened Saul's sword onto his armor and began to walk, for he had never tried it before. David said to Saul, "I cannot walk with these weapons, for I have never tried them." And David took them off.

But he took his staff in his hand, and chose five smooth stones from the stream, and put them in his shepherd's bag which he had, and in his pocket, and he had his sling in his hand; and he approached the Philistine.

The Philistine also came, and advanced, and approached David, and the man who carried his shield [walked] before him.

And the Philistine looked, and saw David, and despised him; for he was only a young boy, fair-haired, and handsome.

And the Philistine said to David, "Am I a dog, that you come against me with sticks?"

And the Philistine cursed David by his gods.

The Philistine also said to David, "Come to me, and I will give your flesh to the birds of the air and to the beasts of the field."

And David said to the Philistine, "You come against me with sword, halberd, and shield; but I come against you in the name of the Lord of hosts, the God of battles of Israel, whom you have dishonored."

Today the Lord will deliver you into my hands, and I will strike you and cut off your head. I will give the carcasses of the Philistine camp today to the birds of the air and to the beasts of the earth, and all the earth will know that there is a God in Israel.

And all this assembly will know that the Lord does not deliver by sword or halberd; for this battle belongs to the Lord, who will deliver you into our hands.

And it came to pass that when the Philistine had risen up, and was approaching to meet David, David hastened, and ran to the place of battle to meet the Philistine.

Then David reached into his bag, took out a stone, slung it, and struck the Philistine on the forehead, so that the stone sank into his forehead; and he fell face down to the ground.

So David, with a sling and a stone, prevailed over the Philistine, and struck the Philistine down and killed him; but David had no sword in his hand.

But David ran, jumped on the Philistine, took his sword, drew it from its sheath, killed him, and cut off his head. And when the Philistines saw that their mighty man was dead, they fled.

Then those of Israel and Judah arose and shouted for joy, and pursued the Philistines as far as the valley and as far as the gates of Hekron; and the Philistines, mortally wounded, fell by the way of Saharajim, as far as Gath and as far as Hekron.

And the children of Israel returned from pursuing the Philistines, and plundered their camps.

And David took the head of the Philistine, which he brought to Jerusalem; he also put the Philistine's armor in his tent.

Now when Saul saw David going out to meet the Philistine, he said to Abner, the commander of the army: Abner, whose son is this young man? And Abner answered: As long as you live, O king, I do not know.

The King said to him: Inquire who this young boy's son is.

As soon as David returned from killing the Philistine, Abner took him and brought him before Saul, with the Philistine's head in his hand.

And Saul said to him, "Young boy, whose son are you?" David answered, "I am the son of Jesse of Bethlehem, your servant."

Now it came to pass that as soon as David had finished speaking to Saul, Jonathan's soul was bound to [David's] soul, so much so that Jonathan loved him as his own soul.

So that day Saul took him, and did not allow him to return to his father's house.

And Jonathan made a covenant with David, because he loved him as his own soul.

And Jonathan took off the cloak that he was wearing, and gave it to David, with his clothes, even down to his sword, his bow, and his baldric.

And David was employed in affairs; [and] wherever Saul sent him, he succeeded; so that Saul put him in charge of the fighting men, and he was pleasing to all the people, and even to Saul's servants.

Now it came to pass that as they returned, and David returned from the defeat of the Philistine, women came out from all the cities of Israel, singing and dancing before King Saul, with drums, with joy, and with cymbals.

And the women who played [instruments] answered each other, and said: Saul has struck down his thousands, and David his ten thousands.

And Saul was very angry, and this word displeased him, and he said: They have given ten thousand to David, and to me, a thousand; therefore he lacks nothing more than the Kingdom.

From that day on, Saul kept a close eye on David.

And it came to pass, the very next day, that the evil spirit [sent] from God seized Saul, and he was prophesying in the midst of the house, and David played with his hand, as on other days, and Saul had a halberd in his hand.

And Saul hurled the halberd, saying to himself, "I will strike David and the wall," but David turned away from him twice.

Saul was therefore afraid of David's presence, because the Lord was with David, and had withdrawn from Saul.

That is why Saul removed [David] from him and made him commander of a thousand [men]; and [David] went back and forth before the people.

And David succeeded in everything he undertook, for the Lord was with him.

So Saul, seeing that David prospered greatly, feared him.

But all Israel and Judah loved David, because he went out and came before them.

And Saul said to David, "Behold, I will give you Merab my older daughter as a wife; only be a righteous son to me, and lead the battles of the Lord." For Saul said, "Let not my hand be upon him, but let the hand of the Philistines be upon him."

And David answered Saul, "Who am I, and what is my life, [and] my father's family in Israel, that I should be the king's son-in-law?"

But it came to pass that at the time when Merab, daughter of Saul, was to be given to David, she was given as a wife to Hadriel the Meholathite.

But Michal [the other] daughter of Saul loved David; this was reported to Saul, and it pleased him.

And Saul said, "I will give her to him so that she may be a snare to him, and that by this means the Philistines may fall upon him." So Saul said to David, "Today you shall be my son-in-law by [one of] my two [daughters]."

And Saul commanded his servants to speak to David in secret, and to say to him, "Behold, the King is pleased with you, and all his servants love you; therefore, be now the King's son-in-law."

So Saul's servants repeated all these words to David, and David said: Do you think it is a small thing to be the King's son-in-law, since I am a poor man, and of no esteem?

And Saul's servants reported this to him, [and] said to him: David spoke such words.

And Saul said, "Speak to David like this: The king asks for no other dowry than one hundred Philistine foreskins, so that the king may be avenged on his enemies." Now Saul had planned to hand David over to the Philistines.

And Saul's servants reported all these things to David; and the matter pleased him, so that he might be the king's son-in-law. And before the days were fulfilled, David arose and went, he and his men, and struck down two hundred Philistine men; and David brought their foreskins, and they delivered them, counted out, to the King, so that he might become the King's son-in-law. And Saul gave him his daughter Michal in marriage.

Then Saul saw and knew that the Lord was with David; and Michal, Saul's daughter, loved him.

And Saul continued to fear David, even more [than before], so much so that Saul was always an enemy of David.

Now the captains of the Philistines went out [on campaign], and as soon as they went out, David succeeded better than all the servants of Saul; and his name was greatly esteemed.

And Saul spoke to Jonathan his son and to all his servants about putting David to death; but Jonathan, Saul's son, was very devoted to David.

Therefore Jonathan informed David, and said to him, "Saul my father is seeking to kill you; now therefore be on your guard, I beg you, until morning, and stay in some secret place, and hide yourself."

And when I have stood with my father, I will go out to the field where you are; for I will speak to my father about you; and I will see what will happen, and let you know.

Jonathan then spoke favorably of David to Saul his father, and said to him: Let not the king sin against his servant David, for he has not sinned against you; and indeed what he has done is very advantageous to you.

For he risked his life and struck down the Philistine, and the Lord gave a great deliverance to all Israel. You saw it and rejoiced; why then should you sin against innocent blood by putting David to death without cause?

And Saul listened to Jonathan's voice and swore: As the Lord lives, he will be put to death.

Then Jonathan called David and told him all these things. And Jonathan brought David to Saul, and he served him as before.

And the war began again, and David went out and fought against the Philistines, and made a great slaughter of them, so that they fled from before him.

Now the evil spirit [sent] from the Lord came upon Saul, as he sat in his house, with his halberd in his hand, and David was playing with his hand.

And Saul sought to strike David with the halberd as far as the wall; but he slipped out from in front of Saul, who struck the wall with the halberd: and David fled, and escaped that night.

But Saul sent messengers to David's house to watch him and kill him in the morning. This is what Michal, David's wife, told him, saying, "If you do not escape, tomorrow you will be killed."

And Michal lowered David through a window; and so he went away, and fled, and escaped.

Then Mical took an effigy, and put it to bed, and placed a goat's hair head at its head, and covered it with a garment.

And when Saul sent men to take David away, she said: He is sick.

Saul sent more men to capture David, saying to them: Bring him to me in his bed, so that I may kill him.

So these people came, and behold, an effigy was on the bed, and the goat's-hair head was at its head.

[And] Saul said to Michal, "Why have you deceived me like this, and let my enemy go, so that he has escaped?" And Michal answered Saul, "He said to me, 'Let me go; why should I kill you?'"

So David fled and escaped, and came to Samuel at Ramah, and told him all that Saul had done to him. Then he went away with Samuel, and they stayed in Naioth.

And they brought it back to Saul, saying to him: Behold, David is in Naioth in Ramah.

Then Saul sent men to capture David, who saw an assembly of prophets prophesying, and Samuel, who presided over them, was standing there; and the spirit of God came upon the men sent by Saul, and they also became prophets.

And when it was reported to Saul, he sent other people, who also became prophets. And Saul continued to send people a third time, and they too became prophets.

Then he himself went to Ramah, and came to the great pit which is in Seku, and inquired, saying, "Where are Samuel and David?" and was answered, "They are in Naioth in Ramah."

And he went to Naioth in Ramah; and the spirit of God was also upon him, and he continued on his way and prophesied until he came to Naioth in Ramah.

He also stripped off his clothes and prophesied before Samuel, lying naked on the ground all that day and all that night. Therefore it is said, "Is Saul also among the prophets?"

And David, fleeing from Naioth who was in Ramah, came and said to Jonathan, "What have I done? What is my iniquity, and what is my sin before your father, that he seeks my life?"

And [Jonathan] said to him, "Never! You shall not die. Behold, my father does nothing, great or small, that he does not disclose to me; and why should my father hide this thing from me? It is not so."

Then David swore, and said again: Your father surely knows that I am in your good graces, and he will have said: let Jonathan know nothing of this, lest he be grieved; but as the Lord lives, and your soul lives, there is but one step between me and death.

Then Jonathan said to David, "What do you want me to do? And I will do it for you."

And David said to Jonathan, "Behold, tomorrow is the new moon, and I am accustomed to sitting with the King to eat; therefore let me go, and I will hide in the fields until the third evening."

If your father inquires about me, you shall tell him: I have been urged to have David go with haste to Bethlehem his city, because his whole family is making a solemn sacrifice.

If he says, "Very well; it goes well with your servant," but if he becomes very angry, know that his malice has reached its limit.

Therefore, show mercy to your servant, since you have brought your servant into a covenant with you, [the name of the Lord having intervened]; if there is [any] iniquity in me, kill me yourself; for why would you bring me to your father?

And Jonathan said to him: God forbid that this should happen to you; for if I can somehow know that my father's malice has reached its peak to be unleashed upon you, shall I not let you know?

And David answered Jonathan, "Who will tell me what unpleasant answer your father gave you?"

And Jonathan said to David, "Come, let us go out to the field." So the two of them went out to the field.

Then Jonathan said to David, "O Lord, God of Israel, when I sound out my father tomorrow, about this time or the day after, and there is good news for David, if I do not then send word to you and tell you about it;

May the Lord do this to Jonathan, and add to it this: that if my father has decided to harm you, I will let you know, and I will let you go, and you will go in peace, and the Lord will be with you as he was with my father.

But is it not so, that if I am still alive, is it not so, I say, that you will show me the grace of the Lord, so that I do not die?

And that you will not withdraw your gratuitous gift from my house forever, not even when the Lord cuts off all of David's enemies from the face of the earth?

And Jonathan made an alliance with the house of David, saying: May the Lord demand him back from the hand of David's enemies.

Jonathan made David swear an oath again by the love he bore him; for he loved him as much as his own soul.

Then Jonathan said to him, "Tomorrow is the new moon, and people will inquire about you, for your position will be empty."

Having waited until the third evening, you shall go down in haste, and you shall come to the place where you hid on the day of this matter, and you shall dwell by the stone of Ezel.

And I will shoot three arrows beside this stone, as if I were shooting at some target.

And behold, I will send a boy, [and I will say to him]: Go, find the arrows. And if I say to the boy explicitly: Look, the arrows are this way before you, take them, and come back; then it will go well with you; and nothing will happen; the Lord lives.

But if I say to the young boy, "Look, the arrows are beyond you; go away, for the Lord is sending you away."

And as for the word that you and I have given each other; behold, the Lord is between you and me forever.

So David hid in the field; and when the new moon came, the King sat down to eat his meal.

And the King sat down in his seat, as at other times, in the seat which was near the wall, Jonathan stood up, and Abner sat next to Saul; but David's place was empty.

And Saul said nothing about it that day, for he was saying to himself: Something has happened to him; he is not clean, certainly he is not clean.

But on the day after the new moon, which was the second [day of the month], David's place was still empty; and Saul said to Jonathan his son, "Why was Jesse's son not at the meal yesterday or today?"

And Jonathan answered Saul: I have been earnestly urged to let David go to Bethlehem.

He even said to me, "Please let me go; for our family is offering a sacrifice in the city, and my brother has commanded me [to be there]; now, therefore, if I am in your good graces, I beg you to let me go, so that I may see my brothers." That is why he did not come to the King's table.

Then Saul's anger burned against Jonathan, and he said to him, "Son of the wicked rebel, do I not know that you have chosen the son of Jesse to your shame, and to the shame of your mother's transgression?"

For as long as the son of Jesse lives on earth you and your kingdom will not be established; therefore send at once and bring him to me, for he is worthy of death.

And Jonathan answered Saul his father, and said to him, "Why should he be put to death? What has he done?"

And Saul hurled a halberd at him to strike him. Then Jonathan knew that his father had decided to put David to death.

And Jonathan rose from the table in anger, and did not eat his meal on the second day of the new moon; for he was grieved on account of David, because his father had dishonored him.

And the next morning Jonathan went out to the fields, according to the assignment he had given to David, and he brought with him a little boy.

And he said to his boy, "Run, now find the arrows I am going to shoot." And the boy ran, and [Jonathan] shot an arrow past him.

And when the boy came to the place where the arrow that Jonathan had shot lay, Jonathan shouted after him, and said to him, "Is not the arrow beyond you?"

And Jonathan called out to the boy, "Hurry, do not stop!" And the boy gathered the arrows and came to his Lord.

But the boy knew nothing about this matter; only David and Jonathan knew.

And Jonathan gave his bow and arrows to the boy he had, and said to him, "Go, take them into the city."

And the boy having gone away, David got up from the south side, and threw himself face down on the ground, and prostrated himself three times, and they kissed each other, and both wept; until David wept exceedingly.

And Jonathan said to David, "Go in peace, as we both swore to the Lord, saying, 'The Lord be between me and you, and between my offspring and your offspring forever.'"

So David got up and left; and Jonathan returned to the city.

So David went to Nob, to Ahimelech the priest; and Ahimelech, terrified, ran to meet David and said to him, "Why are you alone, and is there no one with you?"

And David said to Ahimelech the Priest: The King has commanded me something, and said to me: Let no one know anything about the matter for which I am sending you, nor about what I have commanded you; and I have assigned my men a certain place.

Now then, what do you have in hand? Give me five loaves of bread, or whatever you can find.

And the priest answered David, and said, I do not have common bread in my hand, but holy bread; but have your men at least kept themselves from women?

And David answered the Priest, and said to him: Moreover, since I left four days ago, the women have been removed from us, and the ships of my men have been holy, and this [bread] is considered common, since today it is consecrated [again to put] in the ships.

So the priest gave him the holy bread; for there was no other bread there except the showbread which had been taken out from before the Lord, to give fresh bread on the day when the other day was raised.

Now there was a man there from among Saul's servants, detained that day before the Lord; [this man] was named Doeg, the Edomite, the most powerful of [all] Saul's shepherds.

And David said to Ahimelech, "But do you not have here in your hand some halberd, or some sword? For I have not taken my sword or my weapons with me, because the King's business was urgent."

And the priest said, "Here is the sword of Goliath the Philistine, whom you killed in the Valley of the Oak. It is wrapped in cloth behind the ephod. If you want it for yourself, take it, for there is no other sword here." And David said, "There is no like it. Give it to me."

So David arose and fled that day from before Saul, and went to Achish, King of Gath.

And the servants of Achish said to him, "Is this not David, [who is like] the King of the land? Is this not the one about whom they used to answer one another in the dances, saying, 'Saul has killed his thousands, and David his ten thousand?'"

And David put these words in his heart, and was very afraid because of Achish, King of Gath.

And he changed his demeanor before them, and pretended to be a madman in their hands; and he marked the doorposts, and let his saliva drip onto his beard.

And Achish said to his servants, "Look, do you not see that this is a fool? Why have you brought him to me?"

Did I lack foolish men, that you brought this one to play the fool in my presence? Would this one even enter my house?

So David left there and escaped to the cave of Hadullam; when his brothers and all his father's house heard of it, they went down there to him.

All those who were also in trouble, and who had creditors [who were tormenting them], and who were full of bitterness in their hearts, gathered around him, and he became their leader; and there were about four hundred men with him.

And David went from there to Mizpah of Moab; and he said to the King of Moab, "Please let my father and mother withdraw to you until I know what God will do for me."

And he brought them before the King of Moab, and they remained with him all the time that David was in that stronghold.

Now Gad the prophet said to David, "Do not remain in this stronghold, but go away and enter the land of Judah." So David went away and came to the forest of Herez.

And Saul learned that David and the men who were with him had been discovered. Now Saul was sitting on the hillside under an oak tree at Ramah, with his halberd in his hand, and all his servants were standing before him.

And Saul said to his servants who stood before him, "Now listen, Benjamites: Will the son of Jesse give fields and vineyards to all of you? Will he appoint all of you governors over thousands and hundreds?"

That you have all conspired against me, and that there is no one to warn me that my son has made an alliance with the son of Jesse, and that there is none of you who has pity on me, and who warns me; for my son has stirred up my servant against me to set traps for me, as it appears today.

Then Doeg the Edomite, who was appointed over the servants of Saul, answered, and said: I saw the son of Jesse come to Nob to Ahimelech son of Ahitub;

Who consulted the Lord for him, and gave him provisions, and the sword of Goliath the Philistine.

Then the King sent to summon Ahimelech the Priest son of Ahitub, and all his father's family, [namely] the priests who were at Nob; and they all came to the King.

And Saul said, "Now listen, son of Ahitub"; and he answered, "Here I am, my lord."

Then Saul said to him, "Why have you and the son of Jesse conspired against me, since you gave him bread and a sword, and inquired of God for him, so that he would rise up against me to set ambushes for me, as is happening today?"

And Ahimelech answered the King, and said: Among all your servants, is there one like David, who is faithful, and son-in-law of the King, and who went at your command, and who is so honored in your house?

Have I begun to consult God for him today? God forbid! Let the king not burden his servant, nor my entire father's household, with anything; for your servant knows nothing of this, small or great.

And the King said to him: Certainly you will die, Ahimelech, and all your father's family.

Then the king said to the archers standing before him, "Turn around and kill the priests of the Lord, for they too are of David's faction, because they knew he was fleeing and they did not warn me." But the king's servants would not stretch out their hands to attack the priests of the Lord.

Then the King said to Doeg, "Turn around and throw yourself on the priests." So Doeg the Edomite turned around and threw himself on the priests, and that day he killed eighty-five men who wore the linen ephod.

And he put to the sword Nob, the city of the priests, men and women, great and infants, even oxen, donkeys, and sheep.

However, one of the sons of Ahimelech, son of Ahitub, whose name was Abiathar, escaped and fled to David.

And Abiathar reported to David that Saul had killed the priests of the Lord.

And David said to Abiathar, "I knew well that day, since Doeg the Edomite was there, that he would not fail to report it to Saul; I am responsible [for what happened] to all the persons of your father's family."

Stay with me, do not be afraid; for he who seeks my life seeks yours; surely you will be kept with me.

Now this report had been made to David, saying: Look, the Philistines are waging war against Keilah, and are plundering the threshing floors.

And David inquired of the Lord, saying, "Shall I go and strike down these Philistines?" And the Lord answered David, "Go, and strike down the Philistines, and deliver Keilah."

And David's men said to him, "Behold, we are afraid here in Judah; what then will it be when we go to Keilah against the arrayed troops of the Philistines?"

Therefore David inquired of the Lord again, and the Lord answered him, and said, Arise, go down to Keilah, for I am going to deliver the Philistines into your hand.

Then David went with his men to Keilah, and fought against the Philistines, and took their livestock, and made a great slaughter [of the Philistines]; thus David delivered the inhabitants of Keilah.

Now it had happened that when Abiathar son of Ahimelech had fled to David at Keilah, the Ephod had fallen into his hands.

And it was reported to Saul that David had come to Keilah; and Saul said, God has delivered him into my hands; for he shut himself in by entering a city which has gates and bars.

And Saul assembled with a public shout all the people to go to war, and to go down to Keilah, in order to besiege David and his men.

But David, having learned that Saul was plotting this evil against him, said to the priest Abiathar: Put on the ephod.

Then David said: O Lord! God of Israel! Your servant has heard with certainty that Saul is plotting to enter Keilah to destroy the city on account of me.

Will the lords of Keilah deliver me into his hands? Will Saul come down, as your servant has heard? O Lord, God of Israel, I pray you, teach your servant. And the Lord answered, "He will come down."

David said again, "Will the lords of Keilah deliver me and my men into the hands of Saul?" And the Lord answered, "They will deliver you there."

Then David arose, and about six hundred men with him, and they left Keilah and went wherever they could; and it was reported to Saul that David had escaped from Keilah: therefore he stopped marching.

And David remained in the desert in strongholds, and he stayed in a mountain in the desert of Ziph. And Saul sought him every day, but God did not give him into his hands.

David, therefore, having seen that Saul had gone out to seek his life, stayed in the desert of Ziph in the forest.

Then Jonathan, son of Saul, arose and went to the forest to David, and strengthened his hands in God.

And he said to him, "Do not be afraid; for Saul my father will not catch you, but you will reign over Israel, and I will be second after you; and even Saul my father knows this well."

So the two of them made a covenant before the Lord; and David remained in the forest, but Jonathan returned to his house.

Now the Ziphites went up to Saul at Gibeah and said to him, "Is not David hiding among us in strongholds in the forest on the hill of Hachilah, which is on the right side of Jesimon?"

Now then, O King! if you wish to come down, come down, and it will be up to us to deliver him into the hands of the King.

And Saul said, "Blessed are you by the Lord, for you have had mercy on me."

Go then, I beg you, and prepare everything, and know, and recognize the place where he makes his retreat, [and] who has seen him there; for I have been told, that he is very cunning.

Therefore, recognize and know in which of all these retreats he is hiding, then return to me when you are certain, and I will go with you; and if he is in the land, I will search for him carefully among all the thousands of Judah.

So they got up and went to Ziph before Saul; but David and his men were in the wilderness of Mahon, in the countryside, on the right hand of Jesimon.

So Saul and his men went to look for him; and he was brought back to David: and he went down into the rock, and stayed in the wilderness of Mahon: when Saul heard of this, he pursued David into the wilderness of Mahon.

And Saul went on this side of the mountain, and David and his men went on the other side of the mountain; and David hurried as much as he could to leave before Saul, but Saul and his men surrounded David and his men to capture them.

At this a messenger came to Saul, saying, "Hurry and come, for the Philistines have attacked the land."

So Saul returned from pursuing David and went to meet the Philistines: therefore that place was called Selah-hammahlekoth.

Then David went up from there and stayed in the strongholds of Hen-gedi.

And when Saul returned from pursuing the Philistines, this report was brought to him, saying: David is in the wilderness of Hen-gedi.

Then Saul took three thousand elite men from all Israel, and he went to find David and his people, even on the top of the rocks of the deer.

And Saul came to the sheepfolds by the road, where there was a cave into which he went for his needs; and David and his men were standing at the back of the cave.

And David's men said to him, "This is the day of which the Lord spoke to you:

'Behold, I am giving your enemy into your hand, that you may do to him as seems good to you.'" So David arose and quietly cut off the corner of Saul's robe.

After this David was deeply moved that he had cut off a corner [of Saul's robe].

And he said to his people, "The Lord forbid that I should do such a thing to my Lord, the Lord's Anointed, by laying my hand on him, for he is the Lord's Anointed."

So David dissuaded his men with his words, and he did not allow them to rise up against Saul. Then Saul got up from the cave and went on his way.

After this David got up and came out of the cave, and called after Saul, saying, "My Lord the King!" and Saul looked behind him, and David bowed his face to the ground and prostrated himself.

And David said to Saul, "Why should you listen to the words of people who say, 'Look, David is looking for trouble for you?'"

Behold, today your eyes have seen that the Lord delivered you today into my hand in the cave, and they said to me that I should kill you; but I spared you, and I said, I will not lay my hand on my Lord; for he is the Lord's Anointed.

Look, my father, look, I say, at the corner of your cloak that is in my hand; for when I cut off the corner of your cloak, I did not kill you. Know and understand that there is no evil or injustice in my hand; and that I have not sinned against you; and yet you lie in wait for my life to take it from me.

The Lord will judge between you and me, and the Lord will avenge me on you, but my hand will not be against you.

"From the wicked comes wickedness, as the proverb of the ancients says; therefore my hand will not be upon you."

After whom did a King of Israel emerge? Who are you chasing? A dead dog, a flea?

The Lord will therefore be judge, and will judge between you and me; and he will look upon my case and plead it, and will deliver me from your hand.

Now it came to pass that as soon as David had finished speaking these words to Saul, Saul said, Is this not your voice, my son David? And Saul lifted up his voice and wept.

And he said to David, "You are more righteous than I, for you have repaid me good for the evil I did to you."

And you have made me aware today how you have shown me mercy, for the Lord had delivered me into your hands, and yet you did not kill me.

For who, having found his enemy, would let him go without harming him? May the Lord reward you for what you have done for me today.

And now behold, I know that you will surely reign and that the Kingdom of Israel will be firmly established in your hands.

Therefore now swear to me by the Lord that you will not destroy my descendants after me, and that you will not exterminate my name from my father's house.

And David swore to Saul, and Saul went home; and David and his men went up into the stronghold.

Now Samuel died, and all Israel gathered together and mourned for him, and they buried him in his house at Ramah. And David arose and went down to the wilderness of Paran.

Now there was a man in Mahon who had his flocks in Carmel, and that man was very powerful; for he had three thousand sheep, and a thousand goats; and he was in Carmel when his sheep were sheared.

And that man was named Nabal, and his wife was named Abigail, who was a woman of good sense and beautiful face; but he was a coarse man, and bad to do business with; and he was of the lineage of Caleb.

Now David heard in the desert that Nabal was shearing his sheep.

And he sent ten of his men, and said to them, "Go up to Carmel, and go to Nabal, and greet him in my name,

And say to him: May you do as much again next year at this time, and may you and your household and all that you have prosper.

And now I have learned that you have shearers; but your shepherds were with us, and we did them no harm, and nothing of theirs was lost during all the time they were in Carmel.

Ask them, and they will tell you; may these people be in your good graces, since we have come on a good day. We pray that you give to your servants, and to David your son, whatever is in your possession.

So David's men came and spoke all these words to Nabal in David's name; then they remained quiet.

And Nabal answered David's servants, and said, "Who is David, and who is the son of Jesse? Today the number of servants who desert their masters has multiplied."

And should I take my bread, and my water, and the meat that I have prepared for my shearers, in order to give it to people whose origin I do not know?

So David's men returned the way they came. They returned, and when they arrived, they reported to him according to all these words.

And David said to his men, "Each of you gird on your sword." So they each girded on their swords. David also girded on his sword, and he went up with David, about four hundred men, but two hundred remained with the baggage.

One of the servants of Abigail, Nabal's wife, reported to him, and said: "Behold, David has sent messengers from the desert to greet our master, and he has treated them harshly."

And yet these men were very good people to us, and we received no insult from them, and nothing of ours was lost, during all the time we were with them, when we were in the fields.

They served as our wall night and day, all the time we were with them, grazing the flocks.

Therefore, now consider carefully what you are going to do; for evil has been decreed against our master and against all his house; but he [a man] is so rude that one would not dare to speak to him.

So Abigail hurried and took two hundred loaves of bread, two skins of wine, five sheep ready to eat, five measures of roasted grain, one hundred bundles of raisins, and two hundred baskets of dried figs, and put them on donkeys.

Then she said to her people, "Go on ahead of me, here I am, I am going after you"; but she did not tell Nabal her husband.

And as she mounted on a donkey, coming down the mountain under cover, David and his men came down and met her, and she stood before them.

Now David had said: Surely it was in vain that I guarded all that this man had in the wilderness, so that nothing of all that was his was lost; for he repaid me evil for good.

May God do this to the enemies of David, and thus he adds, if by morning I leave nothing of all that belongs to [Nabal], from man to dog.

When Abigail saw David, she quickly got down from her donkey, threw herself on his face before David, and bowed down to the ground.

So she fell at his feet and said to him, "Let the iniquity be upon me, upon me, my Lord; and I pray you let your servant speak before you, and listen to the words of your servant."

I beseech you that my Lord should not pay attention to this worthless man, Nabal, for he is just as his name is; his name is Nabal, and there is madness in him; and I, your servant, have not seen the people whom my Lord has sent.

Now therefore, my Lord, as surely as the Lord lives and you live, the Lord has kept you from bloodshed and has preserved your hand from it. May your enemies and those who seek to harm my Lord be like Nabal.

But now here is a present that your servant has brought to my Lord, so that it may be given to the people who follow my Lord.

Please forgive your servant's sin; for the Lord will surely establish a firm house for my Lord; for my Lord leads the battles of the Lord, and no evil has been found in you all your life.

If men rise up to persecute you and seek your life, the soul of my Lord will be bound in the bundle of life with the Lord your God; but he will cast away, as with a sling, the soul of your enemies.

And it will come to pass that the Lord will do to my Lord according to all the good that he has foretold to you, and he will establish you as ruler of Israel.

Therefore, let this not be an obstacle, nor a cause of regret in the soul of my Lord, that he has shed blood without cause, and has taken revenge himself; [and] when the Lord has dealt well with my Lord, you shall remember your servant.

Then David said to Abigail, "Blessed be the Lord, the God of Israel, who has sent you today to meet me."

And blessed be your counsel, and blessed be you who have today prevented me from coming to bloodshed, and who have preserved my hand from it.

For surely the Lord, the God of Israel, who has kept me from harming you, lives, that if you had not hurried and come to meet me, nothing would have been left to Nabal by morning, neither man nor beast.

David then took from her hand what she had brought him, and said to her, "Go back in peace to your house; see, I have listened to your voice, and I have granted your request."

Then Abigail returned to Nabal; and behold, he was holding a feast in his house, like a king's feast; and Nabal's heart was merry, and he was completely drunk; therefore she told him nothing, neither small nor great, about this matter until morning.

So it came to morning, after Nabal had sobered up, that his wife told him [all] these things, and his heart hardened within him, so that he became [like] a stone.

Now it came to pass that about ten days later the Lord struck Nabal, and he died.

And when David heard that Nabal was dead, he said, "Blessed be the Lord, who has avenged me against the insult at Nabal's hand, and has preserved his servant from doing harm, and has returned Nabal's harm to his own head." Then David sent messengers to speak to Abigail, to take her as his wife. So David's servants came to Abigail in Carmel and spoke to her, saying, "David has sent us to you to take you as his wife." Then she got up and bowed down with her face to the ground, and said: Behold, your servant shall be a servant to wash the feet of my Lord's servants. Then Abigail quickly got up and mounted a donkey, and five of her maids followed her; and she went after David's messengers, and became his wife. Now David had also taken Ahinoah of Jezrehel, and both of them together became his wives. For Saul had given Michal, his daughter and wife of David, to Palti, son of Laish, who was from Gallim. The Ziphites came again to Saul at Gibeah, saying, "Is not David hiding on the hill of Hachilah, which is opposite Jezemon?" And Saul arose and went down to the wilderness of Ziph, taking with him three thousand chosen men of Israel, to seek David in the wilderness of Ziph. And Saul camped on the hillside of Hachilah, which is opposite Jezimon, by the road. Now David was standing in the desert, and he saw Saul coming into the desert to pursue him. And he sent spies through whom he learned most certainly that [Saul] had come. Then David got up and came to the place where Saul had camped; and David saw the place where Saul was lying, and Abner also, son of Ner, commander of his army; now Saul was lying in the circle [of the camp], and the people were camped around him. And David discussed this matter and spoke to Ahimelech the Hittite, and to Abishai son of Zeruiah, [and] brother of Joab, saying, "Who will go down with me to Saul at the camp?" And Abishai answered, "I will go down with you." David and Abishai came to the people by night, and behold, Saul was sleeping, lying in the circle [of the camp], and his halberd was stuck in the ground at his head; and Abner and the people were lying around him. Then Abishai said to David, "Today God has delivered your enemy into your hands; now therefore, let me strike him, I pray you, with the halberd, down to the ground with a single blow, and I will not return a second time." And David said to Abishai, "Do not put him to death; for who can lay a hand on the Lord's anointed and be innocent?" David said again: As surely as the Lord lives, unless the Lord strikes him, or his day comes, or he goes down to battle and remains there; May the Lord keep me from laying my hand on the Lord's Anointed; but please take the halberd that is at his head, and the water jug, and let us go. So David took the halberd and the water jug that were at Saul's head, and they went away; and there was no one who saw them, nor who perceived them, nor who awoke; for they were all sleeping; because the Lord had caused a deep sleep to fall upon them. And David crossed over to the other side, and stood on the top of the mountain, far from there; for there was a great distance between them. And he cried out to the people, and to Abner son of Ner, saying, "Will you not answer, Abner?" And Abner answered, and said, "Who are you that you cry out to the King?" Then David said to Abner, "Are you not a mighty man? And who in Israel is like you? Why then have you not guarded the King your Lord? For one of the people has come to kill the King your Lord." This is not well done to you; as the Lord lives, you deserve death, for having so badly kept your Lord, the Lord's Anointed; and now look where is the King's halberd, and the water pot that was at his head. Then Saul recognized David's voice, and said, "Is that not your voice, my son David?" And David said, "It is my voice, O King my Lord." He also said: Why does my Lord pursue his servant? For what have I done, and what evil is in my hand?

Now therefore I pray you, let the King my Lord hear the words of his servant. If it is the Lord who is pushing you against me, let your offering be acceptable to him; but if it is men, they are cursed before the Lord; for today they have driven me out so that I would not be part of the inheritance of the Lord, [and they] said to me, "Go, serve the foreign gods."

And now, let not my blood fall to the ground before the Lord; for the King of Israel has gone out to look for a flea, [and] as one would chase a partridge in the mountains.

Then Saul said, "I have sinned; turn back, my son David, for I will not harm you again, because today my life has been precious to you. Behold, I have acted foolishly, and I have made a very great mistake."

And David answered, and said: Here is the King's halberd; let one of your men come here and take it.

May the Lord repay each one according to his justice and faithfulness; for he had delivered you into my hands today, but I would not lay my hand on the Lord's Anointed.

Therefore, as your soul has been precious in my sight today, so shall my soul be precious in the sight of the Lord, and he shall deliver me from all afflictions.

And Saul said to David, "Blessed are you, my son David; you will surely succeed and prevail." So David went on his way, and Saul returned to his place.

But David said to himself, "Surely I will one day perish by the hand of Saul; is it not better that I escape to the land of the Philistines, so that Saul will no longer hope to find me, searching for me again in some of the regions of Israel? For in this way I will escape from his hand."

So David arose, he and the six hundred men who were with him, and he crossed over to Achish son of Mahok, King of Gath.

And David remained with Achish in Gath, he and his people, each with his family, David and his two wives, [namely] Ahinoham, who was from Jezrehel, and Abigail, [who had been] the wife of Nabal, who was from Carmel.

Then Saul was told that David had fled to Gath; so he stopped looking for him.

David said to Achish, "If I have found favor in your sight, please let me be given a place in one of the towns in the countryside to live there; for why should your servant live with you in the royal city?"

So Achish gave him Ziklag that day; therefore Ziklag has remained with the Kings of Judah to this day.

The number of days that David remained in the land of the Philistines was one year and four months.

Now David went up with his men, and they raided the Geshurites, the Girzites, and the Hamalekites; for these [nations] lived in the land where [they had lived] from ancient times, from Shur to the land of Egypt.

And David devastated those lands, leaving neither man nor woman alive, and taking the sheep, the oxen, the donkeys, the camels, and the garments, then he returned and came to Achish.

And Achish would say: Where did you do your shopping today? And David would answer: To the South of Judah, to the South of the Jerahmeelites, and to the South of the Kenites.

But David left no man or woman alive to bring to Gath, for fear, he said, that they might report something against us, saying, "Thus David did." And he did so all the days he remained in the land of the Philistines.

And Achish believed David, and said, "He has made himself detestable to Israel his people; therefore he shall be my servant forever."

Now it came to pass in those days that the Philistines assembled their armies to make war against Israel; and Achish said to David, "Know for certain that you and your men shall come with me to the camp."

And David answered Achish, "Surely you will know what your servant will do." And Achish said to David, "That is why I will always entrust my person to your care." Now Samuel was dead, and all Israel mourned for him, and they buried him in Ramah, which was his city; and Saul removed from the land those who had the spirit of Python, and the soothsayers.

So the Philistines assembled and came, and camped at Shunem; Saul also assembled all Israel, and they camped at Gilboah.

And when Saul saw the Philistine camp, he was afraid, and his heart was greatly troubled.

And Saul inquired of the Lord; but the Lord did not answer him, either by dreams, or by the Urim, or by the Prophets.

And Saul said to his servants, "Find me a woman who has a spirit of divination, and I will go to her and inquire through her [what I should do]." His servants told him, "Behold, there is a woman in Hendor who has a spirit of divination."

So Saul disguised himself, and put on other clothes, and went away, he and two men with him, and they arrived at the woman's house by night; and Saul said to her, "Please, divine for me by the spirit of Python, and bring up to me the one I shall tell you about."

But the woman answered him, "Look, you know what Saul has done, how he has cut off from the land those who have the spirit of Python, and the soothsayers; why then do you set a trap for my soul to cause me to die?"

And Saul swore to him by the Lord, and said to him, "As the Lord lives, if any harm comes to you because of this."

Then the woman said, "Who do you want me to bring up for you?" And he replied, "Bring up Samuel for me."

And the woman, seeing Samuel, cried out in a loud voice, saying to Saul, "Why have you disappointed me? For you are Saul."

And the King answered her: Do not be afraid; but what did you see? And the woman said to Saul: I saw a god coming up out of the earth.

He asked her again, "What does he look like?" She replied, "An old man is coming up, and he is wearing a cloak." When Saul realized it was Samuel, he bowed down with his face to the ground and worshiped him.

And Samuel said to Saul, "Why have you troubled me by bringing me up?" And Saul answered, "I am in great distress, for the Philistines are waging war against me, and God has withdrawn from me and has not answered me, either by prophets or by dreams; therefore I have called you, that you may tell me what I should do."

And Samuel said, "Why then do you consult me, since the Lord has departed from you and become your enemy?"

But the Lord has done as he spoke through me; for the Lord has torn the kingdom out of your hand and given it to your servant, to David.

Because you have not obeyed the voice of the Lord, and have not carried out the fierceness of his anger against Hamalech, therefore the Lord has done this to you today.

And the Lord will also deliver Israel with you into the hands of the Philistines, and tomorrow you and your sons will be with me; the Lord will also deliver the camp of Israel into the hands of the Philistines.

And Saul immediately fell flat on his face, for he was greatly frightened by Samuel's words, and his strength failed him, because he had eaten nothing all that day or all night.

Then this woman came to Saul, and seeing that he was greatly troubled, she said to him: Behold, your servant has obeyed your voice, and I have risked my life, and I have obeyed the words that you spoke to me;

Now I beg you, listen also to what your servant tells you: [Allow] me to set before you a morsel of bread, so that you may eat, and have strength to return on your way.

And he refused, and said: I will not eat. But his servants and the woman also pressed him so hard that he agreed to their words, and having risen from the ground, he sat on a couch.

Now this woman had a calf which she was fattening in her house; and she quickly killed it, then she took flour, and kneaded it, and baked unleavened loaves of bread.

She set this before Saul and his servants, and they ate; then they got up and departed that night.

Now the Philistines assembled all their armies at Aphek; and the Israelites were encamped near the spring of Jezrehel.

And the Philistine governors passed by their hundreds and thousands; and David and his men passed over the rearguard with Achish.

And the Philistine leaders said, "What are these Hebrews?" And Achish answered the Philistine leaders, "Is this not David, the servant of Saul king of Israel, who was with me for some time, even a few years? And I have found nothing to fault in him from the day he surrendered [to me] until this day."

But the Philistine leaders became angry with him and said, "Send this man away, and let him return to the place where you have appointed him. Do not let him go down with us into battle, lest he turn against us in the battle; for how can he regain favor with his Lord? Can it not be by means of the heads of these men?"

Isn't this the David of whom they used to say to each other at the dances, "Saul struck down his thousand, and David his ten thousand"?

So Akis called David and said to him, "As surely as the Lord lives, you are certainly an upright man, and your conduct in the camp seemed good to me, for I have found no fault in you from the day you came to me until this day; but you do not please the governors."

Now therefore return, and go in peace, so that you do not do anything that displeases the rulers of the Philistines.

And David said to Achish, "But what have I done? And what have you found in your servant from the day I was with you until this day, that I have not gone to fight against the enemies of the King my Lord?"

And Achish answered and said to David, "I know that you are pleasing in my sight, like an angel of God; but the leaders of the Philistines have said, 'He shall not go up with us into battle.'"

Therefore, get up early in the morning, with the servants of your Lord who have come with you; and having risen early in the morning, as soon as you see the day, depart.

So David and his men got up early in the morning to leave early and return to the land of the Philistines; but the Philistines went up to Jezrehel.

Three days later, David and his people returned to Ziklag, [and found] that the Hamalekites had attacked from the south and Ziklag, and had struck Ziklag and burned it;

And that they had taken captive the women who were there, without having killed any men, from the smallest to the greatest: but they had taken them away, and gone on their way.

So David and his men returned to the city: and behold, it was burned down, and their wives, and their sons, and their daughters had been taken captive.

That is why David and the people who were with him raised their voices and wept so much that they had no strength left to weep.

And David's two wives had been taken captive, [namely] Ahinoham of Jezrehel, and Abigail [who had been] the wife of Nabal, who was of Carmel.

But David was in great distress, because the people spoke of stoning him; for all the people were outraged because of their sons and daughters; nevertheless David strengthened himself in the Lord his God.

And he said to Abiathar the Priest, son of Ahimelech, "Please put the Ephod on for me"; and Abiathar put the Ephod on for David.

And David inquired of the Lord, saying, "Shall I pursue this troop? Shall I overtake them?" And he answered him, "Pursue them; for you will certainly overtake them and recover [all]."

So David went with the six hundred men who were with him, and they came to the Besor River, where those who remained behind stopped.

So David and four hundred men pursued, but two hundred men stopped, being too tired to cross the Besor stream.

Having found an Egyptian man in the fields, they brought him to David, and gave him bread, and he ate, and then they gave him water to drink.

They also gave him some dried figs and two bunches of raisins, and he ate, and his heart returned to him; for three days and three nights he had not eaten bread or drunk water.

And David said to him, "Whose are you? And where are you from?" And he answered, "I am an Egyptian boy, a servant of a Hamalekite man; and my master has abandoned me because I fell ill three days ago."

We had rushed towards the South of the Kerethites, and against what belongs to Judah, and towards the South of Caleb, and we burned Ziklag with fire.

And David said to him, "Will you lead me to that troop?" And he answered, "Swear to me by [the name of] God that you will not put me to death, and that you will not hand me over to my master, and I will lead you to that troop."

And he led him to that place. And behold, they were scattered over all the earth, eating and drinking and dancing, because of the great plunder which they had taken from the land of the Philistines and from the land of Judah.

And David struck them from the dawn of day until the evening of the next day when he began to pursue them; and not one of them escaped, except for four hundred young men who mounted camels and fled.

And David recovered everything that the Hamalekites had taken away; he also recovered his two wives.

And they found that they lacked nothing, from the least to the greatest, both sons and daughters, and plunder, and all that they had taken away; David recovered it all.

David also took all the [remaining] large and small livestock, which were led before the flocks [that had been taken from them]; [and] they said: This is David's plunder.

Then David came to the two hundred men who had been so tired that they could not walk after David, who had made them stay by the brook Besor; and they came out to meet David and the people who were with him; and David approached the people and greeted them kindly.

But all the wicked and evil men who had gone with David spoke up and said, "Since they did not come with us, we will not give them any of the plunder we have recovered, except to each of them his wife and children, and let them take them away."

But David said, "My brothers, you shall not do so what the Lord has given us, who has protected us, and has delivered into our hands the army that came against us."

Who would believe you in this case? For he who remains with the baggage must have as much share as he who goes down to the battle; they will share equally.

This has been practiced ever since, and it has become an ordinance and a law in Israel, to this day.

David therefore returned to Ziklag, and sent some plunder to the Elders of Judah, [namely] to his friends, saying: Here is a present for you, from the plunder of the enemies of the Lord.

[He sent] some to those who were at Bethel, and to those who were at Ramoth-near Mead, and to those who were at Jattir,

And to those who were at Haroher, and to those who were at Siphamoth, and to those who were at Estemoah,

And to those who were in Racal, and to those who were in the cities of the Jerahmelites, and to those who were in the cities of the Kenites,
And to those who were at Hormah, and to those who were at Corhasan, and to those who were at Hathach,
And to those who were in Hebron, and in all the places where David and his people had stayed.
But the Philistines fought against Israel, and the Israelites fled from before the Philistines and were killed on Mount Gilboa.
And the Philistines overtook Saul and his sons, and killed Jonathan, Abinadab and Malki-suah, Saul's sons.
And the battle intensified against Saul, and the archers shooting with bows found him; and he was very afraid of these archers.
Then Saul said to his armor-bearer, "Draw your sword and run me through with it, lest these uncircumcised men come and run me through and make a mockery of me." But his armor-bearer refused, because he was very afraid. So Saul took the sword and fell upon it.
Then Saul's armor-bearer, seeing that Saul was dead, also fell upon his sword, and died with him.
So Saul and his three sons, his armor-bearer, and all his men died that day.
And those of Israel who were on this side of the valley, and on this side of the Jordan, when they saw that the Israelites had fled from it, and that Saul and his sons were dead, abandoned the cities and fled, so that the Philistines entered them and dwelt there.
Now it happened that the very next day the Philistines came to plunder the dead, and they found Saul and his three sons lying on the mountain of Gilboa.
And they cut off Saul's head and stripped him of his armor, which they sent to the land of the Philistines, to all the surrounding places, to spread the news in the temples of their false gods and among the people.
And they placed his armor in the temple of Hasteroth, and fastened his body to the wall of Bethsan.
Now the inhabitants of Jabesh-Gilead heard what the Philistines had done to Saul.
And all the valiant men [among them] arose and marched all night, and took away the body of Saul, and the bodies of his sons, from the wall of Bethsan, and returned to Jabesh, where they burned them.
Then they took their bones, buried them under an oak tree near Jabez, and fasted for seven days.
Now it came to pass that after Saul had died, David, having returned from the defeat of the Hamaleites, remained in Ziklag for two days.
And on the third day, behold, a man was returning from the camp of Saul, with his clothes torn, and dust on his head, who came to David, fell to the ground, and prostrated himself.
And David said to him, "Where do you come from?" and he answered him, "I escaped from the camp of Israel."
David said to him, "What happened? Please tell me." He replied, "The people fled from the battle, and many of the people fell dead; Saul also and Jonathan his son died."
And David said to the young boy who told him this news: How do you know that Saul and Jonathan his son are dead?
And the young boy who told him these news replied: I happened to be in the mountain of Gilboa, and behold, Saul was standing bent over his halberd, for behold, a chariot and some chiefs of horsemen were pursuing him.
And looking behind him, he saw me, and called to me; and I answered him: Here I am.
And he said to me, "Who are you?" and I answered him, "I am a Hamaleite."
And he said to me, "Stand firm on me, I pray, and kill me; for I am in great anguish, and my life is still all within me."

So I stood firm against him, and I put him to death; for I knew well that he would not live after he had thus thrown himself upon his halberd; and I took the crown that he had on his head, and the bracelet that he had on his arm, and I brought them here to my Lord.

Then David took his clothes and tore them; and all the men who were with him did the same.

They mourned and wept and fasted until evening, for Saul and Jonathan his son, and for the people of the Lord and the house of Israel, because they had fallen by the sword.

But David said to the young boy who had told him this news, "Where are you from?" And he answered, "I am the son of a foreigner, a Hamalecite."

And David said to him, "How is it that you were not afraid to put out your hand to kill the Lord's Anointed?"

Then David called one of his men and said to him, "Go over and attack him," and he struck him, and he died.

For David had said to him, "Your blood be on your own head, because your own mouth has testified against you, saying, 'I have killed the Lord's Anointed.'"

Then David composed this lament over Saul and over Jonathan his son, [Which] he uttered to teach the children of Judah [to shoot] the bow; behold, it is written in the Book of Jasar.

O nobility of Israel! Those who were slain are on your high places. How have the mighty men fallen?

Do not go and tell it in Gath, and do not carry the news to the towns of Ashkelon; lest the daughters of the Philistines rejoice, lest the daughters of the uncircumcised exult.

Mount Gilboah, let neither dew nor rain fall upon you, nor upon the high fields there; for there the shield of the mighty was cast down, and the shield of Saul, as though it had not been anointed with oil.

Jonathan's bow never returned without the blood of the dead, and without the fat of the mighty; and Saul's sword never returned without effect.

Saul and Jonathan, kind and pleasant in their lives, were not separated in their death; they were swifter than eagles, they were stronger than lions.

Daughters of Israel, weep for Saul, who made you clothed in scarlet, made you live in luxury, and made you wear gold ornaments on your garments.

How did the forts fall in the midst of battle! How was Jonathan killed on those high places!

Jonathan, my brother! I am in anguish for your sake; you were my greatest joy; the love I had for you was greater than that which one has for women.

How your forts have fallen, and how the instruments of war have perished!

Now it came to pass after this that David inquired of the Lord, saying, "Shall I go up to any of the cities of Judah?" And the Lord answered him, "Go up." And David said, "To which city shall I go up?" He answered, "To Hebron."

David then went up there with his two wives, Ahinoham who was from Jezrehel, and Abigail, [who had been] the wife of Nabal, who was from Carmel.

David also brought up the men who were with him, each with his family, and they lived in the cities of Hebron.

And the people of Judah came and anointed David there as king over the house of Judah. And it was reported to David, saying, "The men of Jabesh-gilead have buried Saul."

And David sent messengers to the men of Jabesh-gilead, and said to them, "Blessed be you by the Lord for having done this favor unto Saul your lord, that you have buried him."

May the Lord now be pleased to deal with you freely and truthfully; and I too will do you good, because you have done this.

And now let your hands be strong, and be men of courage; for Saul your Lord is dead, and the house of Judah has anointed me to be King over them.

But Abner son of Ner, commander of Saul's army, took Ish-bosheth son of Saul, and brought him over to Mahanajim;
And he established him as king over Gilead, and over the Asurians, and over Jezrehel, and over Ephraim, and over Benjamin; even over all Israel.
Ish-bosheth, son of Saul, was forty years old when he began to reign over Israel, and he reigned two years. Only the house of Judah followed David.
And the number of days that David reigned in Hebron over the house of Judah was seven years and six months.
Now Abner son of Ner, and the men of Ish-bosheth son of Saul, went out from Mahanajim towards Gibeon.
Joab also son of Zeruah, and David's men went out, and they met one another by the pool of Gibeon; and some stood by the pool on this side, and others by the pool on the other side.
Then Abner said to Joab, "Let some of these young men get up now and skirmish with us." And Joab said, "Let them get up."
So they stood up, and twelve of Benjamin were counted for the party of Ish-bosheth son of Saul; and twelve of David's men.
Then each of them seized his man and thrust his sword into his side, and they all fell together; and that place was called Helkath-hatsurim, which is in Gibeon.
And there was on that day a very fierce battle, in which Abner was defeated along with the Israelites by David's men.
The three sons of Zeruah, Joab, Abishai, and Hasael, were there. And Hasael was light on foot like a deer [that is] in the field.
And Hasael pursued Abner, without turning to the right or left, according to Abner. Abner, looking behind him, said: Are you Hasael? And [Hasael] replied: I am.
And Abner said to him, "Turn aside to the right or to the left, and seize one of these young men, and take his spoils for yourself." But Hasael would not turn aside from him.
And Abner kept saying to Hasael: Turn away from me; why should I throw you to the ground dead? And how could I dare to appear before Joab your brother?
But he would never turn away; and Abner struck him with his halberd on the fifth rib of his hindquarters, so that his halberd came out of his back, and he fell there fast dead on the square; and all who came to the place where Hasael had fallen dead stopped.
Joab and Abisai pursued Abner, and the sun set when they came to the hill of Ammah, which is opposite Gujah, on the road to the desert of Gibeon.
And Benjamin's children gathered around Abner, lined up in a battalion, and stood on the top of a hill.
Then Abner cried out to Joab, and said, "Will the sword devour forever? Do you not know that bitterness is at the end? And how long will you delay telling the people to stop persecuting their brothers?"
And Joab said: As God lives, if you had spoken thus, the people would have withdrawn early in the morning, each behind his brother.
So Joab sounded the trumpet and all the people stopped; they did not pursue Israel anymore, nor did they continue to fight.
So Abner and his people walked all that night through the countryside, crossed the Jordan, passed through all of Bithron, and arrived at Mahanajim.
Joab also returned from the pursuit of Abner; and when he had assembled all the people, it was found that nineteen of David's men were missing, and Hasael.
But David's people struck down some of Benjamin's people, [namely] some of Abner's people, three hundred and sixty men who died.
And they took Hasael away, and buried him in the tomb of his father, in Bethlehem; and all that night Joab and his men marched and arrived at Hebron at daybreak.
Now there was a long war between the house of Saul and the house of David. But David advanced and grew stronger, while the house of Saul diminished.

And sons were born to David in Hebron; his firstborn was Amnon, from Ahinoham, who was from Jezrehel.

The second was Chiliab, of Abigail, [who had been] the wife of Nabal, who was of Carmel. The third was Absalom, son of Mahacah, daughter of Talmai, King of Geshur.

The fourth was Adonijah, son of Haggith. The fifth was Sephatjah, son of Abital.

And the sixth was Jethreham of Heglah, [who was also] David's wife. These were born to David in Hebron.

So it came to pass that while there was war between the house of Saul and the house of David, Abner supported the house of Saul.

Now Saul had a concubine named Rizpah, daughter of Aiah; and [Ish-bosheth] said to Abner, "Why have you come in to my father's concubine?"

And Abner was very angry because of Ish-bosheth's speech, and he said to him, "Am I a dog's head, I who at this time showed my devotion to the house of Saul your father and to his brothers and friends against Judah, by not letting you fall into the hands of David, that you seek me today for the iniquity of a woman?"

May God do this to Abner, and this as well, if I do not do to David according to what the Lord swore to him;

By transferring to him the Kingdom of the house of Saul, and establishing the throne of David over Israel and Judah, from Dan to Beersheba!

And [Ish-bosheth] did not dare to answer Abner a single word, because he feared him.

Abner therefore sent messengers to David from him, saying, "Whose is the land?" [and to] say, "Make a deal with me, and behold, my hand will be with you, to subdue all Israel under your power."

And David replied, "I will agree with you; I ask only one thing of you, that you shall not see my face unless you first bring Michal, daughter of Saul, back to me when you come to see me."

Then David sent messengers to Ish-bosheth son of Saul, saying, "Give me back my wife Michal, whom I married for a hundred Philistine foreskins."

And Ish-bosheth sent, and took her away from her husband Paltiel son of Laish.

And her husband went with her, weeping continually for her, as far as Bahurim; and Abner said to him, "Go, and return home"; and he returned home.

Now Abner spoke to the Elders of Israel, and said to them: You once sought David to [establish him] as King over you.

Now therefore do it; for the Lord has spoken of David, and said: Through David my servant I will deliver my people Israel from the hand of the Philistines, and from the hand of all their enemies.

And Abner spoke likewise to the people of Benjamin, when they heard him; then he went away to expressly convey to David, who was at Hebron, what seemed good to Israel, and to all the house of Benjamin.

And Abner came to David at Hebron, and twenty men with him; and David made a feast for Abner and the men who were with him.

Then Abner said to David, "I will arise and go and gather all Israel to my lord the king, so that they may make a covenant with you, and you may reign as you desire." So David sent Abner away, and he went in peace.

Now behold, David's men returned with Joab from some raid, and they brought with them a great deal of plunder; but Abner was no longer with David at Hebron; for he had sent him away, and he had gone in peace.

So Joab, and all the army that was with him, returned; and this report was made to Joab, saying, Abner son of Ner came to the King, who sent him away, and he went away in peace.

And Joab came to the King, and said, "What have you done? Behold, Abner came to you; why did you send him away like this, so that he went on his way?"

You know very well that Abner son of Ner came to deceive you, to recognize your going out and coming in, and to know everything you do.

And Joab went out from David, and sent after Abner some men who brought him back from the pit of Sira, without David knowing anything about it.

Abner then returned to Hebron, and Joab took him aside inside the gate to speak to him privately; and he struck him there on the fifth rib, and so [Abner] died because of the blood of Hasael, Joab's brother.

And David, having heard what had happened, said: I and my kingdom are innocent before the Lord forever of the blood of Abner son of Ner.

May this blood stop on the head of Joab, and on all his father's house; and may the house of Joab never be without some man having a discharge, or having leprosy, or leaning on a staff, or falling by the sword, or having a lack of bread.

So Joab and his brother Abishai killed Abner, because he had killed their brother Hasael near Gibeon in the battle.

And David said to Joab and all the people who were with him, "Tear your clothes, and put on sackcloth, and mourn before Abner." And King David walked after the coffin.

And when they had buried Abner in Hebron, the King raised his voice and wept at Abner's tomb; all the people also wept.

And the King made a lament over Abner, and said: Did Abner die like a coward?

Your hands were not bound, and your feet were not put in bronze stocks, but you fell as one falls before the wicked; and all the people began to weep for him again.

Then all the people came to give David some food while it was still day; but David swore, and said, May God do this to me, and add to it, if before sunset I taste bread, or anything else.

And all the people heard it, and found it good; and all the people approved of everything the King did.

On that day all the people and all Israel knew that what they had done to kill Abner son of Ner had not come from the King.

And the King said to his servants, "Do you not know that a captain, and even a high-ranking captain, has been put to death today in Israel?"

But I am still weak today, though I have been anointed king, and these men, the sons of Zeruiah, are too strong for me. May the Lord repay the wicked according to their evil.

When Saul's son heard that Abner had died in Hebron, his hands went limp, and all Israel was astonished.

Now Saul's son had two captains of bands, one named Bahana, and the other Rechab, son of Rimmon Beerothian, of the children of Benjamin; for [the city of] Beeroth was also renowned of Benjamin.

And the Beerothians had fled to Gittajim, and they have remained there to this day.

And Jonathan, son of Saul, had a son who was injured in the feet, aged five, when the news [of the death of] Saul and Jonathan came from Jezrehel; and his housekeeper took him, and fled; and as she hurried to flee, he fell, and became lame; and he was named Mephibosheth.

Rechab and Bahana son of Rimmon Beerothian came, and entered during the heat of the day into the house of Ish-bosheth, who was taking his midday rest.

So Rechab and Bahana his brother went into the middle of the house, got some wheat, and struck him on the fifth rib, and escaped.

So they entered the house, when Ish-bosheth was lying on his bed, in the room where he was sleeping, and they beat him and killed him; then they cut off his head and took it, and they walked along the country road all that night.

And they brought the head of Ish-bosheth to David at Hebron, and they said to the King, "Here is the head of Ish-bosheth, son of Saul your enemy, who sought your life; and the Lord has today avenged my lord the king on Saul and his descendants."

But David answered Rechab and Bahana his brother, sons of Rimmon the Beerothian, and said to them, "As surely as the Lord lives, who has delivered my soul out of every distress;

I seized the one who came to announce to me, saying, "Behold, Saul is dead," and who thought to bring me good news, and I killed him at Ziklag, which was the reward I owed him for his good news.

How much more [must I punish] these wicked people who killed a good man in his own home, on his own bed? Now then, shall I not demand his blood from your hand, and shall I not wipe you off the face of the earth?

David then gave orders to his men, who killed them and cut off their hands and feet, and hung them in the pool at Hebron. Then they took the head of Ish-bosheth and buried it in the tomb of Abner at Hebron.

Then all the Tribes of Israel came to David at Hebron and spoke to him, saying, "Behold, we are your bones and your flesh."

And even before, when Saul was King over us, you were the one who led and brought back Israel; and moreover the Lord said to you: You shall shepherd my people Israel, and you shall be Leader of Israel.

All the elders of Israel came to the King at Hebron; and King David made a covenant with them at Hebron before the Lord; and they anointed David King over Israel.

David was thirty years old when he began to reign, [and] he reigned forty years.

He reigned in Hebron over Judah seven years and six months; then he reigned thirty-three years in Jerusalem over all Israel and Judah.

Now the King went with his men to Jerusalem against the Jebusites who lived in that land, who said to David, "You shall not enter here unless you remove the blind and the lame," meaning, "David shall not enter here."

Nevertheless, David took the fortress of Zion, which is the City of David.

Now David had said on that day: Whoever defeats the Jebusites and reaches the canal, and the blind and the lame, who are hated by the soul of David, [will be rewarded].

That is why it is said: No blind or lame person shall enter this house.

And David dwelt in the fortress, and called it the City of David; and David built all around it, from the Millo to within.

And David kept making progress; for the Lord God of hosts was with him.

Hiram King of Tyre also sent messengers to David, and cedar wood, and carpenters, and stonemasons to build; and they built the house of David.

And David knew that the Lord had established him as king over Israel, and had exalted his kingdom for the sake of his people Israel.

And David took more concubines and wives from Jerusalem after he came from Hebron, and more sons and daughters were born to him.

These are the names of those born to him in Jerusalem: Sammuah, Zobab, Nathan, and Solomon.

And Jibhar, and Elisuah, and Nepheg, and Japhiah,

And Elisama, and Eljadah, and Eliphelet.

When the Philistines heard that David had been anointed king over Israel, they all went up to look for David; and when David heard of it, he went down to the stronghold.

And the Philistines came, and spread out in the valley of Rephaim.

Then David inquired of the Lord, saying, "Shall I go up against the Philistines? Will you deliver them into my hand?" And the Lord answered David, "Go up, for I will certainly deliver the Philistines into your hand."

Then David came to Bahal-perazim and defeated them there, and he said, "The Lord has swept out my enemies before me as with an overflowing of waters." Therefore he named that place Bahal-perazim.

And they left their false gods there, which David and his people carried away.

And the Philistines went up yet again, and spread out into the valley of Rephaim.

And David inquired of the Lord, who answered: You shall not go up; [but] you shall turn behind them, and go against them opposite the mulberry trees.

And when you hear a sound like people marching on the tops of the mulberry trees, then move; because the Lord will have gone out before you to strike the camp of the Philistines.

So David did as the Lord had commanded him, and defeated the Philistines from Gebah to Gezer.

David again assembled all the elite men of Israel, [who were] thirty thousand [men].

Then David arose and departed with all the people who were with him to Bahaleh of Judah, to transport the Ark of God, whose name is called: The Name of the Lord of hosts, who dwells between the Cherubim upon the Ark.

And they placed the Ark of God on a brand new cart, and brought it from the house of Abinadab, which was on the hillside; and Huza and Ahio, the sons of Abinadab, drove the new cart.

And they took it away, namely the Ark of God from the house of Abinadab, which was on the hillside, and Ahjo went before the Ark.

And David and all the house of Israel played before the Lord with all kinds of instruments made of fir wood, and with violins, bagpipes, drums, sistrums, and cymbals.

And when they came to the threshing floor of Nacon, Huza put [his hand] to the Ark of God, and held it fast, because the oxen had slipped.

And the anger of the Lord was kindled against Huza, and God struck him down there because of his indiscretion, and he died there near the Ark of God.

And David was grieved because the Lord had broken through Huza; therefore that place has been called Perez-Huza to this day.

And David was afraid of the Lord that day, and said, "How can the Ark of the Lord come to me?"

And David would not bring the Ark of the Lord back to his home in the City of David, but he diverted it to the house of Hobed-edom Gittite.

And the Ark of the Lord remained three months in the house of Hobed-edom Gittite; and the Lord blessed Hobed-edom and all his house.

Afterwards, people came and told David, "The Lord has blessed the house of Hobed-edom and all that belongs to it, for the sake of the Ark of God." Therefore David went and brought the Ark of God from the house of Hobed-edom to the City of David with joy.

And it came to pass that when those who carried the Ark of God had walked six paces, fat bulls and rams were sacrificed.

And David leaped with all his might before the Lord; and he was girded with a linen ephod.

So David and all the house of Israel brought the Ark of the Lord with shouts of joy and the sound of trumpets.

But as the Ark of the Lord entered the City of David, Michal, daughter of Saul, looked out of a window and saw King David leaping with all his might before the Lord, and she despised him in her heart.

So they brought the Ark of the Lord and set it in its place, in the tabernacle that David had prepared for it. And David offered burnt offerings and peace offerings before the Lord.

When David had finished offering burnt offerings and peace offerings, he blessed the people in the name of the Lord of hosts.

And he divided among all the people, [namely] among all the multitude of Israel, both men and women, to each a cake, a piece of meat, and a bottle [of wine]; and all the people returned each to his own house.

Then David returned to bless his house; and Michal, daughter of Saul, came to meet him and said to him: How great an honor the King of Israel has bestowed upon himself today by uncovering himself before the eyes of the servant girls of his servants, as a worthless man would, without any shame!

And David said to Michal, "This has been done before the Lord, who chose me rather than your father and all his house, and who commanded me to be the leader of his people Israel; therefore I will rejoice before the Lord."

And I will make myself even more abject than I have done this time, and I will consider myself even less; despite this I will be honored before the servants of whom you have spoken.

But Michal, daughter of Saul, had no children until the day of her death.

Now it came to pass that after the King had sat down in his house, and the Lord had given him peace with all his enemies around him;

He said to Nathan the Prophet: Look now, I dwell in a house of cedars, and the Ark of God dwells in curtains.

And Nathan said to the King, "Go, do all that is in your heart, for the Lord is with you."

But it came to pass that night that the word of the Lord came to Nathan, saying: Go, and tell David my servant, "Thus says the Lord: 'Will you build me a house to dwell in?'"

Since I have not lived in a house from the day I brought the children of Israel up out of Egypt until this day, but I have walked about in a tabernacle and in a pavilion.

In all the places where I have walked with all the children of Israel, have I said a single word to any of the Tribes of Israel, whom I commanded to shepherd my people Israel, saying: Why have you not built me a house of cedars?

Now therefore you shall say to David my servant, Thus says the Lord of hosts: I took you from a hut, from among the sheep, to be the leader of my people Israel.

And I have been with you wherever you have walked, and I have cut off all your enemies from before you, and I have given you a great name, like the names of the great ones who are on the earth.

And I will establish a place for my people Israel, I will plant them, they will dwell in their own home, they will no longer be disturbed, and the unrighteous will no longer afflict them, as they did before,

Know, from the day that I appointed judges over my people Israel, and gave you rest from all your enemies, and that the Lord made you hear that he would build you a house.

When your days are fulfilled, and you have slept with your fathers, I will raise up after you your son, who will come from your own body, and I will establish his kingdom.

He will build a house for my Name, and I will establish the throne of his kingdom forever.

I will be his father, and he will be my son; if he commits any iniquity, I will punish him with a human rod, and with the wounds of the sons of men.

But my grace will not depart from him, as I departed from Saul, whom I removed from before you.

Thus your house and your kingdom will be secured forever before your eyes, [and] your throne will be established forever.

Nathan spoke thus to David, according to all these words, and according to all this vision.

Then King David came in and stood before the Lord, and said, "Who am I, O Lord God, and what is my house, that you have brought me to this place?"

And yet this seemed a small thing to you, O Lord God! For you have spoken of your servant's house for a long time. Is this the way of men, O Lord God!

And what more could David say to you? For, Lord Eternal, you know your servant.

You have done all these great things for the sake of your word, and according to your heart, in order to make your servant known.

That is why you have shown yourself to be great, O Lord God! For there is none like you, and there is no God besides you, according to all that we have heard with our ears.

And who is like your people, like Israel, the only nation on earth that God came to redeem, to [make] his people, both to acquire a [great] name for himself, and to acquire that greatness for you, and to do in your land before your people, whom you redeemed from Egypt, terrible things against the nations and against their gods?

For you have secured your people Israel to be your people forever; and you, O Lord, have been God to them.

Now therefore, O Lord God, confirm forever the word that you have spoken concerning your servant and concerning his house, and do as you have spoken.

And may your Name be magnified forever, so that it may be said: The Lord of hosts is the God of Israel; and may the house of David your servant remain firmly established before you.

For you, O Lord of hosts! God of Israel! You have spoken to your servant, and you have said to him, I will build you a house, therefore your servant has taken the boldness to make this prayer to you.

Now therefore, Lord Eternal! you are God, your words will be true; and you have promised this good to your servant.

Therefore, please bless the house of your servant, so that it may be forever before you; for you have spoken thus, O Lord Eternal! and the house of your servant shall be filled with your blessing forever.

After this it came to pass that David defeated the Philistines, and subdued them, and David took Methegamma from the hand of the Philistines.

He also defeated the Moabites, and measured them with a line, making them lie down on the ground; and he measured two lines to kill them, and one full line to spare their lives; and the land of the Moabites was David's on this condition, that they would be his subjects and tributaries.

David also defeated Hadadezer son of Rehob, King of Zobah, as he was going to recover his borders on the river Euphrates.

And David took from him 1,700 mounted men and 20,000 foot soldiers, and hamstringed all the chariots, but he kept 100 chariots.

For the Syrians from Damascus had come to help Hadadhezer King of Zobah; and David defeated twenty-two thousand Syrians.

Then David garrisoned Syria from Damascus, and the land of these Syrians belonged to David on this condition, that they would be his subjects and tributaries; and the Lord protected David wherever he went.

And David took the golden shields that belonged to the servants of Hadadezer, and brought them to Jerusalem.

King David also took away a large quantity of bronze from Betah and Berothai, cities of Hadadhezer.

Now Tohi, King of Hamath, heard that David had defeated all the forces of Hadadhezer.

And he sent Joram his son to King David, to greet him, and to congratulate him on having waged war against Hadadhezer, and on having defeated him; for Hadadhezer was continually at war with Tohi, and [Joram] brought ships of silver, and ships of gold, and ships of bronze;

Which David dedicated to the Lord with the silver and gold which he had [already] dedicated [from the spoils] of all the nations which he had subjugated;

From Syria, from Moab, from the children of Hammon, from the Philistines, from Hamalech, and from the spoils of Hadadezer, son of Rehob, King of Zobah.

David also acquired [a great] reputation for the fact that, returning from the defeat of the Syrians, [he cut to pieces] eighteen thousand Idumeans in the Valley of Salt.

And he garrisoned Idumea, he garrisoned, I say, all Idumea; and all the Idumeans were subject to David; and the Lord guarded David wherever he went.

Thus David reigned over all Israel, doing justice and righteousness for all his people.

And Joab son of Zeruiah was in charge of the army; and Jehoshaphat son of Ahilud was in charge of the records.

And Zadok son of Ahitub, and Ahimelech son of Abiathar were the priests, and Seraiah was the secretary.

And Benaiah son of Jehoiada was over the Kerethites and the Pelethites; and the sons of David were the chief officers.

Then David said, "But is there no one left of the house of Saul, that I may show him kindness for Jonathan's sake?"

Now there was a servant in Saul's house named Ziba, who was summoned to David. And the King said to him, "Are you Ziba?" and he answered, "I am your servant [Ziba]." And the King said, "Is there no one left of the house of Saul? I will show him great mercy." And Ziba answered the King, "There is still one of Jonathan's sons who is injured in the feet."

And the King said to him: Where is he? And Ziba answered the King: Behold, he is in the house of Machir son of Hammiel, in Lodebar.

Then King David sent and brought him from the house of Machir, son of Hammiel, of Lodebar.

And when Mephibosheth, the son of Jonathan, son of Saul, came to David, he bowed his face and prostrated himself before him. And David said, "Mephibosheth!" And he answered, "Here is your servant."

And David said to him, "Do not be afraid; for I will surely do you good for the sake of Jonathan your father, and I will restore to you all the lands of Saul your father, and you will always eat bread at my table."

And [Mephibosheth] bowed down and said, "Who am I, your servant, that you should look upon a dead dog like me?"

And the King summoned Ziba, Saul's servant, and said to him, "I have given to your master's son all that belonged to Saul and to all his household."

Therefore, plow those fields for him, you and your sons and your servants, and gather its produce, so that your master's son may have bread to eat; but as for Mephibosheth, your master's son, he will always eat bread at my table. Now Ziba had fifteen sons and twenty servants.

And Ziba said to the King: Your servant will do everything that my lord the King has commanded his servant. But as for Mephibosheth, (said the King) he will eat at my table, like one of the King's sons.

Now Mephibosheth had a grandson named Mica; and all those who remained in the house of Ziba were servants of Mephibosheth.

And Mephibosheth remained in Jerusalem, because he always ate at the King's table; and he was lame in both feet.

But it came to pass after this that the King of the children of Hammon died, and Hanun his son reigned in his place.

And David said, "I will show mercy to Hanun son of Nahas, just as his father showed mercy to me." So David sent his servants to comfort him on the death of his father.

And David's servants came to the land of the children of Hammon.

But the leaders of Hammon's sons said to Hanun their lord: Do you think that David sent you comforters to honor your father? Was it not to reconcile the city and spy on it in order to destroy it that David sent his servants to you?

Hanun then took David's servants, and shaved off half of their beards, and cut off half of their clothes to their hips; then he sent them away.

And they informed David, who sent to meet them; for these men were very confused: and the King told them: Stay in Jericho until your beards have grown back, [and] then you may return.

But when the children of Hammon saw that they had made themselves unpopular with David, they sent to raise at their expense twenty thousand foot soldiers from the Syrians of Beth-rehob, and from the Syrians of Zobah, and one thousand men from the King of Mahacah, and twelve thousand men from those of Tob.

Having learned of this, David sent Joab and the entire army, namely the most valiant men.

And the children of Hammon came out, and drew up in battle formation at the entrance of the gate; and the Syrians of Zobah, and of Rehob, and those of Tob and of Mahacah were apart in the countryside.

And Joab, seeing that their army was turned against him, before and behind, took some of the best men from among all those of Israel and arrayed them against the Syrians;

And he gave the leadership of the rest of the people to Abisai his brother, who sided with them against the children of Hammon.

And [Joab] said to him: If the Syrians are stronger than me, you will come to deliver me; and if the children of Hammon are stronger than you, I will also go to deliver you.

Be valiant, and let us stand valiantly for our people, and for the cities of our God; and let the Lord do what seems good to him.

Then Joab and the people who were with him approached to give battle to the Syrians; and [the Syrians] fled from before him.

And the children of Hammon, seeing that the Syrians had fled, also fled from before Abishai and entered the city; and Joab returned [from the war against] the children of Hammon and came to Jerusalem.

But the Syrians, seeing that they had been defeated by those of Israel, rallied together.

And Hadadzezer sent and brought Syrians from beyond the river, who came to Helam, and Sobach, the commander of Hadadzezer's army, led them.

Having been told this to David, he assembled all Israel, and crossed the Jordan, and came to Helam; and the Syrians drew up their battle lines against David, and fought against him.

But the Syrians fled from before Israel; and David defeated seven hundred chariots of the Syrians, and forty thousand men on horseback; he also struck down Zobach, the commander of their army, who died there.

And when all the kings who served Hadadhezer saw that they had been defeated by those of Israel, they made peace with Israel and were subject to them; and the Syrians were afraid to help the children of Hammon any longer.

Now it came to pass a year later, when the Kings went out [to war], that David sent Joab, and with him his servants, and all Israel, and they destroyed the children of Hammon, and besieged Rabbah; but David remained in Jerusalem.

And in the evening it happened that David got up from his bed, and as he walked on the platform of the Royal Hotel, he saw from this platform a woman washing herself, and this woman was very beautiful to see.

And David sent to inquire about this woman, and was told, "Is this not Bathsheba, daughter of Eliham, wife of Uriah the Hittite?"

And David sent messengers, and took her away; and when she came to him, he lay with her; for she was cleansed of her uncleanness; then she returned to her house.

And this woman conceived; and she sent word to David, saying, "I am pregnant."

Then David sent word to Joab: Send me Uriah the Hittite; and Joab sent Uriah to David.

And Uriah came to him; and David asked him how Joab was doing, and the people, and how the war was going.

Then David said to Uriah, "Go down to your house and wash your feet." So Uriah left the king's house, and a royal present was carried after him.

But Uriah slept at the gate of the king's house, with all his lord's servants, and did not go down to his house.

And it was reported to David, and they told him, "Uriah has not gone down to his house." And David said to Uriah, "Have you not just come from a journey? Why have you not gone down to your house?"

And Uriah answered David, "The Ark, and Israel, and Judah are staying in tents; my lord Joab also, and the servants of my lord are encamped in the fields; and shall I go into my house to eat and drink, and to lie with my wife? As surely as you live, and as your soul lives, if I do such a thing.”

And David said to Uriah, “Stay here today, and tomorrow I will send you away.” So Uriah stayed that day and the next day in Jerusalem.

Then David called him, and he ate and drank in his presence, and David made him drunk; and yet he went out in the evening to sleep in his bed with all the servants of his Lord, and did not go down to his house.

And the next morning David wrote letters to Joab, and sent them by the hand of Uriah.

And he wrote these letters in these terms: Put Uriah where the fiercest battle will be, and withdraw from him, so that he may be struck down and die.

So after Joab had considered the city, he placed Uriah where he knew the most valiant men would be.

And those of the city went out and fought against Joab, and some of the people [who were] servants of David died; Uriah the Hittite also died.

Then Joab sent word to David about everything that had happened in the battle.

And he instructed the messenger, saying: When you have finished speaking to the King about everything that happened in the battle,

If it happens that the King becomes angry and says to you: Why did you approach the city to fight, don't you know very well that something is always thrown over the wall?

What killed Abimelech son of Jerubbeseth? Was it not a millstone that a woman threw down on him from the wall, and he died at Tebez? Why did you go near the wall? Tell him: Your servant Uriah the Hittite also died there.

So the messenger departed, and having arrived, he informed David of everything for which Joab had sent him.

And the messenger said to David: They were stronger than us, and came out against us in the field, but we drove them back to the entrance of the gate;

And the archers shot at your servants from above the wall, and some of the King's servants died; your servant Uriah the Hittite also died.

And David said to the messenger, “Tell Joab, ‘Do not worry about this; the sword will carry off both of them; redouble the fight against the city and destroy it; and you give him courage.’”

And Uriah's wife heard that Uriah her husband was dead, and she mourned for her husband.

And after the mourning period was over, David sent and brought her back to his house, and she became his wife and bore him a son; but what David had done displeased the Lord.

And the Lord sent Nathan to David, who came to him and said, “There were two men in a certain city, one rich and the other poor.”

The rich man had a great abundance of both large and small livestock.

But the poor man had nothing at all except a little ewe, which he had bought and fed, and which was believed to be in his house and with his children, eating from his pieces, drinking from his cup, and sleeping in his bosom, and she was like a daughter to him.

But a traveler came to the house of this rich man, and the rich man did not take his own cattle and sheep to prepare food for the traveler who had entered his house, but he took the poor man's sheep and prepared it for the man who had entered his house.

Then David's anger burned fiercely against that man; and he said to Nathan, “As surely as the Lord lives, the man who did this deserves to die.”

And because he did this, and did not spare [this sheep], for one sheep he will pay back four.

Then Nathan said to David, “You are the man. This is what the Lord, the God of Israel, says: I have anointed you king over Israel, and I have delivered you from the hand of Saul.”

I have also given you the house of your Lord, and the wives of your Lord into your bosom, and I have given you the house of Israel and Judah; and if that were not enough, I would have added such and such a thing to you.

Why then have you despised the word of the Lord, by doing what displeases him? You struck down Uriah the Hittite with the sword, you took his wife [so that she might be] your wife, and you killed him with the sword of the sons of Hammon.

Therefore, now the sword will never leave your house, because you have despised me, and have taken the wife of Uriah the Hittite to be your wife.

Thus says the Lord: Behold, I am going to bring evil upon you out of your own house; I will take your wives before your eyes, and give them to a man of your house, and he shall sleep with your wives in the sight of this sun.

For you did it in secret, but I will do it in the sight of all Israel, and before the sun.

Then David said to Nathan, "I have sinned against the Lord." And Nathan said to David, "Therefore the Lord has taken away your sin; you shall not die."

However, because in this you have given the enemies of the Lord an occasion to blaspheme him, because of this the son who is born to you will certainly die.

After this Nathan returned to his house; and the Lord struck the child that Uriah's wife had borne to David, and David was greatly grieved.

And David prayed to God for the child, he fasted and he spent the night lying on the ground.

And the elders of his house rose up and came to him, to make him get up from the ground, but he would not [get up], and he ate nothing with them.

And it came to pass that the child died on the seventh day, and the servants of David were afraid to tell him that the child was dead; for they said, Behold, when the child was alive, we spoke to him, and he would not listen to our voice; how then shall we tell him that the child is dead, that he may grieve more?

And David perceived that his servants were speaking in hushed tones, and he understood that the child was dead; and David said to his servants, "Is not the child dead?" They answered, "He is dead."

Then David got up from the ground, washed, anointed himself, and changed his clothes; and he went into the house of the Lord and worshiped; then he returned to his house, and when he asked [for something to eat], they put meat before him, and he ate.

And his servants said to him, "What are you doing? You fasted and wept for the child while he was still alive, and after the child died you got up and ate meat."

And he said, "While the child was still alive, I fasted and wept, for I said, 'Who knows if the Lord will have mercy on me, and if the child will not live?'"

But now that he is dead, why should I fast? Could I bring him back again? I am going to him, and he will not return to me.

And David comforted his wife Bathsheba, and went to her, and lay with her, and she bore him a son, whom he named Solomon; and the Lord loved him.

This is what he sent word through the ministry of Nathan the Prophet, who gave him the name Jedijah, because of the Lord.

Now Joab had fought against Rabbah, who belonged to the children of Hammon, and had taken the royal city.

And Joab had sent messengers to David, to tell him: I have defeated Rabbah, and I have taken the city of waters.

Therefore, now gather the rest of the people, and encamp against the city, and take it; lest if I take it, my name should be claimed upon it.

David then gathered all the people together and marched against Rabbah; he defeated it and took it.

And he took the crown from off the head of their King, which weighed a talent of gold, and there were precious stones on it; and it was put on the head of David, who carried off a very large amount of plunder from the city.

He also brought the people who were there and put them under saws, iron harrows, and iron axes, and he made them pass through a brick-baking furnace; he did this to all the cities of the children of Hammon. Then David returned with all the people to Jerusalem.

Now it came to pass after this that Absalom, son of David, having a sister who was beautiful, and whose name was Tamar, Amnon son of David, loved her.

And he was so tormented by [this passion], that he fell ill for love of Tamar his sister, for she was a virgin; and because it seemed too difficult for Amnon to obtain anything from her.

Now Amnon had a close friend named Jonadab, son of Shima, brother of David; and Jonadab was a very crafty man.

And he said to [Amnon]: Son of the King, why do you grow so weary day by day? Will you not tell me? Amnon said to him: I love Tamar, sister of my brother Absalom.

Then Jonadab said to him, "Lie down in your bed and pretend to be sick; and when your father comes to see you, you shall say to him, 'Please let my sister Tamar come, so that she may prepare something appetizing for me to eat, and when I see what she has prepared, I may eat it from her hand.'"

So Amnon lay down and pretended to be ill; and when the King came to see him, he said to him, "Please let my sister Tamar come and make two fritters in front of me, and let me eat them from her hand."

David then sent word to Tamar in the house: "Go now to the house of your brother Amnon, and prepare something appetizing for him."

And Tamar went to the house of her brother Amnon, who was lying down; and she took some dough, and kneaded it, and made fritters in his presence, and cooked them.

Then she took the pan and poured them before him, but Amnon refused to eat them; and said: Have all those who are with me withdraw: and everyone withdrew.

Then Amnon said to Tamar, "Bring me this meat into the inner sanctum, and let me eat from your hand." So Tamar took the fritters she had made and brought them to her brother Amnon in the inner sanctum.

And she presented them to him so that he might eat; but he seized her and said to her, "Come, lie with me, my sister."

And she answered him, "No, my brother, do not rape me; for this is not done in Israel; do not commit this outrage."

And what would become of me with my disgrace? And you would be considered a fool in Israel. Now then, I beg you, speak to the King, and he will not prevent you from taking me as your wife.

But he would not listen to her; and he was stronger than her, and raped her, and lay with her.

After this, Amnon hated her with a great hatred, so that the hatred he felt for her was greater than the love he had had for her; so Amnon said to her: Get up, go away.

And she answered him: You have no reason to do me this harm, except to drive me away; [this harm] is greater than the other that you have done to me; but he would not listen to her.

So he called the boy who served him, and said to him, "Now drive this one out from under me, [put her] outside, and shut the door behind her."

Now she was dressed in a multicolored robe; for the king's daughters, who were still virgins, were dressed in this way. So his servant put her out and shut the door behind her.

Then Tamar took some ashes on her head, tore off the multicolored robe she was wearing, put her hand on her head, and went away screaming.

And her brother Absalom said to her, "Wasn't your brother Amnon with you? But now, my sister, be quiet; he is your brother. Don't take this to heart." So Tamar remained desolate in the house of her brother Absalom.

When King David learned of all these things, he was very angry.

Now Absalom spoke neither good nor bad to Amnon, because Absalom hated Amnon, because he had raped his sister Tamar.

And it came to pass at the end of two whole years, that Absalom, having the shearers at Bahal-hazor, which was near Ephraim, invited all the sons of the King.

And Absalom came to the King and said to him, "Behold, your servant now has the shearers; therefore I pray that the King and his servants come with your servant."

But the King said to Absalom, "No, my son, I beg you that we not all go, so that we will not be a burden to you." And although he urged him strongly, he still would not go; but he blessed him.

And Absalom said, "If you do not come, I beg you, let my brother Amnon come with us."

And the king replied, "Why should he go with you?"

And Absalom pressed him so hard that he let Amnon go, and all the sons of the King with him.

Now Absalom had commanded his servants, saying, "Be careful, I beg you, when Amnon's heart is merry with wine, and I tell you, 'Strike Amnon, kill him!' Do not be afraid; have I not commanded you? Be strong, and act like valiant men."

And Absalom's servants did to Amnon as Absalom had commanded, then all the king's sons got up, and each mounted his mule, and fled.

And it came to pass that, while still on the way, the word came to David that Absalom had killed all the sons of the King, and that not one of them remained.

Then the King got up, tore his clothes, and lay down on the ground; all his servants were also there with their clothes torn.

And Jonadab son of Shimha, David's brother, spoke up and said: Let not my lord say that all the young men of the king's sons have been killed, for Amnon alone is dead; because what Absalom had planned from the day that Amnon raped Tamar his sister, has been carried out according to his command.

Now therefore let not the King my Lord put this into his heart, saying that all the sons of the King are dead; for Amnon alone is dead.

Now Absalom fled, but the watchman looked up and saw a great army coming from behind him, beside the mountain.

And Jonadab said to the King: Here are the King's sons coming; the thing has happened just as your servant said.

But as soon as he had finished speaking, behold, the sons of the King came, and raised their voices, and wept; the King also and all his servants wept bitterly.

But Absalom fled and went to Talmai, son of Hammihud, king of Gezur; and [David] wept every day for his son.

When Absalom had fled and come to Gezur, he stayed there three years.

Then King David felt the desire to go to Absalom, because he was comforted by the death of Amnon.

Then Joab, son of Zeruiah, knowing that the King's heart was with Absalom, He sent to Tekoah, and brought from there a wise woman, to whom he said, "Please pretend to mourn, and put on mourning clothes now, and do not anoint yourself with oil, but be like a woman who has been mourning for a long time for a dead man."

And go to the King, and speak to him; for Joab put in her mouth what she was to say.

The Tekohit woman then spoke to the King, and bowed her face to the ground, and prostrated herself, and said: O King! help me.

And the King said to her, "What is the matter with you?" And she replied, "Indeed, I am a widow, and my husband is dead."

Now your servant had two sons, who quarreled in the fields, and there was no one to separate them; so one struck the other, and killed him.

And behold, the whole family has risen up against your servant, saying, Give us the one who struck his brother, so that we may put him to death, because of the life of his brother whom he killed; and that we may also exterminate the heir; and they want in this way to extinguish the living coal that remains to me, so that they may leave no name to my husband, and leave me no remnant on the earth.

The King said to the woman, "Go home, and I will give my orders in your favor."

Then the Tekohit woman said to the King, "My Lord [and my] King! May the iniquity be upon me and upon my father's house, and may the King and his throne be innocent." And the King replied: Bring me the one who will speak against you, and he will never touch you.

And she said, "I pray that the king may remember the Lord his God, so that he will not allow the number of those responsible for my son's life to increase and be destroyed." He replied, "As surely as the Lord lives, not a single hair of your son's head falls to the ground."

And the woman said, "Please let your servant speak a word to my lord the King." And he replied, "Speak."

And the woman said, "But why have you thought such a thing against God's people? For does not the king, by saying this, condemn himself as being in the same situation, in that he does not bring back the one he has banished?"

For surely we will die, and we are like the waters that flow over the earth, which no one gathers up. Yet God did not take his life away, but found a way not to cast him away from himself, even though he was cast away.

And now I have come to speak to my lord the King, because the people have terrified me; and your servant said, 'I will now speak to the King, perhaps the King will do what his servant tells him.'

If therefore the King listens to his servant to deliver her from the hand of him [who wants to] exterminate us from the inheritance of God, me and my son;

Your servant said: May the word of my Lord the King now bring us rest; for my Lord the King is like an angel of God, knowing good and evil; may the Lord your God be with you.

And the King answered, and said to the woman, "Please do not hide from me anything I am about to ask you." And the woman said, "I pray that my lord the King will speak."

And the King said: Is it not Joab who has made you do all this? And the woman answered, and said: Your soul lives, O my Lord! that there can be no deviation to the right or to the left concerning all that the King my Lord has said, since it is true that your servant Joab commanded me, and himself put all these words into the mouth of your servant.

It was your servant Joab who caused me to express this speech in this way; but my Lord is wise like an angel of God, to know all that happens on earth.

Then the King said to Joab: Now then; you have been in charge of this matter; go now, and bring back the young man Absalom.

And Joab bowed his face to the ground, prostrated himself, and blessed the King. And Joab said, "Today your servant has known that he has found favor in your sight, O my lord the King! For the King has done as his servant told him."

So Joab got up and went to Gezur, and brought Absalom back to Jerusalem.

And the King said, "Let him go home and not see my face." So Absalom went home and did not see the King's face.

Now there was no man in all Israel so handsome as Absalom, to be admired for his [beauty]; from the sole of his feet to the crown of his head there was no blemish in him.

And when he had his hair cut, and it happened every year that he had it cut, because it was a burden to him, he weighed the hair of his head, [which weighed] two hundred shekels according to the King's weight.

And to Absalom were born three sons, and a daughter, whose name was Tamar, and who was a very beautiful woman.

And Absalom remained in Jerusalem for two whole years without seeing the face of the King.

Therefore, Absalom sent word to Joab to come to him and send him to the king, but he refused to go. He sent word to him a second time, but he still refused to come.

Then [Absalom] said to his servants, "You see Joab's field next to mine; it has barley there. Go and set fire to it." So Absalom's servants set fire to the field. Then Joab got up and went to Absalom in his house; and said to him, "Why did your servants set fire to my field?"

And Absalom answered Joab, "Behold, I have sent you to say, 'Come here, and I will send you to the king, and you shall say to him, "Why did I come from Gezur? It would have been better for me to be there still. Now therefore, let me see the face of the king; and if there is iniquity in me, let him put me to death."'"

So Joab came to the King and reported this to him; and the King summoned Absalom, who came to him and bowed down with his face to the ground before the King; and the King kissed Absalom.

Now it came to pass after this that Absalom provided himself with chariots and horses; and he had fifty archers who marched before him.

And Absalom would get up in the morning and stand beside the road that went to the gate; and if anyone had a case that required going to the King to seek justice, Absalom would call him and say, "From what city are you?" and he would answer, "Your servant is from such and such a tribe of Israel."

And Absalom said to him, "Look, your cause is good and just; but you have no one who [has a command from] the King to hear you."

Absalom said again: Oh, that I were appointed as judge in the land! And every man who had a case, and who had a right, would come to me, and I would give him justice.

It also happened that when someone approached him to prostrate themselves before him, he would extend his hand, take it, and kiss it.

Absalom did this to all those of Israel who came to the King for justice; and Absalom won the hearts of those of Israel.

And it came to pass at the end of forty years, that Absalom said to the King, "I beg you, let me go to Hebron to fulfill my vow which I have vowed to the Lord."

For when your servant was staying in Gezur in Syria, he made a vow, saying, "If the Lord will bring me back to Jerusalem to rest, I will give thanks to the Lord."

And the King answered him, "Go in peace." So he got up and went to Hebron.

Now Absalom had sent messengers throughout all the Tribes of Israel to say: As soon as you hear the sound of the trumpet, say: Absalom is established King in Hebron.

And two hundred men from Jerusalem who had been invited went with Absalom, and they went in simplicity [of heart], knowing nothing of [this matter].

Absalom also sent word to Ahithophel Gilonite, David's counselor, from his city of Gilo, when he offered his sacrifices; and the conspiracy grew stronger, because the people increased with Absalom.

Then a messenger came to David, who said to him: All the people of Israel have their hearts set on Absalom.

And David said to all his servants who were with him in Jerusalem, "Get up, and let us flee! For we cannot escape from Absalom. Hurry and go, lest he hasten and overtake us, bring disaster upon us, and strike the city with the edge of the sword."

And the King's servants answered the King: Your servants are ready to do whatever our Lord the King sees fit.

So the King went out, and all his household followed him; but the King left ten women, [who were his] concubines, to guard the house.

So the King went out, and all the people followed him; and they stopped at a distant place.

And all his servants walked beside him; and all the Kerethites, and all the Pelethites, and all the Gittites, [who were] six hundred men who came from Gath, to be in his wake, walked before the King.

But the King said to Ittai, Gittite: Why should you also come with us? Go back, and remain with the King; for you are a foreigner, and indeed you will soon return to your own place.

You have only just arrived; and should I make you wander here and there with us today? For as for me, I am going where I can; return and take your brothers with you; may grace and truth be with you.

But Ittai answered the King, saying, "As surely as the Lord lives, and as surely as my Lord the King lives, wherever my Lord the King may be, whether in death or in life, there your servant will be also."

So David said to Ittai, "Come, and walk." So Ittai Gittian walked with all his people, and all his little children who were with him.

And all the country wept aloud, and all the people passed on further; then the King crossed the Kidron Valley, and all the people crossed over opposite the road leading towards the desert;

Zadok was there with all the Levites who carried the Ark of the covenant of God, and they set down the Ark of God there; and Abiathar went up while all the people finished leaving the city.

And the King said to Zadok, "Bring the Ark of God back into the city; if I have found favor with the Lord, he will bring it back to me and show it to me, with its Tabernacle."

If he says to me, "I have no pleasure in you; here I am," let him do with me as he sees fit.

The King also said to the Priest Zadok: Are you not the Seer? Return in peace to the city, and Ahimahatz your son, and Jonathan son of Abiathar, your two sons with you. Look, I am going to stay in the desert countryside until I receive news from you.

Zadok and Abiathar brought the Ark of God back to Jerusalem and remained there.

And David went up the ascent of the olive trees, and as he went up he wept, and his head was covered, and he walked barefoot; all the people who were with him also went up, each with his head covered, and as they went up they wept.

So they told David this, and said to him, "Ahithophel is among those who conspired with Absalom." And David said, "Please, O Lord, thwart the plan of Ahithophel."

And it came to pass that when David had come to the top [of the mountain], where he worshiped before God, behold, Cusai Arkite came to meet him, with his clothes torn, and dust on his head.

And David said to him, "You will be a burden to me if you go any further with me."

But if you return to the city, and if you say to Absalom, O king! I will be your servant, and as I have long been your father's servant, I will now be your servant, you will thwart the counsel of Ahithophel.

And will not Zadok and Abiathar be there with you? So that everything you hear from the house of the King, you shall report to Zadok and Abiathar.

Here are their two sons, Ahimahatz [son] of Zadok, and Jonathan [son] of Abiathar, are there with them; you shall tell me from them all that you have heard.

So Cusa, David's close friend, returned to the city, and Absalom came to Jerusalem.

When David had passed a little beyond the top [of the mountain], behold, Ziba, servant of Mephibosheth, came to meet him, with two saddled donkeys, on which were two hundred loaves of bread, and one hundred bundles of raisins, and one hundred [other bundles] of [summer] fruits, and a barrel of wine.

And the King said to Ziba: What do you want to do with these? And Ziba replied: The donkeys are for the King's family, so that they may ride on them; and the bread, and the other summer fruits to eat, are for the young men, and there is wine to drink, so that those who are tired in the desert may drink from it.

And the King said to him, "But where is your Master's son?" And Ziba answered the King, "Behold, he has remained in Jerusalem; for he said, 'Today the house of Israel will restore to me the kingdom of my father.'"

Then the King said to Ziba: Behold, all that belongs to Mephibosheth [is yours]. And Ziba said: I bow down before you, I find favor in your sight, O King my Lord!

And King David came to Bahurim; and behold, there came out from there a man of the family of the house of Saul, named Shimei son of Gera, who came out impetuously, making curses.

And he threw stones at David, and at all the servants of King David, and all the people, and all the mighty men who were on the right and on the left of the King. Now Simhi spoke thus, cursing him: Get out, get out, man of blood, and wicked man. The Lord has brought upon you all the blood of the house of Saul, in whose place you reigned, and the Lord has given the kingdom into the hands of your son Absalom, and behold, [you suffer] the evil [that you have done], because you are a man of blood. Then Abishai, son of Zeruiah, said to the King: How can this dead dog curse my lord the King? Let me come by, I pray you, and take off its head. But the King replied, "What have I to do with you, son of Zeruiah? Let him curse me, for the Lord has said to him, 'Curse David!' Who then will say to him, 'Why have you done this?'"

David also said to Abishai and all his servants, "Look, my own son, who came from my own body, seeks my life; how much more now a son of Jemini? Let him alone, and let him curse me, for the Lord has told him to."

Perhaps the Lord will look upon my affliction, the Lord will repay me with good instead of the curses that this one gives me today.

David and his people continued on their way, and Simhi went beside the mountain, opposite him, continuing to curse, throwing stones at him, and dust in the air. So King David, and all the people who were with him, being tired, came and refreshed themselves there.

Now Absalom and all the people, [namely] the men of Israel, entered Jerusalem; and Ahithophel was with him.

Now it came to pass that when Cusai Arkite, David's close friend, came to Absalom, he said to Absalom, "Long live the King, long live the King!"

And Absalom said to Cushai, "Is this the affection you have for your close friend? Why did you not go with your close friend?"

But Cusai answered Absalom, "No; but I will be with the one whom the Lord has chosen, and whom this people and all the men of Israel have also chosen, and I will dwell with him."

And besides, whom shall I serve? Shall it not be his son? I will be your servant, as I have been your father's servant.

Then Absalom said to Ahithophel: Consult together [to see] what we should do.

And Ahithophel said to Absalom, "Go to your father's concubines, whom he left to keep the house, so that when all Israel hears that you have defiled yourself in the sight of your father, the hands of all those who are with you may be strengthened."

So they erected a pavilion for Absalom on the roof of the house: and Absalom went in to his father's concubines in the sight of all Israel.

Now the advice that Ahithophel gave at that time was considered as valuable as if someone had sought God's counsel. This was the view held for all the advice that Ahithophel gave, both to David and to Absalom.

After this Ahithophel said to Absalom, "I will now choose twelve thousand men, and I will arise and pursue David tonight."

And I will throw myself upon him; he is weary, and his hands are weak, and I will terrify him, so that all the people who are with him will flee, and I will strike the King alone.

And I will cause all the people to return to you; [for] the man you seek is worth as much as if all of them returned to you; [thus] all the people will be safe and sound.

This advice was deemed good by Absalom and by all the elders of Israel.

But Absalom said: Let us now also call Cusai Arkite, and let us hear his opinion as well.

Now when Cusai came to Absalom, Absalom said to him: Ahithophel has given this advice; shall we do as he has said, or not? Speak, you.

Then Cusai said to Absalom: The advice that Ahithophel has now given is not good.

Cusai also said: You know your father and his people, that they are strong men, and that their hearts are outrageous, like a bear of the field whose cubs have been taken away; and your father is a man of war, who will not spend the night with the people.

Behold, he is now hidden in some pit, or in some other place; if it happens that at the beginning we are defeated by them, whoever hears of it, having learned of it, shall say: The people who follow Absalom have been defeated.

Then the most valiant, the one who had the heart of a lion, will melt; for all Israel knows that your father is a man of courage, and that those who are with him are valiant.

But I am of the opinion that all Israel, from Dan to Beersheba, should be gathered to you with haste, as numerous as the sand on the seashore, and that you yourself should march in battle formation.

Then we will come to him wherever we find him, and we will fall upon him, as the dew falls upon the earth, and none of all the men who are with him will remain.

If he withdraws to any city, all Israel shall carry ropes to that city, and we shall drag it into the stream, so that not even a small stone shall be found in it.

Then Absalom and all the men of Israel said, "The advice of Cusai the Arkite is better than the advice of Ahithophel; for the Lord had decreed that the advice of Ahithophel, which was most beneficial [to Absalom], should be destroyed, in order to bring disaster upon Absalom.

Then Cusai said to the priests Zadok and Abiathar: Ahithophel gave such and such advice to Absalom and to the elders of Israel, but I gave such and such advice.

Now therefore send word quickly, and tell David, and say to him: Do not stay tonight in the desert countryside, and do not fail to go on further, lest the King be swallowed up, and all the people who are with him.

Now Jonathan and Ahimahats were standing by the fountain of Rogel; because they did not dare to show themselves when they came into the city, and a servant girl went and brought them back [everything], so that they could go and report it to King David.

But a boy saw them, who reported it to Absalom; and they both walked with haste and came to Bahurim, to the house of a man who had a well in his courtyard, into which they went down.

And the woman [of this man] took a covering, and spread it over the opening of the well, and sprinkled crushed grain on it, and the thing was not discovered.

For Absalom's servants came to the woman at her house and asked her, "Where are Ahimahaz and Jonathan?" The woman replied, "They have crossed the ford." So they looked for them and did not find them, so they returned to Jerusalem.

And after they had gone away, [Ahimahats and Jonathan] came up from the well, and went away, and made their report to King David, saying to him: Arise, and cross the water quickly, for Ahithophel has given such advice against you.

Then David arose, and all the people who were with him, and they crossed the Jordan until daybreak; there was not one who did not cross the Jordan.

When Ahithophel saw that they had not done what he had advised, he saddled his donkey, got up, and went to his house in his city: and after he had settled [the affairs of] his house, he choked himself and died, [and] was buried in his father's tomb.

And David came to Mahanajim: and Absalom crossed the Jordan, he and all those of Israel who were with him.

And Absalom appointed Hamasah over the army in place of Joab. Now Hamasah was the son of a man named Ithra, an Israelite, who had gone in to Abigail, daughter of Nahas, sister of Zeruiah, the mother of Joab.

And Israel, with Absalom, encamped in the land of Gilead.

Now it came to pass that as soon as David arrived at Mahanajim, Sobi son of Nahas of Rabbah, [which had been] of the children of Hammon, and Machir son of Hammiel of Lo-debar, and Barzillai Gileadite of Rogelim,

[They brought] beds, basins, earthenware vessels, wheat, barley, flour, roasted grain, beans, lentils, and roasted grains;

Honey, butter, sheep, and cow cheeses; they brought them, [I say], to David and the people who were with him, so that they might eat them; for they said, "This people is hungry, and weary, and thirsty in this wilderness."

Now David took a census of the people who were with him, and appointed captains over them, over thousands and over hundreds.

And David sent the people, [namely] one third under the leadership of Joab; another third under the leadership of Abishai son of Zeruiah, Joab's brother; and the other third under the leadership of Ittai-Gittian: then the King said to the people: Surely I will also go out with you.

But the people said to him, "You shall not go out; for if we were to flee, no one would care; and even if half of us were killed there, no one would care; for now you are as many as ten thousand of us, therefore it is better for us that you be in the city to help us."

And the King said to them, "I will do whatever seems good to you." So the King stood at the gate, and all the people came out by the hundreds and by the thousands.

And the King commanded Joab, and Abishai, and Ittai, saying, Spare the young man Absalom for me; and all the people heard what the King commanded all the captains concerning Absalom.

So the people went out to the fields to meet Israel; and the battle was fought in the forest of Ephraim.

There the people of Israel were defeated by the servants of David, and there was on that day in the same place a great defeat, [namely] of twenty thousand men.

And the battle spread there throughout the land, and the forest consumed many more people that day than the sword.

Now Absalom met before the servants of David, and Absalom was riding on a mule, and his mule went under the intertwined branches of a great oak, his head became entangled in the oak, where he remained between heaven and earth, and the mule that was under him passed beyond.

And a man who saw this reported it to Joab, and said to him: Behold, I saw Absalom hanging from an oak tree.

And Joab answered the one who told him this news: And behold, you saw him, and why did you not kill him there, [throwing him] on the ground? And it would have been for me to give you ten [pieces] of silver, and a belt.

But this man said to Joab, "Even if I counted a thousand pieces of silver in my hand, I would not lay my hand on the king's son, for we have heard what the king commanded you, and Abishai, and Ittai, saying, 'Be on guard, every one of you, against the young man Absalom.'"

Otherwise I would have committed an act of cowardice at the peril of my life; for nothing would have been hidden from the King; and you would even have been against me.

And Joab answered, "I will not wait so long in your presence"; and having taken three darts in his hand, he pierced the heart of Absalom, who was still alive in the middle of the oak.

Then ten young men who carried Joab's weapons surrounded Absalom, and struck him down, and killed him.

Then Joab sounded the trumpet, and the people stopped pursuing Israel, because Joab restrained the people.

And they took Absalom, and threw him into the forest, into a great pit; and placed on him a very great heap of stones; but all Israel fled, each to his tent.

Now Absalom had taken and set up for himself during his lifetime an image in the King's Valley; for he said, I have no son to leave a memorial for my name; and he called that image after his name; and to this day it is called Absalom's Place.

And Ahimahats, son of Zadok, said: I beg you, let me run now, and bring this good news to the King, that the Lord has delivered him from the hand of his enemies.

And Joab answered him: You will not be a bearer of good news today; but you will be another day; for today you would not bring good news, since the King's son is dead. And Joab said to Cush, "Go, [and] report to the King what you have seen." Cush bowed down before Joab, then he began to run.

Ahimahats son of Zadok said again to Joab: Be that as it may, I will now run after Cusi too; Joab said to him: Why do you want to run, my son, since you have no good news [to bring]?

[But he said]: Be that as it may, I will run; and Joab answered him: Run. So Ahimahats ran along the road of the plain, and passed Cusi.

Now David was sitting between the two gates, and the watchman had gone up on the roof of the gate toward the wall; and raising his eyes he looked, and behold a man running alone.

And the watchman cried out and told the King; and the King said: If he is alone, he brings good news; and this man walked on and on, and drew near.

Then the watchman saw another man running; and she shouted to the gatekeeper, and said, "Look, a man is running alone!" And the King said, "He also brings good news."

And the watchman said: It seems to me, seeing the first one run, that this is how Ahimahats son of Zadok runs; and the King said: He is a good man; he comes when there is good news.

Then Ahimahats cried out and said to the King, "All is well," and he bowed down before the King with his face to the ground and said, "Blessed be the Lord your God, who has delivered up the men who had raised their hands against my lord the King." And the King said, "Is the young man Absalom well?" And Ahimahats answered him, "I saw a great commotion arise when Joab sent the King's servant, and I, your servant; I do not know exactly what it was."

And the King said to him, "Turn away, [and] stand there." So he turned away and stopped.

Then Cusi came and said, "May my lord the king have this good news: the Lord has delivered you today from the hand of all who rose up against you."

And the King said to Cusi: Is the young man Absalom well? And Cusi answered him: May the enemies of my Lord the King, and all those who have risen up against you to harm you, become like this young man.

Then the King was greatly moved, and went up to the upper chamber by the gate, and began to weep, and he said thus as he went: My son Absalom! My son! My son Absalom! Would to God that I myself had died for you! Absalom, my son! My son!

And it was reported to Joab, [saying]: Behold, the King is weeping and mourning for Absalom.

So the deliverance was turned into mourning for all the people that day; because the people had heard that it was said that day: The King was greatly grieved because of his son.

So much so that on that day the people came into the city stealthily, as if a people who were ashamed of having fled in battle would stealthily.

And the King covered his face and cried out in a loud voice: My son Absalom! Absalom, my son! My son!

And Joab went to the King in the house, and said to him: Today you have put to shame the faces of all your servants who today have guaranteed your life, and the lives of your sons and daughters, and the lives of your wives, and the lives of your concubines.

Because you love those who hate you, and hate those who love you; for you have shown today that your captains and your servants are nothing to you; and I know today that if Absalom were alive, and we were all dead today, the thing would please you.

Now therefore, get up, go out, [and] speak according to the heart of your servants; for I swear to you by the Lord that if you do not go out, not a single man will remain with you tonight; and this disaster will be worse than all those that have befallen you from your youth until now.

Then the King got up and sat at the gate: and it was told all the people, saying, Behold, the King is sitting at the gate; and all the people came before the King; but Israel fled, each to his tent.

And all the people argued amongst themselves throughout all the Tribes of Israel, saying: The king delivered us from the hand of our enemies, and protected us from the hand of the Philistines, and now he has fled from the land because of Absalom!

But Absalom, whom we anointed [as King] over us, died in battle; and now why do you not speak of bringing back the King?

And King David sent word to Zadok and Abiathar the priests: Speak to the elders of Judah, and say to them: Why should you be the last to bring the king back to his house? For the words that all Israel had spoken had reached the king in his house. You are my brothers, you are my bones and my flesh; and why should you be the last to bring back the King?

Even say to Hamasa: Are you not my own bone and flesh? May God do this to me and add to it; if you are not the commander of the army before me forever in place of Joab. Thus he softened the hearts of all the men of Judah, as if it were one man, and they sent word to the King: Return with all your servants.

So the King returned and came to the Jordan; and Judah came to Gilgal to meet the King, in order to make him cross the Jordan again.

And Shimei son of Gera, son of Jemini, who was from Bahurim, went down with the men of Judah to meet King David.

He had with him a thousand men of Benjamin. Ziba, a servant of the house of Saul, and his fifteen sons, and his twenty servants [were] also with him, [and] they crossed the Jordan before the King.

The boat also passed by to transport the King's family, and to do as he pleased. And Shimei son of Gera fell on his knees before the King, as he crossed the Jordan; And he said to the King, "May my Lord not hold [my] iniquity against me, and may he not remember what your servant did wickedly on the day that my Lord the King went out from Jerusalem, so that the King may take it to heart."

For your servant knows that he has sinned; and behold, I have come today, the first of the house of Joseph, to go down to meet the King my Lord.

But Abishai son of Zeruiah answered, and said, "Under the shadow of this, will they not put Shimei to death, since he has cursed the Lord's Anointed?"

And David said, "What have I to do with you, sons of Zeruiah? For you are my adversaries today. Should anyone in Israel be put to death today? For do I not know that I have been made king over Israel today?"

And the King said to Simhi: You shall not die; and the King swore to him.

After this, Mephibosheth, son of Saul, went down to meet the King, and he had not washed his feet, nor shaved his beard, nor washed his clothes, from the time the King had gone away, until the day he returned in peace.

So he found himself meeting the King as [the King] entered Jerusalem, and the King said to him, "Why did you not come with me, Mephibosheth?"

And he answered him, "My lord, my servant has deceived me, for your servant said, 'I will saddle my donkey, and I will ride on it, and go to the king, for your servant is lame.'"

And he has slandered your servant to my Lord the King; but my Lord the King is like an angel of God; so do what seems good to you.

For although all those of my father's house are but people worthy of death before the King my Lord; yet you have placed your servant among those who ate at your table; and what right do I have then to complain still to the King?

And the King said to him: Why would you speak to me again about your affairs? I have already said: You and Ziba divide the land.

And Mephiboseth answered the King: Let him take everything, since the King my Lord has returned in peace to his house.

Now Barzillai of Gilead had come down from Rogelim, and had crossed the Jordan with the King, to accompany him beyond the Jordan.

And Barzillai was very old, eighty years old; and he had provided for the King while he had stayed in Mahanajim; for he was a very rich man.

And the King had said to Barzillai: Go further with me, and I will feed you with me in Jerusalem.

But Barzillai had replied to the King: How many years have I lived, that I should go up [again] with the King to Jerusalem?

I am now eighty years old; can I discern good from evil? Can your servant still enjoy his food and drink? Can I still hear the voices of singers and musicians? And why should your servant be a burden to my lord the king?

Your servant will pass a little further than the Jordan with the King, but why would the King want to give me such a reward?

I pray that your servant may return, and that I may die in my city [to be placed] in the tomb of my father and my mother, but behold, your servant Kimham shall go over with the King my Lord; do to him whatever seems good to you.

And the King said: Let Kimham come with me, and I will do for him whatever seems good to you, for I will grant you everything you could ask of me.

So all the people crossed the Jordan with the King. Then the King kissed Barzillai and blessed him; and [Barzillai] returned to his place.

From there the King went to Gilgal, and Kimham went with him. So all the people of Judah, and even half of the people of Israel, brought the King back.

But behold, all the men of Israel came to the King, and said to him, "Why have our brothers, the men of Judah, taken you away, and brought the King and his family and all his people across the Jordan?"

And all the men of Judah answered the men of Israel, "Because the King is nearer to us; and why are you angry about this? Have we eaten anything that belongs to the King; or should we receive any gifts from it?"

But the men of Israel answered the men of Judah, and said, "We have ten portions in the King, and we are even more to David than you; why then have you despised us? And were we not the first to speak of bringing back our King?" But the men of Judah spoke even more harshly than the men of Israel.

And there happened to be there a wicked man named Shebah, son of Bichri, a man of Jemini, who blew the trumpet and said, "We have no portion in David, nor any inheritance to expect from the son of Jesse. O Israel, let every one of you return to your tents."

So all the men of Israel separated themselves from David, and followed Shebah son of Bichri; but the men of Judah joined their King, [and accompanied him] from the Jordan to Jerusalem.

When David came to his house in Jerusalem, he took his ten concubines whom he had left to keep his house, and kept them in a house, [where] he fed them; but he did not go to them; so they were sequestered until the day of their death, to live as widows.

Then the King said to Hamasa: Assemble for me in three days with a public proclamation the men of Judah, and represent yourself here.

Hamasa then went and assembled the people of Judah with a public shout; but he delayed beyond the time allotted to him.

And David said to Abishai, "Now Shebah son of Bichri will do us more harm than Absalom did; you [therefore] take the servants of your Lord and pursue him, lest he find some fortified cities and we lose sight of him."

So Joab's men went out after him, along with the Kerethites, the Pelethites, and all the mighty men; they went out from Jerusalem to pursue Shebah son of Bichri.

And as they were near the great stone which is at Gibeon, Hamasa came to meet them, and Joab had his tunic, with which he was dressed, girded, and his sword was girded over it, fastened at his waist in its sheath, and when he went out it fell.

And Joab said to Hamasa: Are you well, my brother? Then Joab took Hamasa's beard with his right hand to kiss it.

But Hamasa did not pay attention to the sword that was in Joab's hand; and Joab struck him in the fifth rib, spilling his entrails on the ground, without striking him a second time; and so he died. After this, Joab and Abishai his brother pursued Shebah son of Bichri.

Then one of Joab's servants stood by Hamasa and said, "Whoever loves Joab and whoever is for David, let him follow Joab."

And Hamasa was lying in his blood in the middle of the road; but when this man saw that all the people were stopping, he pushed Hamasa out of the road into a field, and threw a garment over him, after he saw that all those who came to him were stopping.

And when he had been removed from the road, all the men who followed Joab passed beyond, in order to pursue Shebah son of Bichri;

Who went through all the Tribes of Israel, as far as Abelah and Beth-mahaca, with all the Berians who had gathered together, and who also had followed him.

So Joab's people came and besieged him at Abel Beth-mahaca, and they built a siege ramp against the city, in front of the wall; and all the people who were with Joab broke down the wall to make it fall.

Then a wise woman of the city cried out: Listen, listen: Please tell Joab: Come here, [and] let me speak to you.

And when he approached her, she said to him, "Are you Joab?" He answered, "I am." She said to him, "Listen to the words of your servant." He answered, "I am listening." She spoke again, and said: It was commonly said in the past: Let us go and ask Abel for advice, and so it has continued.

Among the faithful cities of Israel, I am one of the most peaceful; you seek to destroy a city that is one of the capitals of Israel; why would you destroy the inheritance of the Lord?

Joab answered him, and said: God forbid! God forbid that I should destroy or ruin! The matter is not so; but a man from the hill country of Ephraim, whose name is Shebah, the son of Bichri, has raised his hand against King David; give him up to me alone, and I will leave from before the city. And the woman said to Joab, "Behold, his head shall be thrown to you from over the wall."

So this woman came to all the people and spoke wisely to them, and they cut off the head of Shebah son of Bichri and threw it to Joab. Then the trumpets were blown, and everyone withdrew from the city to their tents; then Joab returned to the king in Jerusalem.

Joab therefore [remained established] over all the army of Israel, and Benaiah son of Jehoiada over the Kerethites, and over the Pelethites;

And Adoram was in charge of the tributes, and Jehosaphat son of Ahilud was in charge of the Registers.

Sela was the Secretary; and Zadok and Abiathar were the Priests.

And Hira Jairus was David's chief officer.

Now there was a famine in the days of David that lasted three consecutive years. And David sought the face of the Lord; and the Lord answered him, "It is because of Saul and his bloodthirsty house; because he put the Gibeonites to death."

Then the King summoned the Gibeonites to speak to them. Now the Gibeonites were not children of Israel, but a remnant of the Amorites; and the children of Israel had sworn to them [to let them live]; but Saul, out of zeal for the children of Israel and Judah, had sought to put them to death.

And David said to the Gibeonites, "What shall I do to you, and how shall I appease you, so that you will bless the inheritance of the Lord?"

And the Gibeonites answered him, "We have no business with Saul or his household's gold or silver, nor should anyone in Israel be put to death." And [the King] said to them, "What then do you want me to do for you?"

And they answered the King: As for this man who has destroyed us, and who has plotted against us, so that we have been exterminated, without being able to subsist in any of the lands of Israel;

"Give us seven of his sons, and we will crucify them before the Lord on the hillside of Saul, the Lord's chosen one." And the king said to them, "I will give them to you."

But the King spared Mephibosheth son of Jonathan, son of Saul, because of the oath that David and Jonathan son of Saul had sworn to each other [in the name] of the Lord.

But the King took the two sons of Rizpah daughter of Aiah, whom she had borne to Saul, namely Armoni and Mephibosheth, and the five sons of Michal daughter of Saul, whom she had nursed to Hadriel son of Barzillai Meholathite.

And he delivered them into the hands of the Gibeonites, who crucified them on the mountain before the Lord; and these seven were killed together, and they were put to death in the first days of harvest, [namely] at the beginning of the barley harvest.

Then Rizpah daughter of Aiah took a sack and hung it for herself on a rock, from the beginning of harvest until the rain fell on them from the sky; and she would not allow any bird of the sky to rest on them by day, nor any beast of the field by night.

And they told David what Rizpah, daughter of Aiah, Saul's concubine, had done.

And David went away, and took the bones of Saul, and the bones of Jonathan his son, which the inhabitants of Jabesh-gilead had taken from the square of Beth-san, where the Philistines had hanged them, on the day that they had killed Saul in Gilboah.

So he brought from there the bones of Saul, and the bones of Jonathan his son. They also gathered the bones of those who had been crucified;

And they buried them with the bones of Saul and Jonathan his son in the land of Benjamin, at Zelah, in the tomb of Kish, Saul's father; and they did all that the king had commanded. And after this, God was appeased toward the land.

Now there had also been another war of the Philistines against the Israelites; and David had gone there, and his servants with him, and they had fought so hard against the Philistines that David was fainting.

And Jisbi-benob, who was of the children of Rapha, and who had a spear whose head weighed three hundred shekels of bronze, and who was armed in a new way, had resolved to strike David.

But Abishai son of Zeruiah came to his aid, and struck down the Philistine, and killed him. Then David's men swore, saying, "You shall no longer go out with us into battle, lest you quench the lamp of Israel."

After that there was another war at Gob against the Philistines, where Sibbecai the Husathite struck down Saph, who was of the children of Rapha.

There was yet another war at Gob against the Philistines, in which Elhanan, son of Jahareh Oregim Bethlehemite, struck down [the brother] of Goliath Gittite, who had a halberd whose shaft [was] like a weaver's sash.

There was yet another war at Gath, where there was found a man of extraordinary size, who had six fingers on each hand, and six toes on each foot, twenty-four in all, who was also of the race of Rapha.

This man defied Israel; but Jonathan son of Shimhah, David's brother, killed him.

These four were born in Gath, of the race of Rapha, and died by the hands of David, or by the hands of his servants.

After this David spoke to the Lord the words of this song, on the day that the Lord had delivered him from the hand of all his enemies, and especially from the hand of Saul.

He therefore said: The Lord is my rock, my fortress, and my deliverer.

God is my rock, I will take refuge in him; he is my shield and the horn of my salvation; he is my high fortress and my refuge; my Savior, you protect me from violence.

I will cry out to the Lord, to whom praise is due, and I will be delivered from my enemies.
For the pangs of death had surrounded me; the torrents of the wicked had overwhelmed me;
The cords of the sepulchre had surrounded me; the nets of death had overtaken me.
When I was in adversity I cried out to the Lord; I cried, [I say], to my God, and he heard my voice from his palace, and my cry reached his ears.
Then the earth shook and quaked, the foundations of the heavens crumbled and were shaken, because he was angry.
Smoke rose from his nostrils, and a devouring fire came out of his mouth; the coals of the fire were ablaze.
So he bowed down the heavens and descended, with darkness under his feet.
And he mounted a cherub and flew; and he appeared on the wings of the wind.
And he made darkness all around him for a dwelling place; [namely], the heaped waters which are the clouds of the air.
Embers of fire were ablaze with the splendor that lay before him.
The Lord thundered from heaven, and the Sovereign uttered his voice.
He shot his arrows, and drove away [my enemies]; he [made] the lightning flash; and routed them.
Then the bottom of the sea appeared, [and] the foundations of the habitable earth were uncovered by the Lord who rebuked them, [and] by the blast of the wind from his nostrils.
He stretched out [his hand] from above, [and] lifted me up, [and] drew me out of the deep waters.
He delivered me from my powerful enemy, [and] from those who hated me, for they were stronger than I.
They had preceded me in the day of my calamity; but the Lord was my support.
He set me free, he delivered me, because he took his pleasure in me.
The Lord has rewarded me according to my righteousness; he has rewarded me according to the cleanness of my hands.
Because I have kept to the way of the Lord, and have not turned away from my God.
For I have had before me all his rights, and I have not turned away from his ordinances.
And I have been faithful to him, and I have guarded myself against my iniquity.
The Lord has rewarded me according to my righteousness and my purity, which was before his eyes.
Towards the one who acts freely, you act freely; and towards the upright man you show yourself to be upright.
Towards the pure you show yourself pure; but towards the perverse you act according to his perversity.
For you save the afflicted people, and you [cast] your eyes on the proud, and the humble.
You are even my lamp, O Lord! and the Lord will make my darkness shine.
And by your means I will throw myself upon [a whole] troop, [and] by the means of my God I will cross the wall.
The way of the Mighty God is perfect, the word of the Lord is refined; it is a shield to all who take refuge in him.
For who is mighty [God] except the Lord? And who is the Rock except our God?
The Mighty God, who is my strength, is the true strength, and he has made my way straight, [which was a way] of integrity.
He made my feet like those of deer, and enabled me to stand on my high places.
It is he who trains my hands for battle, so that a bronze bow has been broken with my arms.
You also gave me the shield of your salvation, and your goodness made me grow.
You have broadened the path beneath my feet, and my heels have not slipped.

I pursued my enemies and exterminated them; and I did not turn back until I had consumed them.
I consumed them, I pierced them, and they did not rise again; but they fell beneath my feet.
For you have clothed me with strength for the battle; you have made those who rose up against me bow down before me.
You also caused my enemies and those who hated me to turn their backs on me, and I destroyed them.
They looked here and there, but there was no deliverer; [they cried] to the Lord, but he did not answer them.
And I crushed them as fine as the dust of the earth; I crushed them, [and] I trampled them like the mud of the streets.
And you delivered me from the strife of the peoples; you kept me to be the leader of the nations. The people whom I did not know have become subject to me.
The foreigners lied to me; having heard about me, they became obedient.
The foreigners slipped away and trembled with fear in their hidden retreats.
The Lord lives, and my rock is blessed; therefore God, the rock of my salvation, be exalted.
The Mighty [God] is the one who gives me the means to take revenge, and who subjugates the peoples to me.
It is he who also rescues me from among my enemies. You remove me from among those who rise up against me; you deliver me from the abusive man.
Therefore, O Lord, I will praise you among the nations, and I will sing psalms to your name.
He is the tower of deliverance for his King, and he shows mercy to David his Anointed, and to his descendants forever.
These are the last words of David. David, son of Jesse, the man who was exalted to be the Anointed of the God of Jacob, and who composes the sweet songs of Israel, said: The Spirit of the Lord spoke through me, and his word was on my tongue.
The God of Israel said, the Rock of Israel spoke to me, [saying]: The righteous ruler of men, the ruler in the fear of God,
It is like the morning light when the sun rises, of the morning, [I say], which is cloudless; [it is like] the grass that comes out of the [earth] after the light [of the sun] when it [appears] after the rain.
But it will not be so with my house toward the Mighty God, because he has made with me an everlasting covenant, well established and secure; for this is all my salvation and all my pleasure; therefore he will not [simply] cause [my house] to sprout.
But the wicked will all be like thorns that are thrown away, because they are not taken with the hand.
But whoever wants to use them takes either iron or the wood of a halberd; and they are burned completely on the spot.
These are the names of the valiant men that David had: Joseb-Basebeth Tachkemonite was one of the chief captains; it was Hadino the Heznite, who prevailed over eight hundred men whom he killed at one time.
After him was Eleazar, son of Dodo, son of Ahohi, [one of] the three mighty men who were with David when the Philistines assembled there for battle were put to shame, and the Israelites withdrew.
He arose and struck down the Philistines until his hand grew weary and clung to the sword; on that day the Lord granted a great victory, and the people returned after Eleazar only to take the spoil.
After him [was] Sammah son of Agneh Hararite; for the Philistines had gathered together in a village where there was a place in a field full of lentils, and the people were fleeing before the Philistines;
He stood in the middle of that place in the field, and defended it, and struck down the Philistines; so that the Lord granted a great deliverance.

Three more of the thirty captains who came to David at harvest time were brought down to the cave of Hadullam, when a company of Philistines was encamped in the valley of Rephaim.

David was then in the stronghold, and the Philistine garrison was at that same time in Bethlehem.

And David made this wish, and said, "Who will give me water to drink from the well that is at the gate of Bethlehem?"

So these three valiant men went through the Philistine camp and drew water from the well that is at the gate of Bethlehem, and having brought it, they presented it to David, who would not drink it, but he poured it out in the presence of the Lord. For he said, "May it never happen to me, O Lord, to do such a thing." Is this not the blood of these men who risked their lives on this journey? So he refused to drink it. These three valiant men did this.

There was also Abisai, brother of Joab son of Zeruiah, who was one of the chief captains; he hurled his halberd against three hundred men, mortally wounded them, and acquired a great name among the three.

Was he not the most esteemed of these three? That is why he was also their leader; however, he did not equal the first three.

Benaiah, son of Jehoiada, son of a mighty man from Kabtleel, had performed great feats. He struck down two of the mightiest men of Moab; he also went down and killed a lion in a pit on a snowy day.

He also struck down an Egyptian man, [who was] a handsome man. This Egyptian had a halberd in his hand; but Benaiah came down against him with a staff, snatched the halberd from the Egyptian's hand, and killed him with his own halberd.

Benaiah son of Jehoiada did these things, and was illustrious among the three mighty men.

And he was more honored than the thirty; although he did not equal those three: therefore David placed him over his men of command.

Hasael, Joab's brother, was among the thirty; Elhanan son of Dodo, from Bethlehem; Samma Harodite; Elikah Harodite;

Helets Paltite; Hira son of Hikkes, Tekohite;

Abihezzer Hanathothite; Mebunnai Husathite;

Tsalmon Ahohite; Maharai Netophathite;

Heleb son of Bahana Netophathite; Ittai son of Ribai of Gibeah of the children of Benjamin;

Benaiah Pirathonite; Hiddai of the valleys of Gahas;

Abi Halbon Harbathite; Hazmaveth Barhumite;

Eliachba Sahalbonite; [of the] children of Jesen, Jonathan;

Samma Hararite; Ahiam son of Sarar Hararite;

Eliphelet, son of Ahasbai, son of Mahacati; Eliham son of Ahithophel Gilonite;

Hetseraï Carmélite; Parahai Arbite;

Jiguel son of Nathan of Zobah; Bani Gadite;

Tselek Hammonite; Naharai Beerothite, who bore the arms of Joab son of Zeruiah;

Hira Jithrite; Gareb Jithrite;

Uriah Hethian; thirty-seven in all.

But the anger of the Lord was kindled again against Israel; because David was incited to say against them, "Go, take a census of Israel and Judah."

The King then said to Joab, the commander of the army, who was with him: Now go throughout all the tribes of Israel, from Dan to Beersheba, and count the people, so that I may know their number.

But Joab answered the King: May the Lord your God increase your people a hundredfold, a hundredfold, as they are now; and may the eyes of my lord the king see it! But why does my lord the king want this?

Nevertheless, the word of the King prevailed over Joab and the commanders of the army; and Joab and the commanders of the army went out from the presence of the King to count the people, [namely] Israel.

So they crossed the Jordan and camped at Haroher, on the right side of the city, which is in the middle of the Gad stream, and towards Jahzer.

And they came to Gilead, and to the land of those who dwell in the lower [country] of Hodsî, and came to Dan-Jahan, and then to the vicinity of Sidon.

And they came as far as the fortress of Zor, and into all the cities of the Hivites and the Canaanites, and went out to the South of Judah to Beersheba.

So they traveled through the whole country, and returned to Jerusalem after nine months and twenty days.

And Joab gave to the King the roll of the census of the people; and there were from those of Israel eight hundred thousand men of war who drew the sword, and from those of Judah five hundred thousand men.

Then David was cut to the heart, after he had thus numbered the people; and David said to the Lord, I have sinned greatly in doing this, but I pray you, O Lord, forgive the iniquity of your servant; for I have acted very foolishly.

After this David got up early in the morning, and the word of the Lord came to Gad the prophet, who was David's seer, saying:

Go, and tell David: Thus says the Lord: I am bringing three things against you; choose one of the three, that I may do it to you.

So Gad came to David and told him, "Which do you want to happen to you: seven years of famine in your land, or three months of flight from your enemies while they pursue you, or three days of death in your land? Now consider this and see what answer you want me to give to the one who sent me."

And David answered Gad, "I am in great distress. I pray that we may fall into the hands of the Lord, for his mercies are many; and that I may not fall into the hands of men."

So the Lord sent plagues upon Israel from the morning until the time of the appointed time; and seventy thousand men died from Dan to Beersheba.

But when the angel stretched out his hand over Jerusalem to destroy it, the Lord relented concerning that disaster and said to the angel who was destroying the people, "It is enough; withdraw your hand now." Now the angel of the Lord was standing by the threshing floor of Araunah the Jebusite.

For when David saw the angel striking the people, he spoke to the Lord, and said, "Behold, it is I who have sinned, it is I who have committed iniquity, but these sheep, what have they done? I pray you, let your hand be against me and against my father's house."

And on that day Gad came to David and said to him, "Go up and set up an altar to the Lord on the threshing floor of Araunah the Jebusite."

And David went up according to the word of Gad, as the Lord had commanded.

And Arauna looked, and saw the King, and his servants who came to him; and so Arauna went out, and bowed down before the King, with his face to the ground.

And Araunah said, "Why has my lord the king come to his servant?" And David answered, "To buy your threshing floor and build an altar to the Lord there, so that this plague may be stopped from the people."

And Araunah said to David, "Let my lord the king take and offer whatever he pleases. Here are oxen for the burnt offering, and wagons, and a team of oxen instead of wood."

Araunah gave all this to the king as a king. And Araunah said to the king, "May the Lord your God be pleased with you!"

And the king answered Araunah, "No, but I will buy it from you for a certain price, and I will not offer to the Lord my God burnt offerings that cost me nothing." So David bought the threshing floor, and he also bought the oxen for fifty shekels of silver.

Then David built an altar to the Lord there, and offered burnt offerings and peace offerings; and the Lord was appeased toward the land, and the plague was stopped in Israel.

Now King David grew old and advanced in years; and although he was covered with clothes, he could not get warm.

And his servants said to him: Let a young virgin be sought for our lord the King, to stand before the King, and to take care of him, and let her sleep in his bosom, so that our lord the King may be warmed.

So they searched throughout all the regions of Israel for a beautiful girl; and they found Abishag the Shunammite, whom they brought to the King.

And this young girl was very beautiful, and she took care of the King, and served him; but the King did not know her.

Then Adonijah son of Haggith arose, saying: I shall reign. He set up chariots, horsemen, and fifty men who ran before him.

But his father did not want to grieve him in his time, and say to him: Why do you act like this? He was also of very fine stature, and [his mother] had borne him after Absalom.

And he communicated his affairs to Joab, son of Zeruiah, and to Abiathar the priest, who helped him and were on his side.

But Zadok the priest, Benaiah son of Jehoiada, Nathan the prophet, Shimei, Rehi, and David's mighty men were not of Adonijah's party.

Now Adonijah had sheep and oxen and fat cattle slaughtered near the stone of Zohelath, which was by the spring of Rogel; and he summoned all his brothers, the sons of the King, and all those of Judah who were in the service of the King; But he did not invite Nathan the Prophet, nor Benaiah, nor the valiant men, nor Solomon his brother.

Then Nathan spoke to Bathsheba, Solomon's mother, saying, "Have you not heard that Adonijah son of Haggith has been made king? And David our lord does not know about it."

Now come then, and let me give you some advice, I beg you, and save your life and the life of your son Solomon.

Go, and present yourself to King David, and say to him, "My lord, did you not swear to your servant, saying, 'Surely your son Solomon shall reign after me, and shall sit on my throne'? Why then has Adonijah been made king?"

And behold, when you are still there, and you speak with the King, I will come after you, and I will continue the discourse that you have begun.

So Bath-sebah came to the King in his chamber; now the King was very old, and Abishag the Shunammite served him.

And Bath-sebah bowed down and prostrated himself before the King; and the King said to him: What is the matter with you?

And she answered him, "My Lord, you swore by the Lord your God to your servant, and said to her, 'Surely your son Solomon will reign after me, and will sit on my throne.'"

But now look, Adonijah has been made King, and you know nothing about it, O King, my Lord!

He even had oxen, fat cattle, and sheep slaughtered in great numbers, and invited all the sons of the King, with Abiathar the Priest, and Joab Commander of the Army, but he did not invite your servant Solomon.

But as for you, O King my Lord! the eyes of all Israel are on you, so that you may declare to them who should sit on the throne of the King my Lord after him.

Otherwise, it will happen that as soon as the King, my Lord, is asleep with his fathers, we will be treated as guilty, me and my son Solomon.

And while she was still speaking with the King, Nathan the Prophet came.

And it was made known to the King, saying: Here is Nathan the Prophet; and he came before the King, and bowed down before him with his face to the ground.

And Nathan said: O King, my Lord! Did you say: Adonijah will reign after me, and will sit on my throne?

For he came down today and had oxen, fattened cattle, and sheep slaughtered in great numbers, and invited all the sons of the king, and the commanders of the army, and Abiathar the priest; and behold, they are eating and drinking before him; and they have said, 'Long live King Adonijah!'

But he did not invite me, your servant, nor Zadok the priest, nor Benaiah son of Jehoiada, nor Solomon your servant.

Would this have been done by order of the King, my Lord, without you having informed your servant who is to sit on the throne of the King, my Lord, after him?

And King David answered, and said, Call me Bathsheba; and she came before the King, and stood before him.

Then the King swore and said: As surely as the Lord lives, who has delivered me from all distress;

As I swore to you by the Lord, the God of Israel, saying: Surely your son Solomon will reign after me, and will sit on my throne in my place; I will do so today.

Then Bathsheba bowed his face to the ground and prostrated himself before the King, and said: May King David my Lord live forever!

And King David said, "Call Zadok the priest, Nathan the prophet, and Benaiah son of Jehoiada," and they stood before the king.

And the King said to them: Take with you the servants of your Lord, and put my son Solomon on my mule, and take him down to Gihon.

And let Zadok the priest and Nathan the prophet anoint him in that place as king over Israel, and then you shall blow the trumpet and say, "Long live King Solomon!"

And you will ascend after him, and he will come and sit on my throne, and he will reign in my place; for I have ordained that he should be ruler over Israel and Judah.

And Benaiah son of Jehoiada answered the King, and said, Amen! May the Lord, the God of the King my Lord, so command!

As the Lord was with my lord the King, may he also be with Solomon, and may he exalt his throne even more than the throne of my lord King David.

Then Zadok the Priest came down with Nathan the Prophet, and Benaiah son of Jehoiada, the Kerethites and the Pelethites, and they put Solomon on King David's mule, and brought him to Gihon.

And Zadok the Priest took a horn full of oil from the Tabernacle and anointed Solomon; then they blew the trumpet, and all the people said, "Long live King Solomon!"

And everyone went up after him, and the people played the flute, and were so joyful that the earth split open with the shouts they uttered.

Now Adonijah and all the guests who were with him heard [this noise] as they finished eating; and Joab, hearing the sound of the trumpet, said: What does this noise mean, this commotion in the city?

And while he was still speaking, Jonathan son of Abiathar the priest arrived; and Adonijah said to him, "Come in; for you are a valiant man, and you will bring good news."

But Jonathan answered, and said to Adonijah: Surely King David our Lord has established King Solomon.

And the King sent with him Zadok the Priest, Nathan the Prophet, Benaiah son of Jehoiada, and the Kerethites, and the Pelethites, and they made him ride on the King's mule.

And Zadok the Priest and Nathan the Prophet anointed him King at Gihon, from where they went up with joy, and the city is thus stirred; this is the noise that you have heard.

And even Solomon sat on the throne of the Kingdom.

And the King's servants came to bless King David our Lord, saying: May God make the name of Solomon even greater than your name, and may he exalt his throne even more than your throne! And the King prostrated himself on the bed.

Moreover, the King said thus: Blessed be the Lord, the God of Israel, who has today placed on my throne a successor, whom I see with my own eyes.

Then all the guests who were with Adonija were in great confusion, and they got up and went their separate ways.

And Adonijah, fearing Solomon, arose and went away, and grasped the horns of the altar.

And it was reported to Solomon, saying: Behold, Adonijah is afraid of King Solomon, and behold, he has grasped the horns of the altar, saying: Let King Solomon swear to me today that he will not put his servant to death with the sword.

And Solomon said: If [in the future] he behaves like a good man, not a hair of his head will fall to the ground; but if evil is found in him, he will die.

Then King Solomon sent word, and he was brought back from the altar, and he came and bowed down before King Solomon; and Solomon said to him, "Go to your house."

Now, as the time of David's death drew near, he gave this command to his son Solomon, saying:

I am going the way of all the earth, be strong, and act like a man.

And keep what the Lord your God wants you to keep, by walking in his ways, and by keeping his statutes, his commandments, his ordinances, and his testimonies, according to what is written in the Law of Moses, so that you may prosper in all that you do, and in all that you undertake;

So that the Lord may confirm the word which he gave me, saying: If your sons take heed to their way, to walk before me in truth, with all their heart, and with all their soul, you shall not lack [a successor] to sit on the throne of Israel.

Moreover, you know what Joab son of Zeruiah did to me, and what he did to the two commanders of the armies of Israel, Abner son of Ner, and Hamasah son of Jether, whom he killed, having shed in peace the blood that is shed in time of war, and having stained with this blood that is shed in time of war the belt that he had on his loins; and the sandals that he had on his feet.

Therefore, you will act according to your wisdom, so that you will not let his white hair descend peacefully to the grave.

But you shall do good to the children of Barzillai Gileadite, and they shall be among those who eat at your table, because they came near to me when I was fleeing from Absalom your brother.

This is also with you: Shihi, son of Gera, son of Jemini of Bahurim, who uttered terrible curses against me on the day I went to Mahanajim; but he went down to meet me at the Jordan, and I swore to him by the Lord, saying, I will not put you to death with the sword.

Therefore, you will not leave him unpunished; for you are wise enough to know what you ought to do to him; and you will bring down his gray hair to the grave by a violent death.

So David slept with his fathers, and was buried in the City of David.

And the time that David reigned over Israel was forty years. He reigned seven years in Hebron, and he reigned thirty-three years in Jerusalem.

And Solomon sat on the throne of David his father, and his kingdom was greatly established.

Then Adonijah son of Haggith came to Bathsheba, Solomon's mother, and she said, "Have you come with good intentions?" and he answered, "[I have come] with good intentions."

Then he said: I have something to say to you. She replied: Speak.

And he said, "You know very well that the kingdom belonged to me, and that all Israel expected that I should reign; but the kingdom has been transferred, and it has fallen to my brother; because the Lord has given it to him."

Now then I have a request to make of you, do not refuse me. And she answered him: Speak.

And he said, "Please tell King Solomon, for he will refuse you nothing, to give me

Abishag the Shunammite as my wife."

And Bath-sebah replied: Well, I will speak to the King for you.

So Bathsheba came to King Solomon to speak to him about Adonijah; and the King rose up to meet Bathsheba and bowed down before her; then he sat on his throne and had a seat placed for his mother, and she sat at the King's right hand;

And he said, "I have a small request to make of you; do not refuse me." And the King replied, "Give it to me, my mother; for I will not refuse you."

And she said: Let Abishag Shunammite be given as a wife to Adonijah your brother.

But King Solomon answered his mother, and said: and why do you ask Abishag the Shunammite for Adonijah? Ask rather for the kingdom for him, because he is my older brother; [ask for it] for him, for Abiathar the Priest, and for Joab son of Zeruiah.

Then King Solomon swore by the Lord, saying, "May God do this to me, and add to it in this way, unless Adonijah has spoken this word against his life!"

But now, as surely as the Lord lives, who appointed me and made me sit on the throne of my father David and built me a house, as he had promised, Adonijah will certainly be put to death today.

And King Solomon commissioned Benaiah son of Jehoiada, who attacked him, and he died.

Then the King said to Abiathar the Priest, "Go to Hanathoth in your possession, for you deserve to die; however, I will not put you to death today, because you carried the Ark of the Lord GOD before David my father; and because you shared in all the afflictions of my father."

So Solomon deposed Abiathar, so that he would no longer be priest of the Lord; to fulfill the word of the Lord, which he had spoken in Shiloh against the house of Eli.

And the news having reached Joab, who had rebelled to follow Adonijah, although he had not turned away after Absalom, he fled to the Tabernacle of the Lord, and took hold of the horns of the altar.

And it was reported to King Solomon, saying, "Joab has fled to the tabernacle of the Lord, and behold, he is by the altar." And Solomon sent Benaiah son of Jehoiada, and said to him, "Go, attack him."

So Benaiah went into the tabernacle of the Lord and said to Joab, "This is what the king says: 'Come out of here.'" But Joab replied, "No, I will die here." Benaiah reported this to the king, saying, "This is what Joab said to me, and this is what he told me."

And the King said to him, "Do as he told you, and throw yourself on him and bury him; and you shall remove from me and from my father's house the blood that Joab shed without cause."

And the Lord will bring his blood back on his own head, because he attacked two men more righteous and better than himself, and killed them with the sword, without David my father knowing anything about it; [namely] Abner son of Ner, commander of the army of Israel; and Hamasah son of Jether, commander of the army of Judah.

And their blood will fall back on the head of Joab, and on the head of his descendants forever; but there will be peace from the Lord forever for David, and for his descendants, and for his house, and for his throne.

Benaiah son of Jehoiada then went up and attacked him and killed him; and they buried him in his house in the wilderness.

Then the king appointed Benaiah son of Jehoiada over the army in place of Joab; the king also appointed Zadok the priest in place of Abiathar.

Then the King sent for Simhi and said to him, "Build yourself a house in Jerusalem and stay there, and do not leave it [to go] to any other place."

For know that on the day you leave it, and cross the Kidron Valley, you will certainly die; your blood will be on your own head.

And Simhi answered the King, "This is a good word; your servant will do everything that my lord the King has said.” So Simhi stayed in Jerusalem for several days. But it came to pass that after three years, two of Simhi's servants ran away to Akis, son of Mahaca, King of Gath, and it was reported to Simhi, saying: Behold, your servants are in Gath.

Then Simhi got up, and saddled his donkey, and went to Gath to Akis, to seek his servants; so Simhi went, and brought back his servants from Gath.

And it was reported to Solomon that Shimi had gone from Jerusalem to Gath, and that he had returned.

And the King sent for Shimei and said to him, “Did I not make you swear by the Lord, and did I not protest to you, saying, ‘Know for certain that on the day you go out and go here or there, you shall surely die?’ And did you not answer me, ‘The word that I have heard is good?’”

Why then have you not kept the oath you swore by the Lord, and the command I gave you?

The King also said to Shimei: You know all the evil you have done to David my father, and you are convinced of it in your heart; therefore the Lord has brought your evil back upon your own head.

But King Solomon will be blessed, and the throne of David will be established before the Lord forever.

And the king commissioned Benaiah son of Jehoiada, who went out and attacked him, and he died. And the kingdom was established in Solomon's hand.

Now Solomon made an alliance with Pharaoh King of Egypt, and took Pharaoh's daughter as his wife, and brought her to the City of David, until he had finished building his house, and the house of the Lord, and the wall of Jerusalem all around.

Only the people sacrificed in the high places, because until then no house had been built in the Name of the Lord.

And Solomon loved the Lord, walking according to the ordinances of David his father, only he sacrificed in the high places, and made incense there.

So the King went to Gibeon to sacrifice there; for it was the greatest of the high places; and Solomon sacrificed a thousand burnt offerings on the altar that was there.

And the Lord appeared to Solomon in a dream at night in Gibeon, and God said to him, “Ask what I may give you.”

And Solomon answered: You have shown great kindness to your servant David my father, in that he walked before you in truth, in righteousness, and in uprightness of heart toward you, and you have continued this great kindness to him by giving him a son who sits on his throne, as it appears today.

But now, O Lord my God, you have made your servant king in place of David my father, and I am only a young man, who does not know how to conduct myself.

And your servant is among your people, whom you have chosen, [and] who is a great people that cannot be counted or numbered, so great is their number.

Therefore, give your servant an understanding heart to govern your people, [and] to discern between good and evil; for who is able to govern your people, who are of such great importance?

And this speech pleased the Lord, because Solomon had made such a request of him.

And God said to him: Because you have made this request of me, and you have not asked for a long life, nor have you asked for riches, nor have you asked for the death of your enemies, but you have asked for understanding to render justice;

Behold, I have done according to your word; behold, I have given you a wise and understanding heart, so that there was none like you before you, and there will be none like you after you.

And I have even given you what you did not ask for, namely riches and glory, so that there will not be [a King] like you among kings all the days of your life.

And if you walk in my ways to keep my ordinances and my commandments, as David your father walked, I will also prolong your days.

Then Solomon awoke, and this was the dream. Then he returned to Jerusalem, and stood before the Ark of the Covenant of the Lord, and offered burnt offerings and peace offerings, and held a feast for all his servants.

Then two women of ill repute came to the King and presented themselves before him. And one of these women said, "Alas, my Lord! This woman and I were living in the same house, and I gave birth in her house there."

On the third day after I gave birth, this woman also gave birth, and we were together; there was no stranger with us in that house, it was just the two of us in that house.

But this woman's child died during the night because she lay on top of him.

But she got up at midnight, and took my son from me, while your servant was sleeping, and laid him in her bosom, and she laid her dead son in my bosom.

And having risen in the morning to breastfeed my son, behold, he was dead, but having considered him carefully in the morning, behold, it was not my son, whom I had borne.

The other woman replied, "It is not so; the one who lives is my son, and the one who died is your son." But the other said, "It is not so; the one who died is your son, and the one who lives is my son." They spoke thus before the King.

And the King said: This one says, the one who is alive is my son, and the one who is dead is your son; and that one says, it is not so; but the one who is dead is your son, and the one who is alive is my son.

Then the King said, "Bring me a sword." And a sword was brought before the King.

And the King said: Divide the living child in two, and give half to one and half to the other.

Then the woman whose son was still alive said to the King, for her heart was moved with compassion for her son: "Alas, my lord, let the living child be given to this woman, and let him not be killed!" But the other said: "He shall be neither mine nor yours; let him be divided."

Then the King answered, and said: Give to this one the living child, and take care not to kill him; this one is the mother.

And all those in Israel, having heard of the judgment which the King had rendered, feared the King; for they recognized that there was in him divine wisdom to render justice.

King Solomon, therefore, was king over all Israel.

And these were the chief lords of his [court]; Hazaria son of Zadok the priest; Elihoreph and Ahijah sons of Sisa, secretaries; Jehoshaphat son of Ahilud, clerk of the registers;

Benaiah son of Jehoiada was in charge of the army; and Zadok and Abiathar were the priests;

Hazaria son of Nathan was in charge of those who were in charge of the provisions; and Zebul son of Nathan was the chief officer; [and] the King's favorite; and Ahisar was the great master of the house; and Adoniram son of Habda, [was] in charge of the tributes.

Now Solomon had twelve commissioners over all Israel, who provided for the King and his household; and each one had a month of the year to supply him with food.

And these are their names. The son of Hur [was appointed] on the mountain of Ephraim;

The son of Deker on Makath, on Sahalbim, on Beth-semes, on Elon of Beth-hanan;

The son of Heseb on Arubboth, [and] he had Soco and all the land of Hepher;

The son of Abinadab had all the land of Dor; he took Taphath, Solomon's daughter, as his wife;

Bahana son of Ahilud had Tahanach and Megiddo, and all [the land] of Beth-shean which is towards the road leading to Zarethan below Jezrehel, from Beth-shean to Abelmeholah, [and] as far as beyond Jokmeham;

The son of Geber [was appointed] over Ramoth of Gilead, [and] he had the towns of Jair son of Manasseh in Gilead; he also had all the region of Argob in Bashan, sixty large walled cities, and [furnished] with bronze bars;

Ahinadab son of Hiddo [was appointed] over Mahanajim;
Ahimahats, whose wife was Basemath, daughter of Solomon, [was appointed] over Naphtali;
Bahana son of Cusai [was appointed] over Asher, and over Haloth;
Jehoshaphat son of Paruah, over Issachar;
Simhi son of Elah, on Benjamin;
Geber son of Uri, over the land of Gilead, [which had been] of the land of Sihon King of the Amorites, and of Hog King of Bashan; and he alone was appointed over that land.
Judah and Israel were as numerous as the sand on the seashore; they were so numerous; they ate and drank and were merry.
And Solomon ruled over all the kingdoms, from the river to the land of the Philistines, and to the border of Egypt; and they brought him gifts, and were subject to him all the days of his life.
Now Solomon's daily rations were thirty cores of fine flour, and sixty of other flour;
Ten fat oxen, and twenty pasture oxen, and one hundred sheep; not counting deer, fallow deer, buffalo, and fattened fowl.
For he ruled over all the lands on this side of the river, from Tiphseh to Gaza, over all the kings who were on this side of the river, and he was at peace [with all the surrounding countries] on all sides.
And Judah and Israel dwelt securely, each under his vine and under his fig tree, from Dan to Beersheba, all the days of Solomon.
Solomon also had forty thousand places to hold horses, and twelve thousand horsemen.

Now these officials provided food for King Solomon and all who approached King Solomon's table, each in his month, and they did not let them lack anything.
They also brought barley and straw for the horses and for the broom, to the places where they were, each according to the burden they had.
And God gave Solomon wisdom, and very great understanding, and a breadth of spirit as great as the sand that is on the seashore.
And Solomon's wisdom was greater than the wisdom of all the Orientals, and than all the wisdom of the Egyptians.
He was even wiser than any man, wiser than Ethan Ezrahite, Heman, Calcol, and Dardah, the sons of Mahol; and his reputation spread throughout all the surrounding nations.

He spoke three thousand parables and composed five thousand songs.
He also spoke of trees, from the cedar in Lebanon to the hyssop growing out of the wall; he also spoke of beasts, birds, reptiles, and fish.
And people came from all nations to hear the wisdom of Solomon; [and] from all the kings of the earth who had heard of his wisdom.
Hiram, also King of Tyre, sent his servants to Solomon, having learned that he had been anointed King in place of his father; for Hiram had always loved David.
And Solomon sent word to Hiram:
You know that David my father could not build a house for the Name of the Lord his God, because of the wars that surrounded him, until the Lord had put his [enemies] under his feet.
And now the Lord my God has given me rest on every side, and I have no enemies, nor any trouble.
Therefore, I intend to build a house for the Name of the Lord my God, as the Lord spoke to David my father, saying: Your son whom I will put in your place on your throne shall be the one who builds a house for my Name.
Therefore, now command that cedars of Lebanon be cut down, and that my servants be with your servants; and I will give you for your servants such reward as you tell me; for you know that there are no people among us who understand like the Sidonians, in cutting wood.

Now it came to pass that when Hiram heard the words of Solomon, he rejoiced greatly, and said: Blessed be the Lord today, who has given to David a wise son [to be King] over this great people.

Hiram then sent word to Solomon, saying: I have heard what you sent me to say, and I will do everything you want concerning the cedar wood and the fir wood.

My servants will bring them from Lebanon to the sea, then I will have them put on the sea in rafts, to the place that you will have marked for me, and I will have them untied there, and you will take them, and in turn you will satisfy me by providing food for my house.

Hiram therefore gave Solomon as much cedar wood and fir wood as he wanted.

And Solomon gave Hiram twenty thousand cores of wheat for the food of his house, and twenty cores of very pure oil; Solomon gave Hiram the same amount every year.

And the Lord gave Solomon wisdom, as the Lord had spoken to him; and there was peace between Hiram and Solomon, and they made a covenant together.

King Solomon also raised a levy [of people] from all Israel, and the levy was thirty thousand men.

And he sent ten thousand to Lebanon every month, in turn, they were one month in Lebanon, and two months at home; and Adoniram [was appointed] over this levy.

Solomon also had seventy thousand men who carried burdens, and eighty thousand who cut wood on the mountain;

Without the Chiefs of Solomon's Commissioners, who were in charge of the work, numbering three thousand three hundred, who commanded the people who were employed in this work.

And by the King's command, large stones and precious stones were brought in to lay the foundation of the house, all of which were hewn.

So Solomon's masons, and Hiram's masons, and the stonecutters cut and prepared the wood and the stones to build the house.

Now it came to pass that in the year four hundred and eighty, after the children of Israel had come out of the land of Egypt, in the fourth year of the reign of Solomon over Israel, in the month of Zif, which is the second month, he built a house to the Lord.

And the house that King Solomon built for the Lord was sixty cubits long, and twenty cubits wide, and thirty cubits high.

The porch that was in front of the Temple of the house was twenty cubits long, corresponding to the width of the house, and it was ten cubits wide at the front of the house.

He also made windows in the house, wide on the inside, [and] narrow on the outside.

And joining the wall of the house he built lean-tos of rooms one on top of the other all around, [supported] on the walls of the house, all around the Temple, and of the Oracle, thus he made rooms all around.

The width of the lower lean-to was five cubits, and the width of the middle one was six cubits, and the width of the third was seven cubits; for he had made narrowings in the house on the outside, so that [the carpentry of the lean-tos] would not enter into the walls of the house.

But when they built the house, they built it of stones brought all just as they were supposed to be, so that in building the house they heard neither hammer, nor axe, nor any iron tool.

The entrance to the middle rooms [was] on the right side of the house, and one went up by a spiral staircase to the middle [rooms]; and from the middle rooms to those on the third [floor].

So he built the house, and finished it, and he covered the house with vaulted paneling and cedar beams.

And he built lean-tos adjoining the whole house, each five cubits high, and they were attached to the house by means of cedar timbers.

Then the word of the Lord came to Solomon, saying:

As for this house that you are building, if you walk in my statutes, and if you do my ordinances, and keep all my commandments, by walking in them, I will confirm in your favor the word that I spoke to David your father.

And I will dwell among the children of Israel, and I will not abandon my people Israel.

So Solomon built the house, and finished it.

He paneled the inside walls of the house with cedar planks, from the floor of the house to the paneled vault; he covered them with wood on the inside, and he covered the floor of the house with fir planks.

He also paneled the space of twenty cubits of cedar boards at the back of the house, from the floor to the top of the walls, and he paneled [this space] inside to be the Oracle, [that is], the Most Holy Place.

But the house, [namely] the Temple in front, was forty cubits long.

And the cedar boards that were for the inside of the house were notched with open flower buds, raised in a raised pattern; the whole inside was cedar, not a stone could be seen.

He also placed the Oracle inside the house towards the back, to put the Ark of the covenant of the Lord there.

And the Oracle was in front of it twenty cubits long, and twenty cubits wide, and twenty cubits high, and it was covered with fine gold; the altar, [made of cedar planks], was also covered with it.

Solomon then covered the house with fine gold, from the middle to the back; and put a veil with gold chains in front of the Oracle, which he covered with gold.

So he covered the whole house entirely with gold. He also covered the entire altar that was before the Oracle with gold.

And he made in the oracle two cherubim of olive wood, each ten cubits high.

One of the wings of one of the Cherubim was five cubits long, and the other wing of the [same] Cherub was also five cubits long; from the tip of one wing to the tip of the other wing there were ten cubits.

The other Cherub was also ten cubits long; [for] the two Cherubim were of the same measure, and were cut in the same fashion.

The height of one Cherub was ten cubits, as was that of the other Cherub.

And he placed the Cherubim inside the house towards the back, and the wings of the Cherubim were spread out, so that the wing of one touched one wall, and the wing of the other Cherub touched the other wall; and their [other] wings came [together] in the middle of the house, [and] one of the wings touched the other.

And he covered the cherubim with gold.

And he carved all the walls of the house all around with deep carvings of cherubim, and palm fronds, and blossoming flower buds, both inside and outside.

He also covered the floor of the house with gold, both the part that extended towards the back and the part that extended outwards.

And at the entrance of the Oracle he made a double-leaf door of olive wood, whose lintels [and] posts were of five members.

[He] therefore made a double-leaf door of olive wood, and carved on it moldings of cherubim, palms, and open flower buds, and covered them with gold, extending the gold over the cherubim and over the palms.

He also made olive wood posts with four supports at the entrance to the Temple;

And a double-leaf door made of fir wood; the two pieces of one of the leaves were broken; and the two pieces of the other leaf were also broken.

And he carved into it cherubim, palm fronds, and open flower buds, and covered them with gold, neatly placed over the carvings.

He also built the inner courtyard with three rows of dressed stone, and one row of cedar beams.

In the fourth year, in the month of Zif, the foundations of the house of the Lord were laid.

And in the eleventh year, in the month of Bul, which is the eighth month, the house was completed with all its appurtenances and its ordinances; thus it took him seven years to build it.

Solomon also built his house, and completed it entirely in thirteen years.

He also built the house in the park of Lebanon, one hundred cubits long, fifty cubits wide, and thirty cubits high, on four rows of cedar columns; and on the columns there were cedar beams.

There was also a cedar wood roof over the rooms, which was on forty-five columns, arranged in fifteens.

And there were three rows of windows; and one window corresponded to another in three places.

And all the doors and all the posts were square, with the windows; and one window corresponded to the other opposite in three places.

He also made a porch all of columns, fifty cubits long and thirty cubits wide; and this porch was in front of the columns [of the house], so that the columns and the beams were in front of them.

He also made a porch for the throne on which he rendered his judgments, [called] the Porch of Judgment, and it was covered with cedar from one end of the ground to the other.

And in his house where he lived there was another courtyard inside the porch, which was of the same construction. Solomon also made for Pharaoh's daughter, whom he had married, a house [built] like this porch.

All these things were made of precious stones, of the same measure as hewn stones, sawn with a saw, inside and out, from the bottom to the cornices, and outside to the great courtyard.

The foundation was also made of precious stones, large stones, stones of ten cubits, and stones of eight cubits.

And on top of that there were precious stones, of the same measure as hewn stones, and cedar wood.

And the great courtyard also had all around it three rows of hewn stones, and a row of cedar beams, like the inner courtyard of the house of the Lord, and the porch of the house.

Now King Solomon had brought Hiram from Tyre; son of a widowed woman of the Tribe of Naphtali, whose father was a Tyrian, a copper worker; very skilled, intelligent, and learned in making all kinds of bronze work; so he came to King Solomon, and did all his work.

He cast two bronze pillars, the height of one of the pillars was eighteen cubits; and a net of twelve cubits surrounded the other pillar.

He also made two capitals of cast bronze to put on the tops of the columns; and the height of one of the capitals was five cubits, and the height of the other capital was also five cubits.

There were interlacing patterns in the form of nets, twisted nets like chains, for the capitals that were on the top of the columns, seven for one of the capitals, and seven for the other.

And he adapted them to the columns, with two rows of pomegranate seeds on a net, all around, to cover one of the capitals that was on the top of one of the columns, and he did the same for the other capital.

And the capitals that were on top of the columns were in the form of fleurs-de-lis, four cubits high [to be placed] on the porch.

Now the capitals were on the two columns, they were, [I say], above, from the place of the belly which was beyond the net. There were also two hundred pomegranates, [arranged] in rows all around, on the second capital.

So he set up the pillars at the porch of the Temple, and put one on the right hand and named it Jachin; and he put the other on the left hand, and named it Boaz. And [they placed] on the capitals of the columns the work made in the shape of fleur-de-lis; thus the work of the columns was completed.

He also made a molten sea, ten cubits from rim to rim, round all around, five cubits high, and a cord thirty cubits wide was set all around it.

And all around, below its rim, were cast oxen, ten at every cubit, encircling the sea all around. [There were] two rows of these cast oxen.

And it was placed upon twelve oxen, three of which faced north, three faced west, three faced south, and three faced east. The sea was upon their backs, and all their hindquarters were turned inwards.

Its thickness was a palm, and its rim was like the rim of a custom-made cup of lilies; it contained two thousand baths.

He also made ten bronze bases, each four cubits long, four cubits wide, and three cubits high.

But the construction of [each] foundation was in such a way that they had frames embedded between supports.

And on these frames, which were between the supports, there were figures of lions, oxen, and cherubs. And above the supports there was a basin on top; and below the figures of lions and oxen there were sloping cornices.

And each base had four bronze wheels, with bronze planks; and at the four corners there were certain shoulder pieces, which extended below the vat beyond all the cornices, without anyone noticing.

Now the opening of the vat, from the inside of the capital at the top, was one cubit; but the opening of the capital was round in the manner of the basin, and it was one and a half cubits, and on the frames of this opening there were engravings; these openings also had square frames, and not round ones.

And the four wheels were under the chassis; and the axles of the wheels [were] attached to the underside; each wheel was one and a half cubits high.

And the way the wheels were made was like the way wagon wheels were made; their axles, their rims, their hubs, and their spokes were all made of cast iron.

There were also four shoulder pieces at the four corners of each base, which [were drawn from it].

There was also at the top of each base a half cubit high, which was round all around; so that each base had at its top its tenons and frames, which were taken from it.

Then they engraved the tenons and frames of each base [of figures] of Cherubim, lions and palms, according to the plan of each [tenon, frame], and cornice all around.

He made the ten bases in the same way, all having the same casting, the same measure, and the same notch.

He also made ten bronze tubs, each of which held forty baths, [and] each tub was four cubits, each tub was on each of the ten bases.

And they placed five foundations on the right side of the Temple, and five on the left side of the Temple; and they placed the sea on the right side of the Temple, extending towards the East from the South.

So Hiram made tubs, scrapers, and basins, and he finished all the work that he was doing for King Solomon for the Temple of the Lord.

[Knowledge], two columns, and the two basins of the capitals that were on the top of the columns; and two nets to cover the two basins that were on the top of the columns;

And four hundred pomegranates for the two nets, so that there were two rows of pomegranates for each net, in order to cover the two basins of the capitals, which were on the columns;

Ten foundations; and ten vats [to put] on the foundations;

And a sea, and twelve oxen under the sea;

And cauldrons, and scrapers, and basins. All these vessels that Hiram made for King Solomon for the Temple of the Lord were of polished bronze.

The King had them melted in the plain of the Jordan, in fertile soil, between Succoth and Tsartan.

And Solomon did not weigh any of these vessels, because there were so many of them; so the weight of the copper was not sought.

Solomon also made all the utensils for the Temple of the Lord, [namely] the golden altar, and the golden tablets, on which were the bread of the Presence;

And five fine gold candlesticks in the right hand, and five in the left hand in front of the Oracle, and the flowers and the lamps, and the golden tongs;

And the bowls, sickles, basins, cups, and censers of fine gold. Even the hinges of the doors of the inner house, [that is], of the Most Holy Place, [and] of the doors of the house, [that is] of the Temple, were of gold.

Thus all the work that King Solomon did for the house of the Lord was finished; then he brought in what David his father had consecrated, the silver and the gold, and the vessels, and put it in the treasuries of the house of the Lord.

Then Solomon assembled before him in Jerusalem the Elders of Israel, and all the heads of the Tribes, the chief men of the fathers of the children of Israel, to bring up the Ark of the covenant of the Lord from the City of David, which is Zion.

And all the people of Israel were assembled around King Solomon in the month of Ethanim, which is the seventh month, on the very day of the festival.

So all the elders of Israel came; and the priests carried the Ark.

So they transported the Ark of the Lord, and the Tabernacle of meeting, and all the holy vessels that were in the Tabernacle; the priests, I say, and the Levites carried them away.

Now King Solomon, and all the assembly of Israel that had come to him, were together before the Ark [and] they were sacrificing herds and flocks in such great numbers that they could not be counted or numbered.

And the priests brought the Ark of the Covenant of the Lord to its place, to the oracle of the house, to the Most Holy Place, under the wings of the cherubim.

For the cherubim spread their wings over the place where the Ark was to be, and the cherubim covered the Ark and its poles from above.

And they removed the bars from the inside, so that the ends of the bars could be seen from the Holy Place in front of the Oracle, but they could not be seen from the outside; and they have remained there to this day.

There was nothing in the Ark except the two stone tablets that Moses had placed in it at Horeb, when the Lord made a covenant with the children of Israel, when they came out of the land of Egypt.

Now it came to pass that as the priests went out of the holy place, a cloud filled the house of the Lord.

So the priests could not stand to perform the service because of the cloud, for the glory of the Lord had filled the house of the Lord.

Then Solomon said, "The Lord has said that he will dwell in darkness."

I have finished, [O Eternal One!] building a house for your dwelling, a permanent home, so that you may dwell in it forever.

And the King, turning his face, blessed all the assembly of Israel; for all the assembly of Israel was standing there.

And he said: Blessed be the Lord, the God of Israel, who spoke with his own mouth to David my father, and accomplished it by his power, and said:

From the day I brought my people Israel out of Egypt, I did not choose any city from among all the Tribes of Israel to build a house there, so that my Name might be there; but I chose David, so that he might have charge of my people Israel.

And David my father had it in his heart to build a house for the Name of the Lord, the God of Israel.

But the Lord said to David my father, "As for what you had in your heart to build a house for my Name, you did well to have this in your heart."

Nevertheless, you shall not build this house, but your son who will come from your loins shall be the one who builds this house for my Name.

The Lord has therefore fulfilled his word that he had spoken, and I have succeeded David my father, and I sit on the throne of Israel, as the Lord had spoken; and I have built this house for the Name of the Lord, the God of Israel.

And I have assigned here a place for the Ark, in which is the covenant of the Lord, which he made with our fathers, when he brought them out of the land of Egypt.

Then Solomon stood before the altar of the Lord in the presence of all the assembly of Israel, and with his hands stretched out toward heaven,

He said: O Lord God of Israel! there is no God like you in heaven above, nor on earth below; you keep the covenant and the grace freely given to your servants, who walk with all their heart before you.

[And] you have kept to your servant David my father what you had spoken to him; for what you had spoken to him with your mouth, you have accomplished with your hand, as [it appears] today.

Now therefore, O Lord God of Israel! grant to your servant David my father, what you have spoken to him, saying: Never shall a successor be cut off from your presence to sit on the throne of Israel, provided only that your sons take heed to their way, to walk before my face, as you have walked.

And now, O God of Israel! I pray to you, let your word, which you spoke to your servant David my father, be confirmed.

But would God actually dwell on earth? Behold, the heavens, even the highest heavens, cannot contain you; how much less this house that I have built!

However, O Lord my God! consider the prayer of your servant, and his supplication, to hear the cry and the prayer that your servant makes to you today;

[Who is], that your eyes may be open day and night toward this house, the place of which you said: My name will be there, to answer the prayer that your servant makes in this place.

Therefore, hear the supplication of your servant, and of your people Israel when they pray to you in this place; hear them, I say, from your dwelling place, from heaven; hear, and forgive.

When someone has sinned against his neighbor, and an oath has been administered to him to make him swear, and the oath has been taken before your altar in this house; Hear them from heaven, and execute [what the oath will bear], and judge your servants by condemning the wicked, [and] repaying him according to what he has done; and by justifying the righteous, and repaying him according to his righteousness.

When your people Israel have been defeated by the enemy, because they have sinned against you, if afterwards they turn back to you, claiming your name, and making prayers and supplications to you in this house;

Hear them from heaven, and forgive the sin of your people Israel, and bring them back to the land you gave to their fathers.

When the heavens are closed in, and there is no rain, because [those of Israel] have sinned against you, if they pray to you in this place, and call upon your Name, and turn from their sins, because you have afflicted them;

Hear them from heaven and forgive the sin of your servants and your people Israel, when you have taught them the right way in which they should walk, and send rain on the land you have given your people as an inheritance.

When there is famine in the land, or death; when there is blight, mildew, locusts, and worms, even when the enemy besieges them in their own land, [or when there is plague, or] disease;

Whatever prayer or supplication may be made to you by any man from all your people Israel, according to the wound in each of their hearts, and according to the stretch of hands each of them has made toward this house;

Then hear them, you from heaven, from your fixed abode, and forgive, and do, and repay each one according to all his ways, because you will have known his heart; for you alone know the heart of all men;

So that they may fear you all the time they live on the land you gave to our fathers.

And even when the foreigner who is not of your people Israel, but who has come from a distant country for the love of your Name;

(For they will hear of your great Name, and of your mighty hand, and of your outstretched arm;) when he comes, and prays to you in this house;

Hear him from heaven, from your appointed dwelling place, and do according to all that this stranger has cried out to you for, so that all the peoples of the earth may know your name and fear you, as your people Israel do, and know that your name is invoked on this house that I have built.

When your people go out to war against their enemy, in the way by which you have sent them, if they pray to the Lord, looking towards this city that you have chosen, and towards this house that I have built for your Name;

Then hear from heaven their prayer and their supplication, and uphold their right.

When they have sinned against you, for there is no man who does not sin, and you are angry with them, so that you have delivered them into the hands of their enemies, and those who have taken them have led them captive to enemy lands, whether far away or near;

If in the land to which they were taken captive they come to their senses and repent and pray to you in the land of those who took them captive, saying, "We have sinned, we have done wrong, and we have acted wickedly;

If they return to you with all their heart and with all their soul, in the land of their enemies, who have taken them captive, and if they address their prayers to you, looking towards their land that you gave to their fathers, towards this city that you have chosen, and towards this house that I have built for your Name;

Then hear from heaven, from the fixed abode of your dwelling, their prayer and their supplication, and uphold their right.

And forgive your people who have sinned against you, and even [forgive them] all the crimes they have committed against you, and grant that those who have taken them captive may have pity on them and show them mercy.

For they are your people and your inheritance, whom you brought out of Egypt, out of the midst of an iron furnace.

May your eyes therefore be open to the prayer of your servant, and to the supplication of your people Israel, to hear them in all that they cry out to you for.

For you set them apart for yourself from all the peoples of the earth, to be your inheritance, as you spoke through Moses your servant, when you brought our fathers out of Egypt, O Lord Eternal!

Now as soon as Solomon had finished all this prayer and supplication to the Lord, he rose from before the altar of the Lord, and was no longer on his knees, but [still] had his hands stretched out toward heaven;

He stood up and blessed the whole assembly of Israel with a loud voice, saying:

Blessed be the Lord, who has given rest to his people Israel, as he had promised; not one word of all the good words that he had spoken through Moses his servant has fallen [to the ground].

May the Lord our God be with us, as he was with our fathers; may he not abandon us, nor forsake us.

[But] that he may incline our hearts toward him, so that we may walk in all his ways, and keep his commandments, his statutes, and his ordinances which he prescribed to our fathers;

And may my words, by which I have made supplication to the Lord, be present before the Lord our God day and night; so that he may uphold the right of his servant, and the right of his people Israel, as he needs each day.

So that all the peoples of the earth may know that the Lord is God, and that there is no other;

And so that your heart may be pure toward the Lord your God, to walk in his statutes, and to keep his commandments, as today.

And the King, and all Israel with him, offered sacrifices before the Lord.

And Solomon offered a sacrifice of peace offerings, which he sacrificed to the Lord, namely, twenty-two thousand oxen and six hundred thousand sheep. Thus the king and all the children of Israel dedicated the house of the Lord.

On that day the King consecrated the middle of the courtyard, which was in front of the house of the Lord; for there he offered the burnt offerings, and the cakes, and the fat of the peace offerings, because the bronze altar which was before the Lord was too small to hold the burnt offerings, and the cakes, and the fat of the peace offerings.

And at that time Solomon held a solemn feast; and with him all Israel, which was a great assembly, [came] from where one enters Hamath to the Wadi of Egypt, before the Lord our God, and this lasted seven days, and seven more days, which was fourteen days.

[And] on the eighth day he dismissed the people, who blessed the King; then they went to their tents, rejoicing, and with their hearts full of gladness because of all the good that the Lord had done to David his servant, and to Israel his people.

Now after Solomon had finished building the house of the Lord, and the royal house, and all that Solomon had taken pleasure and desired to do;

The Lord appeared to him a second time, just as he had appeared to him at Gibeon.

And the Lord said to him, "I have heard your prayer and the supplication that you made before me; I have consecrated this house that you have built to put my Name there forever, and my eyes and my heart will always be there."

As for you, if you walk before me as David your father walked, in integrity and uprightness of heart, doing all that I have commanded you, and if you keep my statutes and my ordinances;

Then I will establish the throne of your Kingdom over Israel forever, as I spoke to David your father, saying: You shall not be cut off [from your succession] on the throne of Israel.

[But] if you and your sons turn away from me, and do not keep my commandments [and] my statutes, which I have set before you, and go away and serve other gods, and bow down before them;

I will cut off Israel from the land I have given them, and I will reject from before me this house that I have consecrated to my Name, and Israel will become a derision and a mockery to all peoples.

And as for this house which will have been raised high, whoever passes by it will be astonished and will hiss; and they will say, "Why has the Lord done this to this land and to this house?"

And the answer will be: Because they abandoned the Lord their God, who brought their fathers out of the land of Egypt, and turned to other gods, and bowed down to them, and served them, therefore the Lord brought all this evil upon them.

Now it came to pass that at the end of the twenty years during which Solomon built the two houses, the house of the Lord, and the royal house;

Hiram King of Tyre having brought to Solomon cedar wood, fir wood, and gold, as much as he wanted, King Solomon gave Hiram twenty cities in the land of Galilee.

And Hiram went out from Tyre to see the cities that Solomon had given him, but they did not please him.

And he said, "What cities have you given me, my brother?" And he called them the land of Cabul, which [has been called that] to this day.

Hiram had also sent the King six twenty talents of gold.

Now King Solomon imposed a tribute, to build the house of the Lord, and his house, and Millo, and the wall of Jerusalem, and Hazer, and Megiddo, and Gezer;

(For Pharaoh, King of Egypt, had gone up and taken Gezer, and burned it, and killed the Canaanites who lived in that city; but he gave it as a dowry to his daughter, Solomon's wife.)

Solomon therefore built Gezer; and Beth-horon the lower;

And Bahalath, and Tadmor, in the desert which is in the land;

And all the fortification cities that Solomon had, and the cities where he kept his chariots, and the cities where he kept his horsemen, and what Solomon took pleasure in building in Jerusalem, and in Lebanon, and in all the land of his dominion.

[And] as for all the peoples who remained of the Amorites, the Hittites, the Perizzites, the Hivites, and the Jebusites who were not children of Israel;

[As for] their children, who had remained after them in the land, and whom the children of Israel had not been able to destroy in the manner of the prohibition, Solomon made them tributaries, and enslaved them to this day.

But Solomon did not allow any of the children of Israel to be enslaved; but they were fighting men, and his officers, and his chief commanders, and his captains, and commanders of his chariots, and his men-at-arms.

There were also five hundred and fifty who were the chief officers of those who were appointed over Solomon's work, who had the administration over the people who were doing the work.

Pharaoh's daughter went up from the City of David to her house, which Solomon had built for her; [and] then he built Millo.

And three times a year Solomon offered burnt offerings and peace offerings on the altar which he had built to the Lord, and made incense on the one which was before the Lord, after he had finished the house.

King Solomon also equipped a fleet at Hezion-geber, which is near Eloth, on the shore of the Red Sea, in the land of Edom.

And Hiram sent some of his servants, men of the sea, who understood naval matters, to be with Solomon's servants in that fleet.

And they went to Ophir, and from there took four hundred and twenty talents of gold; which they brought to King Solomon.

Now the Queen of Sheba, having heard of Solomon's fame because of the Name of the Lord, came to test him with obscure questions.

And she entered Jerusalem with a very large retinue, and with camels bearing aromatic things, and a great quantity of gold, and precious stones; and having come to Solomon, she spoke to him of all that was in her heart.

And Solomon explained to her everything she had proposed; there was nothing that the King did not hear, and that he did not explain to her.

Then the Queen of Sheba, seeing all the wisdom of Solomon and the house he had built,

And the food on his table, the lodgings of his servants, the order of service of his officers, their clothing, his cupbearers, and the burnt offerings that he offered in the house of the Lord, she was completely enraptured within herself.

And she said to the King: What I have learned in my country about your character and your wisdom is true.

And I did not believe what was said until I came and saw it with my own eyes; and behold, not even half was told me; your wisdom and your riches surpass all that I had heard.

How blessed are your people! How blessed are your servants who continually stand before you and listen to your wisdom!

Blessed be the Lord your God, who has been pleased with you, to place you on the throne of Israel; for the Lord has loved Israel forever; and has appointed you King to do justice and righteousness.

Then she presented the King with six hundred talents of gold, and a great quantity of spices, with precious stones. Never since then did such an abundance of spices come as the Queen of Sheba gave to King Solomon.

And Hiram's fleet, which had brought gold from Ophir, also brought in great abundance wood from Almugghim, and precious stones.

And the King made barriers from this wood of Almugghim, for the house of the Lord, and for the royal house; he also made violins, and bagpipes for the singers; he had not come from this wood of Almugghim, and none had been seen until that day.

And King Solomon gave the Queen of Sheba everything she desired and asked for, in addition to what he gave her according to the power of a king such as Solomon. Then she returned to her own country with her servants.

The weight of the gold that came to Solomon each year was six hundred and sixty-six talents of gold;

Without what was due to him from the wholesale merchants, and from the merchandise of those who sold retail, and from all the Kings of Arabia, and from the Governors of that country.

King Solomon also made two hundred large shields of hammered gold, using six hundred [pieces] of gold for each shield.

And three hundred other shields of gold stretched with a hammer, using three mines of gold for each shield; and the King put them in the house of the park of Lebanon.

The King also made a large ivory throne, which he covered with fine gold.

This throne had six steps, and the top of the throne was round at the back; there were armrests on either side of the seat, and two lions were beside the armrests. There were also twelve lions on the six steps [of the throne], on either side; there has not been such a thing in all the Kingdoms.

And all the dishes of King Solomon's sideboard were of gold; and all the vessels of the house in the park of Lebanon were of fine gold; there was no silver; silver was not valued at all in Solomon's time.

For the King had at sea the fleet of Tarshish with the fleet of Hiram; [and] every three years the fleet of Tarshish returned, bringing gold, silver, ivory, monkeys, and peacocks.

Thus King Solomon was greater than all the kings of the earth, both in riches and in wisdom.

And all the inhabitants of the earth sought to see the face of Solomon, to hear the wisdom that God had put in his heart.

And each of them brought him his gift, [namely], silver vessels, gold vessels, clothing, weapons, aromatic things, [and they brought him] horses and mules every year.

Solomon also amassed chariots and horsemen; so that he had 1,400 chariots and 12,000 horsemen, which he brought to the cities where he kept his chariots; there were also some with the King in Jerusalem.

And the King made it so that silver was no more prized in Jerusalem than stones; and cedars than the wild fig trees that were in the plains, so many were there.

As for the toll that belonged to Solomon, from the trade of horses brought out of Egypt, and of thread, the King's farmers were paid in thread.

But each chariot went up and out of Egypt for six hundred [pieces] of silver, and each horse for one hundred and fifty; and so they obtained it through its farmers for all the Kings of the Hittites, and for the Kings of Syria.

Now King Solomon loved several foreign women besides Pharaoh's daughter; [namely] Moabites, Hammonites, Idumeans, Sidonians, and Hittites;

They were among the nations of whom the Lord had said to the children of Israel, "You shall not go to them, nor shall they come to you; for they would surely turn your hearts away to follow their gods." Solomon sided with them and loved them.

He therefore had seven hundred wives, princesses, and three hundred concubines; and his wives caused his heart to stray.

For it came to pass in the days of Solomon's old age that his wives caused his heart to turn away after other gods; and his heart was not right before the Lord his God, as the heart of David his father had been.

And Solomon walked after Hastaroth, the deity of the Sidonians, and after Milcom, the abomination of the Hammonites.

So Solomon did what was evil in the sight of the Lord, and did not continue to follow the Lord, as his father David had done.

And Solomon built a high place at Chemosh, the abomination of the Moabites, on the mountain opposite Jerusalem; and at Molech, the abomination of the children of Hammon.

He did the same to all his foreign wives, who burned incense and sacrificed to their gods.

Therefore the Lord was angry with Solomon, because he had turned his heart away from the Lord, the God of Israel, who had appeared to him twice;

And who had even given him this express command, that he should not walk after other gods; but he did not keep what the Lord had commanded him.

And the Lord said to Solomon, "Because this has happened to you, and you have not kept my covenant and my statutes which I commanded you, I will surely tear the kingdom apart, so that it will no longer be yours, and I will give it to your servant."

However, for the sake of David your father, I will not do it in your time; it will be from the hands of your son that I will tear the kingdom apart.

Nevertheless, I will not tear apart the whole kingdom; I will give one tribe to your son, for the sake of David my servant, and for the sake of Jerusalem, which I have chosen.

The Lord therefore raised up an enemy against Solomon, [namely] Hadad the Edomite, who was of the royal race of Edom.

For it had happened that in the time when David was in Edom, when Joab, the commander of the army, went up to bury those who had been killed, as he killed all the males of Edom;

(For Joab remained there six months with all Israel, until he had exterminated all the males of Edom.)

Hadad had fled, along with some Idumeans who were among his father's servants, to withdraw to Egypt; and Hadad was [then] very young.

And when they had left Midian, they came to Paran, and took with them some people from Paran, and withdrew to Egypt to Pharaoh King of Egypt, who gave him a house, and assigned him food, and also gave him land.

And Hadad was very much in Pharaoh's good graces, so that he married him to his wife's sister, the sister of Queen Tachpenes.

And Tahpenes' sister bore him his son Genubath, whom Tahpenes weaned in Pharaoh's house. So Genubath was of Pharaoh's house, among Pharaoh's sons.

Now when Hadad heard in Egypt that David had fallen asleep with his fathers, and that Joab the commander of the army was dead, he said to Pharaoh, "Give me leave, and I will go to my country."

And Pharaoh answered him, "But what do you need while you are with me, that you ask to go back to your own country?" And he said, "[I need] nothing; but nevertheless, let me go."

God also raised up another enemy against Solomon, namely Rezon son of Eljadah, who had fled from his lord Hadar-hezer, king of Zobah,

He gathered people against him and was the leader of some bands when David defeated them; and they went to Damascus, and remained there, and reigned there.

[Rezon] was therefore an enemy of Israel all the days of Solomon, besides the evil that Hadad did; and he caused grief to Israel, and reigned over Syria.

Jeroboam also son of Nebat, an Ephrathite, of Zeredah, whose mother's name was Zeruah, a widow, a servant of Solomon, rose up against the King.

And this was the occasion for which he rose up against the King; it was when Solomon was building Millo, [and] filling in the hollow of the City of David his father;

Jeroboam, who was a strong and valiant man, happened to be there; and Solomon, seeing that this young man was working, put him in charge of all the affairs of the house of Joseph.

Now it happened at that same time, when Jeroboam went out of Jerusalem, Ahijah the Shilonite, the prophet, dressed in a new robe, found him on the road, and the two of them were alone in the fields.

And Ahija took the new robe that he was wearing, and tore it into twelve pieces; And he said to Jeroboam, "Take ten pieces for yourself; for thus says the Lord, the God of Israel: Behold, I am about to tear the kingdom out of Solomon's hand, and I will give you ten tribes."

But he will have one Tribe, for the sake of David my servant, and for the sake of Jerusalem, which is the city I have chosen out of all the Tribes of Israel.

Because they have forsaken me, and have bowed down to Hastaroth the god of the Sidonians, to Chemosh the god of Moab, and to Milcom the god of the children of Hammon, and have not walked in my ways, to do what is right before me, and [to keep] my statutes, and my ordinances, as [had done] David, Solomon's father.

However, I will not take anything of this Kingdom out of his hands; for as long as he lives I will keep him Prince, for the sake of David my servant whom I have chosen, [and] who has kept my commandments and my statutes.

But I will take the kingdom from his son's hand, and I will give you ten tribes.

And I will give one tribe to his son, so that David my servant may have a lamp forever before me in Jerusalem, which is the city I have chosen to put my name in.

I will take you, then, and you will reign over all that your soul desires, and you will be King over Israel.

And it shall come to pass that if you obey me in all that I command you, and walk in my ways, and do all that is right before me, keeping my statutes and my commandments, as David my servant did, I will be with you, and I will build you a house which shall be sure, as I built for David, and I will give you Israel.

So I will afflict David's descendants because of this, but not forever.

Solomon therefore sought to kill Jeroboam; but Jeroboam arose and fled to Egypt to Shisak King of Egypt; and he remained in Egypt until the death of Solomon.

As for the rest of Solomon's deeds, all that he did, and his wisdom, are they not written in the Book of Solomon's Deeds?

Now the time that Solomon reigned in Jerusalem over all Israel was forty years.

So Solomon slept with his fathers, and was buried in the City of David his father; and Rehoboam his son reigned in his place.

And Rehoboam went to Shechem, because all Israel had gone to Shechem to establish him as king.

Now it came to pass that when Jeroboam son of Nebat, who was still in Egypt, where he had fled from King Solomon, heard of it, he remained still in Egypt.

But they sent for him. So Jeroboam and all the assembly of Israel came and spoke to Rehoboam, saying:

Your father put a heavy yoke on us; but now you lighten this harsh servitude of your father, and this heavy yoke that he put on us, and we will serve you.

And he answered them, "Go, and in three days return to me"; and the people went away.

And King Rehoboam consulted the elders who had been with Solomon his father during his lifetime, and said to them, "How and what do you advise me to answer this people?"

And they answered him, saying, "If today you will be easy for these people, and yield to them, and answer them gently, they will be your servants forever."

But he disregarded the advice the elders had given him, and consulted the young men who had been raised with him, and who were with him.

And he said to them, "What do you advise me to say to these people, who have spoken to me, saying, 'Lighten the yoke that your father put on us'?"

Then the young men who had been raised with him spoke to him, and said to him, "This is what you are to say to these people who came to you saying, 'Your father put a heavy yoke on us, but you lighten it for us': 'What is least in me is greater than my father's loins.

My father put a heavy yoke on you, but I will make your yoke even heavier; my father disciplined you with rods, but I will discipline you with whips.

Three days later, Jeroboam and all the people came to Rehoboam, as the King had told them: Return to me in three days.

But the King responded harshly to the people, ignoring the advice the elders had given him.

And he spoke to them according to the advice of the young men, and said to them: My father put a heavy yoke on you, but I will make your yoke even heavier; my father chastised you with rods, but I will chastise you with slashes.

The King therefore did not listen to the people; for this was conducted by the Lord, to ratify the word which he had spoken by the ministry of Ahijah the Shilonite, to Jeroboam the son of Nebat.

And when all Israel saw that the king had not listened to them, the people answered the king, saying, "What share do we have in David? We have no inheritance in the son of Jesse. Israel, [return] to your tents; and you, David, now provide for your own household." So Israel went to their tents.

But as for the children of Israel who lived in the cities of Judah, Rehoboam reigned over them.

King Rehoboam sent Adoram, who was in charge of the tribute, but all Israel stoned him to death. Then King Rehoboam quickly got into a chariot and fled to Jerusalem.

Thus Israel rebelled against the house of David to this day.

And it came to pass that as soon as all Israel heard that Jeroboam had returned, they sent and summoned him to the assembly, and made him king over all Israel. And no tribe followed the house of David except the tribe of Judah.

And Rehoboam came to Jerusalem, and assembled all the house of Judah, and the Tribe of Benjamin, [namely] one hundred and eighty thousand chosen men, [and] made for war, to fight against the house of Israel, and to subdue the Kingdom [under the obedience] of Rehoboam son of Solomon.

But the word of God came to Shemahah, the man of God, saying:

Speak to Rehoboam son of Solomon, king of Judah, and to all the house of Judah, and of Benjamin, and to the remnant of the people, saying:

Thus says the Lord: You shall not go up, nor fight against your brothers, the children of Israel; return each to his own house; for this has been done by me; and they obeyed the word of the Lord and returned, according to the word of the Lord.

Now Jeroboam built Shechem in the hill country of Ephraim, and lived there, then he went out from there and built Peniel.

And Jeroboam said to himself: Now the Kingdom may well return to the house of David.

If this people goes up to Jerusalem to offer sacrifices in the house of the Lord, the heart of this people will turn to their Lord Rehoboam, King of Judah, and they will kill me, and they will return to Rehoboam, King of Judah.

Then the King, having taken counsel, made two golden calves, and said to the people: It is too much trouble for you to go up to Jerusalem; these are your gods, O Israel! who brought you up out of the land of Egypt.

And he put one in Bethel, and he put the other in Dan.

And this was [an occasion] of sin; for the people even went as far as Dan, [to bow down] before one [of the calves].

He also made houses on the high places, and appointed priests from the last of the people, who were not children of Levi.

Jeroboam also ordained a solemn festival in the eighth month, on the fifteenth day of the month, in imitation of the solemn festival that was celebrated in Judah, and he offered sacrifices on an altar. He did the same at Bethel, sacrificing to the calves he had made, and he appointed priests at Bethel for the high places he had built.

Now on the fifteenth day of the eighth month, [namely] in the month which he had invented of himself, he offered on the altar which he had made at Bethel, and celebrated the solemn feast [which he had instituted] for the children of Israel; and offered on the altar, making incense.

And behold, a man of God came from Judah to Bethel with the word of the Lord, when Jeroboam was standing by the altar to burn incense.

And he cried out against the altar according to the word of the Lord; and said, "Altar! Altar! Thus says the Lord, behold, a son shall be born to the house of David, and his name shall be Josiah; he shall sacrifice on you the priests of the high places who burn incense on you, and the bones of men shall be burned on you."

And he proposed a miracle that very day, saying: This is the miracle of which the Lord has spoken: Behold, the altar shall now split open, and the ashes that are on it shall be poured out.

Now it came to pass that as soon as the King heard the word which the man of God had spoken aloud against the altar of Bethel, Jeroboam stretched out his hand from the altar, saying, Seize him. And the hand which he stretched out against him became withered, and he could not draw it back to himself.

The altar also split open, and the ashes that were on the altar were poured out, according to the miracle that the man of God had proposed according to the word of the Lord.

Then the king spoke and said to the man of God, "Please be pleased to plead with the Lord your God and pray for me, that my hand may be restored to me." And the man of God pleaded with the Lord, and the king's hand was restored to him, and it was as before.

Then the King said to the man of God, "Come in with me to the house and dine there, and I will give you a present."

But the man of God answered the King: Even if you were to give me half of your house, I would not enter your house, nor would I eat bread or drink water in this place.

For it was commanded to me thus by the Lord, who said to me: You shall not eat bread there, nor drink water there, nor return by the way by which you came there.

So he went away by another way, and did not return by the way by which he had come to Bethel.

Now there was a certain Prophet, an old man, who lived in Bethel, to whom his son came and told all the things that the man of God had done that day in Bethel, and the words that he had spoken to the King; [and the children of this prophet] reported them to their father.

And their father said to them, "By which route did he go?" Now his children had seen the route by which the man of God who had come from Judah had gone.

And he said to his sons, "Saddle me a donkey"; and they saddled it, and then he mounted it.

And he went after the man of God, and found him sitting under an oak tree; and he said to him, "Are you the man of God who came from Judah?" And he answered him, "I am."

Then he said to him, "Come with me into the house and eat some bread."

But he replied: I cannot return with you, nor enter your house, and I will not eat bread or drink water with you in that place.

For I was told by the Lord: You shall not eat bread there, nor drink water there, nor return by the way by which you came there.

And he said to him, "I too am a prophet like you; and an angel spoke to me from the Lord, saying, 'Bring him back with you to your house, and let him eat bread and drink water,' but he lied to him."

So he went back with him, and ate bread and drank water in his house.

And it came to pass that as they sat at table, the word of the Lord came to the prophet who had brought him back.

And he cried out to the man of God who had come from Judah, saying, "Thus says the Lord; because you have rebelled against the commandment of the Lord, and have not kept the commandment which the Lord your God commanded you;

But you returned, and you ate bread, and drank water in the place of which [the Lord] had told you; do not eat bread there, and do not drink water there, your body shall not enter the tomb of your fathers.
But after he had eaten bread and drunk, [the old Prophet] had a donkey saddled for the Prophet whom he had brought back.
Then [this Prophet] went away, and a lion met him on the road, and killed him; and his body was lying [on the ground] in the road, and the donkey was standing beside the body; the lion also was standing beside the body.
And behold, some passers-by saw the body lying in the road, and the lion standing beside the body; and they came and told it in the city where that old prophet lived.

And the prophet who had brought the man of God back from the way, having heard of it, said, "This is the man of God who has rebelled against the command of the Lord; therefore the Lord has given him to the lion, which will tear him apart after killing him, according to the word that the Lord had spoken to this [Prophet].
And he spoke to his sons, saying, "Saddle me a donkey"; and they saddled it for him.

And he went away, and found the body of the man of God lying in the road, and the donkey and the lion standing beside the body; the lion had not eaten the body, nor torn the donkey apart.

Then the prophet lifted up the body of the man of God, and put it on the donkey, and brought it back; and this old prophet returned to the city to mourn him, and to bury him.

And he placed the body of this Prophet in his tomb, and they wept over him, [saying]:
Alas, my brother!

And it came to pass that after he had buried him, he spoke unto his sons, saying, When I die, bury me in the tomb where the man of God is buried, [and] lay my bones beside him.

For what he has spoken aloud according to the word of the Lord against the altar which is in Bethel, and against all the houses of the high places which are in the cities of Samaria, will surely come to pass.

Nevertheless, Jeroboam did not turn away from his evil ways, but returned to making priests of the high places from among the least of the people; whoever wanted to, consecrated himself, and was a priest of the high places.

And this turned into sin for the house of Jeroboam, which was wiped out and exterminated from the face of the earth.

At that time Abijah son of Jeroboam became ill.

And Jeroboam said to his wife, "Now get up and disguise yourself so that no one will know that you are Jeroboam's wife, and go to Shiloh; there is Ahijah the prophet, who told me that I would be king over this people."

And take in your hand ten loaves of bread, and some cakes, and a jar full of honey, and go to him; he will tell you what is going to happen to this young boy.

So Jeroboam's wife did this; for she got up and went to Shiloh, and entered the house of Ahijah. Now Ahijah could not see, because his eyes were dim due to his old age.

And the Lord said to Ahijah, "Here is Jeroboam's wife, who has come to inquire of you concerning her son, because he is sick; you shall tell her such and such things; when she enters she will pretend to be someone else."

As soon as Ahijah heard the sound of his feet as she entered the door, he said, "Come in, wife of Jeroboam. Why are you pretending to be someone else? I have been sent to you [to tell you] difficult things."

Go, [and] tell Jeroboam: This is what the Lord, the God of Israel, says: because I raised you up from among the people and appointed you leader over my people Israel; And that I tore the kingdom from the house of David, and gave it to you; but because you were not like David my servant, who kept my commandments, and walked after me with all his heart, doing only what was right before me;

And that in doing what you have done, you have done worse than all those who were before you; since you have gone away, and made yourself other gods, and cast images, to provoke me to anger, and have cast me behind your back;
Therefore, behold, I am going to bring disaster on the house of Jeroboam, and I will cut off all that belongs to Jeroboam, from man to dog, both what is close and what is abandoned in Israel, and I will scrape the house of Jeroboam, as one scrapes away dung, until there is nothing left.

Anyone [from the family of] Jeroboam who dies in the city, dogs will eat; and anyone who dies in the field, birds of the air will eat; for the Lord has spoken.

So you get up and go home, [and] as soon as your feet enter the city, the child will die.

And all Israel shall mourn for him, and bury him; for he alone [of the family] of Jeroboam shall enter the tomb, because the Lord the God of Israel has found something good in him [alone] of [all] the house of Jeroboam.

And the Lord will establish a king over Israel, who on that day will cut off the house of Jeroboam; and what? even in a little while.

And the Lord will strike Israel, [shaking them] as a reed is shaken in the water; and he will uproot Israel from this good land which he gave to their fathers, and scatter them beyond the river; because they made their groves, provoking the Lord to anger.
And the Lord will abandon Israel because of the sins of Jeroboam, by which he sinned and caused Israel to sin.

Then Jeroboam's wife got up and went away and came to Tirzah: and as she set foot on the threshold of the house, the young boy died.

And they buried him, and all Israel mourned for him, according to the word of the Lord, which he had spoken by his servant Ahijah the Prophet.

As for the rest of the acts of Jeroboam, how he waged war, and how he reigned, behold, they are written in the Book of the Chronicles of the Kings of Israel.

Now the time that Jeroboam reigned was twenty-two years; then he slept with his fathers, and Nadab his son reigned in his place.

And Rehoboam son of Solomon reigned in Judah; he was forty-one years old when he began to reign, and he reigned seventeen years in Jerusalem, the city which the Lord had chosen out of all the tribes of Israel to put his Name there. His mother's name was Naamah, and she was an Hammonite.

And Judah also did what was displeasing to the Lord, and by their sins which they committed they aroused him to jealousy more than their fathers had done in all that they had done.

For they too built themselves high places; and made images, and groves, on every high hill, and under every green tree.

There were even in the land people who practiced fornication, and they did according to all the abominations of the nations that the Lord had driven out before the children of Israel.

For it came to pass that in the fifth year of King Rehoboam, Sisak, King of Egypt, came up against Jerusalem;

And he took the treasures of the house of the Lord, and the treasures of the royal house, and carried everything away. He also took all the golden shields that Solomon had made.

And King Rehoboam made bronze shields instead of those, and put them in the hands of the captains of the archers who guarded the gate of the king's house.

And when the King entered the house of the Lord, the archers carried them, and then they brought them back to the archers' chamber.

The rest of the acts of Rehoboam, and all that he did, are they not written in the Book of the Chronicles of the Kings of Judah?

But there was always war between Rehoboam and Jeroboam.

And Rehoboam slept with his fathers, and was buried with them in the City of David; his mother's name was Naamah, [and was] Hammonite; and Abijam his son reigned in his place.

In the eighteenth year of King Jeroboam son of Nebat, Abijam began to reign over Judah.

And he reigned three years in Jerusalem; his mother's name was Mahacah, and she was the daughter of Abisalom.

He walked in all the sins that his father had committed before him, and his heart was not pure toward the Lord his God, as the heart of David his father had been.

But for David's sake the Lord his God gave him a lamp in Jerusalem, raising up his son after him, and protecting Jerusalem;

Because David had done what was right before the Lord, and all the days of his life he had not turned aside from anything that he had commanded him, except in the matter of Uriah the Hittite.

But there was always war between Rehoboam and Jeroboam all the days that [Rehoboam] lived.

And the rest of the acts of Abijam, and indeed all that he did, are they not written in the Book of the Chronicles of the Kings of Judah? There was also war between Abijam and Jeroboam.

So Abijam slept with his fathers, and was buried in the City of David; and Asa his son reigned in his place.

In the twentieth year of Jeroboam King of Israel, Asa began to reign over Judah.

And he reigned forty-one years in Jerusalem; his mother's name was Mahacah, [and] she was the daughter of Abisalom.

And Asa did what was right before the Lord, as his father David had done.

For he abolished the fornicating prostitutes from the land, and removed all the dung gods that his fathers had made.

And he even deposed his mother Mahaca, so that she would no longer be regent, because she had made a mockery for a grove, and Asa tore to pieces the mockery that she had made, and burned it near the Kidron Valley.

But the high places were not removed; nevertheless, Asa's heart was upright toward the Lord all the days of his life.

And he returned to the house of the Lord the things which his father had consecrated, with what he himself had consecrated, of silver, gold, and vessels.

There was war between Asa and Bahasa, King of Israel, throughout their lives.

For Bahasa King of Israel went up against Judah, and built Ramah, so that no one would go out or come in to Asa King of Judah.

And Asa took all the silver and gold that remained in the treasuries of the Lord and in the treasuries of the royal house, and gave them to his servants, and King Asa sent them to Ben-hadad son of Tabrimon, son of Hezion, king of Syria, who was living in Damascus, to tell him:

[There is] a covenant between me and you, and between my father and yours; behold, I am sending you a gift of silver and gold; Go, break the covenant that you have with Bahasa King of Israel, and let him depart from me.

And Ben-hadad granted this to King Asa, and sent the captains of his army against the cities of Israel, and struck Hijon, Dan, Abel-beth-mahaca, and all Kinneroth, which was adjoining all the land of Naphtali.

And it came to pass that as soon as Bahasa learned of it, he ceased building Rama, and remained at Tirtsa.

Then King Asa proclaimed throughout all Judah that all, without exception, should carry away the stones and timber from Ramah, which Bahasa was building, and King Asa built Gebah of Benjamin and Mizpah.

The rest of all the acts of Asa, and all his might, and all that he did, and the cities that he built, are they not written in the Book of the Chronicles of the Kings of Judah? Besides, he was sick with his feet in the days of his old age.

And Asa slept with his fathers, with whom he was buried in the City of David his father, and Jehoshaphat his son reigned in his place.

Now Nadab son of Jeroboam began to reign over Israel in the second year of Asa king of Judah, and he reigned two years over Israel.

And he did what was displeasing to the Lord, and followed in the ways of his father, and in the sin by which he had caused Israel to sin.

And Bahasa son of Ahijah of the house of Issachar, conspired against him, and struck him down before Gibbethon which was of the Philistines, when Nadab and all Israel were besieging Gibbethon.

Bahasa therefore put him to death in the third year of Asa King of Judah, and he reigned in his place;

And as soon as he came to reign he struck down all the house of Jeroboam, and he left not a single living soul [of the race] of Jeroboam that he did not exterminate, according to the word of the Lord which he had spoken by his servant Ahijah the Shilonite;

Because of the sins of Jeroboam which he had committed, and by which he had caused Israel to sin; [and] because of the sin by which he had angered the Lord, the God of Israel.

The rest of the acts of Nadab, and indeed everything he did, are they not written in the Book of the Chronicles of the Kings of Israel?

But there was war between Asa and Bahasa, King of Israel, all the days of their lives.

In the third year of Asa king of Judah, Bahasa son of Ahijah began to reign over all Israel at Tirzah, [and reigned] twenty-four years.

And he did what was displeasing to the Lord, and followed the ways of Jeroboam, and his sin, by which he had caused Israel to sin.

Then the word of the Lord came to Jehu son of Hanani against Bahasa, saying:

Because I raised you from dust, and appointed you Leader of my people Israel, and yet you followed the ways of Jeroboam, and caused my people Israel to sin, provoking me to anger with their sins.

Behold, I am going to completely exterminate Bahasa and his house, and I will make your house like the house of Jeroboam son of Nebat.

Whoever [of the race] of Bahasa dies in the city, the dogs will eat him; and whoever of his people dies in the fields, the birds of the sky will eat him.

The rest of Bahasa's deeds, what he did, and his worth, are they not written in the Book of the Chronicles of the Kings of Israel?

Thus Bahasa fell asleep with his fathers, and was buried at Tirtsa, and Ela his son reigned in his place.

The word of the Lord also came by Jehu son of Hanani the prophet against Bahasa and his house because of all the evil he had done before the Lord, provoking him to anger with the work of his hands, to tell him that it would be like the house of Jeroboam; even because he had struck it.

In the twenty-sixth year of Asa king of Judah, Elah son of Bahasa began to reign over Israel, and he reigned two years in Tirzah.

And Zimri, his servant, captain of half the chariots, conspired against Ela, when he was in Tirtsa drinking and getting drunk in the house of Artsa, his steward, in Tirtsa.

So Zimri came, and struck him down, and killed him in the twenty-seventh year of Asa King of Judah, and reigned in his place.

And as he entered his reign, as soon as he sat on his throne, he struck down the whole house of Bahasa; he left nothing of them, from man to dog; [he left] neither relative nor friend.

So Zimri exterminated all the house of Bahasa, according to the word that the Lord had spoken against Bahasa, by means of Jehu the Prophet;

Because of all the sins of Bahasa, and the sins of Elah his son, by which they had sinned, and had caused Israel to sin, provoking the Lord, the God of Israel, to anger with their vanities.

The rest of the acts of Elah, and indeed everything he did, are they not written in the Book of the Chronicles of the Kings of Israel?

In the twenty-seventh year of Asa King of Judah, Zimri reigned seven days in Tirzah; now the people were encamped against Gibbethon which was of the Philistines.

And the people who were encamped there heard that it was said: Zimri has conspired, and he has even killed the King; therefore on that same day all Israel appointed in the camp for King Omri, captain of the army of Israel.

And Homri and all Israel went up from before Gibbethon, and besieged Tirzah.

But as soon as Zimri saw that the city was taken, he entered the palace of the Royal House, and burned the Royal House down upon himself, and he died;

Because of the sins by which he had sinned, doing what displeased the Lord, following the ways of Jeroboam, and his sin, which he had committed to make Israel sin.

The rest of the deeds of Zimri, and the conspiracy he made, are not all these things written in the Book of the Chronicles of the Kings of Israel?

Then the people of Israel split into two parties; half of the people followed Tibni son of Ginath, to make him king; and the other half followed Homri.

But the people who followed Homri were stronger than the people who followed Tibni son of Ginath, and Tibni died, and Homri reigned.

In the thirty-first year of Asa King of Judah, Homri began to reign over Israel, [and he reigned] twelve years; he reigned six years in Tirzah.

Then he bought from Shemer the mountain of Samaria, two talents of silver; and he built [a city] on that mountain, and he named the city which he built, after Shemer, Lord of the mountain of Samaria.

And Homri did what was evil in the sight of the Lord; he did even worse than all who had been before him.

For he followed all the ways of Jeroboam son of Nebat, and his sin, by which he had caused Israel to sin, so that they would anger the Lord, the God of Israel, with their vanities.

Are not the rest of the acts of Homri, all that he did, and the exploits that he performed, written in the Book of the Chronicles of the Kings of Israel?

So Homri slept with his fathers and was buried in Samaria, and Ahab his son reigned in his place.

Ahab son of Homri began to reign over Israel in the thirty-eighth year of Asa king of Judah; and Ahab son of Homri reigned over Israel in Samaria twenty-two years.

And Ahab son of Homri did what was evil in the sight of the Lord, more than all who had been before him.

And it came to pass that, as though it had been a small thing for him to walk in the sins of Jeroboam son of Nebat, he took as his wife Izebel, daughter of Eth-bahal, King of the Sidonians, and went and served Bahal, and bowed down before him.

And he erected an altar to Bahal, in the house of Bahal, which he built in Samaria.

And Ahab made a thicket; so that Ahab did even worse than all the Kings of Israel who had been before him, to anger the Lord, the God of Israel.

In his days Hiel of Bethel built Jericho, which he founded on Abiram his firstborn, and set up its gates on Segub his younger son, according to the word that the Lord had spoken by means of Joshua, son of Nun.

Then Elijah the Tishbite, [one of those] who had become accustomed to Gilead, said to Ahab, "As the Lord, the God of Israel, lives, before whom I stand, there shall be neither dew nor rain these years, except at my word."

Then the word of the Lord came to Elijah, saying:

Go away from here, and turn towards the East, and hide by the Kerith Ravine, which is opposite the Jordan.

You will drink from the stream, and I have commanded the crows to feed you there.

So he departed, and did according to the word of the Lord; he went away, I say, and stayed at the brook Cherith, opposite the Jordan.

And the ravens brought him bread and meat in the morning, and bread and meat in the evening, and he drank from the brook.

But it happened that after a few days the torrent dried up; because there had been no rain in the country.

Then the word of the Lord came to him, saying:

Get up, go to Zarephath, which is near Sidon, and stay there. Behold, I have commanded a widow there to provide for you.

So he got up and went to Zarephath; and when he came to the gate of the city, behold, a widow was there gathering wood; and he called to her, and said to her, "Please bring me a little water in a vessel, that I may drink."

She went to get some; and he called her back, and said to her, "Please, take a morsel of bread for me."

But she replied, "As surely as the Lord your God lives, I have no cake; I only have a handful of flour in a jug and a little oil in a flask. I am gathering two logs, and I will go and prepare it for myself and my son, and we will eat it; and after that we will die."

And Elijah said to him, "Do not be afraid; go, do as you say; but first make me a small loaf of it and bring it to me, and then make some for yourself and for your son."

For thus says the Lord, the God of Israel: The flour in the jug shall not fail, and the oil in the flask shall not fail, until the Lord sends rain on the earth.

So she went away and did according to Elijah's word; and she ate, he and the family of that woman for several days.

The jug of flour did not fail, and the flask of oil did not run dry, according to the word that the Lord had spoken through Elijah.

After these things it happened that the son of the woman, mistress of the house, became ill; and the illness was so severe that he died.

And she said to Elijah, "What have you to do with me, man of God? Have you come to me to remind me of my iniquity and to kill my son?"

And he said to her, "Give me your son"; and he took him from the woman's breast, and carried him to the upper room where he was staying, and laid him on his bed.

Then he cried out to the Lord, and said, "Lord my God! Have you so afflicted this widow with whom I dwell, that you have caused her son to die?"

And he stretched himself out on the child three times, and cried out to the Lord, and said, "O Lord my God! I pray that the soul of this child may return to him."

And the Lord heard the voice of Elijah, and the soul of the child returned to him, and he regained his life.

And Elijah took the child, and brought him down from the upper room into the house, and gave him to his mother, saying to her, "Look, your son lives."

And the woman said to Elijah, "Now I know that you are a man of God, and that the word of the Lord that is in your mouth is truth."

Several days later, in the third year, the word of the Lord came to Elijah, saying, "Go, show yourself to Ahab, and I will send rain on the land."

So Elijah went to show himself to Ahab; now there was a great famine in Samaria.

And Ahab had called Obadiah his steward, (now Obadiah greatly feared the Lord; For when Jezebel was killing the prophets of the Lord, Obadiah took a hundred prophets and hid them, fifty in one cave and fifty in another, and fed them there with bread and water.

And Ahab had said to Obadiah, "Go through the land to all the springs of water and to all the streams; perhaps we may find grass, and spare the lives of the horses and mules, and not let the land be depleted of livestock."

So they divided the land between them, so that they could go everywhere; Ahab went separately by one way, and Obadiah went separately by another way.

And as Obadiah was on his way, behold, Elijah met him, and he recognized Elijah, and bowing down on his face, he said to him, "Are you not my Lord Elijah?"

And [Elijah] answered him, "It is I myself; go, [and] tell your Lord, here is Elijah."

And Obadiah said, "What crime have I committed, that you should hand your servant over to Ahab to kill me?"

As the Lord your God lives, there is no nation or kingdom where my Lord has not sent to search for you, and they answered, "He is not there." He even made the kingdoms and nations swear to find out if they could not find you.

And now you say: Go, [and] tell your Lord, here is Elijah.

And it will come to pass that when I have departed from you, the Spirit of the Lord will carry you away to some place which I know not, and I will come to Ahab to declare to him [what you have told me], and not finding you, he will kill me; but your servant has feared the Lord from his youth.

Has my Lord not been told what I did when Jezebel was killing the Prophets of the Lord, how I hid a hundred of them, fifty in one cave and fifty in another, and fed them there with bread and water?

And now you say, go; [and] say to your Lord, behold Elijah; for he will kill me.

But Elijah answered him, "As surely as the Lord Almighty lives, before whom I stand, I will certainly show myself to Ahab today."

So Obadiah went to meet Ahab, and told him everything; then Ahab went to meet Elijah.

And as soon as Ahab saw Elijah, he said to him, "Are you not the one who troubles Israel?"

And [Elijah] answered him, "I have not troubled Israel; but you and your father's house have troubled Israel, because you have abandoned the commandments of the Lord and have followed the Bahalites."

Now send and assemble to me all Israel on Mount Carmel, with the four hundred and fifty prophets of Bahal, and the four hundred prophets of the groves who eat at Izebel's table.

So Ahab sent word to all the children of Israel, and he assembled those prophets on Mount Carmel.

Then Elijah approached all the people and said, "How long will you waver between two opinions? If the Lord is God, follow him; but if Bahal is God, follow him." But the people did not answer him a single word.

Then Elijah said to the people, "I am left as the only prophet of the Lord, but the prophets of Bahal are four hundred and fifty."

Now let them give us two calves, let them choose one for themselves, let them cut it into pieces, and let them put it on wood; but let them not put fire on it; and I will prepare the other calf, I will put it on wood, and I will not put fire on it.

Then call on the name of your gods, and I will call on the Name of the Lord; and let the God who answers by fire be known as God. And all the people answered and said, "That is well said."

And Elijah said to the Prophets of Bahal: Choose a calf, and prepare it first; for you are more numerous, and call upon the name of your gods; but do not put fire into it.

So they took a calf that was given to them, they prepared it, and they invoked the name of Bahal from morning until noon, saying: Bahal, hear us! But there was no voice or answer, and they jumped over the altar that had been made.

And at midday Elijah mocked them, and said, "Shout aloud, for he is God; but he is thinking of something, or he is after some business, or he is on a journey; perhaps he is asleep; and he will wake up."

So they cried out loudly, and they made incisions on themselves with knives and lancets, according to their custom, so that the blood flowed out on them.

And when noon had passed, and they had been prophesying until the time for the offering of the sacrifice, there was no voice, no answer, and no appearance that anyone paid attention to what they were doing;

Then Elijah said to all the people, "Come near to me." And all the people came near to him, and he repaired the altar of the Lord, which had been destroyed.
Then Elijah took twelve stones, according to the number of the Tribes of the children of Jacob, to whom the word of the Lord had come, saying, Israel shall be your name. And he rebuilt the altar of the Name of the Lord with these stones; then he made a conduit capable of holding two sat's worth of seed around the altar.
He stacked the wood, cut the calf into pieces, and placed it on the wood.
Then he said, "Fill four jars with water and pour it over the burnt offering and the wood." Then he told them, "Do it a second time," and they did it a second time. Again he told them, "Do it a third time," and they did it a third time.
So the waters flowed around the altar; and it even filled the conduit with water.
And at the time when the offering was to be made, Elijah the Prophet approached and said, "O Lord, God of Abraham, Isaac, and Israel, [make] it known this day that you are God in Israel, and that I am your servant, and that I have done all these things according to your word."
Hear me, O Lord! Hear me; and [make] this people know that you are the Lord God, and that it is you who has turned their hearts back.
Then the fire of the Lord fell and consumed the burnt offering, the wood, the stones, and the powder, and licked up all the water that was in the conduit.
And all the people, seeing this, fell on their faces and said, "The Lord, he is God; the Lord, he is God."
And Elijah said to them, "Seize the prophets of Bahal, and let not one of them escape." So they seized them, and Elijah brought them down to the Kishon River, and slaughtered them there.
Then Elijah said to Ahab, "Go up, eat and drink, for there is a loud sound of rain."

So Ahab went up to eat and drink; and Elijah went up to the top of Carmel, and bowing down to the ground, he put his face between his knees;
And he said to his servant, "Now go up and look toward the sea." So he went up and looked and said, "There is nothing there." And [Elijah] said to him, "Go back seven times."
The seventh time he said, "Look, a small cloud, like a man's palm, is coming up out of the sea." Then [Elijah] said to him, "Go up and tell Ahab, 'Harness [your chariot], and go down, lest the rain overtake you.'"
And it came to pass that the heavens grew darkened on all sides with clouds, [accompanied] by wind, and there was a great rain; and Ahab mounted his chariot, and came to Jezrehel.
And the hand of the Lord was upon Elijah, who tucked up his loins and ran before Ahab, all the way to the entrance of Jezrehel.
Now Ahab told Jezebel everything that Elijah had done, and how he had completely killed all the Prophets with the sword.
And Izebel sent a messenger to Elijah, saying: So be it with the gods, and so they add, if tomorrow at this time I do not make you like one of them.
And [Elijah], seeing this, arose and went as his heart told him. He came to Beersheba, which belongs to Judah, and left his servant there.
But he went away into the desert, a day's journey, and when he arrived there he sat down under a broom tree, and asked that God take away his soul, and said: It is enough, O Lord! Take now my soul; for I am no better than my fathers.
Then he lay down and fell asleep under a broom tree; and behold, an angel touched him and said to him, "Get up and eat."
And he looked, and there by his bedside was a cake baked over coals, and a flask of water. So he ate and drank, and went back to bed.
And the Angel of the Lord returned a second time, and touched him, and said to him, "Get up and eat, for the journey is too long for you."

So he got up, and ate and drank; and with the strength that this meal gave him he walked forty days and forty nights, until he reached Horeb, the mountain of God. And there he went into a cave and spent the night there. Then the word of the Lord came to him, and he said to him, "What do you have here, Elijah?"

And he answered: I have been exceedingly jealous for the Lord God of hosts, because the children of Israel have forsaken your covenant; they have demolished your altars, they have killed your Prophets with the sword, I alone am left, and they seek my life to take it from me.

But he said to him, "Go out and stand on the mountain before the Lord." And behold, the Lord was passing by, and a great, violent wind was going before the Lord, splitting the mountains and shattering the rocks, but the Lord was not in the wind. After the wind there was a quake, but the Lord was not in the quake.

After the quake came a fire, but the Lord was not in the fire. After the fire came a gentle, sweet sound.

And it came to pass that as soon as Elijah heard it, he wrapped his face in his cloak, and went out, and stood at the entrance of the cave, and behold, a voice came to him, and said to him, What matter do you have here, Elijah?

And he answered: I have been exceedingly jealous for the Lord God of hosts, because the children of Israel have forsaken your covenant; they have demolished your altars, they have killed your prophets with the sword; I alone am left; and they seek my life to take it from me.

But the Lord said to him, "Go back on your way to the desert of Damascus, and when you arrive there you shall anoint Hazael king over Syria."

You shall also anoint Jehu son of Nimsi as king over Israel; and you shall anoint Elisha son of Shaphat, who is from Abel-meholah, as prophet in your place.

And it will come to pass that whoever escapes from the sword of Hazael, Jehu will put to death; and whoever escapes from the sword of Jehu, Elisha will put to death.

But I have reserved for myself seven thousand men of remnant in Israel, [namely], all those who have not bowed their knees before Bahal, and whose mouth has not kissed him.

So Elijah left that place and found Elisha son of Shaphat, who was plowing with twelve yoke of oxen before him, and he was with the twelfth. When Elijah passed by him, he threw his mantle over him.

And [Elisha] left his oxen and ran after Elijah, saying, "Please let me kiss my father and mother, and then I will follow you." And he said to him, "Go back again; for what have I done to you?"

So he returned from him and took a pair of oxen, and sacrificed them; and from the yoke of the oxen he boiled the flesh, and gave it to the people, and they ate; then he arose, and followed Elijah, and served him.

Then Ben-hadad King of Syria assembled all his army, and there were with him thirty-two kings, horses, and chariots; then he went up, besieged Samaria, and made war against it.

And he sent messengers to Ahab King of Israel in the city;

And he sent him to say: This is what Ben-hadad said: Your silver and your gold are mine, your wives too, and your beautiful children are mine.

And the King of Israel answered, and said: My Lord, I am yours as you say, and all that I have.

Then the messengers returned and said: This is what Ben-hadad expressly said: Since I sent you to say: Give me your money and your gold, your wife, and your children; Surely tomorrow at this time I will send my servants to you, who will search your house and the houses of your servants, and seize everything that you desire to see, and carry it off.

Then the King of Israel summoned all the elders of the land and said, "Consider, I pray you, and see that this man seeks only harm; for he sent to me to have my wives and my children, my silver and my gold; and I refused him nothing."

And all the elders and all the people said to him, "Do not listen to him, and do not give in to him."

So he replied to Ben-hadad's messengers: Tell the King, my Lord: I will do everything you sent to say to your servant the first time, but I cannot do this; and the messengers went away and reported this reply to him.

And Ben-hadad sent back to him, saying: So may the gods do to me, and so may they add to it, if the dust of Samaria is enough to fill the hollow of the hand of [all] those of the people who follow me.

But the King of Israel answered, and said: Tell him: let not he who puts on [the armor] boast like he who takes it off.

And it came to pass that as soon as [Ben-hadad] heard this answer (while he was drinking in the tents with the Kings), he said to his servants: Draw up in battle formation. And they drew up in battle formation against the city.

Then a prophet came to Ahab king of Israel and said to him, "This is what the Lord says: 'Have you not seen this great multitude? Behold, I am going to deliver it into your hands today, and you shall know that I am the Lord.'"

And Ahab said, "By whom?" And [the Prophet] answered him, "Thus says the Lord: It shall be by the servants of the governors of the provinces." And [Ahab] said, "Who shall begin the battle?" And he answered him, "You."

Then he counted the servants of the Governors of the Provinces, who were two hundred and thirty-two; after them he counted all the people of all the children of Israel, who were seven thousand.

And they went out at midday, when Ben-hadad was drinking, getting drunk in the tents, he and the thirty-two kings who had come to his aid.

The servants of the Governors of the Provinces went out first, and Ben-hadad sent some of them who reported back to him, saying: He has gone out from the people of Samaria.

And he said: Whether they came out for peace or for war, seize them all alive.

The servants of the Governors of the Provinces then left the city, and the army that was after them.

And each of them struck his man, so that the Syrians fled, and Israel pursued them; and Ben-hadad King of Syria escaped on a horse, and the horsemen also.

And the King of Israel went out and struck down the horses and chariots, so that he inflicted a great slaughter on the Syrians.

Then the Prophet came to the King of Israel and said to him, "Go, be strong; and know, and consider what you must do; for in the past year the King of Syria will come up against you."

But the servants of the King of Syria said to him: Their gods are mountain gods, that is why they were stronger than us, but let us fight against them in the field; [and] certainly, we will be stronger than them.

Do this: Remove each of these kings from their place, and put captains in their place.

Then raise an army like the one you lost, with as many horses and chariots, and we will fight them in the field, [and you will see] if we are not stronger than they. So he agreed to what they told him, and did so.

One year later, Ben-hadad counted the Syrians, and went up to Aphek to fight against Israel.

They also took a census of the Israelites; and having gathered provisions, they went out against the Syrians. The Israelites encamped opposite them; and they were no more than two flocks of goats; but the Syrians filled the land.

Then the man of God came and spoke to the King of Israel, saying, "This is what the Lord says: Because the Syrians have said, 'The Lord is the God of the mountains and not the God of the valleys,' I will deliver all this great multitude into your hands, and you will know that I am the Lord."

For seven days they remained encamped opposite one another; but on the seventh day they came to blows; and the children of Israel struck down in one day one hundred thousand foot soldiers of the Syrians. And the rest fled to the city of Aphek, where the wall fell upon twenty-seven thousand men who had remained. And Ben-hadad fled, and entered the city, [and he hid] in a small room.

And his servants said to him, "Now we have heard that the kings of the house of Israel are meek kings; now therefore let us put sackcloth on our loins and put ropes on our heads and go out to the King of Israel; perhaps he will spare your life." So they girded themselves with sackcloth around their waists and ropes around their heads, and they came to the King of Israel and said to him, "Your servant Ben-Hadad says, 'I beg you, let me live.'" And he replied, "Is he still alive? He is my brother."

And these people were there as if on watch, and they hastened to find out precisely [if they would get] from him [what they claimed], and they said: Is Ben-hadad your brother? And he replied: Go, [and] bring him. So Ben-hadad went out to him, and he had him get on the chariot.

And [Ben-hadad] said to him, "I will return to you the cities that my father took from your father, and you will build yourself settlements in Damascus as my father did in Samaria." And I, [Ahab replied], will send you back with this covenant. So he made a covenant with him and let him go.

Then one of the sons of the Prophets said to his companion, according to the word of the Lord: Strike me, I pray you: but he refused to strike him.

And he said to him, "Because you have not obeyed the word of the Lord, behold, you are about to separate yourself from me, and a lion shall kill you." When he had separated himself from him, a lion found him and killed him.

Then he found another man and said to him, "Please strike me!" And that man did not fail to strike him and wound him.

After that the Prophet went away, and stopped [waiting] for the King on the road, and he disguised himself, having a blindfold over his eyes.

And as the King passed by, he cried out to the King, and said to him: Your servant went into the midst of the battle, and behold, someone withdrew, brought me a man, and said to me: Guard this man, if he should escape, your life shall be at stake, or you shall pay a talent of silver.

Now it happened that, while your servant was doing some business here and there, this man was not found. And the King of Israel answered him: This is your sentence, you have decided.

Then the man quickly removed the blindfold from his eyes, and the King of Israel recognized that he was one of the Prophets.

And [this Prophet] said to him: Thus says the Lord, because you have let go out of your hand the man whom I had condemned to destruction, your life shall be given for his, and your people for his people.

But the King of Israel went home sullen and indignant, and came to Samaria.

Now it came to pass after these things that Naboth the Jezreelite, having a vineyard in Jezrehel, near the palace of Ahab, King of Samaria;

Ahab spoke to Naboth, and said to him: Give me your vineyard, so that I may make it into a green garden; for it is near my house, and I will give you a better one for it; or if that suits you better, I will give you the money it is worth.

But Naboth replied to Ahab: God forbid that I should give you the inheritance of my fathers!

And Ahab came to his house, very sullen and indignant at the word that Naboth the Jezreelite had spoken to him, saying, "I will not give you the inheritance of my fathers"; and he lay down on his bed, and turned his face away, and ate nothing. Then Izebel his wife came to him and said, "Why is your spirit so sad? And why are you not eating?"

And he answered him: It is because when I spoke to Naboth the Jezreelite, and said to him, "Give me your vineyard for money, or if you prefer, I will give you another vineyard for this one," he said to me, "I will not give you my vineyard." Then Izebel his wife said to him: Are you now King over Israel? Get up, eat something, and let your heart rejoice; I will give you the vineyard of Naboth the Jezreelite.

And she wrote letters in Ahab's name, sealed them with the king's seal, and sent these letters to the elders and magistrates who were in the city of Naboth, and who were living there with him.

And she wrote in these Letters the following: Proclaim the fast, and make Naboth stand at the head of the people.

And have two wicked men stand opposite him, and have them testify against him, saying, "You have blasphemed against God, and [spoken ill of] the King"; then you shall bring him out, and stone him, and let him die.

So the people of the city of Naboth, [namely] the Elders and Magistrates who lived in his city, did as Jezebel had commanded them, [and] as it was written in the Letters that she had sent them.

For they proclaimed the fast, and made Naboth stand at the head of the people.

And two wicked men came in and stood opposite him; and these wicked men testified against Naboth in the presence of the people, saying, "Naboth has blasphemed against God, and he has spoken ill of the King." Then they led him out of the city and stoned him to death.

After that they sent word to Izebel, saying: Naboth has been stoned to death.

And it came to pass that as soon as Izebel heard that Naboth had been stoned, and that he was dead, she said to Ahab, Arise, take possession of the vineyard of Naboth the Jezreelite, which he had refused to give to you for money; for Naboth is no longer alive, but dead.

So as soon as Ahab heard that Naboth was dead, he got up to go down to the vineyard of Naboth the Jezreelite, and to take possession of it.

Then the word of the Lord came to Elijah the Tizbite, saying:

Arise, go down to meet Ahab King of Israel, when he is in Samaria; behold, he is in the vineyard of Naboth, where he has gone down to take possession of it.

And you shall speak to him, saying: Thus says the Lord: Have you not killed, and have you not even taken possession? Then you shall speak to him thus, and say: Thus says the Lord: As the dogs licked the blood of Naboth, so shall the dogs lick your own blood.

And Ahab said to Elijah, "Have you found me, my enemy?" But he answered him, "Yes, I have found you, because you have sold yourself to do what is evil in the sight of the Lord."

Behold, I am going to bring evil upon you, and I will utterly destroy you; and from man to dog, I will cut off all that belongs to Ahab, both what is held fast and what is left undone in Israel.

And I will make your house like the house of Jeroboam son of Nebat, and the house of Bahasa son of Ahijah, because of the sin by which you have angered me, and made Israel to sin.

The Lord also spoke against Jezebel, saying: The dogs will eat Jezebel near the wall of Jezrehel.

Anyone who belongs to Ahab, and who dies in the city, the dogs will eat; and anyone who dies in the fields, the birds of the air will eat.

Indeed, there had been no one like Ahab, who sold himself to do what displeased the Lord, as his wife Jezebel led him to do.

So he made himself very abominable, going after the gods of dung, according to all that the Amorites had done whom the Lord had driven out from before the children of Israel.

And it came to pass that as soon as Ahab heard these words, he tore his clothes, and put sackcloth on his flesh, and fasted, and he lay wrapped in sackcloth, and dragged himself along.

And the word of the Lord came to Elijah the Tizbite, saying:

Have you not seen that Ahab has humbled himself before me? [But] because he has humbled himself before me, I will not bring this disaster in his time; it will be in the days of his son that I will bring this disaster upon his house.

But three years passed without any war between Syria and Israel.

Then it came to pass in the third year, when Jehoshaphat King of Judah went down to the King of Israel,

The King of Israel said to his servants: Do you not know that Ramoth-Gilead belongs to us, and yet we are not making any effort to take it back from the hands of the King of Syria?

Then he said to Jehoshaphat, "Will you not come with me to the war against Ramoth-gilead?" And Jehoshaphat answered the King of Israel, "Consider me as you consider yourself, and my people as your people, and my horses as your horses."

Jehoshaphat also said to the King of Israel: I beg you to inquire today of the word of the Lord.

And the King of Israel assembled about four hundred Prophets, to whom he said: Shall I go to war against Ramoth-Gilead, or shall I stay away? And they answered: Go up, for the Lord will deliver it into the hand of the King.

But Jehoshaphat said, "Is there no other prophet of the Lord here yet, so that we may inquire of him?"

And the king of Israel said to Jehoshaphat, "There is still one man who inquires of the Lord by him, but I hate him, for he never prophesies good things, only bad things, concerning me. He is Micaiah son of Imlah." And Jehoshaphat said, "The king should not say such a thing."

Then the King of Israel summoned a eunuch and said, "Bring Micah son of Imlah quickly."

Now the King of Israel and Jehoshaphat King of Judah were sitting, each on his throne, clothed in their robes, in the square near the entrance of the gate of Samaria; and all the prophets were prophesying in their presence.

And Zidkiah son of Kenahana made himself iron horns and said, "This is what the Lord says: 'With these horns you shall gore the Syrians until you destroy them.'"

And all the Prophets prophesied likewise, saying, Go up to Ramoth-gilead, and you will succeed; and the Lord will deliver it into the hand of the King.

Now the messenger who had gone to summon Micaiah spoke to him, saying, "Look, now the prophets are all prophesying good fortune to the king; I pray you that your word may be like that of one of them, and prophesy good fortune to him."

But Micaiah answered him, "As surely as the Lord lives, I will say whatever the Lord tells me."

So he came to the King, and the King said to him, "Micah, shall we go to war against Ramoth-Gilead, or shall we refrain?" And he answered him, "Go up, you will succeed; and the Lord will deliver it into the hand of the King."

And the King said to him, "How many times must I adjure you to tell me nothing but the truth in the Name of the Lord?"

And he answered: I saw all Israel scattered on the mountains, like a flock of sheep without a shepherd; and the Lord said: These are without a lord; let each one return to his home in peace.

Then the King of Israel said to Jehoshaphat: Did I not tell you that when it comes to me he prophesies nothing good, but evil?

And [Micah] said to him, "Nevertheless, hear the word of the Lord: I saw the Lord sitting on his throne, and all the host of heaven standing before him on his right hand and on his left."

And the Lord said, "Who will entice Ahab to go up and fall in Ramoth-gilead?" One spoke one way, and another another.

Then a spirit came forward and stood before the Lord and said, "I will persuade him."

And the Lord said to him, "How?"

And he answered, "I will go out and be a lying spirit in the mouth of all his prophets." And [the Lord] said, "You will indeed entice him, and you will succeed; go out and do it."

Now therefore, behold, the Lord has put a lying spirit in the mouth of all these of your prophets, and the Lord has pronounced evil against you.

Then Zidkiah son of Kenahana approached and struck Micaiah on the cheek, and said, "Which way has the Spirit of the Lord departed from me to speak to you?"

And Micaiah answered: Behold, you will see it on the day you go from room to room to hide.

Then the King of Israel said: Let Micaiah be taken, and let him be brought to Amon, the captain of the city, and to Joash the king's son;

And let them be told: Thus says the King: Put this man in prison, and give him only a little bread to eat, and a little water [to drink], until I return in peace.

And Micaiah answered, "If you return in peace, the Lord will not have spoken through me." He also said, "Hear this, you people, all you who are here."

The King of Israel therefore went up with Jehoshaphat King of Judah against Ramoth-Gilead.

And the King of Israel said to Jehoshaphat, "Let me disguise myself and go to battle, but you put on your own clothes." So the King of Israel disguised himself and went to battle.

But the King of the Syrians had commanded the thirty-two captains of his chariots, saying: You shall not fight against anyone, small or great, but against the King of Israel alone.

So it came to pass that as soon as the chariot captains saw Jehoshaphat, they said, "This is surely the King of Israel"; and they turned to fight him, but Jehoshaphat cried out.

And as soon as the chariot captains saw that it was not the King of Israel, they turned away from him.

Then someone shot with his bow with all his might and struck the King of Israel between the tassets and the harness; and the King said to his charioteer, "Turn your hand and take me out of the camp, for I am badly wounded."

Now the battle was very great that day; and the King [of Israel] was stopped in his chariot opposite the Syrians, and died in the evening; and the blood from his wound flowed onto the bottom of the chariot.

And as soon as the sun had set, a cry was made throughout the camp, saying: [that] everyone should return to their own town, and each to their own country.

The King therefore died, and was taken to Samaria, and was buried there.

And they washed the chariot at the fishpond in Samaria, and the dogs licked its blood, [and also when] they washed its weapons, according to the word that the Lord had spoken.

The rest of the acts of Ahab, all that he did, and concerning the ivory house that he built, and all the cities that he built, are not all these things written in the Book of the Chronicles of the Kings of Israel?

So Ahab slept with his fathers, and Ahaziah his son reigned in his place.

Jehoshaphat son of Asa began to reign over Judah in the fourth year of Ahab, King of Israel.

Jehoshaphat was thirty-five years old when he began to reign; and he reigned twenty-five years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Hazuba, daughter of Silhi.

And he followed entirely the way of Asa his father, [and] he did not turn aside from it, doing all that was right before the Lord.

However, the high places were not removed; the people still sacrificed and burned incense in the high places.

Jehoshaphat also made peace with the King of Israel.

Are not the rest of the acts of Jehoshaphat, and the exploits he performed, and the wars he waged, written in the Book of the Chronicles of the Kings of Judah?

As for the remnants of the prostitutes who had remained since the time of Asa his father, he exterminated them from the land.
There was no king in Edom at that time; the governor was viceroy.
Jehoshaphat equipped a fleet from Tarshish to go and get gold from Ophir; but it did not go, because the ships were wrecked at Hezion-geber.
Then Ahaziah son of Ahab said to Jehoshaphat, "Let my servants go on the ships with yours," but Jehoshaphat refused.
And Jehoshaphat slept with his fathers, and was buried with them in the City of David his father, and Joram his son reigned in his place.
Ahaziah son of Ahab began to reign over Israel in Samaria in the seventeenth year of Jehoshaphat king of Judah, and he reigned two years over Israel.
And he did what was displeasing to the Lord, and followed the ways of his father, and the ways of his mother, and the ways of Jeroboam son of Nebat, who had caused Israel to sin.
He served Bahal, he bowed down before him, and he angered the Lord, the God of Israel, as his father had done.
But after Ahab's death, Moab rebelled against Israel.
And Ahaziah fell through the lattice of his upper room which was in Samaria, and was sick; and he sent messengers, and said to them, Go inquire of Bahal-zebub, god of Hekron, [to know] whether I shall recover from this sickness.
But the Angel of the Lord spoke to Elijah the Tisbite, saying, "Get up, go up to meet the messengers of the King of Samaria, and say to them, 'Is there no God in Israel, that you are going to consult Bahal-zebub, the god of Hekron?'"
Therefore this is what the Lord says: You will not get down from the bed you are lying on, but you will certainly die. Having said this, Elijah went away.
And the messengers returned to Ahaziah, and he said to them, "Why have you come back?"
And they answered him, "A man came up to meet us and said, 'Go back to the king who sent you and tell him, "This is what the Lord says: Is there no God in Israel that you are sending to consult Bahal-zebub, the god of Hekron? Because of this, you will not get down from the bed you are lying on, but you will certainly die."'"
And he said to them, "What was the appearance of this man who came up to meet you and spoke these words to you?"
And they answered him, "It is a man clothed with hair, who has a leather belt around his waist." And he said, "It is Elijah the Tisbite."
So he sent a captain of fifty men, with his fifty men, who went up to him. Now behold, he was standing on the top of a mountain, and [this captain] said to him: Man of God, the King has said that you must come down.
But Elijah answered, and said to the captain of the fifty, "If I am a man of God, let fire come down from heaven and consume you and your fifty men!" And fire came down from heaven and consumed him and his fifty men.
And [Ahaziah] sent yet another captain of fifty men with his fifty, who spoke up and said to him: Man of God, this is what the King says: Hurry and come down.
But Elijah answered, and said to them, "If I am a man of God, let fire come down from heaven and consume you and your fifty men." And the fire of God came down from heaven and consumed him and his fifty men.
And [Ahaziah] sent yet another captain of a third of fifty with his fifty, and this third captain of fifty men went up, and came, and bowed down on his knees before Elijah, and begged him, and said to him: Man of God, I pray you that you will take pity on my life, and on the lives of these fifty men your servants.
Behold, the fire came down from heaven, and consumed the first two captains of fifty men, with their fiftys; but now [I beg you], that you value my life.
And the Angel of the Lord said to Elijah, "Go down with him; do not be afraid of him." So he got up and went down with him to the King.

And he said to him, "Thus says the Lord: Because you have sent messengers to inquire of Bahal-zebub, the god of Hekron, as though there were no God in Israel, to inquire of his word: you shall not get down from the bed on which you have gone up, but you shall certainly die."

So he died, according to the word of the Lord, which Elijah had spoken; and Joram began to reign in his place, in the second year of Joram, son of Jehoshaphat, king of Judah, because Ahaziah had no son.

The rest of the acts of Ahaziah, which he did, are they not written in the Book of the Chronicles of the Kings of Israel?

Now it came to pass when the Lord wished to take Elijah up to heaven with a whirlwind, that Elijah and Elisha departed from Gilgal.

And Elijah said to Elisha, "Please stay here, for the Lord has sent me to Bethel." But Elisha replied, "As surely as the Lord lives and as you live, I will not leave you." So they went down to Bethel.

And the sons of the prophets who were at Bethel came out to Elisha and said to him, "Do you not know that today the Lord will take your master away from you?" And he answered, "Yes, I know; be silent."

And Elijah said to him, "Elisha, please stay here, for the Lord has sent me to Jericho." But he replied, "As surely as the Lord lives and as you live, I will not leave you." So they went to Jericho.

And the sons of the prophets who were at Jericho came to Elisha and said to him, "Do you not know that the Lord is going to take your master from you today?" And he answered, "Yes, I know; be silent."

And Elijah said to him, "Elisha, please stay here, for the Lord has sent me to the Jordan." But he replied, "As surely as the Lord lives and as you live, I will not leave you." So the two of them went away together.

And fifty men from among the sons of the Prophets came, and stood at a distance opposite them; and the two of them stopped by the Jordan.

Then Elijah took his cloak, and folded it up, and struck the waters with it, and they divided in two, and both passed over on dry ground.

When they had crossed over, Elijah said to Elisha, "Ask what I should do for you before I am taken from you." And Elisha replied, "Please let me have twice as much of your spirit."

And he said to him, "You have asked a difficult thing; if you see me taken from you, it will be granted to you; but if you do not see me, it will not be granted to you."

And it came to pass that as they walked on, talking, behold, a chariot of fire and horses of fire separated them from one another; and Elijah went up to heaven in a whirlwind.

And Elisha, looking at him, cried out: My father! My father! The chariot of Israel, and its horsemen! And he saw him no more; then taking his clothes, he tore them in two pieces.

And he lifted up Elijah's mantle which had fallen from him, and returned, and stood on the bank of the Jordan.

Then he took Elijah's mantle, which had fallen off him, and struck the waters, and said, "Where is the Lord, the God of Elijah, the Lord himself?" So he struck the waters, and they divided in two; and Elisha crossed over.

And when the sons of the prophets who were opposite Jericho saw him, they said, "The Spirit of Elijah has rested on Elisha," and they came to meet him and bowed down before him on the ground;

And they said to him, "Now here are fifty powerful men with your servants. We beg you to let them go and look for your master, lest the Spirit of the Lord has taken him away and thrown him on some mountain or in some valley." And he replied, "Do not send them."

But they pressed him so hard with their words that he was ashamed. So he said to them, "Send them." And they sent fifty men, who searched for Elijah for three days, but did not find him.

Then they returned to him at Jericho, where he had stopped, and he said to them: Did I not tell you not to go there?

And the people of the city said to Elisha, "Now the dwelling place of this city is good, as my Lord sees, but its waters are bad, and its land is barren."

And he said, "Bring me a new vessel and put some salt in it," and they brought it to him.

Then he went to the place from which the waters came out, and he threw the salt into it, saying, "Thus says the Lord: I have made these waters wholesome; they shall no longer cause death, and [the land shall no longer be] barren."

So they were made whole, [and have been] to this day, according to the word that Elisha had spoken.

From there he went up to Bethel; and as he went up the road, some little boys came out of the town, and mocking him, they said to him, Go up bald, go up bald.

And [Elisha] looked behind him, and having looked at them, he cursed them in the Name of the Lord; whereupon two bears came out of the forest, and tore forty-two of those children to pieces.

And he went from there to Mount Carmel, and from there he returned to Samaria.

Now in the eighteenth year of Jehoshaphat king of Judah, Joram son of Ahab began to reign over Israel in Samaria, and he reigned twelve years.

And he did what was displeasing to the Lord, not, however, as his father and mother had done, for he removed the image of Bahal that his father had made.

But he adhered to the sins of Jeroboam son of Nebat, by which he had caused Israel to sin, [and] did not turn away from any of them.

Now Meshah, King of Moab, was involved in livestock, and paid the King of Israel one hundred thousand lambs, and one hundred thousand sheep [bearing] wool.

But as soon as Ahab died, it happened that the King of Moab rebelled against the King of Israel.

That is why King Joram went out that day from Samaria and counted all Israel.

Then he went and sent to Jehoshaphat King of Judah, saying, "The King of Moab has rebelled against me; will you not come with me to war against Moab?" And he answered, "I will go up; count me as yourself, my people as your people, and my horses as your horses."

Then he said, "By which way shall we go up?" And he answered, "By the way of the desert of Edom."

So the King of Israel, and the King of Judah, and the King of Edom set out, and circled the road for seven days, until they had no more water for the camp, nor for the animals they were leading.

And the King of Israel said: Ha! Ha! Surely the Lord has called these three kings to deliver them into the hands of Moab.

And Jehoshaphat said, "Is there no prophet of the Lord here, so that we may inquire of the Lord through him?" And one of the servants of the King of Israel answered, and said, "Elisha son of Shaphat is here, who used to pour water on Elijah's hands."

Then Jehoshaphat said, "The word of the Lord is with him," and the king of Israel, Jehoshaphat, and the king of Edom went down to him.

But Elisha said to the King of Israel, "What have you to do with me? Go to the prophets of your father and to the prophets of your mother." And the King of Israel answered him, "No, for the Lord has called these three kings to deliver them into the hand of Moab."

And Elisha said, "As surely as the Lord Almighty lives, before whom I stand, if I did not respect Jehoshaphat the king of Judah, I would not have shown any respect for you, nor would I have even seen you."

But now bring me a musician. And as the musician played the instruments, the hand of the Lord came upon Elisha;

And he said: This is what the Lord says: Let this whole valley be cut into ditches. For thus says the Lord: You will see neither wind nor rain, yet this valley shall be filled with water, and you and your livestock shall drink.

Yet this is a small thing for the Lord; for he will deliver Moab into your hands; And you will destroy all the fortified cities, and all the principal cities, and you will cut down all the good trees, and you will block up all the fountains of water, and you will spoil all the best fields with stones.

So it came to morning, about the hour when the offering is made, that waters were seen coming from the road to Edom, so that that place was filled with water.

Now when all the Moabites heard that these kings had come up to wage war against them, they assembled with a public shout, from all those who were of fighting age and above, and they stood on the border.

And the next day they rose early in the morning, and as the sun rose over the waters, the Moabites saw opposite them the waters red like blood.

And they said, "This is blood; surely these kings have killed one another, and each has struck his fellow man; now therefore, Moabites, to the spoils."

So they came to the camp of Israel, and the Israelites rose up and struck down the Moabites, who fled before them; then they entered the land and struck down Moab.

They destroyed the cities; and everyone threw stones into the best fields, so that they filled them; they blocked all the fountains of water, and cut down all the good trees, until only stones were left at Kir-hareseth, which the slingers surrounded and attacked.

And the King of Moab, seeing that he was not the strongest, took with him seven hundred men who drew their swords, to push through to the King of Edom; but they could not.

Then he took his firstborn son, who was to reign in his place, and offered him as a burnt offering on the wall, and there was great indignation in Israel; so they withdrew from him and returned to their own country.

Now a widow of one of the sons of the Prophets cried out to Elisha, saying, Your servant my husband is dead, and you know that your servant feared the Lord, and his creditor has come to take my two children to be his slaves.

And Elisha answered her, "What shall I do for you? Tell me what you have in the house." And she said, "Your servant has nothing in the whole house except a jar of oil."

Then he told him: Go, ask all your neighbors in the street for ships, empty ships, and do not ask for even a small number.

Then go in, and shut the door on yourself and your children, and pour [from this jar of oil] into all these vessels, removing those that are full.

So she withdrew from him, and having closed the door on her and her children, they brought her [the vessels], and she poured.

And it came to pass that as soon as she had filled the vessels, she said to her son, "Bring me another vessel"; and he answered, "There is no more vessel"; and the oil stopped flowing.

Then she came and told the man of God, who said to her, "Go, sell the oil and pay your debt, and you and your sons can live on what is left over."

Now it happened that one day when Elisha was passing through Shunem, where there was a woman who had great possessions, she urged him to eat bread; and every time he passed by, he would stop there to eat bread.

And she said to her husband: Now I know that this man who often comes to our house is a holy man of God.

Let us make him, I pray you, a small upper room, and put there a bed, a table, a chair, and a candlestick, so that when he comes to our house, he may retire there.

Having thus come there one day, he withdrew to this upper room, and rested there.

Then he said to Gehazi his servant, "Call this Shunammite woman," and he called her, and she stood before him.

And he said to Gehazi, "Now tell this woman, 'Look, you have taken all these cares for us, what can be done for you? Do you have to speak to the king, or to the commander of the army?'" And she answered, "I live among my people."

And he said [to Gehazi]: What should be done for her? And Gehazi replied: Indeed, she has no son, and her husband is old.

And [Elisha] said to him, "Call her"; and he called her, and she came to the door.

And he said to her, "Next year, at this time, you will embrace a son." She replied, "My lord, man of God, do not lie, do not lie to your servant!"

So this woman conceived, and gave birth to a son a year later, in the same season, just as Elisha had told her.

And when the child had grown up, he went out one day to [go and find] his father, among the harvesters.

And he said to his father, "My head! My head!" And the father said to the servant, "Take him to his mother."

So he carried him and brought him to his mother, and he remained on her lap until noon, and then he died.

And she went up, and laid him on the bed of the man of God, and having closed the door on him, she went out.

Then she cried out to her husband, and said, "Please send me one of the servants and a donkey, so that I may go to the man of God and then return."

And he said, "Why are you going to him today? It is neither the new moon nor the Sabbath." And she replied, "All is well."

So she saddled the donkey, and said to her servant, "Lead me on, and walk, [and] do not delay me from advancing on the donkey unless I tell you to."

So she went away and came to the man of God on Mount Carmel; and as soon as the man of God saw her coming towards him, he said to Gehazi his servant, "Behold the Shunammite woman."

Go, run to meet her, and say to her: Are you well? Is your husband well? Is the child well? And she answered: We are well.

Then she came to the man of God in the mountain, and grasped his feet; and Gehazi approached to push her away, but the man of God said to him, Leave her alone, for she is troubled in her heart, and the Lord has hidden it from me, and has not told me.

Then she said, "Did I ask my Lord for a son? [And] did I not say to You, 'Do not let me be deceived?'"

And he said to Gehazi, "Bend over your loins, take my staff in your hand, and go; if you find anyone, do not greet him; and if anyone greets you, do not answer him; then you shall lay my staff on the face of the child."

But the child's mother said, "As surely as the Lord lives and as you live, I will not leave you." So he got up and went after her.

Now Gehazi had passed before them, and had put the staff on the child's face; but there was no sound in the child, nor any appearance that he had heard; so [Gehazi] returned to meet Elisha, and reported it to him, saying: The child has not awakened.

So Elisha went into the house, and there was the dead child lying on his bed.

And having entered, he shut the door behind them both, and offered his prayer to the Lord.

Then he went up and lay on the child, and put his mouth on the child's mouth, and his eyes on his eyes, and his palms on his palms, and bent over him; and the child's flesh became warm.

Then he withdrew and went through the house, now to one place, now to another, and he came back up, and leaned over him again; finally the child sneezed seven times, and opened his eyes.

Then [Elisha] called Gehazi and said to him, "Call this Shunammite woman." So he called her, and she came to him, and he said to her, "Take your son."

So she came, fell at his feet, and prostrated herself on the ground; then she took her son and went out.

After this Elisha returned to Gilgal. Now there was a famine in the land, and the sons of the prophets were sitting before him; and he said to his servant, "Put on the large pot, and cook some stew for the sons of the prophets."

But someone went out to the fields to gather herbs, found some wild vines, and picked wild gourds, filling his robe, and when he came back, he put them piece by piece into the cauldron where the soup was; for no one knew what they were.

And some of this stew was prepared for a few to eat; but as soon as they had eaten of this stew, they cried out and said: Man of God, death is in the cauldron; and they could not eat of it.

And he said, "Bring me some flour"; and he threw it into the pot, and said, "Let some be prepared for this people to eat"; and there was nothing bad left in the pot.

Then a man from Bahalsalisa came, bringing to the man of God bread of the first fruits, [namely] twenty barley loaves, and grain in the ear with its chaff; and [Elisha] said: Give [this] to this people, so that they may eat.

And his servant said to him, "Shall I give this to a hundred men?" But he answered him, "Give it to this people, and let them eat. For thus says the Lord: 'They shall eat, and there shall be some left over.'"

So he set it before them, and they ate, and left some of it over, according to the word of the Lord.

Now Naaman, commander of the army of the king of Syria, was a mighty man in the sight of his lord, and was highly honored, because the Lord had delivered the Syrians through him, but this strong and valiant man was a leper.

And some troops coming out of Syria had brought as a prisoner a little girl from the land of Israel, who served Naaman's wife.

And she said to her mistress; I wish that my Lord would appear before the Prophet who is in Samaria, he would have immediately cured him of his leprosy.

So someone came and reported it to his Lord, saying, "The girl who is from the land of Israel said such and such."

And the King of Syria said [to Naaman]: Go, go, and I will send letters to the King of Israel. So [Naaman] went, and took with him ten talents of silver, and six thousand pieces of gold, and ten changes of robes.

And he brought to the King of Israel letters containing such a message. Now, as soon as these letters reach you, know that I have sent you Naaman my servant, so that you may cure him of his leprosy.

Now, as soon as the King of Israel had read the letters, he tore his clothes and said, "Am I God, that I should kill and give life? That this man should send me to cure a man of leprosy! Therefore, know now and see that he is seeking an opportunity against me."

But it came to pass that as soon as Elisha, the man of God, heard that the King of Israel had torn his clothes, he sent word to the King: Why have you torn your clothes? Let him now come to me, and let him know that there is a Prophet in Israel.

So Naaman came with his horses and his chariot, and stood at the door of Elisha's house.

And Elisha sent a messenger to him, saying, "Go, and wash yourself seven times in the Jordan, and your flesh will be restored [as before], and you will be clean."

But Naaman became very angry and went away, saying, "I thought to myself, 'He will surely go out immediately and call on the name of the Lord his God, and he will put out his hand to the place of the sore and heal the leper.'"

Are not Abana and Pharpar, the rivers of Damascus, better than all the waters of Israel? Would I not wash myself well in them? Would I become clean? So he returned, and went away in anger.

But his servants came to him and spoke to him, saying, "My father, if the Prophet had told you something great, would you not have done it? How much more then should you do what he told you: 'Wash, and be clean'?"

So he went down and dipped himself seven times in the Jordan, according to the word of the man of God; and his flesh was restored to him like the flesh of a little child; and he was clean.

So he returned to the man of God, he and all his company, and came and stood before him; and said, "Behold, now I know that there is no God in all the earth except in Israel. Now therefore, I pray you, accept this present from your servant."

But [Elisha] replied: As surely as the Lord lives, in whose presence I stand, I will not take it; and although [Naaman] urged him strongly to take it, [Elisha] refused. Naaman said, "Now I beg you, could not your servant be given two mule loads from this land? For your servant will no longer offer burnt offerings or sacrifices to other gods, but only to the Lord."

The Lord will forgive your servant this; that when my master enters the house of Rimmon to worship there and leans on my hand, I will worship in the house of Rimmon; the Lord, [I say], will forgive me, when I worship in the house of Rimmon.

And [Elisha] said to him, "Go in peace." So he left him and walked about a small part of the country.

Then Gehazi, the servant of Elisha the man of God, said, "Look, my master has refused to take anything from Naaman the Syrian that he brought. As surely as the Lord lives, I will run after him and take something from him."

So Gehazi ran after Naaman; and Naaman, seeing him run after him, jumped out of his chariot to meet him, and said to him, "Is everything all right?"

And he answered: All is well. My master has sent me to tell you: Behold, at this very hour two young men from the hill country of Ephraim have come to me, who are sons of the Prophets; please give them a talent of silver and two changes of robes.

And Naaman said, "Boldly take two talents"; and he urged him so that two talents of silver were tied together in two bags; [he gave him] also two changes of robes; and he gave them to two of his servants who carried them before him.

And when he came to a secret place, he took him from their hands and kept him in a house, after which he sent those people away, and they returned.

Then he went in and stood before his master. And Elisha said to him, "Where have you been, Gehazi?" And he answered him, "Your servant has been nowhere."

But [Elisha] said to him, "Did not my heart go there when the man turned back from his chariot to meet you? Is this a time to take money, and to take clothes, olive groves, vineyards, flocks and herds, male and female servants?"

Therefore, Naaman's leprosy will cling to you and your descendants forever. And [Gehazi] went out from before [Elisha the White] leprous, like snow.

But the sons of the Prophets said to Elisha, "Now the place where we are sitting before you is too small for us."

Let us now go to the Jordan, and let each of us take a piece of wood from there, and let us make a place to dwell there; and he answered, Go.

And one of them said, "Please come with your servants"; and he replied, "I will go."

So he went with them; and they went to the Jordan, and they cut down some wood.

But it happened that as one of them was chopping down a piece of wood, the iron [of his axe] fell into the water; and he cried out, and said: Alas, my Lord! It is borrowed again.

And the man of God said, "Where did it fall?" and he showed him the place; then [Elisha] cut off a piece of wood and threw it there, and he made the iron swim over it.

And he said, "Lift him up"; and [this man] stretched out his hand and took him.

Now the King of Syria, who was at war with Israel, held a council with his servants, and said: In such and such a place shall be my camp.

And the man of God sent word to the King of Israel: Be careful not to pass through that place, for the Syrians have come down there.

And the King of Israel sent to the place that the man of God told him, and he provided for it, and was on his guard; which he did several times. And the heart of the King of Syria was troubled, and he called his servants, and said to them, "Will you not reveal to me which of our people is sending to the King of Israel?"

And one of his servants said to him, "There is none, O my Lord the King! But Elisha the Prophet who is in Israel, declare to the King of Israel the very words that you speak in the room where you lie."

And he said, "Go and see where he is, so that I may send to get him." And they told him, "He is in Dothan."

And he sent horses, chariots, and large troops, who came by night and surrounded the city.

Now the servant of the man of God got up early in the morning and went out, and behold, troops, and horses, and chariots were all around the city; and the servant of the man of God said to him, Alas, my lord! What shall we do?

And he answered him, "Do not be afraid; for those who are with us are more numerous than those who are with them."

So Elisha prayed, and said, "I pray you, O Lord, open his eyes, that he may see." And the Lord opened the eyes of the servant, and he saw, and behold, the mountain was full of horses, and chariots of fire all around Elisha.

Then [the Syrians] went down to Elisha, and he prayed to the Lord, and said, "Please strike these people with blinding light"; and God struck them with blinding light, according to the word of Elisha.

And Elisha said to them, "This is not the way, and this is not the city; come after me, and I will lead you to the man you are looking for." And he led them to Samaria.

And it came to pass that as soon as they had entered Samaria, Elisha said, O Lord, open their eyes that they may see. And the Lord opened their eyes, and they saw, and behold, they were in the midst of Samaria.

And as soon as the King of Israel saw them, he said to Elisha, "Shall I strike, shall I strike, my father?"

And he answered: You shall not strike; would you strike with your sword and your bow those whom you have taken captive? Rather, set bread and water before them, and let them eat and drink, and after that let them go to their Lord.

And he gave them a great feast, and they ate and drank; then he let them go, and they went to their Lord. From that time on, the Syrian tribes did not return to the land of Israel.

But it came to pass, after these things, that Ben-hadad, King of Syria, assembled all his army, and went up, and besieged Samaria.

And there was a great famine in Samaria; for behold, they besieged it so long, that the head of a donkey sold for eighty pieces of silver, and a fourth part of a kad of pigeon droppings for five pieces of silver.

Now it happened that as the King of Israel was passing over the wall, a woman cried out to him, saying: O King, my Lord! Deliver me.

And he answered, "Since the Lord does not deliver you, how can I deliver you? From the threshing floor or from the winepress?"

He said to her again, "What is the matter with you?" And she replied, "This woman told me, 'Give me your son, and let us eat him today, and we will eat my son tomorrow.'"

So we boiled my son and ate him, and the next day I said to her, "Give me your son, and let's eat him," but she hid her son.

But as soon as the King heard the words of this woman, he tore his clothes, (and he was passing over the wall at that moment) which the people saw, and behold, he had sackcloth on his flesh inside.

That is why [the King] said: May God do so to me, and so he added, if today the head of Elisha son of Shaphat remains on him.

And Elisha was sitting in his house, and the elders were sitting with him. The king sent a man from him; but before the messenger came to Elisha, Elisha said to the elders, "Do you not see that the son of that murderer has sent here to take my head? Be careful, as soon as the messenger enters, to shut the door and stop him at the door. Do you not hear the sound of his master's feet coming after him?"

And while he was still speaking with them, behold, the messenger came down to him, and [the King] said: Behold, this evil is from the Lord, what more shall I expect from the Lord?

Then Elisha said, "Hear the word of the Lord. This is what the Lord says: 'About this time tomorrow, at the gate of Samaria, a sack of fine flour will be sold for a shekel, and two sacks of barley for a shekel.'"

But a captain, on whose arm the King was leaning, answered the man of God, and said, "Even if the Lord were to open openings in the heavens now, would this happen?" And Elisha said, "You will see it with your own eyes, but you will not eat of it."

Now there were four lepers at the entrance of the gate, and they said to one another, "Why do we stay here until we die?"

If we speak of entering the city, there is famine there, and we will die there; and if we remain here, we will also die. Now then, come, and let us slip away to the camp of the Syrians; if they let us live, we will live, and if they kill us, we will die.

That is why they got up before daybreak to enter the Syrian camp, and they came to one end of the camp, and behold, there was no one there.

For the Lord had caused the Syrians to hear the sound of chariots, the sound of horses, and the sound of a great army; so that they said to one another, "Look, the King of Israel has paid the Hittite kings and the Egyptian kings to come against us."

That is why they had gotten up before daybreak and fled, leaving behind their tents, their horses, their donkeys, and the camp as it was; and they had fled to save their lives.

So these lepers went to one end of the camp, and into a tent they ate and drank. They took silver, gold, and clothing from there, and went away and hid them. After that they returned and went into another tent, and took [the same things] from there as well, and went away and hid them.

Then they said to one another, "We are not doing right; this day is a day of good news, and we say nothing! If we wait until the day comes, iniquity will find us; now therefore come, let us go, and let the house of the King know."

So they came and cried out to the gatekeepers of the city, and made them hear, saying, "We have entered the camp of the Syrians, and behold, there is no one there, nor can the voice of any man be heard; but there are only horses tied up, and donkeys tied up, and the tents are as they were.

Then the gatekeepers cried out; and made it heard in the King's house.

And the King got up during the night and said to his servants, "Now I will tell you what the Syrians have done to us. They have learned that we are hungry, and they have left the camp to hide in the fields, saying, 'When they come out of the city, we will take them alive and enter the city.'"

Let us take at once five of the horses which have remained in the city; [for] this is almost all which is left of the great number of the horses of Israel, this is almost all which has not been consumed of this multitude [of horses] of Israel, and let us send to see what it is.

So they took two chariot horses, and the King sent after the Syrian camp, saying, "Go and see."

And they went after them as far as the Jordan, and behold, the road was full of garments and belongings which the Syrians had thrown away in their haste; then the messengers returned and reported it to the King.

Then the people went out and plundered the Syrian camp, so that the sat of fine flour was given for a shekel, and the two sats of barley for a shekel, according to the word of the Lord.

And the King gave charge of guarding the gate to the captain, on whose hand he leaned; and the people trampled him at the gate, so that he died, according to what the man of God had said, speaking to the King when he came down to him.

For when the man of God had spoken to the King, saying: Tomorrow morning at this time, at the gate of Samaria, two sats of barley will be given for one shekel, and one sat of fine flour for one shekel;

That captain had answered the man of God, and had said: Even if the Lord were to open openings in the heavens, could what you say happen? And [the man of God] had said: Behold, you will see it with your eyes, but you shall not eat of it.

So it happened to him; for the people trampled him at the gate, so that he died.

Now Elisha had spoken to the woman whose son he had restored to life, saying, "Get up, and go, you and your family, and dwell wherever you can; for the Lord has called for a famine, and it is coming upon the land to remain there for seven years."

So this woman got up and did according to the word of the man of God, and went away, she and her family, and stayed seven years in the land of the Philistines.

But it came to pass that at the end of the seven years that woman returned from the land of the Philistines, and then she went to make a request to the King concerning her house and her fields.

Then the King spoke to Gehazi, the servant of the man of God, saying, "Please tell me all the great things that Elisha did."

And it came to pass that when he was telling the king how [Elisha] had restored a dead man to life, behold, the woman whose son he had restored to life came to the king with a petition concerning her house and her fields. And Gehazi said, "O king, my lord! This is the woman, and this is her son, whom Elisha restored to life."

Then the King questioned the woman; and she told him [what had happened]. And the King gave her a eunuch, to whom he said: Give her back everything that belonged to her, even all the income from her fields from the time she left the country until now.

Now Elisha went to Damascus, and at that time Ben-hadad King of Syria was sick, and it was reported to him, and he was told: The man of God has come here.

And the King said to Hazael, "Take some present with you, and go to meet the man of God, and through him inquire of the Lord, saying, 'Shall I recover from this illness?'"

And Hazael went to meet him, having taken with him a present, [namely], forty camels loaded with all the best things in Damascus, and he came, and presented himself before him, and said: Your son Ben-hadad King of Syria has sent me to you, to say to you: Will I recover from this illness?

And Elisha answered him, "Go, [and] tell him, 'Surely you could raise him up; however, the Lord has shown me that he will certainly die.'"

And the man of God fixed his gaze [on Hazael], and held back for a long time; then the man of God wept.

And Hazael said, "Why are you weeping, my Lord?" And he answered, "Because I know how much harm you will do to the children of Israel; you will set fire to their fortified cities, and you will kill their young men with the sword, and you will crush their little children, and you will cleave their pregnant women in two."

And Hazael said, "But who is your servant, who is only a dog, that he should do such great things?" And Elisha answered, "The Lord has shown me that you will be king of Syria."

So [Hazael] withdrew from Elisha and returned to his master, who asked him, "What did Elisha say to you?" And he replied, "He told me that you can certainly recover [from this illness]."

But it happened that the next day [Hazael] took a thick cloth, and having plunged it into the water, he spread it over the face of [Ben-hadad], from which he died; and Hazael reigned in his place.

In the fifth year of Joram son of Ahab king of Israel, and Jehoshaphat king of Judah, Joram son of Jehoshaphat king of Judah began to reign over Judah.

He was thirty-two years old when he began to reign, and he reigned eight years in Jerusalem.

And he followed the ways of the Kings of Israel, as the house of Ahab had done; for Ahab's daughter was his wife, so he did what was displeasing to the Lord.

However, the Lord did not want to destroy Judah, for the sake of David his servant, according to what he had said to him, that he would give him and his sons a lamp forever.

In his time, the people of Edom rebelled against the obedience of Judah and established a king over them.

Therefore Joram passed through to Zahir with all his chariots, and rose up by night, and struck down the Edomites who were around him, and the governors of the chariots; but the people fled to their tents.

Nevertheless, the Edomites rebelled against Judah's obedience, [and this has lasted] to this day. At that same time, Libnah also rebelled.

The rest of the deeds of Joram, all that he did, is it not written in the Book of the Chronicles of the Kings of Judah?

And Joram slept with his fathers, and was buried with them in the City of David; and Ahaziah his son reigned in his place.

In the twelfth year of Joram son of Ahab king of Israel, Ahaziah son of Joram king of Judah began to reign.

Ahaziah was twenty-two years old when he began to reign, and he reigned one year in Jerusalem; his mother's name was HATHALIAH, [and she was] the daughter of HOMRI, King of Israel.

He followed the ways of the house of Ahab, and did what was displeasing to the Lord, as the house of Ahab had done; for he was a son-in-law of the house of Ahab.

Now he went with Joram son of Ahab to war against Hazael king of Syria, and Ramoth of Gilead, and the Syrians struck down Joram.

And King Joram returned to Jezrehel to be healed of the wounds that the Syrians had inflicted on him at Ramah, when he fought against Hazael King of Syria, and Ahaziah son of Joram, King of Judah, went down to see Joram son of Ahab at Jezrehel, because he was sick.

Then Elisha the Prophet called one of the sons of the Prophets and said to him, "Tuck in your loins, and take this flask of oil in your hand, and go to Ramoth-Gilead."

When you have entered there, see where Jehu son of Jehoshaphat, son of Nimsi, will be, and go in, and having made him rise from among his brothers, you shall bring him into some secret chamber.

Then you shall take the flask of oil, pour it on his head, and say: Thus says the Lord: I have anointed you to be King over Israel. After that you shall open the door, flee, and not stop.

So this young man, who was the servant of the Prophet, went to Ramoth-Gilead.

And when he entered, behold, the captains of the army were sitting there; and he said, Captain, I have something to speak to you. And Jehu answered, To whom of us all are you speaking? And he said, To you, Captain.

Then [Jehu] got up and went into the house; [and the young man] poured the oil on his head and said to him, "This is what the Lord, the God of Israel, says: I have anointed you to be king over the Lord's people; [that is,] over Israel."

And you shall strike the house of Ahab your Lord; for I will avenge the blood of my servants the Prophets, and the blood of all the servants of the Lord, [by demanding it] from the hand of Izebel.

And all the house of Ahab shall perish, and I will cut off from Ahab everything from man to dog, both what is held and what is left in Israel.

And I will make the house of Ahab like the house of Jeroboam son of Nebat, and the house of Bahasa son of Ahijah.

The dogs will also eat Jezebel in the field of Jezrehel, and there will be no one to bury him; after which he opened the door and fled.

Then Jehu went out to his master's servants, and they said to him, "Is everything all right? Why has this madman come to you?" And he answered them, "You know the man and what he knows how to say."

But they said, "That is not so; tell us now." And he answered, "He told me such and such; he said to me, 'Thus says the Lord, I have anointed you to be King over Israel.'"

So they hurried, and each took their garments, and placed them under him on the highest steps, and blew the trumpet, and said: Jehu has been made King.

So Jehu son of Jehoshaphat, son of Nimsi, conspired against Joram. Now Joram had armed Ramoth-Gilead, he and all Israel, for fear of Hazael king of Syria.

And King Joram had returned to Jezrehel to be healed of the wounds the Syrians had inflicted on him when he fought against Hazael, King of Syria. Jehu said, "If it seems good to you, let no one leave or escape from the city to go and tell Jezrehel."

Then Jehu mounted his horse and went to Jezrehel, for Joram was there sick; and Ahaziah king of Judah had gone down there to visit Joram.

Now there was a watchman on a tower in Jezrehel, who, seeing Jehu's troop approaching, said: I see a troop of men. And Joram said: Take a horseman and send him to meet them, and let him say: Is there peace?

And the man on horseback went out to meet him, and said, "Thus says the King: Is there peace?" And Jehu answered, "What do you have to do with peace? Stand behind me." And the watchman reported it, saying, "The messenger came to them, and he will not return."

And he sent another man on horseback, who came to them and said, "Thus says the King: Is there peace?" And Jehu answered, "What do you have to do with peace? Stand behind me."

And the watchman reported it, and said: He came to them, and he does not return; but his gait is like the gait of Jehu son of Nimsi; for he walks with fury.

Then Joram said, "Let them harness his chariot," and they harnessed it. So Joram King of Israel went out with Ahaziah King of Judah, each in his own chariot, and they went to meet Jehu, and they found him in the field of Naboth the Jezreelite.

And as soon as Joram saw Jehu, he said, "Is there no peace, Jehu?" And [Jehu] replied, "What peace, when the lewdness of your mother Izebel and her enchantments will be so numerous?"

Then Joram turned his hand away and fled; and said to Ahaziah, "Ahaziah, we have been deceived."

And Jehu grasped the bow with his whole hand, and struck Joram between his shoulders, so that the arrow came out through his heart, and he fell to his knees in his chariot.

And [Jehu] said to Bidkar his captain, "Take him and throw him in some place in the field of Naboth the Jezreelite; for remember that when you and I were riding side by side, following Ahab his father, the Lord pronounced this charge against him;

If I did not see last night the blood of Naboth, and the blood of his sons, says the Lord, and if I do not give him back to you in this field, says the Lord; therefore take him now and throw him in this field, according to the word of the Lord.

Now Ahaziah king of Judah, seeing this, fled by way of the garden house; but Jehu pursued him and said, "Strike this man also on the chariot." This happened on the ascent of Gur, which is near Ibleham; then he fled to Megiddo and died there.

And his servants brought him in a chariot to Jerusalem, and buried him in his tomb with his fathers, in the City of David.

Now in the eleventh year of Joram son of Ahab, Ahaziah began to reign over Judah.

And Jehu came to Jezrehel, and Izebel, having heard [that Jehu was coming], painted her face, adorned her head, and she looked out of the window. And as Jehu entered the gate, she said, "Did he take anything from Zimri who killed his Lord?"

And he raised his head towards the window, and said: Who is here of my men? Who? Then two or three of the eunuchs looked towards him.

And he said to them, "Throw her down." And they threw her down, so that some of her blood splashed against the wall and against the horses, and he trampled her underfoot.

And having gone in, he ate and drank; then he said, "Go now and see to that cursed woman, and bury her, for she is the daughter of a king."

So they went to bury him; but they found nothing there except the skull, and the feet, and the palms of the hands.

And when they returned they brought it back to him; and he said, This is the word of the Lord which he spoke by means of his servant Elijah the Tizbite, saying, In the field of Jezrehel the dogs shall eat the flesh of Izebel.

And the carcass of Izebel will be like dung on top of the field in the field of Jezreel; so that it will not be possible to say: This is Izebel.

Now Ahab had seventy sons in Samaria. And Jehu wrote letters and sent them to Samaria to the leaders of Jezrehel, to the elders, and to Ahab's foster fathers, sending them these words:

As soon as these Letters reach you, who have with you your master's sons, the wagons, the horses, the fortified city, and the weapons;

Look to see who is the most worthy and agreeable among your master's sons, and put him on his father's throne, and fight for your master's house.

And they were very afraid, and said, "Look, two kings could not stand against him, how then can we stand?"

Those who were in charge of the house, and those who were appointed over the city, and the elders, and the nurses sent word to Jehu, saying: We are your servants, we will do all that you tell us; we will not do anyone. King, do what seems good to you.

And he wrote them letters a second time, saying: If you belong to me and obey my voice, take the heads of your master's sons and come to me tomorrow at this time in Jezrehel. Now the king's sons, who were seventy men, were with the leading men of the city who were feeding them.

As soon as these letters reached them, they took the King's sons and put seventy men to death, and having put their heads in baskets, they sent them to him in Jezrehel.

And a messenger came and reported it to him, saying: They have brought the heads of the King's sons. And he replied: Put them in two heaps at the entrance of the gate until morning.

And he went out in the morning, and having stood, he said to all the people, "You are righteous; behold, I formed a league against my Lord, and I killed him; and who struck down all these?"

Now know that nothing will fall to the ground from the word of the Lord, which the Lord spoke against the house of Ahab; and that the Lord has done what he spoke by means of his servant Elijah.

Jehu also killed all those who had remained of the house of Ahab in Jezrehel, and all those whom he had advanced, and his close friends, and his chief officers, so that he left not one of them left.

Then he got up and left, and went to Samaria; and as he was near a shepherd's hut on the road,

He found the brothers of Ahaziah, King of Judah, and said to them, "Who are you?" And they answered, "We are the brothers of Ahaziah, and we have come down to greet the sons of the King and the sons of the Queen."

And he said, "Seize them alive." And they seized them all alive and killed them, forty-two men, near the well of the shepherds' hut, and not one was left alive. And [Jehu] having departed from there, found Jonadab son of Rechab, who was coming to meet him, whom he greeted, and said to him, Is your heart as upright [towards me] as my heart is towards you? And Jonadab answered, It is; yes it is, give me your hand; and he gave him his hand, and made him ride with him in the chariot.

Then he said, "Come with me, and you will see my zeal for the Lord." So they led him in his chariot.

And when [Jehu] came to Samaria, he killed all those who remained of the remnant [of the house] of Ahab in Samaria, until he had exterminated them all, according to the word which the Lord had spoken to Elijah.

Then Jehu gathered all the people together and said to them: Ahab has served Bahal only a little, but Jehu will serve him much.

Now then, summon to me all the prophets of Bahal, all his servants, and all his priests; let not one be missing, for I have a great sacrifice to offer to Bahal. Whoever is not present shall not live. Now Jehu did this cunningly, to destroy the servants of Bahal.

And Jehu said, "Consecrate a solemn feast to Bahal"; and they proclaimed it.

And Jehu sent throughout all Israel, and all the servants of Bahal came; there was not one who did not come; and they entered the house of Bahal, and the house of Bahal was filled from one end to the other.

Then he said to the one in charge of the garment maker, "Bring out clothes for all of Bahal's servants," and he brought out clothes for them.

And Jehu and Jonadab son of Rechab entered the house of Bahal, and [Jehu] said to the servants of Bahal: Search diligently, and see that by chance there is not here among you any of the servants of the Lord; and take care that there are only the servants of Bahal.

So they went in to offer sacrifices and burnt offerings. Now Jehu had put eighty men outside, and had said to them: If any of these men whom I am about to put into your hands escapes, each of you will be responsible for the life of that man.

And it came to pass that as soon as the burnt offering was finished, Jehu said to the archers and the captains, "Go in and kill them, and let no one escape." So the archers and the captains put them to the edge of the sword and threw them there, and then they went to the city of the house of Bahal.

And they brought out the statues of the house of Bahal, and burned them.

And they demolished the statue of Bahal. They also demolished the house of Bahal, and made it [serve] as a retreat, to this day.

Thus Jehu exterminated Bahal from Israel.

However, Jehu did not turn away from the sins of Jeroboam son of Nebat, by which he had caused Israel to sin, [namely] the golden calves which were in Bethel, and in Dan.

And the Lord said to Jehu, "Because you have done very well what was right before me, and have done to the house of Ahab all that was in my heart, your sons shall sit on the throne of Israel to the fourth generation."

But Jehu did not take heed to walk with all his heart in the law of the Lord the God of Israel, [and] he did not turn away from the sins of Jeroboam by which he had caused Israel to sin.

At that time the Lord began to cut off [some part of the Kingdom] of Israel, for Hazael defeated the Israelites in all the borders.

From the Jordan to the rising sun [namely] throughout the land of Gilead, the Gadites, the Reubenites, and those of Manasseh, from Haroher, which is on the Arnon River, to Gilead and Bashan.

The rest of the acts of Jehu, all that he did, and all his exploits, are they not written in the Book of the Chronicles of the Kings of Israel?

And Jehu slept with his fathers, and was buried in Samaria; and Jehoahaz his son reigned in his place.

Now the days that Jehu reigned over Israel in Samaria were twenty-eight years.

Now HATHALIAH, mother of Ahaziah, having seen that her son was dead, rose up and exterminated the entire royal race.

But Jehosehah, daughter of King Joram, sister of Ahaziah, took Joash son of Ahaziah and snatched him away from among the king's sons who were being put to death, and put him and his nurse in the bed chamber; and they hid him from the sight of HATHALIAH, so that he was not put to death.

And he was hidden with her in the house of the Lord for six years; but HATHALIAH reigned over the land.

And in the seventh year Jehoiada sent forth and took centurions, captains, and archers, and brought them to himself into the house of the Lord, and made a covenant with them, and made them swear an oath in the house of the Lord, and showed them the King's son.

Then he commanded them, saying: [This is] what you shall do: The third part of you who come in for the week shall guard the house of the King;

And the third party will be at the gate of Sur; and the third party will be at the gate which is behind the archers; thus you will keep watch to guard the Temple, so that no one enters by force.

And the two companies of you who are going out for the week will stand watch to guard the house of the Lord, near the King.

And you shall surround the King all around, each with his weapons in his hand, and if anyone enters the ranks, let him be put to death; you shall be with the King when he goes out, and when he comes in.

So the centurions did as Jehoiada the Priest had commanded; each took his men, both those who were coming in for the week and those who were going out for the week; and they came to Jehoiada the Priest.

And the priest gave to the centurions halberds and shields that had belonged to King David, [and] that were in the house of the Lord.

And the archers stood lined up around the King, each with weapons in hand, from the right side of the Temple to the left side, both for the altar and for the Temple.

And [Jehoiada] brought in the King's son, and put the crown on him, and the Testimony, and they made him King, and anointed him, and clapping their hands, they said: Long live the King!

And HATHALIAH, hearing the noise of the archers and the people, went into the house of the Lord to the people.

And she looked, and behold, the King was standing by the pillar, according to the custom of kings, and the captains and the trumpeters were standing by the King, and all the people of the land were shouting for joy, and the trumpets were blowing. Then HATHALIAH tore her clothes and cried out, "Conjuration! Conjuration!"

And Jehoiada the priest commanded the centurions who were in charge of the army, and said to them, "Take her out of the ranks, and let him who follows her be put to death by the sword; for the priest had said, 'Let her not be put to death in the house of the Lord.'"

So they made way for her; and she returned to the King's house by way of the horses' entrance, and she was killed there.

And Jehoiada made a covenant between the Lord, the King, and the people, that they should be the Lord's people; [he made] the same [covenant] between the King and the people.

Then all the people of the land entered the house of Baal, demolished it, with its altars, and completely smashed its images; they also killed Mattan, the priest of Baal, in front of the altars; and the priest ordered guards in the house of the Lord.

And he took the centurions, the captains, the archers, and all the people of the land, and they brought the King down from the house of the Lord, and they entered the house of the King by way of the gate of the archers, and [Joash] sat on the throne of the Kings.

And all the people of the land rejoiced, and the city was at rest; although Hathaliah had been put to death with the sword in the king's house.

Joash was seven years old when he began to reign.

In the seventh year of Jehu, Joash began to reign, and he reigned forty years in Jerusalem; his mother's name was Zibiah, [and] she was from Beersheba.

Joash did what was right before the Lord all the time that Jehoiada the Priest taught him.

However, the high places were not removed; the people still sacrificed and offered incense in the high places.

And Joash said to the Priests: As for all the consecrated money that is brought into the house of the Lord, whether the money of every man who passes through the census, or the money of the persons according to the estimate made by the Priest, [and] all the money that each one brings voluntarily into the house of the Lord;

Let the priests take it to themselves, each one of whomever he knows, and let them repair whatever is needed in the Temple, wherever anything is found to be repaired.

But it came to pass that in the twenty-third year of King Joash, the Priests had not yet repaired what needed repairing in the Temple.

And King Joash summoned Jehoiada the priest and the other priests, and said to them, "Why have you not repaired what was needed in the Temple? Now do not take any more money from those you know, but leave it for what is needed in the Temple."

And the priests agreed not to take any more money from the people, nor to repair what needed repairing in the Temple.

Therefore Jehoiada the Priest took a chest, and made a hole in its lid, and placed it beside the altar on the right hand, at the place by which one entered the house of the Lord; and the priests who guarded the vessels put there all the money that was brought to the house of the Lord.

And as soon as they saw that there was a lot of money in the chest, the King's Secretary would go up with the High Priest, and they would put the money that was in the house of the Lord into bags, and then they would count it.

And they delivered this money, properly accounted for, into the hands of those who had charge of the work, [and] who were appointed over the house of the Lord, who distributed it to the carpenters and architects who were rebuilding the house of the Lord.

And to the masons and stonecutters, to buy wood and dressed stone, in order to repair what needed repairing in the house of the Lord, and [to buy] everything that was needed for the repair of the Temple.

Moreover, of the money that was brought into the house of the Lord, they did not make silver bowls for the house of the Lord, nor sickles, nor basins, nor trumpets, nor any other vessel of gold, or vessel of silver;

But it was distributed to those who had charge of the work, who used it to repair the house of the Lord.

And no accounting was made of those into whose hands this money had been delivered for distribution to those who did the work; for they did it faithfully.

The money [of the sacrifices] for the offense, and the money [of the sacrifices] for sins was not brought into the house of the Lord; [for] it belonged to the priests.

Then Hazael, King of Syria, went up and fought against Gath and took it; then Hazael turned his face to go up against Jerusalem.

But Joash King of Judah took all that was consecrated, which Jehoshaphat, Joram, and Ahaziah his fathers, Kings of Judah, had consecrated, and all that he himself had consecrated, and all the gold that was found in the treasuries of the house of the Lord and of the house of the King, and sent it to Hazael King of Syria, who withdrew from before Jerusalem.

The rest of the acts of Joash, all that he did, are they not written in the Book of the Chronicles of the Kings of Judah?

But his servants rose up and conspired together and attacked Joash in the house of Millo, which is on the descent from Silla.

Jozacar son of Shimhath, and Jozabad son of Somer, his servants, struck him down, and he died; and they buried him with his fathers in the City of David; and Amaziah his son reigned in his place.

In the twenty-third year of Joash son of Ahaziah king of Judah, Jehoahaz son of Jehu began to reign over Israel in Samaria, [and he reigned] seventeen years.

And he did what was displeasing to the Lord; for he followed the sins of Jeroboam son of Nebat, by which he had caused Israel to sin, [and] he did not turn away from any of them.

And the anger of the Lord was kindled against Israel, who delivered them into the hand of Hazael king of Syria, and into the hand of Ben-hadad son of Hazael all that time.

But Jehoahaz pleaded with the Lord, and the Lord answered him, because he saw the oppression of Israel, for the King of Syria was oppressing them.

So the Lord gave Israel a deliverer, and they came out from under the power of the Syrians; so the children of Israel lived in their tents as before.

However, they did not turn away from the sins of the house of Jeroboam, by which he had caused Israel to sin; but they walked in them, and even the grove remained standing in Samaria.

Although [God] had left Jehoahaz only fifty horsemen, ten chariots, and ten thousand foot soldiers from among the people, and the King of Syria had destroyed them, and made them [small] like the dust that is trodden [on the threshing floor].

Are not the rest of the deeds of Jehoahaz, all that he did, and his exploits, written in the Book of the Chronicles of the Kings of Israel?

So Jehoahaz slept with his fathers, and was buried in Samaria; and Joash his son reigned in his place.

In the thirty-seventh year of Joash king of Judah, Joash son of Jehoahaz began to reign over Israel in Samaria, [and he reigned] sixteen years.

And he did what was displeasing to the Lord; he did not turn away from any of the sins of Jeroboam son of Nebat, by which he had caused Israel to sin, but walked in them.

The rest of the deeds of Joash, all that he did, and the valor with which he fought against Amaziah King of Judah, is not all of this written in the Book of the Chronicles of the Kings of Israel?

And Joash slept with his fathers, and Jeroboam sat on his throne; and Joash was buried in Samaria with the kings of Israel.

Now Elisha was sick with an illness from which he died; and Joash the king of Israel came down and wept over him, saying, "My father! My father! The chariot of Israel and its horsemen!"

And Elisha said to him, "Take a bow and arrows." So he took a bow and arrows in his hand.

Then he said to the King of Israel, "Put your hand on the bow." And when he had put his hand on it, Elisha put his hands on the King's hands;

And he said to him, "Open the window that looks toward the east." And when he had opened it, Elisha said to him, "Shoot." After he had shot, he said to him, "This is the arrow of salvation from the Lord, the arrow, I say, of salvation against the Syrians; you shall therefore strike the Syrians at Aphek, until you consume them."

He also told him: Take some arrows; and when he had taken them, he said to the King of Israel: Strike the ground; and the King struck three times, then he stopped.

And the man of God became very angry with him, and said to him: You should have struck five or six times; and you would have struck the Syrians until you had consumed them; but now you will strike them only three times.

And Elisha died, and was buried. Now the following year some troops of Moabites entered the country.

And it came to pass that as a man was being buried, behold, a troop of soldiers came, and they threw that man into the tomb of Elisha; and that man being rolled there, and having touched the bones of Elisha, came back to life, and stood up on his feet. But during the entire time of Jehoahaz, Hazael King of Syria had oppressed the Israelites;

But the Lord had compassion on them, and showed them mercy, and turned to them for the sake of his covenant with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, so that he did not want to destroy them, nor did he cast them out from before him, to this day.

Then Hazael, King of Syria, died, and Ben-hadad his son reigned in his place.

And Joash son of Jehoahaz rescued from the hand of Ben-hadad son of Hazael the cities which [Hazael] had taken in war from Jehoahaz his father; Joash defeated him three times, and recovered the cities of Israel.

In the second year of Joash son of Jehoahaz king of Israel, Amaziah son of Joash king of Judah began to reign.

He was twenty-five years old when he began to reign, and he reigned twenty-nine years in Jerusalem; his mother's name was Jehohaddan, [and she was] from Jerusalem.

And he did what was right before the Lord, but not like his father David; he did as his father Joash had done.

So that only the high places were not removed; the people still sacrificed and burned incense in the high places.

And it came to pass that as soon as the Kingdom was firmly established in his hands, he put to death his servants who had killed his father the King.

But he did not put to death the children of those who had killed him; according to what is written in the Book of the Law of Moses, in which the Lord commanded, saying, "Fathers shall not be put to death for their children, nor shall children be put to death for their fathers; but each shall die for his own sin."

He struck down ten thousand men of Edom in the Valley of Salt, and took Selah by war, and named it Joktheel, [which is the name it has had] to this day.

Then Amaziah sent messengers to Joash the son of Jehoahaz, son of Jehu, king of Israel, to say to him, "Come, [and] let us see one another."

And Joash King of Israel sent word to Amaziah King of Judah: The thornbush that is in Lebanon sent word to the cedarbush that is in Lebanon: Give your daughter as a wife to my son, but the wild beasts that are in Lebanon have passed through and trampled the thornbush.

Because you have severely struck Edom, your heart has become proud. Be content with your glory, and remain in your house; why should you stir up the evil by which you and Judah with you will fall?

But Amaziah would not agree; and Joash King of Israel went up, and they saw each other, he and Amaziah King of Judah, at Bethshemesh, which is in Judah.

And Judah was defeated by Israel, and they fled each to their tents.

And Joash King of Israel took Amaziah King of Judah, son of Joash, son of Ahaziah, at Bethshemes, then he came to Jerusalem and made a breach of four hundred cubits in the wall of Jerusalem, from the Ephraim Gate to the Corner Gate.

And having taken all the gold and all the silver, and all the vessels which were found in the house of the Lord, and in the treasuries of the royal house, and some people as hostages, he returned to Samaria.

The rest of the deeds of Joash, and his valor, and how he fought against Amaziah, are they not all written in the Book of the Chronicles of the Kings of Israel?

And Joash slept with his fathers, and was buried in Samaria with the Kings of Israel; and Jeroboam his son reigned in his place.

And Amaziah son of Joash king of Judah lived fifteen years after the death of Joash son of Jehoahaz king of Israel.

Are not the rest of the deeds of Amaziah written in the Book of the Chronicles of the Kings of Judah?

A conspiracy was made against him in Jerusalem, and he fled to Lachish; but they sent after him to Lachish, and they killed him there.

And they brought him on horses, and he was buried in Jerusalem with his fathers, in the City of David.

Then all the people of Judah took Hazarai, who was sixteen years old, and made him king in place of Amaziah his father.

He rebuilt Elath, having restored it to the power of Judah, after the King had fallen asleep with his fathers.

In the fifteenth year of Amaziah son of Joash king of Judah, Jeroboam son of Joash began to reign over Israel in Samaria, [and he reigned] for forty-one years.

And he did what was displeasing to the Lord, [and] did not turn away from any of the sins of Jeroboam son of Nebat, by which he had caused Israel to sin.

He restored the boundaries of Israel from the entrance of Hamath to the sea in the field, according to the word of the Lord, the God of Israel, which he had spoken by means of his servant Jonah son of Amittai, the prophet, who was from Gathpepher.

Because the Lord saw that the affliction of Israel was very bitter, and that there was nothing hoarded, nor anything neglected, and that there was no one to help Israel;

And because the Lord had not spoken of blotting out the name of Israel from under heaven, for this reason he delivered them by the hand of Jeroboam son of Joash.

The rest of the acts of Jeroboam, all that he did, and the valor with which he fought, and how he recaptured Damascus and Hamath of Judah in Israel, is it not written in the Book of the Chronicles of the Kings of Israel?

Then Jeroboam slept with his fathers, the Kings of Israel, and Zechariah his son reigned in his place.

In the twenty-seventh year of Jeroboam King of Israel, Hazaria son of Amaziah King of Judah was reigning.

He was sixteen years old when he began to reign, and he reigned fifty-two years in Jerusalem; his mother's name was Jecoliah, [and] she was from Jerusalem.

He did what was right before the Lord, just as his father Amaziah had done.

So much so that only the high places were not removed; the people still sacrificed and burned incense on the high places.

The Lord struck the king, and he was a leper until the day he died, and he remained in a house of seclusion; and Jotham the king's son was in charge of the house, judging the people of the land.

The rest of the acts of Hazarah, all that he did, are they not written in the Book of the Chronicles of the Kings of Judah?

And Hazariah slept with his fathers, and was buried with his fathers in the City of David, and Jotham his son reigned in his place.

In the thirty-eighth year of Hazariah king of Judah, Zechariah son of Jeroboam began to reign over Israel in Samaria, [and he reigned] six months.

And he did this mistletoe displeasing to the Lord, as his fathers had done; he did not turn away from the sins of Jeroboam son of Nebat, by which he had caused Israel to sin.

Now Sallum son of Jabez conspired against him, and struck him down in the presence of the people, and killed him, and reigned in his place.

As for the rest of the deeds of Zechariah, well, they are written in the Book of the Chronicles of the Kings of Israel.

This is the word of the Lord which he spoke to Jehu, saying, Your sons shall sit on the throne of Israel to the fourth generation; and it came to pass.

Sallum son of Jabez began to reign in the thirty-ninth year of Hoziah king of Judah, and he reigned for only a whole month in Samaria.

For Menahem son of Gadi, who was from Tirzah, went up and entered Samaria, and struck down Shallum son of Jabesh in Samaria, and killed him, and reigned in his place.

As for the rest of the deeds of Sallum, and as for the conspiracy which he made, these things are written in the Book of the Chronicles of the Kings of Israel.

And Menahem defeated Tiphshah and all who were in it, and in its region, from Tirzah, because she had not opened [the gates] to him, and killed them; and he cut open all the pregnant women who were found there.

In the thirty-ninth year of Hazariah king of Judah, Menahem son of Gadi began to reign over Israel, [he reigned] ten years in Samaria.

And he did what was displeasing to the Lord; he did not turn away from the sins of Jeroboam son of Nebat, by which he had caused Israel to sin all his days.

Then Pul, King of the Assyrians, came against the land; and Menahem gave Pul a thousand talents of silver, so that he would help him to secure his kingdom in his hands.

And Menahem took this money from Israel, from all those who were powerful in wealth, to give it to the King of the Assyrians, fifty shekels of silver from each; so the King of the Assyrians returned, and did not stay in the land.

The rest of the acts of Menahem, all that he did, are they not written in the Book of the Chronicles of the Kings of Israel?

And Menahem slept with his fathers, and Pekahiah his son reigned in his place.

In the fiftieth year of Hazariah king of Judah, Pekahiah son of Menahem began to reign over Israel in Samaria, [and he reigned] two years.

And he did what was displeasing to the Lord, and did not turn away from the sins of Jeroboam son of Nebat, by which he had caused Israel to sin.

And Pekah son of Remaliah, his captain, conspired against him, and struck him down in Samaria, at the palace of the royal house, with Argob and Arie, having with him fifty men of the children of the Gileadites; thus he killed him, and reigned in his place.

The rest of Pekahiah's actions, all that he did, are written in the Book of the Chronicles of the Kings of Israel.

In the fifty-second year of Hazariah king of Judah, Pekah son of Remaliah began to reign over Israel in Samaria, [and he reigned] twenty years.

And he did what was displeasing to the Lord; he did not turn away from the sins of Jeroboam son of Nebat, by which he had caused Israel to sin.

In the days of Pekah King of Israel, Tiglath-pileser King of the Assyrians came and took Hijon, Abel-bethmahaca, Janoah, Kedes, Hazor, Gilead, and Galilee, even all the land of Naphtali, and carried the people away to Assyria.

Now Hoshea, son of Elah, conspired against Pekah, son of Remaliah, and struck him down and killed him, and he reigned in his place in the twentieth year of Jotham, son of Hoziah.

The rest of the deeds of Pekah, all that he did, behold, it is written in the Book of the Chronicles of the Kings of Israel.

In the second year of Pekah son of Remaliah king of Israel, Jotham son of Hoziah king of Judah began to reign.

He was twenty-five years old when he began to reign; and he reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem; his mother's name was Jerusalem, [and] she was the daughter of Zadok.

He did what was right before the Lord; he did as Hoziah his father had done.

So that only the high places were not removed, the people still sacrificed and burned incense in the high places; it was they who built the highest gate of the house of the Lord.

The rest of the deeds of Jotham, all that he did, is it not written in the Book of the Chronicles of the Kings of Judah?

In those days the Lord began to send against Judah Rezin king of Syria and Pekah son of Remaliah.

And Jotham slept with his fathers, and was buried in the City of David his father, and Ahaz his son reigned in his place.

In the seventeenth year of Pekah son of Remaliah, Ahaz son of Jotham king of Judah began to reign.

Ahaz was twenty years old when he began to reign; and he reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem; and he did not do what was right before the Lord his God as [had done] David his father.

But he followed the ways of the Kings of Israel, and even made his son pass through the fire, according to the abominations of the nations that the Lord had driven out from before the children of Israel.

He also sacrificed and offered incense in the high places, and on the hillsides, and under every green tree.

Then Rezin King of Syria, and Pekah son of Remaliah King of Israel, went up against Jerusalem to make war against it, and they besieged Ahaz; but they could not overcome it by force of arms.

At that time Rezin King of Syria restored Elath to the power of the Syrians, for he dispossessed the Jews of Elath, and the Syrians entered Elath, and they have remained there to this day.

Now Ahaz had sent messengers to Tiglath-pileser King of the Assyrians, saying to him: I am your servant, and your son; come up and deliver me from the hand of the King of the Syrians, and from the hand of the King of Israel, who are rising up against me. And Ahaz had taken the silver and gold that was found in the house of the Lord, and in the treasuries of the royal house, and he had sent it as a gift to the King of Assyria.

And the King of Assyria acquiesced, and went up to Damascus, and took it, and transported the people to Kir, and put Rezin to death.

Then King Ahaz went to meet Tiglath-pileser King of Assyria at Damascus; and when King Ahaz saw the altar that was in Damascus, he sent to Uriah the Priest the image and pattern of that altar, according to all the ways he had.

And Uriah the Priest built an altar, according to all that King Ahaz had commanded from Damascus; Uriah the Priest made it exactly like this, until King Ahaz had returned from Damascus.

And when King Ahaz returned from Damascus, and saw the altar, he approached it and offered on that altar;

And he burned his burnt offering and his sacrifice, and poured out his sprinklings, and poured out the blood of his peace offerings on that altar.

And as for the bronze altar that was before the Lord, he moved it back from in front of the house, from between the altar and the house of the Lord, and placed it beside this [other] altar, toward the North.

And King Ahaz commanded Uriah the Priest, and said to him, Burn the morning burnt offering, and the evening grain offering, and the King's burnt offering with its cake, and the burnt offering of all the people of the land with their cakes and their sprinklings on the great altar, and sprinkle all the blood of the burnt offerings and all the blood of the sacrifices on this altar; but the bronze altar shall be mine, that I may inquire of it [of the Lord].

And Uriah the Priest did as King Ahaz had commanded him.

King Ahaz also cut away the supports from the foundations, and removed the tubs that were on them, and had the sea removed from above the bronze oxen that were below, and placed it on a stone pavement.

He also removed from the house of the Lord the Sabbath covering that had been built in the Temple, and the King's entrance that was outside, because of the King of Assyria.

The rest of the acts of Ahaz, which he did, are they not written in the Book of the Chronicles of the Kings of Judah?

Then Ahaz slept with his ancestors and was buried with them in the City of David; and Hezekiah his son reigned in his place.

In the twelfth year of Ahaz king of Judah, Hoshea son of Elah began to reign in Samaria over Israel, and he reigned nine years.

And he did what was displeasing to the Lord, but not like the kings of Israel who were before him.

Shalmaneser, King of the Assyrians, came up against him, and Hoshea became his servant, and he sent him gifts. But the King of the Assyrians discovered a conspiracy in Hosea; for Hosea had sent messengers to So, King of Egypt, and he no longer sent gifts every year to the King of Assyria; therefore the King of the Assyrians imprisoned him and put him in prison.

The King of the Assyrians went up throughout the land, and went up to Samaria, and besieged it for three years.

In the ninth year of Hoshea, the king of the Assyrians took Samaria, and deported the Israelites to Assyria, and made them live in Halah, and on Habor the river of Gozan, and in the cities of the Medes.

For it had come to pass that the children of Israel had sinned against the Lord their God who had brought them up out of the land of Egypt, from under the hand of Pharaoh King of Egypt, and had worshiped other gods.

And they had followed the ways of the nations that the Lord had driven out from before the children of Israel, and the ways of the Kings of Israel whom they had established.

And the children of Israel had secretly done things that were not right before the Lord their God; and had built themselves high places in all their cities, from the watchtower to the fortified cities.

They had erected statues, and [planted] groves, on all the high hills and under every green tree.

They had burned incense in all the high places, imitating the nations that the Lord had driven out from before them; and they had done wicked things to anger the Lord. And they had served the dung gods, about whom the Lord had said to them, "You shall not do this."

And the Lord had summoned Israel and Judah through all the Prophets, having all kinds of visions, saying, "Turn from all your wicked ways; return, and keep my commandments and my statutes, according to all the Law that I commanded your fathers, and that I sent to you by my servants the Prophets."

But they did not listen, and they stiffened their necks, just as their fathers stiffened their necks, who did not believe in the Lord their God.

And they had scorned his statutes, and his covenant, which he had made with their fathers, and his testimonies, by which he had summoned them, and had walked after vanity, and had become vain, and had followed the nations that were around them, concerning whom the Lord had commanded that they should not do as they did.

And having abandoned all the commandments of the Lord their God, they had made for themselves molten images, [that is to say] two calves, and had planted groves, and had bowed down before all the host of heaven, and had served Bahal.

They had also made their sons and daughters pass through the fire, and had practiced divination and sorcery, and had sold themselves to do what displeased the Lord in order to provoke him to anger.

Therefore the Lord was very angry with Israel, and he rejected them, so that only the Tribe of Judah remained.

And Judah did not keep the commandments of the Lord their God, but walked in the ordinances that Israel had established.

Therefore the Lord rejected all the descendants of Israel, for he afflicted them and gave them into the hands of those who plundered them, until he had rejected them from his presence.

Because Israel had cut itself off from the house of David, and had made Jeroboam son of Nebat king, for Jeroboam had led Israel astray, so that they no longer followed the Lord, and had caused them to commit a great sin.

That is why the children of Israel walked in all the sins that Jeroboam had committed, and they did not turn away from them.

Until the Lord cast them out from before him, as he had spoken through all his servants the prophets; and Israel was carried off from the earth to Assyria, to this day.

And the King of the Assyrians brought people from Babylon, and from Cuth, and from Hava, and from Hamath, and from Sepharvaim, and made them dwell in the cities of Samaria, in place of the children of Israel; and they possessed Samaria, and they dwelt in its cities.

Now it came to pass that at the beginning, when they lived there, they did not revere the Lord, and the Lord sent lions against them, and they killed them.

And they said to the King of Assyria: The nations that you have deported and made to live in the cities of Samaria do not know how to serve the God of the land; therefore he has sent lions against them, and behold, [these lions] are killing them, because they do not know how to serve the God of the land.

Then the King of Assyria commanded, saying: Send some of the priests whom you brought from there; let them go and remain there and teach the way to serve the God of the land.

So one of the priests who had been brought from Samaria came and lived in Bethel, and he taught them how they should worship the Lord.

But each nation made its own gods, and they put them in the houses on the high places that the Samaritans had made; each nation put them in its cities where they lived.

For the people of Babel made Succoth-benoth; and the people of Cuth made Nergal; and the people of Hamath made Asima.

And the Hivites made Nibchaz and Tartac; but those of Sepharvaim burned their children in the fire to Adrammelech and Hanammelech, the gods of Sepharvaim.

However, they revered the Lord, and they appointed as priests of the high places some of the last of them, who performed [services] for them in the houses of the high places.

[Thus] they revered the Lord, and at the same time they served their gods in the manner of the nations that had been transported out of there.

And to this day they do according to their former customs; they do not revere the Lord, and yet they do not do according to their statutes and their ordinances, nor according to the Law [and] the commandment that the Lord God gave to the children of Jacob, whom he named Israel.

with whom the Lord had made a covenant, and to whom he had commanded, saying: You shall not worship other gods, nor bow down to them; you shall not serve them, nor sacrifice to them.

But you shall revere the Lord who brought you up out of the land of Egypt with great power and with an outstretched arm; and you shall bow down before him and sacrifice to him.

You shall be careful to always do the statutes, the ordinances, the Law, and the commandments which he has written for you; and you shall not worship any other gods.

Therefore you shall not forget the covenant that I have made with you, and you shall not worship other gods;

But you shall revere the Lord your God, and he will deliver you from the hand of all your enemies.

But they did not listen, and they did according to their former customs.

Thus those nations revered the Lord, and at the same time served their images; and their children, and their children's children, do to this day as their fathers did.

Now in the third year of Hoshea son of Elah king of Israel, Hezekiah son of Ahaz king of Judah began to reign.

He was twenty-five years old when he began to reign, and he reigned twenty-nine years in Jerusalem; his mother's name was Abi, [and] she was the daughter of Zechariah.

He did this, mistletoe standing upright before the Lord, as David his father had done.

He removed the high places, smashed the statues, cut down the groves, and broke the bronze serpent that Moses had made, because until that day the children of Israel had been burning incense to it; and he named it Nehustan.

He put his hope in the Lord, the God of Israel, and after him there was no king like him among all the kings of Judah, just as there had been none among those who were before him.

He clung to the Lord and did not turn away from him; and he kept the commandments that the Lord had given to Moses.

And the Lord was with him wherever he went, and he prospered; but he rebelled against the King of Assyria, refusing to serve him.

He struck the Philistines as far as Gaza, and its borders, from the watchtowers to the fortified cities.

Now it came to pass in the fourth year of King Hezekiah, which was the seventh of the reign of Hoshea son of Elah king of Israel, that Shalmaneser king of the Assyrians came up against Samaria, and besieged it.

After three years they took it; [and thus] in the sixth year of the reign of Hezekiah, which was the ninth of Hoshea King of Israel, Samaria was taken.

And the King of the Assyrians transported the Israelites to Assyria, and brought them to Halah, and to the Habor, the river of Gozan, and to the cities of the Medes;

Because they had not obeyed the voice of the Lord their God, but had transgressed his covenant, and all that Moses the servant of the Lord had commanded; they had not obeyed it, and had not done it.

In the fourteenth year of King Hezekiah, Sennacherib King of the Assyrians came up against all the fortified cities of Judah, and captured them.

And Hezekiah King of Judah sent word to the King of Assyria at Lachish: I have done wrong, withdraw from me, I will pay whatever you impose on me; and the King of Assyria imposed on Hezekiah King of Judah three hundred talents of silver, and thirty talents of gold.

And Hezekiah gave all the money that was found in the house of the Lord, and in the treasuries of the royal house.

At that time Hezekiah broke down the doors of the Temple of the Lord, and the lintels which he himself had covered [with gold plates], and he gave them to the King of the Assyrians.

Then the King of Assyria sent troops from Lachish, Tarta, Rabsaris, and Rabshakeh with a large force to King Hezekiah in Jerusalem; and they went up and came to Jerusalem. Now when they had gone up and come, they stood at the conduit of the upper pool, which is on the main road to the Fuller's Field.

And they called out to the King. Then Eliakim son of Hilkiyah, the steward, and Shebna the secretary, and Joah son of Asaph, the clerk of the registers, came out to them.

And Rabshakeh said to them, "Now tell Hezekiah: This is what the great King, the King of Assyria, says: What is this confidence on which you rely?"

You speak, but they are only words; counsel and force are required in war. But in whom have you trusted, to rebel against me?

Behold, now you have trusted in Egypt, in this broken reed, on which if anyone leans, it will pierce his hand; such is Pharaoh King of Egypt to all who trust in him.

If you say to me, "We trust in the Lord our God," is this not the one whose high places and altars Hezekiah destroyed, and who said to Judah and Jerusalem, "You shall worship before this altar in Jerusalem"?

Now give hostages to the King of the Assyrians, my Master, and I will give you two thousand horses, if you can provide as many men to ride on them.

How then could you turn your face to the least of the governors among my master's servants? But you trust in Egypt because of the chariots and the horsemen.

But now have I gone up against this place to destroy it without the Lord? The Lord said to me, "Go up against this land and destroy it."

Then Eliakim son of Hilkiyah, and Shebna, and Joah said to Rabshakeh, "We beg you to speak to your servants in the Syriac language, for we understand it; and do not speak to us in the Judaic language, for the people who are on the wall are listening to it."

And Rab-sake answered them, "Did my Master send me to your Master, or to you, to speak this language? [Did he not send me] to the men who stand on the wall, [to tell them] that they will eat their own dung and drink their own urine with you?"

Rab-saké then stood up, and cried out in a loud voice in the Jewish language, and spoke, and said: Listen to the word of the great King, the King of the Assyrians. Thus said the King: Let Hezekiah not deceive you; for he will not be able to deliver you from my hand.

Let Hezekiah not make you trust in the Lord, saying, "The Lord will certainly deliver us, and this city will not be given into the hands of the King of Assyria."

Do not listen to Hezekiah; for thus says the King of the Assyrians: Make a pact with me, and come out to me; and you shall eat each of his vine, and each of his fig tree, and you shall drink each of the water of his cistern;

Before I come and take you to a land like your own, a land of wheat and good wine, a land of bread and vineyards, a land of olive trees yielding oil, and [a land] of honey, you will live and not die; but do not listen to Hezekiah, when he tries to persuade you, saying, "The Lord will deliver us."

Have the gods of the nations each delivered their country from the hand of the King of the Assyrians?

Where are the gods of Hamath and Arpad? Where are the gods of Sepharvahim, Hena, and Hiwah? [And] even has Samaria been delivered from my hand?

Who among all the gods of those lands have delivered their land from my hand, to say that the Lord will deliver Jerusalem from my hand?

And the people remained silent, and not a word was answered; for the King had commanded, saying: You shall not answer him.

After this, Eliakim son of Hilkiah, the steward, and Shebna the secretary, and Joah son of Asaph, who were clerks in the registers, returned with their clothes torn to Hezekiah, and they reported to him the words of Rabshakeh.

And it came to pass that as soon as King Hezekiah heard these things, he tore his clothes, and covered himself with sackcloth, and went into the house of the Lord. Then he sent Eliakim, the steward, and Shebna the secretary, and the elders of the priests, covered in sackcloth, to Isaiah the prophet son of Amoz.

And they said to him, "Thus says Hezekiah: This day is a day of distress, and of rebuke, and of blasphemy; for the children have come to the opening of the womb, but there is no strength to give birth."

Perhaps the Lord your God has heard all the words of Rabshakeh, whom the king of Assyria, his master, sent to blaspheme the living God and to insult him with the words that the Lord your God has heard; therefore, make a prayer for the remnant that is still found.

So the servants of King Hezekiah came to Isaiah.

And Isaiah said to them, you shall say to your Master: Thus says the Lord: Do not fear because of the words which you have heard, by which the servants of the King of Assyria have blasphemed me.

Behold, I am going to put such a spirit in him, that having heard a certain noise, he will return to his own country, and I will cause him to fall by the sword in his own country.

Now when Rab-sake had returned, he went to find the King of the Assyrians who was defeating Libna; for he had learned that he had left Lachish.

The [Assyrian] king received news concerning Tirhaca, king of Ethiopia: "Look," they told him, "he has gone out to fight you." Therefore, he returned home, but he sent messengers to Hezekiah, saying to them:

You shall speak thus to Hezekiah King of Judah, and say to him: May your God, in whom you trust, not deceive you by saying: Jerusalem will not be given into the hands of the King of Assyria.

So, you've heard what the Assyrian kings did to all the countries, destroying them completely; and you're going to escape?

Have the gods of the nations that my ancestors destroyed, [namely] of Gozan, of Haran, of Rezep, and of the children of Heden, who are in Telasar, delivered them? Where is the King of Hamath, the King of Arpad, and the King of the city of Sepharvaim, Hanath, and Hiwah?

And when Hezekiah had received the letters from the messengers and had read them, he went up to the house of the Lord and spread them out before the Lord.

Then Hezekiah prayed before the Lord, and said: O Lord God of Israel! You who sit between the cherubim, you alone are the God of all the kingdoms of the earth; you made the heavens and the earth.

O Lord! Incline your ear, and listen; open your eyes, and see; and listen to the words of Sennacherib, [and] of him whom he has sent to blaspheme the living God. It is true, O Eternal One! that the Kings of the Assyrians destroyed those nations and their countries;

And they threw their gods into the fire, for they were not gods, but works of human hands, wood and stone; therefore they destroyed them.

Now therefore, O Lord our God! I pray you, deliver us from the hand of Sennacherib, so that all the kingdoms of the earth may know that you, O Lord! are the only God.

Then Isaiah son of Amoz sent word to Hezekiah, saying, "This is what the Lord, the God of Israel, says: I have granted your request concerning Sennacherib king of the Assyrians."

This is the word that the Lord has spoken against him: The virgin daughter of Zion has despised you and mocked you; the daughter of Jerusalem has shaken her head at you.

Whom have you insulted and blasphemed? Against whom have you raised your voice and lifted your eyes to heaven? Against the Holy One of Israel.

You have insulted the Lord through your messengers, and you have said: With my many chariots I have gone up to the very top of the mountains beside Lebanon; I will cut down the tallest cedars and the finest fir trees there, and I will enter the dwellings that are at its ends, and into the forest of its Carmel.

I dug out springs after drinking foreign waters; and I dried up with the sole of my feet all the streams of the fortresses.

Have you not heard that I made this city long ago, and that I formed it in this way long ago? And would I now have brought it to the point of being reduced to desolation, [and] the fortified cities, to heaps of ruins?

It is true that their inhabitants, being powerless, were terrified and confused, and became like the grass of the fields, like the green grass, and the hay on the roofs, and like the harvest that has been scorched before it is grown in ear.

But I know your dwelling place, your going out and your coming in, [and] how you are furious with me.

But because you are so angry with me, and your insolence has reached my ears, I will put my hook in your nostrils, and my bit in your jaws, and I will make you return by the way by which you came.

And this will be a sign to you, [O Hezekiah!] that this year you will eat what grows of itself in the fields; and in the second year, what grows again without sowing; but in the third year you will sow and reap, and plant vineyards and eat their fruit.

And what has survived and remained in the house of Judah will put forth its root downwards, and it will bear its fruit upwards.

For out of Jerusalem a remnant will go forth, and out of Mount Zion a few survivors; the jealousy of the Lord of hosts will do this.

Therefore this is what the Lord says concerning the King of Assyria: He shall not enter this city, nor shoot an arrow at it, nor come against it with a shield, nor build a siege ramp against it.

He will return by the way by which he came, and will not enter this city, says the Lord.

For I will guarantee this city, in order to deliver it, for my own sake and for the sake of David my servant.

So it happened that night that an angel of the Lord went out and killed 185,000 men in the camp of the Assyrians; and when they got up early in the morning, behold, they were all dead bodies.

And Sennacherib, King of the Assyrians, departed from there, and went away, and returned, and stayed in Nineveh.

And it came to pass, as he was worshiping in the house of Nisroch his God, that Adrammelech and Zareezer his sons killed him with the sword, and then they escaped to the land of Ararat; and Esarhaddon his son reigned in his place.

At that time Hezekiah became ill and was at the point of death; and the prophet Isaiah son of Amoz came to him and said to him, "Thus says the Lord: Prepare your house, for you are going to die; you will not live."

Then [Hezekiah] turned his face to the wall and prayed to the Lord, saying:

I pray to you, O Lord, that you may now remember how I have walked before you in truth and in integrity of heart, and how I have done what was pleasing to you. And Hezekiah wept bitterly.

Now it came to pass, while Isaiah was still not out of the middle court, that the word of the Lord came to him, saying:

Go back, and tell Hezekiah, leader of my people: This is what the Lord, the God of your father David, says: I have heard your prayer, I have seen your tears; behold, I will heal you; in three days you shall go up to the house of the Lord;

I will add fifteen years to your days, and I will deliver you and this city from the hand of the King of Assyria; and I will preserve this city, for my own sake and for the sake of David my servant.

Then Isaiah said: Take a lump of dried figs; and they took it and put it on the boil; and he was healed.

Now Hezekiah had said to Isaiah, "What sign shall I have that the Lord will heal me, and that on the third day I shall go up to the house of the Lord?"

And Isaiah answered, "This is given to you by the Lord as a sign that the Lord will fulfill the word that he has spoken; shall the shadow go forward ten steps, or shall it go back ten steps?"

And Hezekiah said: It is a small thing for the shadow to advance ten steps; no, but for the shadow to turn back ten steps.

And Isaiah the Prophet cried out to the Lord; and the Lord made the shadow return by the steps by which it had gone down to the sundial of Ahaz, ten steps back.

At that time Breodach-Baladan son of Baladan King of Babylon, sent letters with a present to Hezekiah, because he had heard that Hezekiah had been ill.

And Hezekiah, having heard them, showed them all his most curious cabinets, the silver, and the gold, and the spices, and his scented oils, and all his armory, and everything that was found in his treasures; there was nothing in his house and in all his court that Hezekiah did not show them.

Then the Prophet Isaiah came to King Hezekiah and said to him, "What did these people say? And where did they come from?" Hezekiah replied, "They came from a very distant country, from Babylon."

And [Isaiah] said: What have they seen in your house? And Hezekiah answered: They have seen everything that is in my house; there is nothing in my treasures that I have not shown them.

Then Isaiah said to Hezekiah, "Listen to the word of the Lord."

"The days are coming when everything in your house, and everything your ancestors have stored up until this day, will be carried off to Babylon; not a thing will be left behind," says the Lord.

They will even take some of your sons who will have come out of you, [and] whom you will have fathered, to be eunuchs in the palace of the King of Babylon.

And Hezekiah answered Isaiah, "The word of the Lord that you have spoken is good." And he added, "Will there not be peace and security in my days?" The rest of the acts of Hezekiah, and all his exploits, and how he made the pool, and the aqueduct by which he brought water into the city, are they not written in the Book of the Chronicles of the Kings of Judah?

And Hezekiah slept with his fathers; and Manasseh his son reigned in his place. Manasseh was twelve years old when he began to reign, and he reigned fifty-five years in Jerusalem; his mother's name was Hephzibah.

And he did what was evil in the sight of the Lord, according to the abominations of the nations which the Lord had driven out before the children of Israel. For he rebuilt the high places which Hezekiah his father had destroyed, and restored altars to Bahal, and made a grove, as Ahab King of Israel had done, he bowed down before all the host of heaven, and served them.

He also built altars in the house of the Lord, of which the Lord had said, "I will put my name in Jerusalem."

He built, I say, altars to all the host of heaven in the two courts of the house of the Lord.

He also made his son pass through the fire, and he prophesied the times, and observed the omens; he set up an [oracle] of the spirit of Python, and of fortune-tellers; he did more and more what displeased the Lord to anger him.

He also placed the image of the grove that he had made, in the house of which the Lord had said to David, and to Solomon his son: I will put my Name forever in this house, and in Jerusalem, which I have chosen out of all the Tribes of Israel.

And I will no longer bring the Israelites out of this land that I gave to their fathers, provided only that they take care to do according to all that I have commanded them, and according to all the Law that Moses my servant commanded them. But they did not obey; for Manasseh led them astray, to do worse than the nations that God had exterminated from before the children of Israel.

And the Lord spoke through his servants the Prophets, saying:

Because Manasseh, King of Judah, committed these abominations, doing worse than all the Amorites who came before him, and also because he caused Judah to sin through his dung gods:

Because of this the Lord, the God of Israel, said: "Behold, I am going to bring such disaster on Jerusalem and on Judah that everyone who hears of it will groan at the sound of both ears."

For I will stretch out over Jerusalem the measuring line of Samaria, and the plumb line of the house of Ahab; and I will wipe Jerusalem as a bowl is wiped, and which, after being wiped, is turned upside down on its bottom.

And I will abandon the rest of my inheritance, and I will deliver them into the hands of their enemies; and they will be plundered and prey to all their enemies.

Because they have done what displeases me, and have angered me from the day their fathers came out of Egypt, even to this day.

Moreover, Manasseh shed a great abundance of innocent blood, until Jerusalem was filled from one end to the other, besides his sin by which he caused Judah to sin; so that he did what was displeasing to the Lord.

The rest of the acts of Manasseh, all that he did, and the sin that he committed, are they not written in the Book of the Chronicles of the Kings of Judah?

Then Manasseh slept with his ancestors and was buried in the garden of his house, the Garden of Huza; and Amon his son reigned in his place.

Amon was twenty-two years old when he began to reign, and he reigned two years in Jerusalem; his mother's name was Messulmet, daughter of Haruz of Jotba.

He did what was displeasing to the Lord, just as his father Manasseh had done.

For he followed in all the ways that his father had followed, and served the dung gods that his father had served, and bowed down before them.

He abandoned the Lord, the God of his fathers, and did not walk in the way of the Lord.

But the servants of Amon conspired against him, and killed the King in his house. But the people of the land struck down all those who had conspired against King Amon, and they installed Josiah his son as king in his place.

The rest of the deeds of Amon, which he did, are they not written in the Book of the Chronicles of the Kings of Judah?

So they buried him in his tomb in the Garden of Huza; and Josiah his son reigned in his place.

Josiah was eight years old when he began to reign, and he reigned thirty-one years in Jerusalem; his mother's name was Jedidah, daughter of Hadaiah of Bozkath.

He did what was right before the Lord, and walked in all the ways of David his father, and did not turn aside to the right or to the left.

Now it came to pass in the eighteenth year of King Josiah, that the king sent Shaphan son of Azaliah son of Meshullam, the secretary, to the house of the Lord, saying to him:

Go up to Hilkiyah the high priest, and tell him to collect the amount of money that is brought into the house of the Lord, and that those who guard the ships have collected from the people.

And let it be delivered into the hands of those who have charge of the work, and who are appointed over the house of the Lord, let it be delivered, I say, to those who have charge of the work which is done in the house of the Lord, to repair what needs repairing in the Temple;

[Knowledge] to the carpenters, the architects, and the masons, and in order to buy wood and hewn stones to repair the Temple.

But they should not be made to account for the money that is given into their hands, because they faithfully carry it out.

Then Hilkiyah the high priest said to Shaphan the secretary, "I have found the Book of the Law in the house of the Lord." And Hilkiyah gave the book to Shaphan, who read it.

And Saphan the Secretary came to the King, and reported the matter to the King, and said: Your servants have gathered up the money that was found in the Temple, and delivered it into the hands of those who have charge of the work, [and] who are appointed over the house of the Lord.

Saphan the secretary also made it heard by the King, saying: Hilkiyah the Priest has given me a Book; and Saphan read it before the King.

And it came to pass that as soon as the King heard the words of the Book of the Law, he tore his clothes.

And he commanded Hilkiyah the priest, and Ahikam son of Shaphan, and Hachbor son of Micaiah, and Shaphan the secretary, and Hasaiah the king's servant, saying:

Go, inquire of the Lord for me, and for the people, and for all Judah, concerning the words of this Book that has been found; for the anger of the Lord that is kindled against us is great, because our fathers did not obey the words of this Book, to do all that is commanded us in it.

Hilkiyah the priest, Ahikam, Hachbor, Shaphan, and Hasaiah went to Huldah the prophetess, wife of Shallum son of Tikvah, son of Harhas, keeper of the garments, who was staying at the college in Jerusalem, and they spoke with her.

And she answered them: Thus says the Lord, the God of Israel: Tell the man who sent you to me;

Thus says the Lord: Behold, I am going to bring disaster on this place and on its inhabitants, according to all the words of the Book which the King of Judah has read;

Because they have forsaken me, and have burned incense to other gods, provoking me to anger with all the deeds of their hands, my wrath has been kindled against this place, and it will not be quenched.

But as for the King of Judah who sent you to inquire of the Lord, you shall say to him: Thus says the Lord, the God of Israel, concerning the words that you have heard;

Because your heart was soft, and you humbled yourself before the Lord, when you heard what I pronounced against this place, and against its inhabitants, that they should be desolate and cursed, because you tore your clothes, and wept before me, I have heard you, says the Lord.

Therefore, behold, I am going to take you away with your fathers, and you shall be taken away in your graves in peace, and your eyes shall not see all this evil that I am going to bring upon this place. And they reported all these things to the King. Then the King sent word, and all the elders of Judah and Jerusalem were gathered to him.

And the King went up to the house of the Lord, and with him all the men of Judah, and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and the priests and the prophets, and all the people, from the least to the greatest, and they read, as they heard it, all the words of the Book of the Covenant, which had been found in the house of the Lord. And the King stood by the pillar, and made this covenant before the Lord, that they would follow the Lord, and that they would keep with all their heart, and with all their soul, his commandments, his testimonies, and his statutes, to persevere in the words of this covenant, written in this Book; and all the people kept to this covenant.

Then the King commanded Hilkiah the high priest, and the priests of the second rank, and those who guarded the ships, to take out of the Temple of the Lord all the articles that had been made for Bahal, and for the groves, and for all the host of heaven; and he burned them outside Jerusalem in the fields of Kidron, and their dust was carried to Bethel.

And he abolished the idol priests whom the kings of Judah had appointed when incense was burned in the high places, in the cities of Judah, and around Jerusalem; he also abolished those who burned incense to Bahal, to the sun, to the moon, and to the stars, to all the host of heaven.

He also carried the hedge of the house of the Lord out of Jerusalem to the Kidron Valley and burned it in the Kidron Valley; he ground it to powder and threw it on the tomb of the people.

Then he demolished the houses of the fornicating prostitutes, which were in the house of the Lord; [and] in which the women worked to make pavilions for the grove.

He also brought all the priests from the cities of Judah, and desecrated the high places where the priests had burned incense, from Gebah to Beer-sebah; and he demolished the high places of the gates which were at the entrance of the gate of Joshua, the captain of the city, which is to the left of the city gate.

Moreover, those who had been priests of the high places did not go up to the altar of the Lord in Jerusalem, but they ate unleavened bread among their brothers.

He also defiled Topheth, which was in the valley of the son of Hinnom, so that it would no longer be of use to anyone to sacrifice their son or daughter in the fire at Molech.

He also removed from the entrance of the house of the Lord the horses that the Kings of Judah had dedicated to the sun, to the house of Nethamelech the Eunuch, located in Parvarim, and he burned the chariots of the sun with fire.

The King also demolished the altars that were on the roof of the upper room of Ahaz, which the Kings of Judah had made, and the altars that Manasseh had made in the two courts of the house of the Lord; he broke them up, removed them from there, and scattered their dust in the Kidron Valley.

The King also desecrated the high places which were opposite Jerusalem on the right hand on the Mount of Olives, [which] Solomon King of Israel had built at Hastareth, the abomination of the Sidonians; and at Chemos, the abomination of the Moabites; and at Milcom, the abomination of the children of Hammon.

He also smashed the statues, and cut down the groves, and filled the places where they were with the bones of men.

He also demolished the altar that was at Bethel, [and] the high place that Jeroboam son of Nebat had made, who had caused Israel to sin, that altar, I say, and the high place; he burned the high place, and reduced it to powder, and burned the grove. Now Josiah turned around and saw the tombs that were there in the mountain, and he sent and took the bones from the tombs and burned them on the altar, and thus he desecrated it, according to the word of the Lord, which the man of God had spoken aloud, when he spoke these things aloud.

And the King had said: What is this tomb that I see? And the men of the city had answered him: It is the tomb of the man of God who came from Judah, and who spoke aloud the things that you did on the altar of Bethel.

And he had said, "Leave him alone; let no one disturb his bones." So they had preserved his bones, along with the bones of the Prophet who had come from Samaria. Josiah also removed all the houses from the high places that were in the cities of Samaria, which the Kings of Israel had made to provoke [the Lord] to anger; and he did to them according to all that he had done at Bethel.

And he sacrificed on the altars all the priests of the high places who were there, and burned human bones on them; then he returned to Jerusalem.

Then the King commanded all the people, saying, "Celebrate the Passover to the Lord your God, in the manner in which it is written in the Book of this covenant."

And certainly Passover was never celebrated in the time of the Judges who judged in Israel, nor in all the time of the Kings of Israel, and the Kings of Judah, like that Passover which was celebrated in honor of the Lord in Jerusalem, in the eighteenth year of King Josiah.

Josiah also exterminated those who had spirits of Python, the fortune-tellers, the Teraphim, the dung gods, and all the abominations that had been seen in the land of Judah and in Jerusalem; in order to fulfill the words of the Law, written in the book that Hilkiyah the Priest had found in the house of the Lord.

Before him there was no king like him, who turned to the Lord with all his heart, and with all his soul, and with all his strength, according to all the Law of Moses; and after him there has not arisen one like him.

However, the Lord did not turn from the fierceness of his great anger with which he had been kindled against Judah, because of all that Manasseh had done to provoke him to anger.

For the Lord had said: I will also reject Judah from my sight, as I have rejected Israel; and I will reject this city Jerusalem, which I have chosen, and the house of which I have said: My name shall be there.

The rest of the acts of Josiah, all that he did, are they not written in the Book of the Chronicles of the Kings of Judah?

In his time, Pharaoh Neco, King of Egypt, went up against the King of the Assyrians towards the river Euphrates, and Josiah went to meet him, but as soon as Pharaoh saw him, he killed him at Megiddo.

And his servants loaded him dead onto a Megiddo cart, and brought him to Jerusalem, and buried him in his tomb; and the people of the land took Jehoahaz, son of Josiah, and anointed him, and made him king in place of his father.

Jehoahaz was twenty-three years old when he began to reign, and he reigned three months in Jerusalem; his mother's name was Hamutal, daughter of Jeremiah of Libnah. He did what was displeasing to the Lord, as his fathers had done.

And Pharaoh Neco imprisoned him at Riblah in the land of Hamath, so that he would no longer reign in Jerusalem; and he imposed on the land a fine of one hundred talents of silver, and one talent of gold.

Then Pharaoh Neco appointed Eliakim son of Josiah as king in place of Josiah his father, and changed his name to Jehoiakim; and he took Jehoahaz, who came to Egypt, where he died.

Now Jehoiakim gave this silver and gold to Pharaoh, having imposed taxes on the land to provide this money according to Pharaoh's command; [and] he raised the silver and gold from each of the people of the land according to their tax, to give to Pharaoh-Neco.

Jehoiakim was twenty-five years old when he began to reign, and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem; his mother's name was Zebudda, daughter of Pedaiah of Ruma.

He did what was displeasing to the Lord, as his fathers had done.

In his time Nebuchadnezzar, King of Babylon, came up [against Jehoiakim], and Jehoiakim was subject to him for three years; then having changed his mind, he rebelled against him.

And the Lord sent against Jehoiakim troops of Chaldeans, and troops of Syrians, and troops of Moab, and troops of the children of Hammon; he sent them, I say, against Judah, to destroy it, according to the word of the Lord which he had spoken by means of the Prophets his servants.

And this happened according to the command of the Lord against Judah, to cast him out of his presence, because of the sins of Manasseh, according to all that he had done;

And also because of the innocent blood he had shed, having filled Jerusalem with innocent blood; [that is why] the Lord would not forgive him.

The rest of the acts of Jehoiakim, all that he did, are they not written in the Book of the Chronicles of the Kings of Judah?

So Jehoiakim slept with his fathers; and Jehoiachin his son reigned in his place.

But the King of Egypt did not leave his country again, because the King of Babylon had taken everything that belonged to the King of Egypt, from the Wadi of Egypt to the river Euphrates.

Jehoiachin was eighteen years old when he began to reign, and he reigned three months in Jerusalem; his mother's name was Nehusta, daughter of Elnathan of Jerusalem.

He did what was displeasing to the Lord, just as his father had done.

At that time the people of Nebuchadnezzar, King of Babylon, came up against Jerusalem, and the city was besieged.

And Nebuchadnezzar King of Babylon came against the city, when his people were besieging it.

Then Jehoiachin King of Judah went out to the King of Babylon, along with his mother, his people, his captains, and his eunuchs; so that the King of Babylon took him in the eighth year of his reign.

And he brought out of there, as the Lord had spoken, all the treasures of the house of the Lord, and the treasures of the royal house, and broke into pieces all the gold utensils that Solomon King of Israel had made for the Temple of the Lord.

And he transported all Jerusalem, namely, all the captains, and all the valiant men of war, numbering ten thousand captives, with the carpenters and the locksmiths, so that no one remained but the poor people of the country.

So he carried Jehoiachin to Babylon, along with the King's mother, the King's wives, and his eunuchs, and he took captive to Babylon all the most powerful men of the land of Jerusalem;

With all the valiant men, numbering seven thousand, and the carpenters and locksmiths, numbering a thousand, all powerful and fit for war, whom the King of Babylon took captive to Babylon.

And the King of Babylon appointed Mattaniah his uncle as king in place of Jehoiachin, and changed his name to Zedekiah.

Zedekiah was twenty-one years old when he began to reign, and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem; his mother's name was Hamutal, daughter of Jeremiah of Libnah.

He did what was displeasing to the Lord, just as Jehoiakim had done.

For it came to pass because of the anger of the Lord against Jerusalem and against Judah, so that he might cast them out of his presence, that Zedekiah rebelled against the King of Babylon.

So it came to pass in the ninth year of the reign of Zedekiah, on the tenth day of the tenth month, that Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came with all his army against Jerusalem, and encamped against it, and they built forts all around it.

And the city was besieged until the eleventh year of King Zedekiah.

And on the ninth day of the [fourth] month the famine increased in the city, so that there was no bread for the people of the land.

Then the breach was made in the city, and all the men of war [fled] by night by the way of the gate between the two walls which [were] near the King's garden (now the Chaldeans [were all] adjoining the city to the surrounding area) and the King went away by the way of the country.

But the Chaldean army pursued the King, and when they caught up with him in the fields of Jericho, his entire army scattered from his side.

So they took the King and brought him up to the King of Babylon at Riblah, where he was put on trial.

And they slaughtered the sons of Zedekiah in his presence; after which they gouged out Zedekiah's eyes, and having bound him with double bronze chains, they led him to Babylon.

And on the seventh [day] of the fifth month, in the nineteenth year of King Nebuchadnezzar, King of Babylon, Nebuzar-adan, provost of the palace, servant of the King of Babylon, entered Jerusalem;

And he burned down the house of the Lord, and the royal house, and all the houses of Jerusalem, and set fire to all the houses of the nobles.

And the whole army of the Chaldeans, which [was] with the provost of the inn, demolished the walls of Jerusalem all around.

And Nebuzaradan, provost of the palace, transported [to Babylon] the remnant of the people, [namely] those who had remained in the city, and those who had gone to surrender to the King of Babylon, and the rest of the multitude.

Nevertheless, the provost left some of the poorest people in the country to be winegrowers and farmers.

And the Chaldeans broke into pieces the bronze pillars that were in the house of the Lord, and the foundations, and the bronze sea that was in the house of the Lord, and they carried the bronze to Babylon.

They also took away the cauldrons, scrapers, sickles, cups, and all the bronze utensils used in their service.

The provost of the hotel also took away the censers and basins; and what was gold, and what was silver.

As for the two pillars, the sea, and the foundations that Solomon had made for the house of the Lord, the bronze of all these vessels was not weighed.

Each column was eighteen cubits high, and it had a bronze capital on top, the height of which was three cubits, besides the net and the pomegranates which were around the capital, all of bronze; and the second column was in the same way, with the net.

The provost of the hotel also took Seraiah the first priest, and Zephaniah the second priest, and the three guards of the ships.

He also brought from the city a eunuch who was in charge of the fighting men, and five men from among those who had seen the King's face, who were found in the city.

[He also brought] the secretary of the captain of the army who was conscripting the people of the land, and sixty men from among the people of the land, who were found in the city.

Nebuzar-adan, therefore, the provost of the inn, took them and brought them to the King of Babylon at Riblah.

And the King of Babylon struck them down and killed them at Riblah in the land of Hamath; thus Judah was carried out of its land.

But as for the people who remained in the land of Judah, whom Nebuchadnezzar King of Babylon had left there, he appointed Gedaliah son of Ahikam, son of Shaphan, as governor over them.

When all the captains of the war men, and their men, had learned that the King of Babylon had appointed Gedaliah as Governor, they went to Gedaliah at Mizpah, namely Ishmael son of Nethaniah, Johanan son of Kareath, Seraiah son of Tanhumeth Netophathite, Jaazaniah son of a Mahachathite, they and their men. And Gedaliah swore to them and to their people, and said to them: Do not hesitate to be servants of the Chaldeans; remain in the land, and serve the King of Babylon, and you will be well off.

But in the seventh month, Ishmael son of Nethaniah, son of Elishamah, who was of royal blood, and ten men with him came and attacked Gedaliah, killing him. They also attacked the Jews and Chaldeans who were with him at Mizpah.

And all the people, from the least to the greatest, with the captains of the war men, arose and went to Egypt, because they were afraid of the Chaldeans.

Now it came to pass in the thirty-seventh year of the captivity of Jehoiachin King of Judah, on the twenty-seventh day of the twelfth month, that Evilmerodach King of Babylon, in the year that he began to reign, brought Jehoiachin King of Judah out of prison and set him free.

And he spoke to him gently, and placed his throne above the throne of the kings who were with him in Babylon.

And after he had changed his prison clothes, he ate bread normally for the rest of his life in his presence.

And as for his daily routine, a continuous routine was established for him by the King every day, for the rest of his life.

And the son of Jonathan [was] Merib-bahal; and Merib-bahal fathered Mica.

And the children of Micah were Python, Melech, Tareah, [and Ahaz].

And Ahaz begat Jahra; and Jahra begat Halemeth, Hazmaveth, and Zimri; and Zimri begat Motzah,

And Motza fathered Binhah, who had a son Rephajah, who had a son Elhasah, who had a son Azel.

And Azel had six sons, whose names were Hazrikam, Bocru, Ishmael, Shehariah, Hobadia, and Hanan. These were the sons of Azel.

But the Philistines fought against Israel, and the Israelites fled before the Philistines, and fell mortally wounded on the mountain of Gilboa.

And the Philistines pursued and overtook Saul and his sons, and killed Jonathan, Abinadab and Malki-suah, the sons of Saul.

And the battle intensified against Saul, so that those who shot with the bow found him, and he was afraid of these archers.

Then Saul said to his armor-bearer, "Draw your sword and run me through with it, lest these uncircumcised men come and do to me as they please." But his armor-bearer refused, for he was very afraid. So Saul took his sword and fell upon it.

Then the one who carried Saul's armor, seeing that Saul was dead, also fell on his sword and died.

So Saul died, and his three sons; and all his people died with him.

And all those of Israel who were in the valley, when they saw that they had fled from it, and that Saul and his sons were dead, abandoned their cities and fled, so that the Philistines entered and dwelt there.

Now it came to pass that the very next day the Philistines came to plunder the dead, and they found Saul and his sons lying on the mountain of Gilboa.

And having stripped him, they took off his head and his armor, and sent them to the land of the Philistines all around, to tell their gods and their people.

They placed his armor in the temple of their god, and they fastened his head in the house of Dagon.

Now all those from Jabesh-gilead having heard of all that the Philistines had done to Saul,

All the valiant men [among them] arose, and took away the body of Saul, and the bodies of his sons, and brought them to Jabesh, and they buried their bones under an oak tree at Jabesh, and fasted for seven days.

Saul therefore died for the crime that he had committed against the Lord, in that he had not kept the word of the Lord, and had even consulted the spirit of Python to [know what should happen to him].

He had not addressed the Lord; therefore [the Lord] put him to death, and transferred the Kingdom to David son of Jesse.

And all the people of Israel gathered around David at Hebron, and said to him, "Behold, we are your bones and your flesh."

And even before, when Saul was king, you were the one who led Israel back and forth.

And the Lord your God said to you: You shall shepherd my people Israel, and you shall be the leader of my people Israel.

All the elders of Israel came to the king at Hebron; and David made a covenant with them at Hebron before the Lord; and they anointed David king over Israel, according to the word that the Lord had spoken through Samuel.

Now David and all the Israelites went to Jerusalem, which is Jebus; for the Jebusites who lived in the land were still there.

And those who lived in Jebus said to David, "You shall not enter here." But David took the stronghold of Zion, which is the City of David.

For David had said: Whoever first strikes down the Jebusites shall be commander and captain. And Joab son of Zeruiah went up first and was made commander. And David lived in the fortress; therefore it was called the City of David. He also built the city all around, from Millo to the surrounding area; but Joab repaired the rest of the city. And David went on advancing and increasing in stature; for the Lord of hosts was with him. These were the chief men of David's army, who went valiantly with him and with all Israel for his kingdom, to make him reign according to the word of the Lord concerning Israel. These men were among the mighty men that David had; Jasobham son of Hacmoni, chief among the three chiefs, who hurled his halberd against three hundred men, wounding them mortally in one blow. After him was Eleazar son of Dodo Ahohite, who was one of the three mighty men. He was the one who was with David at Pasdammim when the Philistines gathered for battle; now there was a part of a field sown with barley, and the people had fled from it before the Philistines. And they stood in the middle of that part of the field, and defended it, and defeated the Philistines. Thus the Lord granted a great victory. Three more of the thirty captains went down to the rock near David, to the cave of Hadullam, when the Philistine army was encamped in the valley of Rephaim. And David was then in the stronghold, and the Philistine garrison was at that same time in Bethlehem. And David made a wish, and said, "Who will give me water to drink from the well that is at the gate of Bethlehem?" So these three men went right through the Philistine camp and drew water from the well that was at the gate of Bethlehem; and having brought it, they presented it to David, who would not drink it, but poured it out to the honor of the Lord. For he said, "God forbid that I should do such a thing! Should I drink the blood of these men [who made such a journey] at the risk of their lives? For they brought me this water at the risk of their lives." So he refused to drink it. These three valiant men did just that. And Abisai, Joab's brother, was the leader of the three, who hurled his halberd against three hundred men, mortally wounding them, and he was famous among the three.

Among the three, he was more honored than the other two, and he was their leader; however, he did not equal these three others. Benejah, son of Jehoiada, son of a mighty man of Kabzeel, had performed great exploits. He killed two of the mightiest men of Moab; and he went down and struck down a lion in the middle of a pit on a snowy day. He also killed an Egyptian man who was five cubits tall. This Egyptian had in his hand a halberd [large] like a weaver's snuff; but he went down on him with a club, and snatched the halberd from the Egyptian's hand, and killed him with his own halberd. Benejah son of Jehoiada did these things, and was renowned among these three valiant men. Behold, he was honored more than the thirty; yet he did not equal those three; and David appointed him over his commanding men. And the most valiant of the fighting men were Hazael, Joab's brother; and Elhanan son of Dodo, from Bethlehem, Sammoth Harorite, Helets Pelonien, Hira son of Hikkes Tekohite, Abihezer Hanathothite, Sibbecai Husathite, Hilai Ahohite, Maharai Netophathite, Heled son of Bahana Netophathite, Ithai son of Ribai, of Gibeah, of the children of Benjamin, Benejah Pirathonite, Hurai of the Gahas valleys, Abiël Harbathite,

Hazmaveth Baharumite, Eliachba Sahalbonite,
Children of Hashen Gizonite, Jonathan son of Sage Hararite,
Ahiam son of Sacar Hararite, Eliphai son of Ur,
Hepher Mekerathite, Ahija Pelonian,
Hezro of Carmel, Naharai son of Ezbai,
Joel, brother of Nathan, Mibhar, son of Hagri,
Tselek Hammonite, Naharai Berothite, who bore the arms of Joab son of Zeruiah,
Hira Jithrite, Gareb Jithrite,
Uriah the Hittite, Zabad son of Ahlai,
Hadina son of Siza the Reubenite, leader of the Reubenites, and thirty with him.
Hanan son of Mahacah, and Josaphat Mithnite,
Huzija Hasterathite, Samah and Jehiel son of Hotham Haroherite,
Jedihael son of Shimri, and Joah his brother, Titsite,
Eliel Hammahavim, Jeribai, and Josavia children of Elnaham, and Jithmah Moabite, Eliel, and Hobed, and Jasiel of Metzobaiah.

These were the men who went to David at Ziklag, when he was still imprisoned there because of Saul son of Kish, and who were among the most valiant, to provide assistance in the war.

Equipped with bows, using both their right and left hands to throw stones and shoot arrows. Among Saul's relatives, who were of Benjamin,
Ahihezer the chief, and Joash, sons of Shemaha, who was of Gibeah, and Jeziel, and Pelet sons of Hazmaveth, and Beracah, and Jehu the Hanathothite,
And Ismahja Gibaonite, mighty among the thirty, and even more than thirty, and Jeremiah, Jahaziel, Johanan, and Jozabad Gederothite,
Elhuzai, Jerimoth, Behaliah, Shemariah, and Sephatia Haruphien,
Elkanah, Jisija, Hazaréël, Johézer and Jasobham Corites,
And Johella and Zebadiah, children of Jeroham of Gedor.

Some of the Gadites also withdrew to David in the desert stronghold, mighty men of valor, skilled in war, [and] wielding shield and spear. Their faces were [like] the faces of lions, and they were like deer on the mountains, so swift were their running.

Hezer the first, Hobadia the second, Eliab the third,
Mismanna the fourth, Jeremiah the fifth
Hattai the sixth; Eliel the seventh,
Johanan the eighth, Elzabad the ninth,
Jeremiah the tenth, Macbannai the eleventh.

Those among the children of Gad were Captains of the army; the least had charge of one hundred men, and the most distinguished, of one thousand.

These were the ones who crossed the Jordan in the first month, at the time when it usually overflows its banks; and they drove out those who lived in the valleys, to the east and to the west.

Children of Benjamin and Judah also came to David at the fortress.

And David went out to meet them and, speaking to them, said: If you have come to me in peace to help me, my heart will be united with you; but if it is to betray me, [and deliver me] to my enemies, although I am guilty of no violence, may the God of our fathers see it, and may he punish it.

And the spirit came upon Hamasai, one of the chief captains, [who said]: Peace be with you, O David! Peace be with you, son of Jesse! Peace be with those who help you, since your God helps you! And David received them, and appointed them among the captains of his troops.

There were also some of those from Manasseh who went to surrender to David when he came with the Philistines to fight against Saul; but they did not give them any help, because the rulers of the Philistines, after deliberating among themselves, sent him away, saying: He will turn to his lord Saul, at the peril of our heads.

So when he returned to Ziklag, Hadna, Jozabad, Jedihael, Michael, Jozabad, Elihu, and Zillethai, leaders of the thousands who were in Manasseh, turned to him. And they helped David against the band of the Hamaleites, for they were all strong and valiant, and they were made Captains in the army. And even at all hours people came to David to help him, so that he had a great army, like an army of God.

These are the numbers of the men equipped for war who came to David at Hebron to bring down upon him the kingdom of Saul, according to the command of the Lord. Children of Judah, who carried shield and javelin, six thousand eight hundred, equipped for war.

Seven thousand one hundred children of Simeon, strong and valiant for war.

Four thousand six hundred children of Levi.

And Jehoiada, leader of Aaron's men, and with him three thousand seven hundred.

And Tsadoc, a strong and valiant young man, and twenty-two of the leading men of his father's house.

Three thousand children of Benjamin, relatives of Saul; for until then the greater part of them had tried to support the house of Saul.

Twenty thousand eight hundred children of Ephraim, mighty and valiant, [and] men of renown in the house of their fathers.

From the half-tribe of Manasseh eighteen thousand, who were appointed by name to go and establish David as King.

The children of Issachar, who were very intelligent in understanding the times, knew what Israel should do. Two hundred of their leaders and all their brothers acted according to their advice.

From Zebulun, fifty thousand warriors, drawn up in battle formation with all kinds of weapons, and maintaining their rank with steadfast hearts.

From Naphtali, a thousand captains, and with them thirty-seven thousand, bearing shields and halberds.

Twenty-eight thousand six hundred Danites, drawn up in battle formation.

From Aser, forty thousand combatants, and maintaining their rank in battle.

From those beyond the Jordan, [namely] the Reubenites, the Gadites, and the half-tribe of Manasseh, sixty thousand, with all the instruments of war for fighting.

All these men of war, drawn up in battle formation, came willingly to Hebron to establish David as king over all Israel; and all the rest of Israel were also of the same mind to establish David as king.

And they were there with David, eating and drinking for three days; for their brothers had prepared food for them.

And even those who were closest to them as far as Issachar, Zebulun, and Naphtali, brought bread on donkeys and camels, on mules, and on oxen, flour, dried figs, raisins, wine, and oil, and they brought oxen and sheep in abundance; for there was joy in Israel.

Now David sought advice from the commanders of thousands and of hundreds, and from all the leaders [of the people].

And he said to all the assembly of Israel, "If you approve of it, and if it comes from the Lord our God, let us send word everywhere to our other brothers who are in all the regions of Israel, and with them the priests and the Levites, in their cities and in their suburbs, so that they may assemble around us;

And that we bring back to us the Ark of our God; for we did not seek it in the days of Saul.

And the whole assembly replied that it should be done so; for the thing had been found good by all the people.

David therefore assembled all Israel, from Sihor [the brook] of Egypt, to the entrance [of the land] of Hamath, to bring back the Ark of God from Kiriath-jeharim.

And David went up with all Israel [to] Bahala to Kiriath-jeharim, which belongs to Judah, to bring from there the Ark of God the Lord, who dwells between the cherubim, whose name is invoked.

And they placed the Ark of God on a new cart, [and brought it] from the house of Abinadab; and Huza and Ahio drove the cart.

And David and all Israel played songs in the presence of God with all their might, on violins, bagpipes, drums, cymbals, and trumpets.

And when they arrived at Kidon's threshing floor, Huza stretched out his hand to hold the Ark, because the oxen had slipped.

And the anger of the Lord was kindled against Huza, who struck him down, because he had stretched out his hand against the Ark; and he died in the presence of God.

And David was grieved because the Lord had broken through Huza; and to this day the name of that place is called Perez-Huza.

And David was afraid of God that day, and he said, "How can I bring the Ark of God into my house?"

That is why David did not take it home with him, in the City of David; but he diverted it to the house of Hobed-edom Gittite.

And the Ark of God remained three months with the family of Hobed-edom, in his house; and the Lord blessed the house of Hobed-edom, and all that belonged to him.

And Hiram King of Tyre sent messengers to David, and cedar wood, and masons, and carpenters, to build him a house.

Then David knew that the Lord had established him as King over Israel, because his kingdom had been very exalted, for the sake of his people Israel.

And David took more wives in Jerusalem, and he fathered more sons and daughters.

And these are the names of the children he had in Jerusalem: Sammuah, Zobab, Nathan, Solomon

Jibhar, Elisuah, Elpélet,

Nogah, Nepheg, Japhiah,

Elisamah, Béél-jadah, and Eliphelet.

Now when the Philistines learned that David had been anointed king over all Israel, they all went up to look for David; and David, having heard of it, went out to meet them.

And the Philistines came, and spread out in the valley of Rephaim.

And David inquired of God, saying, "Shall I go up against the Philistines, and will you deliver them into my hand?" And the Lord answered him, "Go up, and I will deliver them into your hand."

So they went up to Bahal-perazim, and David defeated them there; and he said: God has caused my enemies to flow out by my hand, like an overflowing of waters; therefore that place was called Bahal-perazim.

And they left their gods there; and David commanded that they be burned with fire.

And the Philistines spread out once more into that same valley.

And David inquired of God again; and God answered him: You shall not go up to them, but you shall circle around them, and you shall go against them opposite the mulberry trees.

And as soon as you hear a sound from the tops of the mulberry trees [like people] marching, then you shall go out into battle; for God will have gone out before you to strike the camp of the Philistines.

So David did as God had commanded him; and they attacked the Philistine camp from Gibeon to Gezer.

Thus the fame of David spread throughout all those countries; and the Lord filled all those nations with fear, [at the name of David alone].

David built houses for him in the City of David, and prepared a place for the Ark of God; and set up a tabernacle for him.

And David said: The Ark of God must be carried only by the Levites; for the Lord has chosen them to carry the Ark of God, and to do the service forever.

So David gathered all the people of Israel to Jerusalem, to bring the Ark of the Lord to the place he had prepared for it.

David also gathered together the descendants of Aaron, and the Levites.
Six twenty sons of Kohath, Uriel the chief, and his brothers.
Two hundred and twenty children of Merari, Hasaiah the Chief, and his brothers.
Children of Guersom, Joel the Chief, and his brothers, one hundred and thirty.
Two hundred children of Elitzaphan, including Shemahjah the chief, and his brothers.

Eighty children from Hebron: Eliel the leader and his brothers.
Children of Huziël, Hamminadab the Chief and his brothers, one hundred and twelve.
David then called Zadok and Abiathar the priests, and these Levites, [namely], Uriel, Hasaiah, Joel, Shemaiah, Eliel, and Hamminadab;
And he said to them, "You who are the leaders of the fathers of the Levites, consecrate yourselves, you and your brothers; and carry the Ark of the Lord, the God of Israel, to the place that I have prepared for it."
Because you did not go the first time, the Lord our God has made a breach between us; for we did not seek him as commanded.
So the priests and the Levites consecrated themselves to bring the Ark of the Lord, the God of Israel.
And the children of the Levites carried the Ark of God on their shoulders, with the poles that they had on them, as Moses had commanded according to the word of the Lord.
And David told the leaders of the Levites to appoint some of their brothers to sing with musical instruments, [namely] bagpipes, fiddles, and cymbals, [and] to raise their voices with joy.
So the Levites appointed Heman son of Joel, and from among his brothers, Asaph son of Berekiah; and from the descendants of Merari, who were their brothers, Ethan son of Kusayah;
And with them their brothers to be in the second rank, Zechariah, Ben, Jahaziel, Semiramoth, Jehiel, Hunni, Eliab, Benejah, Mahaseiah, Mattitiah, and Eliphalehu, Mikneiah, Hobed-edom, and Jehiel, gatekeepers.
And as for Heman, Asaph, and Ethan, singers, [they sounded] the cymbals of bronze, as [their voices] resounded.
And Zechariah, Haziël, Semiramoth, Jehiel, Hunni, Eliab, Mahaseiah, and Benejah played the bagpipes on Halamoth.
And Mattitia, Eliphalehu, Mikneia, Hobed-Edom, Jehiel, [and] Hazaria played violins on the octave, to strengthen the tone.
But Kenaiah, the chief of the Levites, was in charge of carrying the Ark, teaching how it should be carried; for he was a very intelligent man.
And Bérécia and Elkana were gatekeepers for the Ark.
And Shebaniah, Jehoshaphat, Nathanael, Hamasai, Zechariah, Beneiah, Eliezer, priests, sounded trumpets before the Ark of God, and Hobed-edom and Jehiah were gatekeepers for the Ark.
So David and the elders of Israel, with the governors of thousands, marched, joyfully bringing the Ark of the covenant of the Lord from the house of Hobed-edom.
And as God relieved the Levites who carried the Ark of the covenant of the Lord, seven calves and seven rams were sacrificed.
And David was clothed in a fine linen ephod; and all the Levites who carried the Ark, and the singers; and Kenaiah, who had the chief charge of carrying the Ark, was with the singers; and David had a linen ephod.
So all Israel brought the Ark of the covenant of the Lord, with loud shouts of joy, and with the sound of horns, trumpets and cymbals, making [their voices] resound with bagpipes and violins.
But it came to pass, as the Ark of the covenant of the Lord entered the City of David, that Michal daughter of Saul, looking out of the window, saw King David leaping and playing, and she despised him in her heart.
So they brought the Ark of God and placed it in the tabernacle that David had prepared for him; and burnt offerings and peace offerings were offered before God. And when David had finished offering the burnt offerings and the peace offerings, he blessed the people in the Name of the Lord. And he distributed to each one, both men and women, a loaf of bread, a piece of meat, and a bottle of wine. And he appointed some of the Levites before the Ark of the Lord, to minister there, to celebrate, to give thanks, and to praise the God of Israel. Asaph was the first, and Zechariah the second, Jehiel, Shemiramoth, Jehiel, Mattitiah, Eliab, Benejah, Hobed-edom, and Jehiel, who had musical instruments, [namely] bagpipes and violins; and Asaph made [his voice] resound with cymbals. And Benejah and Jahaziel the priests were continually with trumpets before the Ark of the covenant of God. And on that same day David entrusted the [following Psalms] to Asaph and his brothers, to begin to praise the Lord. Sing praises to the Lord, call upon his name, make known among the peoples his deeds.

Sing to him, chant to him, speak of all his wonders.
Glory in the name of his holiness; let the hearts of those who seek the Lord rejoice.

Seek the Lord and his strength; seek his face continually.
Remember the wonders he has done; his miracles, and the judgments he pronounced.
The descendants of Israel are his servants; the children of Jacob are his
He is the Lord our God; his judgments are throughout the earth.
Always remember his covenant, the word he commanded for a thousand generations;
Of the treaty he made with Abraham; and of his oath made to Isaac;
Which he confirmed to Jacob [and] to Israel, to be a statute and an everlasting covenant.

Saying: I will give you the land of Canaan as your inheritance;
Even though you are a small number of people, and even though you have only been staying there for a short time, as foreigners.
For they were wandering from nation to nation, and from one kingdom to another people.
He did not allow anyone to insult them; he even punished kings for their sake.
[And he said]: Do not touch my Anointed Ones, and do not harm my Prophets.
ALL the earth, sing to the Lord, proclaim his deliverance every day;
Declare his glory among the nations, [and] his wonders among all peoples.
For the Lord is great and most worthy of praise; he is more to be feared than all gods.

And indeed all the gods of the peoples are idols; but the Lord made the heavens.
Majesty and magnificence go before him; strength and joy are in the place where he dwells.

Families of the peoples, give to the Lord, give to the Lord glory and strength.
Give to the Lord the glory due his Name; bring the offering, and present yourselves before him; worship the Lord in holy splendor.
All you inhabitants of the earth tremble, and are amazed at the presence of his face; for the inhabited earth is established [by him], without being shaken.
Let the heavens rejoice, let the earth be glad, and let it be said among the nations, "The Lord reigns."

Let the sea and all that is in it resound; let the fields and all that is in them rejoice.

Then the trees of the forest will shout for joy before the Lord, because he comes to judge the earth.

Give thanks to the Lord, for he is good; his love endures forever.

And say: O God! of our salvation, save us, and gather us together, and deliver us from among the nations, to celebrate your holy Name, [and] to glorify us in your praise.

Blessed be the Lord, the God of Israel, from one age to the next! And all the people said, "Amen," and they praised the Lord.

So they left Asaph and his brothers there before the Ark of the covenant of the Lord, to perform the service continually, according to what had to be done each day before the Ark.

And Hobed-Edom, and his brothers, sixty-eight in number, Hobed-Edom, I say, son of Jeduthun, and Hosah as gatekeepers.

And Zadok the priest and his fellow priests were left before the tabernacle of the Lord in the high place that was at Gibeon,

To offer burnt offerings to the Lord continually on the altar of burnt offering, morning and evening, and to do all the things which are written in the Law of the Lord, which he commanded Israel;

And with them Heman and Jeduthun, and the others who were chosen and marked by name, to praise the Lord, because his grace endures forever.

Heman and Jeduthun were with them; there were also trumpets and cymbals for those who sounded [their voices], and instruments for singing the songs of God; and the sons of Jeduthun were gatekeepers.

Then all the people went home, and David also returned to bless his house.

Now it came to pass after David had settled at home, that he said to Nathan the Prophet, "Behold, I dwell in a house of cedars, and the ark of the covenant of the Lord is only behind curtains."

And Nathan said to David, "Do all that is in your heart, for God is with you."

But it came to pass that night that the word of God came to Nathan, saying:

Go, and tell David my servant: This is what the Lord says: You shall not build me a house to dwell in;

Since I have not lived in any house from the time I brought the children of Israel up [out of Egypt] until this day; but I have been from tabernacle to tabernacle, and from pavilion to pavilion.

Wherever I have walked with all Israel, have I spoken to any of the judges of Israel, whom I commanded to shepherd my people, and said to them, "Why have you not built me a house of cedars?"

Now therefore you shall say to David my servant, Thus says the Lord of hosts: I took you from a hut, from among the sheep, to be leader of my people Israel;

And I have been with you wherever you have walked, and I have cut off from before you all your enemies, and I have made for you a name like the name of the great ones who are on the earth.

And I will establish a place for my people Israel, and I will plant them, and they will dwell in their own home, and will no longer be disturbed; the sons of iniquity will no longer undermine them as they have done before.

Know; since the days that I appointed judges over my people Israel, that I subdued all your enemies, and that I made you hear that the Lord would build you a house.

So it will come to pass that when your days are fulfilled for you to depart with your fathers, I will raise up your offspring to succeed you, who shall be one of your sons, and I will establish his kingdom.

He will build me a house, and I will establish his throne forever.

I will be his father, and he will be my son; and I will not take my grace away from him, as I took it away from him who was before you.

But I will establish him in my house and in my kingdom forever, and his throne will be established forever.

Nathan recited all these words and this entire vision to David.

Then King David came in and stood before the Lord, and said, "O Lord God, who am I, and what is my house, that you have brought me to this place?"

But this seemed to you a small thing, O God! and you spoke of the house of your servant for the time to come, and you provided for me; the excellence of a man is according to what he is, O Eternal God!

What more could David say to you about the honor you show your servant? For you know your servant.

O Eternal One! For the sake of your servant, and according to your heart, you have done all these great things, to make known all these great things.

O Eternal One! there is none like you, and there is no God besides you, according to all that we have heard with our ears.

And who is like your people Israel, the only nation on earth that God himself came to redeem for himself, to be his people, [and] to acquire for yourself a name of great and awesome things, by driving out the nations from before your people, whom you redeemed from Egypt?

And you established your people Israel as your people forever; and you, O Lord, became God to them.

Now therefore, O Lord, let the word that you have spoken concerning your servant and his house be firm forever, and do as you have spoken.

And may your Name remain established, and be magnified forever, so that it may be said: The Lord of hosts, the God of Israel, is God to Israel; and may the house of David your servant be established before you.

For you have made it known, O my God, to your servant that you would build him a house; therefore your servant has taken the boldness to make this prayer to you.

But now, O Lord, you are God, and you have spoken of this good thing to your servant.

Therefore, please bless the house of your servant, so that it may be forever before you; for you have blessed it, O Lord, and it shall be blessed forever.

And it came to pass that David defeated the Philistines, and subdued them, and took Gath, and the cities within its jurisdiction from the Philistines.

He also defeated the Moabites, and the Moabites were subjugated and made tributaries to David.

David also defeated Hadarezer King of Zobah near Hamath, as he was going to establish his boundaries on the river Euphrates.

And David took from him a thousand chariots, and seven thousand men on horseback, and twenty thousand men on foot; and he hamstringed all the chariots, but he kept a hundred chariots.

Now the Syrians from Damascus had come to help Hadarezer King of Zobah; and David defeated twenty-two thousand Syrians.

Then David stationed a garrison in Syria from Damascus, and those Syrians were servants and tributaries to David; and the Lord protected David wherever he went.

And David took the golden shields that belonged to the servants of Hadarezer, and brought them to Jerusalem.

He also brought from Tibhath and Cun, cities of Hadarezer, a great quantity of bronze, from which Solomon made the bronze sea, and the pillars, and the bronze ships;

Now Tohu, King of Kamath, learned that David had defeated the entire army of Hadarezer, King of Zobah.

And he sent his son Hadoram to King David to greet him and congratulate him on his having fought Hadarezer and defeated him; for Hadarezer was in a continual war against Tohu; and as for all the ships of gold, silver, and bronze,

King David also dedicated them to the Lord, along with the silver and gold that he had brought from all the nations, [namely], from Edom, Moab, the children of Hammon, the Philistines, and the Hamalekites.

And Abishai son of Zeruiah defeated eighteen thousand Edomites in the valley of salt;

And he stationed a garrison in Idumea, and all the Idumeans were subject to David; and the Lord protected David wherever he went.

Thus David reigned over all Israel, rendering judgment and justice to all his people.

And Joab son of Zeruiah was in charge of the army, and Jehoshaphat son of Ahilud was in charge of the records.

And Zadok son of Ahitub and Abimelech son of Abiathar were the priests; and Sausa was the secretary.

And Benejiah son of Jehoiada was over the Kerethites and the Pelethites; but the sons of David were first before the King.

But it happened after that that Nahas, King of the children of Hammon, died, and his son reigned in his place.

And David said, "I will show mercy to Hanun son of Nahas, for his father showed mercy to me." So David sent messengers to comfort him on the death of his father, and David's servants came to the land of the Hammonites to Hanun to comfort him.

But the leaders of Hammon's sons said to Hanun: Do you think that David sent you comforters to honor your father? Didn't his servants come to you to carefully examine and spy on the land in order to destroy it?

Hanun then took David's servants, and had them shaved, and had their clothes cut in the middle up to the hips, and then he sent them away.

And they departed, and informed David by some messengers, who sent to meet them; for these men were greatly ashamed. And the King commanded them: Remain in Jericho until your beards have grown back; and then you may return.

But when the children of Hammon saw that they had made themselves unpalatable to David, Hanun and they sent a thousand talents of silver to take chariots and horsemen from Mesopotamia, Syria, Mahacah, and Zobah at their expense.

And they raised for themselves at their own expense thirty-two thousand men, [and] wagons, and the King of Mahacah with his people who came and encamped before Medeba. The Hammonites also gathered from their cities and came to fight.

When David learned of this, he sent Joab and the most valiant men from the entire army.

And the children of Hammon went out, and drew up their army in battle formation at the entrance of the city, and the kings who had come were apart in the countryside.

And Joab, seeing that the army was turned against him, in front and behind, took some of the elite men of Israel, and arrayed them against the Syrians.

And he gave the leadership of the rest of the people to Abishai his brother; and they were arrayed against the children of Hammon.

And [Joab] said to him: If the Syrians are stronger than me, you will come and deliver me; and if the children of Hammon are stronger than you, I will deliver you.

Be valiant, and let us stand valiantly for our people, and for the cities of our God; and let the Lord do what seems good to him.

Then Joab and the people who were with him approached to give battle to the Syrians, who fled from before him.

And when the children of Hammon saw that the Syrians had fled, they too fled from before Abishai, Joab's brother, and returned to the city; and Joab returned to Jerusalem.

But the Syrians, who had been defeated by those of Israel, sent messengers, and brought back the Syrians who were beyond the river; and Sophah, captain of the army of Hadarezer, led them.

When this was reported to David, he assembled all Israel, crossed the Jordan, and went out to meet them, and drew up his battle lines against them. So David drew up his battle lines against the Syrians, and they fought against him.

But the Syrians fled from before Israel; and David defeated seven thousand chariots of the Syrians, and forty thousand foot soldiers, and he killed Sophah the commander of the army.

Then the servants of Hadarezer, seeing that they had been defeated by those of Israel, made peace with David and were subservient to him; and the Syrians no longer wanted to help the children of Hammon.

Now the next army arrived, at the time when the kings go out, and Joab led the bulk of the army and ravaged the land of the children of Hammon; then he went to besiege Rabbah, while David remained in Jerusalem; and Joab defeated Rabbah and destroyed it.

And David took the crown from the head of their King, and he found that it weighed a talent of gold, and there were precious stones on it; and it was put on David's head, and he carried off a very large amount of plunder from the city.

He also took the people who were there and cut them down with saws, and with iron harrows and saws. David did this to all the cities of the children of Hammon; then he returned with all the people to Jerusalem.

After this, the war continued at Gezer against the Philistines; [and] then Sibbecai the Husathite struck down Sippai, who was of the children of Rapha, and they were subdued.

There was yet another war against the Philistines, in which Elhanan son of Jahir struck down Lahmi, brother of Goliath Gittite, who had a halberd whose shaft was like a weaver's sash.

There was yet another war at Gath, where there was found a man of great stature, who had six fingers on each hand, and [six toes] on each foot, so that he had twenty-four in all; and he was also of the race of Rapha.

And he defied Israel; but Jonathan, son of Shimhah, brother of David, killed him.

These were born in Gath; they were of the race of Rapha, and they died by the hands of David and by the hands of his servants.

But Satan rose up against Israel, and incited David to take a census of Israel.

And David said to Joab and the leaders of the people, "Go and number Israel from Beersheba to Dan, and bring it back to me, so that I may know their number."

But Joab replied, "May the Lord increase his people a hundredfold, O my lord the king! Are not all of them servants of my lord? Why does my lord seek this? And why should this be considered a sin against Israel?"

But the word of the King prevailed over Joab; and Joab departed and went throughout all Israel; then he returned to Jerusalem.

And Joab gave David the roll of the census of the people, and there were found from all Israel eleven hundred thousand men who drew the sword, and from Judah, four hundred seventy thousand men who drew the sword.

Although he had not counted Levi or Benjamin between them, because Joab carried out the King's word reluctantly.

But this thing displeased God, and that is why he struck Israel.

And David said to God, "I have sinned greatly in doing such a thing; now I pray you forgive your servant's iniquity, for I have acted very foolishly."

And the Lord spoke to Gad, David's seer, saying:

Go, speak to David, and say to him: Thus says the Lord, I propose three things to you; choose one of them, that I may do it for you.

Then Gad came to David and said, "This is what the Lord says:

Choose either famine for three years, or to be consumed for three months, pursued by your enemies so that their swords overtake you, or for three days the sword of the Lord—that is, death—may fall upon the land, and the angel of the Lord may destroy all the regions of Israel. Now consider what answer I will give to the one who sent me.

Then David answered Gad, "I am in great distress; please let me fall into the hands of the Lord, for his mercies are very great; but do not let me fall into the hands of men."

So the Lord sent plagues upon Israel, and seventy thousand men of Israel fell.

God also sent the angel to Jerusalem to cause destruction; and as he was causing destruction, the Lord saw and relented concerning the disaster; and he said to the angel who was causing destruction, "It is enough; now withdraw your hand." And the angel of the Lord was by the threshing floor of Ornan the Jebusite.

Then David looked up and saw the angel of the Lord who was between heaven and earth, with a drawn sword in his hand, stretched out against Jerusalem. And David and the elders, clothed in sackcloth, fell on their faces.

And David said to God, "Was it not I who commanded that the people be counted? I am the one who has sinned and done very wrong. But what have these sheep done? O Lord my God, I pray that your hand may be against me and against my father's house, but not against your people to destroy them."

Then the Angel of the Lord commanded Gad to tell David to go up and erect an altar to the Lord on the threshing floor of Ornan the Jebusite.

So David went up according to the word that Gad had spoken to him in the name of the Lord.

And Ornan, having turned around and seen the Angel, was hiding with his four sons. Now Ornan was treading wheat.

And David came to Ornan; and Ornan looked, and having seen David, he came out of the threshing floor, and bowed down before him with his face to the ground.

And David said to Ornan, "Give me the site of this threshing floor, and I will build an altar to the Lord there; give it to me for its price, so that this plague may be stopped from the people."

And Ornan said to David, "Take it, and let my lord the king do whatever seems good to him. Behold, I give these oxen for burnt offerings, and these threshing tools for wheat instead of wood, and this wheat for the cake; I give all these things."

But King David answered him, "No; but I will certainly buy [all] of it at its true value; for I will not present to the Lord what is yours, nor will I offer a burnt offering of something that I have acquired for nothing."

David therefore gave Ornan six hundred shekels of gold for this position.

Then he built an altar there to the Lord, and offered burnt offerings and peace offerings, and called on the Lord, who answered him by fire sent from heaven on the altar of burnt offering.

Then the Lord commanded the angel, and the angel put his sword back into its sheath.

At that time David, seeing that the Lord had answered him at the threshing floor of Ornan the Jebusite, sacrificed there.

[Now] the pavilion of the Lord which Moses had made in the wilderness, and the altar of burnt offerings were at that time in the high place of Gibeon.

But David could not go before that altar to invoke God, because he had been troubled by the sword of the Angel of the Lord.

And David said, "This is the house of the Lord God, and this is the altar for the burnt offerings of Israel."

And David commanded that the foreigners who were in the land of Israel be assembled, and he took masons from among them to cut dressed stones, in order to build the house of God.

David also gathered iron in abundance, to make nails for the lintels of the doors, and for the joinery; and such a great quantity of bronze that it was without weight;

And cedar wood without number; because the Sidonians and Tyrians brought David cedar wood in abundance.

For David said, "Solomon my son is young and infirm, and the house to be built for the Lord must be magnificent in excellence, renown, and glory throughout all the lands; therefore I will now prepare for it." So David prepared these things in abundance before his death.

Then he called Solomon his son, and commanded him to build a house to the Lord, the God of Israel.

David then said to Solomon: My son, I have desired to build a house in the Name of the Lord my God;

But the word of the Lord came to me, saying, "You have shed much blood and have waged great wars; you shall not build a house for my Name, because you have shed much blood on the earth before me.”

Behold, a son will be born to you, who will be a man of peace; and I will grant him peace from all his enemies around him; therefore his name shall be Solomon. And in his days I will give peace and rest to Israel;

He will build a house for my Name; he will be my son, and I will be his father; [and I will establish] the throne of his kingdom over Israel forever.

Now therefore, my son! The Lord will be with you, and you will prosper, and you will build the house of the Lord your God, as he has spoken concerning you.

Only, may the Lord give you wisdom and understanding, and may he instruct you concerning the government of Israel, and how you must keep the Law of the Lord your God.

And you will prosper if you carefully observe the statutes and ordinances that the Lord commanded Moses for Israel. Be strong and courageous; do not be afraid or discouraged.

Behold, according to my insignificance I have prepared for the house of the Lord one hundred thousand talents of gold, and one million talents of silver. As for the bronze and the iron, they are not worth much, for they are in great abundance. I have also prepared the wood and the stones; and you shall add to them whatever is needed.

You have with you many workers, masons, stonecutters, carpenters, and all kinds of skilled craftsmen.

There is gold and silver, bronze and iron without number; therefore apply yourself to making it, and the Lord will be with you.

David also commanded all the leaders of Israel to help Solomon his son; and he said to them:

Is not the Lord your God with you? Has he not given you rest on every side? For he has delivered the inhabitants of the land into my hands, and the land has been subdued before the Lord and before his people.

Therefore, apply your hearts and souls to seek the Lord your God, and begin to build the sanctuary of the Lord God, to bring the ark of the covenant of the Lord and the holy vessels of God into the house that is to be built for the name of the Lord.

Now David, being old and full of years, appointed Solomon his son as king over Israel.

And he assembled all the leaders of Israel, and the priests, and the Levites.

And they took a census of the Levites, from the age of thirty years, and above; and the males among them being counted, each by head, there were thirty-eight thousand men.

[There were] among them twenty-four thousand who were regularly engaged in the work of the house of the Lord, and six thousand who were overseers and judges.

And four thousand gatekeepers, and four [other] thousand who praised the Lord with instruments, which I made, [said David], to praise him.

David also distributed them according to the division that had been made among the children of Levi, [namely] Gershon, Kohath, and Merari.

There were some Guersonites, Lahdan, and Simhi.

The children of Lahdan were these three, Jehiel first, then Zetham, then Joel.

The sons of Simhi were these three: Selomith, Haziël, and Haran. These were the leaders of the family of Lahdan.

And the children of Shimei were Jahath, Ziza, Jehus, and Berihah; these were the four children of Shimei.

And Jahath was the first, and Ziza the second; but Jehus and Berihah did not have many children, therefore they were counted as one head of family in their father's house.

From the children of Kohath there were Hamram, Izhar, Hebron, and Huziël, [in all] four.

The sons of Hamram were Aaron and Moses; and Aaron was separated, he and his sons forever, to sanctify the Most Holy Place, to burn incense before the Lord, to minister to him, and to bless in his Name forever.
And as for Moses, a man of God, his children were supposed to be from the Tribe of Levi.

The children of Moses were Gershom and Eliezer.

Children of Guersom, Sebuël first.

As for the children of Eliezer, Rehabiah was the first; and Eliezer had no other children, but the children of Rehabiah multiplied wonderfully.

Of the children of Jitzhar, Selomith was the first.

The children of Hebron were Jerijah the first, Amariah the second, Jahazel the third, Jekamham the fourth.

Huziël's children were, Mica the first, Jisija the second.

Among the children of Merari were Mahli and Musi. The children of Mahli were Eleazar and Kis.

And Eleazar died, and had no sons, but daughters; and the sons of Kish, their brothers, took them [as wives].

The children of Musi were Mahli, Heder, and Jeremoth, the three of them.

These are the children of Levi according to their fathers' houses, the heads of the fathers, according to their censuses which were made according to the number of their names, [being counted] each one by head, and they performed the function for the service of the house of the Lord, from the age of twenty years, and above.

For David said: The Lord God of Israel has given rest to his people, and has established his dwelling in Jerusalem forever.

And even as for the Levites, they no longer had to carry the Tabernacle, nor all the utensils for its service.

That is why in the later Registers of David, the children of Levi were counted from the age of twenty, and above.

For their charge was to assist the children of Aaron in the service of the house of the Lord, [being stationed] in the courtyard, [and] in the chambers, [and] to clean all the holy things, and for the work of the service of the house of God;

And for the showbread, for the fine flour from which the cake was to be made, and for the unleavened doughnuts, for [everything] that [is cooked] on the griddle, for [everything] that is fried, and for the small and large measure.

And to present themselves every morning and every evening, to celebrate and praise the Lord;

And when all the burnt offerings that were to be offered to the Lord on the Sabbath days at the new moons, and at the solemn feasts, continually before the Lord, according to the number that had been ordained.

And so that they might guard the Tabernacle of Meeting, and the Sanctuary, and the sons of Aaron their brothers, for the service of the house of the Lord.

And as for Aaron's children, these are their departments. Aaron's children were Nadab, Abihu, Eleazar, and Ithamar.

But Nadab and Abihu died in the presence of their father, and had no children; and Eleazar and Ithamar exercised the priesthood.

Now David distributed them, namely, Zadok, who was of the descendants of Eleazar; and Ahimelech, who was of the descendants of Ithamar, to their duties in the service which they had to do.

And when they were distributed, a much greater number of the children of Eleazar were found to be heads of families than of the children of Ithamar, there being sixteen children of Eleazar, according to their families, and [there being only] eight children of Ithamar, according to their families.

And they made their departments by lot, intermingling them one among the other; for the Governors of the Sanctuary, and the Governors [of the house] of God were taken both from the children of Eleazar, and from the children of Ithamar.

And Shemaiah son of Nathanael the scribe, who was of the tribe of Levi, wrote them down in the presence of the king, the leaders of the people, Zadok the priest, Ahimelech son of Abiathar, and the heads of the priests' families and of the Levites' families. The head of a family's house would choose Eleazar, and the next would choose Ithamar.

The first lot fell to Jehoiarib, the second to Jedaiah.

The third in Harim, the fourth in Sehorim,

The fifth to Malkija, the sixth to Mijamin,

The seventh in Kots, the eighth in Abija,

The ninth to Jesuah, the tenth to Secaniah,

The eleventh to Eliasib, the twelfth to Jakim,

The thirteenth to Huppa, the fourteenth to Jezebab,

The fifteenth in Bilga, the sixteenth in Immer,

The seventeenth in Hezir, the eighteenth in Pitsets,

The nineteenth to Pethah, the twentieth to Ezekiel,

The twenty-first to Jakim, and the twenty-second to Gamul,

The twenty-third in Delajara, the twenty-fourth in Mahazia.

This was their number for the service they had to perform when they entered the house of the Lord, as Aaron their father had commanded them, as the Lord the God of Israel had commanded him.

And as for the children of Levi who were left of the children of Hamram, there were Subael, and of the children of Subael Jehdeiah.

Of those from Rehabia, children, [I say], from Rehabia, Jisija was the first.

From the Izharites, Selomoth; from the descendants of Selomoth, Jahath.

And of the children of Jerijah, Amariah the second; Jahazel the third, Jekamham the fourth.

Children of 'Huziël, Mica; children of Mica, Samir.

Mica's brother was Jisija; among Jisija's children was Zechariah.

Children of Merari, Mahli, and Musi. Children of Jahazija, his son.

Children [therefore] of Merari, of Jahazija, his son, and Soham, Zaccur and Hibri.

From Mahli, Eleazar, who had no sons.

From Kish, the children of Kish, Jerahmeel.

And the descendants of Musi, Mahli, Heder, and Jerimoth. These are the descendants of the Levites, according to their ancestral houses.

And they likewise cast the lots according to the number of their brothers the children of Aaron, in the presence of King David, Zadok, and Ahimelech, and the Heads of the fathers [of families] of the Priests and of the Levites; the Heads of the fathers [of families] corresponding to their youngest brothers.

And David and the commanders of the army set apart for service from among the descendants of Asaph, Heman, and Jeduthun those who prophesied with violins, bagpipes, and cymbals; and those among them who were numbered were men fit to be used for the service they were to perform,

The children of Asaph; Zaccur, Joseph, Nethaniah, and Asarela, children of Asaph, under the leadership of Asaph, who prophesied by the King's commission.

Of Jeduthun; the six sons of Jeduthun, Gedaliah, Zeri, Isaiah, Hasabiah, Mattitiah, [and Shimei], played the violin, under the direction of their father Jeduthun, who prophesied, praising and giving thanks to the Lord.

Of Heman; the children of Heman, Bukkiah, Mattaniah, Huziël, Sebuël, Jerimoth, Hananiah, Hanani, Elijatha, Giddalti, Romamti-hezer, Josbekasa, Malloth, Hothir, Mahazioth.

All these were children of Heman, the King's seer in the words of God, to exalt his power; for God gave Heman fourteen sons and three daughters.

All these were employed under the direction of their fathers, in the songs of the house of the Lord, with cymbals, bagpipes, and violins, in the service of the house of God, according to the commission of the King [given to] Asaph, Jeduthun, and Heman.

And their number, together with their brothers, who had been taught the songs of the Lord, was two hundred and eighty-eight, all of them very intelligent.

And they cast their lots [concerning their] office, placing [one against another], the lesser being equal to the greater, and the teachers to the disciples.

And the first lot fell to Asaph, [namely] to Joseph. The second to Gedaliah; and he, his brothers, and his sons were twelve.

The third belonged to Zaccur; he, his sons, and his brothers were twelve.

The fourth was Jitzri; he, his sons, and his brothers were twelve.

The fifth to Nethaniah; he, his sons, and his brothers were twelve.

The sixth was at Bukkija; he, his sons, and his brothers were twelve.

The seventh in Jesarela; he, his sons, and his brothers were twelve.

The eighth to Isaiah; he, his sons, and his brothers were twelve.

The ninth in Mattania; he, his sons, and his brothers were twelve.

The tenth to Simhi; he, his sons, and his brothers were twelve.

The eleventh to Hazareel; he, his sons, and his brothers were twelve.

The twelfth to Hasabiah; he, his sons, and his brothers were twelve.

The thirteenth to Subael; he, his sons, and his brothers were twelve.

The fourteenth to Mattitia; he, his sons, and his brothers were twelve.

The fifteenth belonged to Jeremoth; he, his sons, and his brothers were twelve.

The sixteenth to Hananiah; he, his sons, and his brothers were twelve.

The seventeenth to Josbekasa; he, his sons, and his brothers were twelve.

The eighteenth to Hanani; he, his sons, and his brothers were twelve.

The nineteenth to Malloth; he, his sons, and his brothers were twelve.

The twentieth to Elijah; he, his sons, and his brothers were twelve.

The twenty-first at Hothir; he, his sons, and his brothers were twelve.

The twenty-second at Guiddalti; he, his sons, and his brothers were twelve.

The twenty-third to Mahazioth; he, his sons, and his brothers were twelve.

The twenty-fourth at Romanti-hézer; he, his sons and his brothers were twelve.

And as for the departments of the gatekeepers; there was for the Korahites, Meselemiah son of Korah, from among the descendants of Asaph.

And the children of Meselemiah were: Zechariah the firstborn; Jedihael the second;

Zebadiah the third; Iathniel the fourth,

Helam the fifth, Johanum the sixth; Eliehohenai the seventh.

And the sons of Hobed-edom were: Shemaiah the firstborn, Jehozabad the second, Joah the third, Sacar the fourth, Nathanael the fifth,

Hammil the sixth, Issachar the seventh, Pehulletai the eighth; for God had blessed him.

And to Shemaiah his son were born children, who had authority over their father's house, because they were mighty and valiant men.

The children of Shemahah were Hothni and Rephael, Hobed and Elzabad, his brothers, valiant men, Elihu and Shemacia.

All these were descendants of Hobed-edom, they and their sons, and their brothers, valiant men, strong for service; there were sixty-two of them from Hobed-edom.

And Meselemiah's children with her brothers were eighteen valiant men.

And the children of Hoza, from among the children of Merari, were Simri the Chief; for although he was not the firstborn, nevertheless his father established him as Chief.

Hilkiah was the second, Tebalaiah the third, Zechariah the fourth; all the children and brothers of Hoza were thirteen.

They were assigned the departments of gatekeepers, so that the responsibilities were distributed to the heads of families, making them equal to one another, so that they might serve in the house of the Lord.

For they cast lots for the smallest as well as for the greatest, according to their families, for each door.

And so the lot [for the gate] to the East fell to Selemiah. Then the lot was cast for Zechariah his son, a wise counselor, and his lot fell [for the gate] to the North. The fate of Hobed-Edom fell [for the gate] towards the South, and the house of assemblies fell to his sons.

At Suppim and at Hosa [for the gate] towards the West, beside the gate of Salleketh, on the way up; one guard [being] opposite the other.

Towards the East, there were six Levites; towards the North, four per day; towards the South, four also per day; and towards [the house] of the assemblies, two on each side.

At Parbar towards the West, there were four on the road, [and] two at Parbar.

These are the departments of the gatekeepers for the children of the Corites, and for the children of Merari.

These also were Levites; Ahijah was in charge of the treasures of the house of God, and of the treasures of the consecrated things.

Children of Lahdan, who were among the children of the Gershonites; on the side of Lahdan, from among the leaders of the fathers belonging to Lahdan Gershonite, Jehiëli.

Among the children of Jehiëli were Zetham and Joel his brother, who were in charge of the treasures of the house of the Lord.

For the Hamramites, Izharites, Hebronites, and Hozielites.

And Sebuël son of Gershom, son of Moses, was in charge of the other treasures.

And as for his brothers on the side of Eliezer, of whom Rehabia was a son, who had a son Isaiah, who had a son Joram, who had a son Zichri, who had a son Shelomith.

This Selomith and his brothers were commissioned over the treasures of the holy things which King David, the Chiefs of the fathers, the Governors of thousands, and of hundreds; and the Captains of the army had consecrated;

That they had, I say, dedicated battles and spoils, for the building of the house of the Lord.

And everything that Samuel the seer had dedicated, and Saul son of Kish, and Abner son of Ner, and Joab son of Zeruiah; everything, in short, that was dedicated, was placed in the hands of Selomith and his brothers.

Among the Izharites, Kenaniah and his sons [were employed] in external affairs concerning Israel, to be provosts and judges.

As for the Hebronites, Hasabiah and his brothers, valiant men, numbering one thousand seven hundred, [presided] over the government of Israel on this side of the Jordan, toward the West, for all that concerned the Lord, and for the service of the King.

As for the Hebronites, according to their generations in the families of their fathers, Jerijah was the leader of the Hebronites. They were sought out in the fortieth year of David's reign, and mighty men of valor were found among them at Jazer Gilead.

The brothers of [Jeriah], valiant men, were two thousand seven hundred, descended from the chiefs of the fathers; and King David appointed them over the Reubenites, over the Gadites, and over the half-tribe of Manasseh, for all matters concerning God, and for the affairs of the King.

Now as for the children of Israel, according to their census, there were heads of fathers, governors of thousands and of hundreds, and their provosts, who served the King according to the whole state of the departments, one coming in and the other going out, month by month, throughout all the months of the year; and each department was twenty-four thousand men.

And Jasobham son of Zabdiël [presided] over the first district, for the first month; and in his district there were twenty-four thousand men.

He was one of the children of Peres, Chief of all the captains of the army of the first month.

Dodai Ahohite [presided] over the department of the second month, having Mikloth as Lieutenant in his department; and in his department there were twenty-four thousand men.

The commander of the third army for the third month was Benaiah son of Jehoiada the priest, [and chief captain]; and in his department there were twenty-four thousand men.

It was this Bénaja who was strong among the thirty, and above the thirty; and Hammizabad his son was in his district.

The fourth for the fourth month was Hazael, Joab's brother, and Zebadiah his son, after him; and there were twenty-four thousand men in his department.

The fifth for the fifth month was Captain Samhuth of Jizrah; and in his department there were twenty-four thousand men.

The sixth for the sixth month was Hira son of Hikkes Tekohite; and in his department there were twenty-four thousand men.

The seventh for the seventh month was Helets Pelonite, of the children of Ephraim; and there were twenty-four thousand men in his district.

The eighth for the eighth month was Sibbecai Husathite, [of the family] of the Zarhites; and there were twenty-four thousand men in his department.

The ninth for the ninth month was Abihazer Hanathothite, of the Benjamites; and there were twenty-four thousand men in his department.

The tenth for the tenth month [was] Naharai Netophathite, [of the family] of the Zarhites; and there were twenty-four thousand men in his department.

The eleventh for the eleventh month [was] Benaiah Pirathonite, of the children of Ephraim; and there were twenty-four thousand men in his department.

The twelfth for the twelfth month was Heldai Netophathite, [belonging] to Hothniël; and there were twenty-four thousand men in his department.

And [these] presided over the Tribes of Israel; Eliezer son of Zichri was the leader of the Reubenites. Of the Simeonites, Shephatiah son of Maacah.

From the Levites, Hasabiah son of Chemuel. From Aaron's tribe, Zadok.

From Judah, Elihu, who was one of David's brothers. From Issachar, Homri son of Michael.

From the tribe of Zebulun, Ismahiah son of Hobadiah. From the tribe of Naphtali, Jerimoth son of Hazriel.

Of the children of Ephraim, Hoshea son of Hazaziah. Of the half-tribe of Manasseh, Joel son of Pedaiiah.

From the other half-tribe of Manasseh in Gilead, Jiddo son of Zechariah. From those of Benjamin, Jahasiel son of Abner.

From the tribes of Dan, Hazareel son of Jeroham. These were the chief tribes of Israel.

But David did not take a census of the Israelites from twenty years old and below; because the Lord had said that he would multiply Israel like the stars of heaven.

Joab son of Zeruiah had begun to take a census, but he did not finish, because God's indignation had spread out over Israel because of this; therefore this census was not put among the censuses recorded in the Chronicles of King David.

Now Hazmaveth son of Hadiel was in charge of the King's finances; but Jonathan son of Huziah was in charge of the finances that were in the countryside, in the cities and villages and castles.

And Hezri, son of Kelub, was in charge of those who worked in the countryside plowing the land.

And Simhi Ramathite over the vineyards, and Zabdi Siphmien over what came from the vineyards, and over the wine cellars.

And Bahal-hanan Gederite over the olive trees, and over the fig trees that were in the field; and Johas over the oil cellars.

And Sitrai the Saronite was in charge of the cattle that grazed in Sharon; and Shaphat son of Hadlai was in charge of the cattle that grazed in the valleys.

And Obil the Ishmaelite over camels; Jehdeia the Meronothite over donkeys.

And Jaziz Hagareni was in charge of the flocks of small livestock. All of them were responsible for the livestock that belonged to King David.

But Jonathan, David's uncle, was an advisor, a very intelligent man and a scribe, and Jehiel son of Hakmoni was with the king's children.

And Achitophel was the King's advisor; and Cusai Arkite was the King's close friend.

After Ahithophel was Jehoiada son of Benaiah and Abiathar; and Joab was the General of the King's army.

Now David assembled in Jerusalem all the leaders of Israel, the leaders of the tribes, and the heads of the departments who served the king; and the governors of thousands and of hundreds, and those who had charge of all the king's possessions, and of all that he owned, his sons with his eunuchs, and the mighty men, and all the strong and valiant men;

Then King David stood up and said, "My brothers and my people, listen to me: I have desired to build a house of rest for the Ark of the covenant of the Lord and for the footstool of our God, and I have made preparations to build it."

But God said to me, "You shall not build a house for my Name, because you are a man of war, and you have shed much blood."

But as the Lord, the God of Israel, has chosen me out of all my father's house to be King over Israel forever; for he has chosen Judah as leader, and from the house of Judah the house of my father, and from among my father's sons he has taken pleasure in me, to make me king over all Israel.

Also, of all my sons (for the Lord has given me many sons) he has chosen Solomon my son, to sit on the throne of the Kingdom of the Lord over Israel.

And he said to me: Solomon your son is the one who will build my house and my courts; for I have chosen him to be my son and I will be his father.

And I will establish his kingdom forever, if he applies himself to doing my commandments [and observing] my ordinances, as [he is doing] today.

Therefore, I command you in the presence of all Israel, which is the assembly of the Lord, and before our God who hears it, to keep and to diligently seek all the commandments of the Lord your God, so that you may possess this good land, and that you may pass it on to your children after you forever.

And you, Solomon my son, know the God of your father, and serve him with a sincere heart and a willing spirit; for the Lord searches all hearts and knows all the thoughts of the mind. If you seek him, he will be found by you; but if you forsake him, he will cast you off forever.

Now consider that the Lord has chosen you to build a house for his sanctuary; therefore be strong and apply yourself to the work.

And David gave to Solomon his son the design of the portico, of its houses, of its chambers, of its upper rooms, of its inner chambers, and of the place of the Mercy Seat.

And the pattern of all things which were inspired to him by the Spirit which was with him, for the courts of the house of the Lord, for the surrounding chambers, for the treasuries of the house of the Lord, and for the treasuries of the holy things; And for the departments of the Priests and Levites, and for all the work of the service of the house of the Lord, and for all the utensils of the service of the house of the Lord.

[He also gave him] gold by a certain weight, for the things that were to be made of gold, [namely] for all the utensils of each service; [and silver] by a certain weight, for all the silver utensils, [namely] for all the utensils of each service. The weight of the gold lampstands, and their gold lamps, according to the weight of each lampstand and its lamps; and [the weight] of the silver lampstands, according to the weight of each lampstand and its lamps, according to the service of each lampstand.

And the weight of gold, which was sufficient for each table of the showbread; and of silver for the silver tables.

And pure gold for the forks, for the basins, for the goblets, and for the gold dishes, according to the weight of each dish; and [silver] for the silver dishes, according to the weight of each dish.

And refined gold of a certain weight for the altar of incense; and gold for the pattern of the chariot of the Cherubim that spread out [the wings], and that covered the Ark of the covenant of the Lord.

All these things, [he said], were given to me in writing from the Lord, so that I might have understanding of all the works of this pattern.

Therefore David said to Solomon his son, "Be strong and courageous, and work hard; do not be afraid or discouraged, for the Lord God, my God, will be with you; he will not leave you nor forsake you until you have finished all the work of the service of the house of the Lord."

And behold, [I have made] the departments of the Priests and Levites for all the service of the house of God; and there are with you for all this work all kinds of quick and skilled people, for all kinds of service; and the Leaders with all the people [will be ready] to carry out all that you say.

Then King David said to the whole assembly: God has chosen only one of my sons, Solomon, who is still young and delicate, and the work is great; for this palace is not for a man, but for the Lord God.

And I have prepared with all my might for the house of my God: gold for the things that are to be gold, silver for the things that are to be silver; bronze for the things of bronze, iron for the things of iron, wood for the things of wood, onyx stones, and stones to be set, carbuncle stones, and stones of various colors; precious stones of every kind, and marble in abundance.

And besides that, because I have great affection for the house of my God, I give for the house of my God, besides all the things that I have prepared for the house of the Sanctuary, the gold and silver that I have among my most precious jewels; [Knowledge], three thousand talents of gold, gold from Ophir, and seven thousand talents of refined silver, to overlay the walls of the house.

So that there may be gold wherever gold is needed, and silver wherever silver is needed, and for all the work done by skilled craftsmen. Now, who among you will willingly offer a generous gift to the Lord today?

Then the heads of the fathers, and the heads of the tribes of Israel, and the governors of thousands and hundreds, and those who had charge of the king's affairs, offered voluntarily.

And they gave for the service of the house of God five thousand talents and ten thousand drachmas of gold, ten thousand talents of silver, eighteen thousand talents of bronze, and one hundred thousand talents of iron.

They also put the precious stones that each one had into the treasury of the house of the Lord, into the hands of Jehiel Gershonite.

And the people offered with joy willingly; for they offered their freewill offerings to the Lord with all their heart; and David had great joy.

Then David blessed the Lord in the presence of all the assembly, and said: O Lord God of Israel our father! You are blessed from everlasting to everlasting.

O Eternal One! to you belong the magnificence, the power, the glory, the eternity, and the majesty; for all that is in heaven and in earth is yours; O Eternal One! the Kingdom is yours, and you are the Prince of all things.

Riches and honors come from you, and you have dominion over all things; strength and power are in your hand, and it is also in your hand to enlarge and strengthen all things.

Now therefore, O our God! we celebrate you, and we praise your glorious Name.

But who am I, and who are my people, that we should have enough power to offer these things willingly? For all things come from you, and [having received them] from your hand, we present them to you.

Indeed, we are strangers and sojourners with you, as all our fathers were; and our days are like a shadow upon the earth, and there is no hope.

Eternal our God! All this abundance, which we have prepared to build a house for your holy Name, is from your hand, and all these things are yours.

And I know, O my God! that it is you who searches hearts, and that you delight in uprightness; therefore I willingly offered all these things with an upright heart, and now I have seen with joy that your people, who were found here, have made their offering to you willingly.

O Eternal! God of Abraham, Isaac, and Israel our fathers, maintain this forever, [namely] the inclination of the thoughts of the heart of your people, and turn their hearts toward you.

Give also a right heart to Solomon my son, so that he may keep your commandments, your testimonies, and your statutes, and that he may do all [that is necessary] and build the palace that I have prepared.

After this David said to all the assembly, "Now bless the Lord your God." And all the assembly blessed the Lord, the God of their fathers, and bowed down and worshiped before the Lord and before the King.

And the next day they sacrificed sacrifices to the Lord, and offered him burnt offerings, [namely] a thousand calves, a thousand sheep, and a thousand lambs, with their sprinklings; and sacrifices in great number for all those of Israel.

And they ate and drank that day before the Lord with great joy; and they made Solomon son of David king for the second time, and anointed him in honor of the Lord to be their leader, and Zadok to be their priest.

Solomon therefore sat on the throne of the Lord to be King in place of David his father, and he prospered; for all Israel obeyed him.

And all the principal and powerful men, and even all the sons of King David, agreed to be subjects of King Solomon.

So the Lord exalted Solomon to the highest position in the sight of all Israel, and gave him royal majesty such as no king before him had ever had in Israel.

David, son of Jesse, reigned over all Israel.

And the days that he reigned over Israel were forty years; he reigned seven years in Hebron, and thirty-three years in Jerusalem.

Then he died at a good old age, full of days, riches, and glory; and Solomon his son reigned in his place.

Now as for the acts of King David, both the first and the last, behold, they are written in the Book of Samuel the Seer, and in the Books of Nathan the Prophet, and in the Books of Gad the Seer,

With all his reign, and his power, and the times that passed over him, and over Israel, and over all the kingdoms of the countries.

Now Solomon, son of David, was strong in his reign; and the Lord his God was with him, and exalted him exceedingly.

And Solomon spoke to all Israel, [namely] to the commanders of thousands and hundreds, to the judges, and to all the leaders of all Israel, the heads of the fathers.

And Solomon and all the assembly that was with him went to the high place that was at Gibeon; for there was the Tabernacle of meeting of God, which Moses the servant of the Lord had made in the wilderness.

(But David had brought the Ark of God from Kiriath-jeharim to the place he had prepared; for he had set up a Tabernacle for it in Jerusalem.)

And the bronze altar, which Bezalel the son of Uri, the son of Hur, had made, was at [Gibaon], before the pavilion of the Lord, which was also sought by Solomon and by the assembly.

And Solomon offered there before the Lord a thousand burnt offerings on the bronze altar that was in front of the Tabernacle.

That same night God appeared to Solomon and said to him, "Ask what I give you."

And Solomon answered God: You have shown great mercy to David my father, and you have made me king in his place.

Now, O Lord God, let the word [that you have given] to David my father be firm, for you have made me king over a people as numerous as the dust of the earth.

And now give me wisdom and knowledge, so that I may go out and come in before this people; for who is able to judge this great people of yours?

And God said to Solomon: Because you have desired these benefits, and have not asked for riches, nor possessions, nor glory, nor the death of those who hate you, and have not even asked to live long, but have asked for yourself wisdom and knowledge, so that you may judge my people, over whom I have appointed you King;

Wisdom and knowledge are given to you; I will also give you riches, possessions, and honor; which did not happen so to the kings who were before you, and which will not happen [again] so after you.

After this Solomon returned to Jerusalem from the high place that was at Gibeon, from before the Tabernacle of Meeting, and he reigned over Israel.

And he amassed chariots and horsemen, so that he had 1,400 chariots and 12,000 horsemen; and he placed them in the cities where he kept his chariots; there were also some near the King in Jerusalem.

And the King made it so that silver and gold were no more prized in Jerusalem than stones; and cedars than the wild fig trees that were in the plains, so many were there.

As for the toll that belonged to Solomon from the trade of horses brought out of Egypt, and of thread, the King's farmers were paid in thread.

But each chariot was brought up and brought out of Egypt for six hundred [pieces] of silver, and each horse for one hundred and fifty; and thus they obtained from these [tax farmers] for all the Kings of the Hittites, and for the Kings of Syria.

Now Solomon resolved to build a house for the Name of the Lord, and a royal house.

And he took a census of seventy thousand men who carried burdens, and eighty thousand who cut wood on the mountain, and three thousand six hundred who were appointed over them.

And Solomon sent to Hiram King of Tyre, to say to him: As you did with David my father, and as you sent him cedars to build himself a house to live in, [do the same with me].

Behold, I am going to build a house for the Name of the Lord my God, to consecrate it to him, to burn before him the incense of aromatic aromas, [and to present to him] the bread of the Presence, which is continually set before him, and the burnt offerings morning and evening, for the Sabbaths, and for the new moons, and for the solemn Feasts of the Lord our God; which is perpetual in Israel.

But the house that I am going to build will be great; for our God is great above all gods.

But who is able to build him a house, if even the heavens, the highest heavens, cannot contain him? And who am I, to build him a house, except to make incense before him?

Therefore, send me now someone skilled in working with gold, silver, bronze, iron, scarlet, crimson, and purple, and who knows how to engrave, [so that he may be] with the skilled men whom I have with me in Judea and Jerusalem, whom David my father prepared.

Send me also cedar, fir, and Alghummim wood from Lebanon; for I know that your servants are skilled in cutting wood from Lebanon; and so my servants will be with yours.

And let them prepare me a great quantity of wood; for the house that I am going to build [will be] large and wonderful.

And I will give to your servants who cut the wood, twenty thousand cores of threshed wheat, twenty thousand cores of barley, twenty thousand baths of wine, and twenty thousand baths of oil.

And Hiram, King of Tyre, [answered] in writing, and sent word to Solomon: Because the Lord loved his people, he has made you king over them.

And Hiram said, "Blessed be the Lord, the God of Israel, who made heaven and earth, because he has given King David a wise, prudent, and understanding son, who is to build a house for the Lord and a royal house."

So now I am sending you a skilled and knowledgeable man, [who] was with Hiram my father;

Son of a woman from the Tribe of Dan, and whose father [is] a Tyrian, knowing how to work in gold, silver, bronze, iron, stone, and wood, in scarlet, purple, fine linen, and crimson; and knowing how to do all kinds of engraving and drawing of all things that will be proposed to him, with the men of spirit whom you have, and those whom my Lord David your father had.

And now my Lord sends to his servants the wheat, barley, oil and wine that he has said;

And we will cut down as much wood as you need from Lebanon, and we will load it onto rafts for you on the Sea of Joppa, and you will bring it up to Jerusalem.

Solomon then counted all the foreign men who were in the land of Israel, after the census that David his father had made, and they found one hundred and fifty-three thousand six hundred.

And he appointed seventy thousand to carry burdens, eighty thousand to cut wood on the mountain, and three thousand six hundred to make the people work.

And Solomon began to build the house of the Lord in Jerusalem, on the mountain of Moriah, which had been shown to David his father, in the place which David his father had prepared on the threshing floor of Ornan the Jebusite.

And he began to [build it] on the second [day] of the second month, in the fourth year of his reign.

This was Solomon's plan for building the house of God. The first measure was sixty cubits long and twenty cubits wide.

And the porch, which was opposite the length, in front of the width of the house, was twenty cubits; and the height was six to twenty cubits; and he covered it inside with pure gold.

And he covered the great house with fir wood; he covered it with exquisite gold, and he raised palm fronds and chains in relief.

And he covered the house with exquisite stones so that it might be adorned; and the gold was gold from Parvaim.

So he covered the house, its beams, its posts, its walls, and its gates with gold, and he carved cherubim into the walls.

He also made the Most Holy Place, whose length was twenty cubits according to the width of the house; and its width, twenty cubits; and he overlaid it with exquisite gold, amounting to six hundred talents.

And the weight of the nails amounted to fifty shekels of gold; he also covered the vaults with gold.

He also made two cherubim in the form of children in the Most Holy Place, and covered them with gold.

And the wings of the Cherubim were twenty cubits long, so that one wing was five cubits long and touched the wall of the house; and the other wing was five cubits long and touched the wing of the other Cherub.

And one of the wings of the other Cherub, being five cubits long, touched the wall of the house; and the other wing, being five cubits long, was joined to the wing of the other Cherub.

[Thus] the wings of these Cherubim were spread out along twenty cubits, and they stood upright on their feet, and their faces looked toward the house.

He also made the veil of purple, scarlet, crimson, and fine linen, and placed cherubim on it.

And in front of the house he made two columns, which were thirty-five cubits long; and the capitals which were on the top of each were five cubits.

Now as he had made chains for the Oracle, he also put them on the tops of the pillars; and he made a hundred pomegranates, which he put on the chains. And he set up the pillars in front of the Temple, one on the right hand and the other on the left hand, and he called the one on the right Jachin; and the one on the left Boaz.

He also made a bronze altar twenty cubits long, twenty cubits wide, and ten cubits high.

And he made a molten sea, ten cubits from one side to the other, round all around, and five cubits high, and a net thirty cubits wide was all around it.

And below there were figures of oxen surrounding the sea all around, ten at every cubit; there were two rows of these oxen, which had been cast with it.

It was placed on twelve oxen, three of which faced north, three west, three south, and three east; and the sea was on their backs, and all their hindquarters were turned inwards.

And its thickness was a palm, and its rim was like the rim of a custom-made cup of fleur-de-lis; it contained three thousand Baths.

He also made ten washbasins, and put five on the right, and five on the left, to be used for washing; they washed in them what belonged to the burnt offerings; but the sea was used to wash the priests.

He also made ten gold lampstands according to the form they were to have; he placed them in the Temple, five on the right, and five on the left.

He also made ten tables; and placed them in the Temple, five on the right, and five on the left; and he made one hundred golden basins.

He also made the Court of the Priests, and the great court, and the gates for the courts, which he overlaid with bronze.

And he placed the sea to his right, drawing towards the East, towards the South.

Hiram also made cauldrons, scrapers, and basins, and finished all the work that he did for King Solomon for the Temple of God;

[Knowing] two columns, and the finials, and the two capitals which [were] on the top of the columns, and the two nets to cover the finials of the capitals which were on the top of the columns.

And the four hundred pomegranates for the two nets; two rows of pomegranates for each net, to cover the two finials of the capitals that were above the columns.

He also made the foundations, and vats to put on the foundations;

A sea, and twelve oxen beneath it.

And Hiram his father made for King Solomon, for use in the temple, polished bronze cauldrons, scrapers, forks, and all the utensils that depended on them.

The King melted them down in the plain of the Jordan, in fertile soil, between Succoth and [the road that leads] to Zeredah.

And the King made all these utensils in such a large number that the weight of the bronze was not sought.

Solomon also made all the utensils necessary for the Temple of God, [namely] the golden altar, and the Tablets on which the bread of the Presence was placed;

And the candlesticks with their lamps of fine gold, to be lit before the Oracle, according to the custom;

And flowers, and lamps, and gold snuffers, which were exquisite gold;

And the sickles, basins, bowls, and censers of fine gold. And as for the entrance to the house, the inner doors of the Most Holy Place, and the doors of the house of the Temple, were of gold.

Thus all the work that Solomon did for the house of the Lord was finished. Then Solomon brought in what David his father had dedicated, namely the silver and all the vessels, and put it into the treasuries of the house of God.

Then Solomon assembled in Jerusalem the elders of Israel, and all the heads of the tribes, the leaders of the fathers of the children of Israel, to take up the Ark of the covenant of the Lord, from the City of David, which is Zion.

And all those of Israel were assembled around the King at the solemn feast which is in the seventh month.

All the elders of Israel came, and the Levites carried the Ark.

So they carried away the Ark, and the Tabernacle of meeting, and all the holy vessels that were in the Tabernacle; the Priests, I say, [and] the Levites carried them away.

Now King Solomon, and all the assembly of Israel that had come to him, were before the Ark, sacrificing cattle and flocks in such great numbers that they could not be counted or numbered.

And the priests brought the ark of the covenant of the Lord to its place, to the oracle of the house, to the Most Holy Place, under the wings of the cherubim.

For the cherubim spread their wings over the place where the ark was to be; and the cherubim covered the ark and its poles.

And they removed the bars from the inside; so that the ends of the bars could be seen outside the Ark on the front of the Oracle, but they could not be seen outside; and they have remained there to this day.

There were in the Ark only the two Tablets that Moses had placed there at Horeb, when the Lord made [a covenant] with the children of Israel, after they had come out of Egypt.

Now it came to pass that as the Priests had gone out of the Holy Place, (for all the Priests who were there sanctified themselves, without observing the divisions;)

And the Levites who were singers, according to all their [divisions], both of Asaph, and of Heman, and of Jeduthun, and of their sons, and of their brothers, clothed in fine linen, with cymbals, bagpipes, and violins, stood toward the East of the altar, and with them six twenty Priests, who sounded trumpets;

It came to pass, [I say], that all together sounding trumpets, and singing, and all making their voices resound in unison to praise and celebrate the Lord, raising their voices with trumpets, cymbals, and other musical instruments, praising the Lord for being good, because his mercy endures forever, the house of the Lord was filled with a cloud;

So that the priests could not stand to perform the service because of the cloud; for the glory of the Lord had filled the house of God.

Then Solomon said, "The Lord has said that he will dwell in darkness."

But I have built you, [O Lord!] a house for your dwelling, and a permanent home, so that you may dwell in it forever.

And the King turned his face and blessed all the assembly of Israel, for all the assembly of Israel was standing there.

And he said: Blessed be the Lord, the God of Israel, who with his mouth spoke to David my father, and who also accomplished it by his power, saying:

From the day I brought my people out of the land of Egypt, I have not chosen any city from among all the Tribes of Israel to build a house there, so that my Name might be there; and I have not chosen any man to be leader of my people Israel;

But I have chosen Jerusalem, so that my Name may be there; and I have chosen David so that he may rule my people Israel.

Now David my father desired to build a house for the Name of the Lord, the God of Israel;

But the Lord said to David my father, "As for your desire to build a house for my Name, you have done well to have this thought."

Nevertheless, you shall not build this house, but your son, who shall come from your loins, shall be the one who builds this house for my Name.

The Lord has therefore fulfilled his word that he had spoken; I have succeeded David my father, I have sat on the throne of Israel, as the Lord spoke; I have built this house for the Name of the Lord, the God of Israel,

And I put the Ark there, in which is the covenant of the Lord, which he made with the children of Israel.

Then he stood before the altar of the Lord in the presence of all the assembly of Israel, and he spread out his hands.
For Solomon had made a high canopy of bronze, five cubits long, five cubits wide, and three cubits high; and had placed it in the middle of the [great] court; then he went up on it, and having bowed his knees in the sight of all the assembly of Israel, and stretched out his hands toward heaven,
He said: O Lord God of Israel! There is no God in heaven or on earth like you, who keeps covenant and gives freely to your servants, who walk before you with all their heart;
You have kept for your servant, David my father, what you had promised him. And indeed, what you had promised him with your mouth, you have accomplished with your own hand, as it is now.
Now therefore, O Lord God of Israel! grant to your servant David my father what you have said to him: You shall never be cut off from my presence [as successor] to sit on the throne of Israel; provided only that your sons take heed to their way, to walk in my Law, as you have walked before my presence.
And now, O Lord God of Israel, let your word, which you spoke to David your servant, be confirmed.
But would God really dwell on earth with men? Behold, the heavens, even the highest heavens, cannot contain you, how much less this house that I have built!
However, O Lord my God, consider the prayer of your servant and his supplication, to hear the cry and the prayer that your servant presents before you.
That your eyes be open day and night upon this house, which is the place in which you have promised to put your Name, by granting the prayer that your servant makes to you in this place.
Therefore, hear the supplications of your servant and of your people Israel when they pray to you in this place; hear them from heaven, your dwelling place; hear and forgive.
If anyone sins against his neighbor, and is required to take an oath, to swear an oath with execration, and the oath is taken before your altar in this house;
Hear them from heaven, and execute [what the oath will entail], and judge your servants, giving the wicked their reward, and repaying them according to what they have done; and justifying the righteous, repaying them according to their righteousness.
If your people Israel are defeated by the enemy because they have sinned against you, and then they turn back to you, calling on your Name, and presenting prayers and supplications to you in this house;
Hear them from heaven, and forgive the sin of your people Israel, and bring them back to the land you gave and to their fathers.
When the heavens are shut up, and there is no rain, because [those of Israel] have sinned against you; if they pray to you in this place, and call on your Name, [and] if they turn from their sins, because you have grieved them;
Hear them from heaven, and forgive the sin of your servants and of your people Israel, when you have taught them the right way in which they should walk; and send rain on the land that you have given to your people as an inheritance.
When there is famine, death, blight, mildew, locusts, or worms in the land; and when their enemies besiege them even in their own land, or when there is any plague or disease,
Whoever from all your people Israel will make prayers and supplications to you, according to how each one has acknowledged his own affliction and his own pain, and how each one has stretched out his hands toward this house;
Then hear them from heaven, from your appointed dwelling place, and forgive, and repay each one according to all their deeds, because you will have known their heart; for you alone know the hearts of men;
So that they may fear you, to walk in your ways all the time they live in the land that you gave to our fathers.

And even if a foreigner, who is not of your people Israel, comes from a distant country because of your great Name, and because of your strong hand, and your outstretched arm, then, [I say], when he comes, and makes a request of you in this house;

Hear him from heaven, from your appointed dwelling place, and grant this foreigner his request; so that all the peoples of the earth may know your Name, and fear you, as your people Israel [fear you]; and know that your Name is invoked in this house that I have built.

When your people go out to war against their enemies, by the way by which you sent them, if they pray to you, looking towards this city that you have chosen, and towards this house that I have built for your Name;

Then hear from heaven their prayer and their supplication, and uphold their right. When they have sinned against you (for there is no man who does not sin), and when you are angry with them, you have handed them over to their enemies, and those who have taken them have carried them off captive to some country, whether far away or near;

And that in the land to which they have been taken captive, they will have come to their senses, and repenting, they will beg you in the land of their captivity, saying: We have sinned, we have done wrong, and we have acted criminally.

When they have turned to you with all their heart and with all their soul in the land of their captivity, where they have been led captive, and have offered you their supplication, looking towards their land which you gave to their fathers, and towards this city which you have chosen, and towards this house which I have built for your Name;

Hear from heaven, from your fixed abode, their prayers and their supplications, and uphold their right, and forgive your people who have sinned against you.

Now, O my God! I pray that your eyes may be open, and that your ears may be attentive to the prayer that will be made to you in this place.

Now therefore, O Lord God, arise, [to enter] your rest, you and the ark of your might. O Lord God, let your priests be clothed with salvation, and let your faithful ones rejoice in the good [that you have done for them].

O Eternal God! Do not turn the face of your Anointed One backward, and remember the mercies which you have shown to David your servant.

And as soon as Solomon had finished his prayer, fire came down from heaven and consumed the burnt offering and the sacrifices, and the glory of the Lord filled the Temple.

And the priests could not enter the house of the Lord, because the glory of the Lord had filled his house.

And all the children of Israel, seeing how the fire came down, and how the glory of the Lord was upon the house, bowed down with their faces to the ground on the pavement, and worshiped, and praised the Lord, [saying]: O how good he is, for his grace endures forever.

Now the King and all the people were offering sacrifices before the Lord.

And King Solomon offered a sacrifice of twenty-two thousand oxen and six hundred thousand sheep. Thus the king and all the people dedicated the house of God.

And the priests stood at their posts, and the Levites with the musical instruments of the Lord, which King David had made to praise the Lord, [saying], "His steadfast love endures forever," having the Psalms of David in their hands. The priests also blew trumpets opposite them, and all Israel stood.

And Solomon consecrated the middle of the courtyard that was in front of the house of the Lord; for there he offered the burnt offerings, and the fat of the peace offerings, because the bronze altar that he had made could not hold the burnt offerings, and the cakes, and the fat.

At that time Solomon held a solemn festival for seven days, and with him all Israel, which was a very great multitude of people, assembled from Hamath to the Wadi of Egypt.

And on the eighth day they held a solemn assembly, for they celebrated the dedication of the altar for seven days, and the solemn feast for another seven days.

And on the twenty-third day of the seventh month he let the people go into their tents, rejoicing and with glad hearts, because of the good that the Lord had done to David, and to Solomon, and to Israel his people.

Solomon therefore completed the house of the Lord, and the royal house; and he succeeded in everything that he had planned to do in the house of the Lord, and in his own house.

The Lord appeared again to Solomon at night, and said to him, "I have heard your prayer, and I have chosen this place for myself as a house of sacrifice."

If I shut up the heavens, and there is no rain; and if I command the locusts to devour the earth; and if I send plagues among my people;

And if my people, who bear my name, humble themselves and pray and seek my face and turn from their evil ways, then I will hear from heaven, and I will forgive their sins and heal their land.

My eyes will now be open, and my ears attentive to the prayer that will be offered in this place.

For I have now chosen and consecrated this house, so that my Name may be there forever; and my eyes and my heart will always be there.

And as for you, if you walk before me as David your father walked, doing all that I have commanded you, and [if] you keep my statutes and my ordinances;

Then I will establish the throne of your Kingdom, as I promised to David your father, saying: No successor shall be cut off from you to reign in Israel.

But if you turn away and abandon my statutes and commandments that I have set before you, and go off and serve other gods and bow down before them;

I will uproot them from my land, which I have given them, and I will cast out from before me this house, which I have consecrated to my Name, and I will make it a laughingstock among all peoples.

And everyone who passes by this house, which will have been raised high, will be astonished, and they will say, "Why has the Lord done this to this land and to this house?"

And the answer will be: Because they abandoned the Lord, the God of their fathers, who had brought them out of the land of Egypt, and they clung to other gods, and bowed down to them, and served them, therefore he brought all this evil upon them.

Now he came to the end of the twenty years, during which Solomon built the house of the Lord, and his own house;

He also built the cities that Hiram had given him, and he settled the children of Israel there.

Then Solomon went to Hamath of Zobah, and conquered it.

Solomon also built Tadmor in the desert, and all the fortified cities he built at Hamath.

And he also built upper Beth-horon and lower Beth-horon, fortified cities with walls, gates, and bars.

And Bahalath, and all the fortified cities that Solomon had, and all the cities where he kept his chariots, and the cities where he kept his horsemen, and all that Solomon took pleasure in building in Jerusalem, and in Lebanon, and in all the land of his dominion.

And as for all the people who remained of the Hittites, Amorites, Perizzites, Hivites and Jebusites, who were not of Israel;

Of the people who had remained after them in the land, [and] whom the children of Israel had not completely destroyed, Solomon made them tributaries to this day.

But Solomon did not allow the children of Israel to be enslaved to do his work, but they were men of war, and chief commanders of his captains, and commanders of his chariots, and his men-at-arms.

There were also two hundred and fifty of them, who were the chief officers of those who were appointed [over the works] of King Solomon, who had stewardship over the people.

Now Solomon brought Pharaoh's daughter up from the City of David to the house he had built for her; for he said, "My wife shall not dwell in the house of David king of Israel, because the places into which the Ark of the Lord has entered are holy."

And Solomon offered burnt offerings to the Lord on the altar of the Lord, which he had built opposite the porch.

And even as it fell due each day, offering according to the commandment of Moses on the Sabbath days, and on the new moons, and on the solemn feasts, three times a year, [namely] in the solemn feast of unleavened bread, in the solemn feast of weeks, and in the solemn feast of Tabernacles.

And he appointed, according to the command of David his father, the departments of the priests according to their ministry, and the Levites according to their duties, so that they might praise [God] and perform the service, assisting the priests according to the daily custom. [He also appointed] the gatekeepers to their departments at each gate; for this had been the command of David the man of God. And they did not deviate from the King's command concerning the Priests and Levites, in any matter, nor in what concerned the treasures.

Therefore all the work of Solomon was well prepared, until the day the house of the Lord was founded, and until it was completed, the house of the Lord was thus finished.

Then Solomon went to Hezion-geber and to Eloth on the seashore, which is in the land of Edom.

And Hiram sent ships to him, under the leadership of his servants, and servants experienced in the navy, who went with Solomon's servants to Ophir; and they took from there four hundred and fifty talents of gold, and brought them to King Solomon.

Now the queen of Sheba, having heard of Solomon's fame, came to Jerusalem to test Solomon with obscure questions, having a very large retinue, and camels carrying aromatic things, and a great quantity of gold, and precious stones; and having come to Solomon, she spoke to him of all that was in her heart.

And Solomon explained to her everything she had proposed, so that there was nothing that Solomon did not understand and explain to her.

And the Queen of Sheba, seeing the wisdom of Solomon and the house he had built, And the food on his table, the lodgings of his servants, the order of service of his officers, their garments, his cupbearers, and their garments, and the ascent by which he went up into the house of the Lord, was all swept away from itself.

And she said to the King: What I have heard in my country about your character and your wisdom is true.

And I did not believe what was said, until I came and saw it with my own eyes; and behold, not half the greatness of your wisdom was reported to me; you surpass the report I had heard.

How blessed are your people! How blessed are your servants who continually stand before you, and who hear the words of your wisdom!

Blessed be the Lord your God, who has been pleased with you, and has placed you on his throne to be King for the Lord your God! Because your God loves Israel, to establish them forever, he has made you King over them, to execute justice and righteousness.

Then she gave the King six twenty talents of gold, and an abundance of aromatic things, and precious stones; and there were never since then such aromatic things as those which the Queen of Sheba gave to King Solomon.

And the servants of Hiram, and the servants of Solomon, who had brought gold from Ophir, brought wood from Algummim, and precious stones.

And the King made from this Alummim wood the roads that led to the house of the Lord and to the royal house, and fiddles and bagpipes for the singers. This wood had not been seen before in the land of Judah.

And King Solomon gave the queen of Sheba everything she desired and everything she asked for, except what she had brought to the king. Then she returned home, she and her servants.

The weight of the gold that returned to Solomon each year was six hundred and sixty-six talents of gold;

Without [what was due to him] from the agents of the wholesale merchants, and [without what] was brought to him by the retail merchants, and all the Kings of Arabia, and the Governors of those countries, who brought gold and silver to Solomon.

King Solomon also made two hundred large shields of hammered gold, using six hundred [pieces] of hammered gold for each shield;

And three hundred [other] gold shields stretched with a hammer, using three hundred pieces of gold for each shield; and the King put them in the house of the park of Lebanon.

The King also made a large ivory throne, which he covered with pure gold.

And this throne had six steps, and a golden footstool, made on a slope, and the whole thing was attached to the throne, and armrests on either side of the seat; and two lions were near the armrests.

There were also twelve lions on the six steps of the throne on either side; such as had not been made in any kingdom.

All the dishes in King Solomon's sideboard were of gold, and all the vessels in the house in the park of Lebanon were of fine gold. There was no silver; silver was not valued in Solomon's days.

For the King's ships went to Tarshish with Hiram's servants; and the ships from Tarshish returned once every three years, bringing gold, silver, ivory, monkeys, and peacocks.

Thus King Solomon was greater than all the kings of the earth, both in riches and in wisdom.

And all the kings of the earth sought to see the face of Solomon, to hear the wisdom that God had put in his heart.

And each of them brought him his gift, [namely] silver vessels, gold vessels, clothing, weapons, and aromatic things, [and brought him] horses and mules every year.

Solomon had four thousand stables for horses and chariots; and twelve thousand horsemen, whom he placed in the cities where he kept his chariots, and with the King in Jerusalem.

And he ruled over all the kings, from the river to the land of the Philistines, and as far as the border of Egypt.

And the King made it so that silver was not more valued in Jerusalem than stones; and cedars, than the wild fig trees that are in the plains, so many were there.

For horses were brought out of Egypt for Solomon, and [other things] from all the countries.

The rest of the acts of Solomon, both the first and the last, are they not written in the Book of Nathan the Prophet, and in the prophecy of Ahijah the Shilonite, and in the vision of Jeddo the Seer, concerning Jeroboam son of Nebat?

And Solomon reigned forty years in Jerusalem over all Israel.

Then he slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the City of David his father, and Rehoboam his son reigned in his place.

And Rehoboam went to Shechem, because all Israel had come to Shechem to establish him as king.

Now it came to pass that when Jeroboam son of Nebat, who was in Egypt, where he had fled from before King Solomon, heard of it, he returned from Egypt.

For they had sent to summon him. So Jeroboam and all Israel came and spoke to Rehoboam, saying:

Your father put a heavy yoke on us, but now you must lighten your father's harsh servitude and heavy yoke that he put on us, and we will serve you.

And he answered them, "Return to me in three days"; and the people went away.

And King Rehoboam sought counsel from the elders who had been with Solomon his father when he lived, and said to them, "How and what do you advise me to answer this people?"

And they said to him, "If you act kindly towards these people, and please them, and speak gently to them, they will be your servants forever."

But he disregarded the advice the elders had given him, and sought counsel from the young men who had been raised with him, [and] who were with him.

And he said to them, "What do you advise me to say to these people who have said to me, 'Lighten the yoke that your father put on us?'"

And the young men who had been raised with him answered him, saying, "This is what you are to say to the people who spoke to you and said, 'Your father put a heavy yoke on us, but you lighten it for us': 'What is least in me is greater than my father's loins.

My father put a heavy yoke on you, but I will make your yoke even heavier; my father disciplined you with rods, but I will discipline you with whips.

Three days after Jeroboam, all the people came to Rehoboam, as the King had told them: Return to me in three days.

But the King answered them harshly; for King Rehoboam neglected the advice of the elders.

And he spoke to them according to the advice of the young men, saying: My father put a heavy yoke upon you, but I will make your yoke even heavier; my father disciplined you with rods, but I [will discipline you] with whips.

The King therefore did not listen to the people, for this was led by God, so that the Lord might confirm his word, which he had spoken to Jeroboam son of Nebat, by means of Ahijah the Shilonite.

And when all Israel saw that the king had not listened to them, the people answered the king, saying, "What share do we have in David? We have no inheritance in the son of Jesse. Israel, let every man return to his tents; and you, David, now see to your own house." So all Israel returned to their tents.

But as for the children of Israel who remained in the cities of Judah, Rehoboam reigned over them.

Then King Rehoboam sent Hadoram, who was in charge of the tribute; but the Israelites stoned him to death. And King Rehoboam quickly got into a chariot and fled to Jerusalem.

Thus Israel rebelled against the house of David, to this day.

So Rehoboam came to Jerusalem and assembled the house of Judah and the house of Benjamin, who were one hundred and eighty thousand elite men fit for war, to fight against Israel and to subdue the kingdom in its power.

But the word of the Lord came to Shemaiah, the man of God, saying:

Speak to Rehoboam son of Solomon, king of Judah, and to all the Israelites who are in Judah and Benjamin, saying:

Thus said the Lord: You shall not go up, nor fight against your brothers; return each to his own house; for this has been done by me; and they obeyed the word of the Lord, and returned without going against Jeroboam.

So Rehoboam remained in Jerusalem, and built cities in Judah as fortresses.

He built Bethlehem, Hetam, Tekoah,

Beth-sur, Soco, Hadullam

Gath, Maresa, Ziph,

Adorajim, Lakis, Hazeka,

Zorah, Aijalon, and Hebron, which were fortress cities in Judah and Benjamin.

He therefore fortified these fortresses, and placed governors there, and provisions of food, oil, and wine;

And in each city, shields and javelins, and he fortified them well. Thus Judah and Benjamin were subject to him.

And the priests and Levites who were throughout Israel joined him from all their regions.

For the Levites left their suburbs and their possessions, and came to the [Tribe] of Judah, and to Jerusalem: because Jeroboam and his sons had rejected them, so that they would no longer serve as Priests to the Lord.

For [Jeroboam] had appointed priests for the high places, for the demons, and for the calves he had made.

And after them those from all the Tribes of Israel who had set their hearts to seek the Lord, the God of Israel, came to Jerusalem to sacrifice to the Lord, the God of their fathers.

And they strengthened the Kingdom of Judah, and reinforced Rehoboam son of Solomon, for three years, because they followed the ways of David and Solomon for three years.

Now Rehoboam took as his wife Mahalath, daughter of Jerimoth, son of David; [and]

Abihail, daughter of Eliab, son of Jesse;

She bore him these sons, Jehus, Shemariah, and Zaham.

And after her he took Mahacah, daughter of Absalom, who bore him Abijah, Hattai, Ziza, and Selomith.

But Rehoboam loved Mahacah, daughter of Absalom, more than all his other wives and concubines; for he had taken eighteen wives and sixty concubines, from whom he had twenty-eight sons and sixty daughters.

And Rehoboam appointed Abijah, son of Mahacah, as chief, to be chief over his brothers; for [his intention was] to make him king.

And he wisely decided to scatter all his children throughout all the regions of Judah and Benjamin, [namely] throughout all the fortified cities, and gave them plenty to live on; and he asked for many wives for them.

Now it came to pass that as soon as the Kingdom of Rehoboam was established and strengthened, [Rehoboam] abandoned the Law of the Lord, and all Israel [abandoned it also] with him.

Therefore it came to pass in the fifth year of King Rehoboam, that Shesach king of Egypt came up against Jerusalem, because they had sinned against the Lord.

He had with him 1,200 chariots and 60,000 horsemen, and the people who had come with him from Egypt, namely the Libyans, the Sukians, and the Ethiopians, were without number.

And he took the fortified cities that belonged to Judah, and came as far as Jerusalem.

Then Shemaiah the Prophet came to Rehoboam and to the leaders of Judah who had gathered in Jerusalem because of Shesh, and said to them, "This is what the Lord says: 'You have abandoned me; therefore I have also abandoned you into the hand of Shesh.

Then the leaders of Israel and the King humbled themselves and said, "The Lord is righteous."

And when the Lord saw that they had humbled themselves, the word of the Lord came to Shemaiah, saying, They have humbled themselves; I will not destroy them, but I will soon give them some means of escape, and my wrath will not be poured out on Jerusalem by means of Shisach.

However, they will be enslaved to him, so that they may know what my servitude is, and the servitude of the kingdoms of the earth.

Sisak, King of Egypt, went up against Jerusalem and took the treasures of the house of the Lord and the treasures of the royal house; he took everything, including the golden shields that Solomon had made.

And King Rehoboam made bronze shields instead of those, and put them in the hands of the captains of the archers who guarded the gate of the king's house.

And when the King entered the house of the Lord, the archers came and carried them, and then they brought them back to the chamber of the archers.

Because he humbled himself, the anger of the Lord turned away from him, so that he did not destroy them completely; for there were also good things in Judah.

So King Rehoboam strengthened himself in Jerusalem and reigned. Now Rehoboam was forty-one years old when he began to reign, and he reigned seventeen years in Jerusalem, the city which the Lord had chosen out of all the tribes of Israel to put his Name there; and his mother's name was Naamah, and she was an Hammonite.

But he did what was displeasing to [the Lord]; for he did not set his heart to seek the Lord.

But are not the deeds of Rehoboam, both the first and the last, written in the Books of Shemaiah the Prophet, and of Hiddo the Seer, in the account of the genealogies; with the wars that Rehoboam and Jeroboam had all the time they lived?

And Rehoboam slept with his fathers, and was buried in the City of David; and Abijah his son reigned in his place.

In the eighteenth year of King Jeroboam, Abijah began to reign over Judah.

And he reigned three years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Micaia, and she was the daughter of Uriel of Gibbah. Now there was war between Abijah and Jeroboam.

And Abijah began the battle with an army composed of valiant men for war; they were four hundred thousand elite men. Now Jeroboam had arrayed against him the battle with eight hundred thousand elite men, strong and valiant.

And Abijah stood on the mountain of Zemarajim, which is in the mountains of Ephraim, and said: Jeroboam and all Israel, listen to me.

Do you not know that the Lord, the God of Israel, gave the kingdom to David over Israel forever, to him, [I say], and to his sons, by an inviolable covenant?

But Jeroboam son of Nebat, servant of Solomon son of David, rose up and rebelled against his Lord.

And worthless men, imitators of the Devil, gathered around him, and strengthened themselves against Rehoboam, Solomon's son, because Rehoboam was a child and of little courage, and did not stand firm against them.

And now you presume to stand firm against the Kingdom of the Lord, which is in the hands of the sons of David, because you are a great multitude of people, and the golden calves, which Jeroboam made for you to be your gods, are with you.

Have you not rejected the priests of the Lord, the sons of Aaron and the Levites? And have you not appointed priests for yourselves like the peoples of the other countries? All those who came with a young calf and seven rams to be consecrated, and to be priests of what is not God?

But as for us, the Lord is our God, and we have not forsaken him; and the priests who minister to the Lord are children of Aaron, and the Levites [are employed] in their functions.

And the burnt offerings are burned to the Lord every morning and every evening, along with the incense of aromatic herbs. The bread of the Presence is arranged on the pure table, and the golden lampstand with its lamps is lit every evening; for we guard what the Lord our God desires to be guarded, but you have forsaken it.

Therefore, behold, God is with us to be our leader, and his priests, and the trumpets of resounding alarm to sound against you. Children of Israel, do not fight against the Lord, the God of your fathers, for it will not succeed you.

But Jeroboam caused an ambush to turn around, so that it would fall on them from behind; so that the [Israelites] came face to face with Judah, and the ambush was behind them.

And those of Judah looked, and behold, they had the battle in front and behind, and they cried out to the Lord, and the priests sounded the trumpets.

Each one of Judah also shouted for joy, and it came to pass, as they shouted for joy, that God struck Jeroboam and all Israel, before Abijah and Judah.

And the children of Israel fled from before Judah, because God had delivered them into their hands.
Abijah and his people made a very great slaughter of them, so that five hundred thousand elite men of Israel fell, mortally wounded.
So the children of Israel were humbled at that time, and the children of Judah were strengthened, because they relied on the Lord, the God of their fathers.
And Abijah pursued Jeroboam, and took from him these cities; Bethel, and the cities of its jurisdiction; Jesanah, and the cities of its jurisdiction; Hephrajim, and the cities of its jurisdiction.
And Jeroboam had no more strength during the time of Abijah; but the Lord struck him down, and he died.
So Abijah became strong, and took fourteen wives, and by them he had twenty-two sons and sixteen daughters.
The rest of Abija's deeds, actions, and words are written in the Memoirs of Hiddo the Prophet.
Then Abijah slept with his ancestors and was buried in the City of David, and Asa his son reigned in his place. In his days the land had rest for ten years.
Now Asa did what was good and right before the Lord his God.
For he removed the altars [of the gods] of the foreigners, and the high places, and broke the statues, and cut down the groves.
And he commanded Judah to seek the Lord, the God of their fathers, and to observe the Law and the Commandments.
And he also removed the high places and tabernacles from all the cities of Judah; and the kingdom was at rest under his rule.
He also built fortified cities in Judah, because the land had rest; and during those years there was no war against him, because the Lord gave him rest.
For he said to Judah, "Let us build these cities and surround them with walls, towers, gates, and bars, while we are masters of the land; because we have called upon the Lord our God; we have called upon him, and he has given us rest on every side; therefore they built and prospered.
Now Asa had in his army three hundred thousand men from Judah, bearing shields and javelins; and two hundred and eighty thousand from Benjamin, bearing shields and shooting bows, all strong and valiant.
And Zeraph the Ethiopian came out against them with an army of one million [men], and three hundred chariots, and he came as far as Maresa.
And Asa went to meet him, and the battle was drawn up in the valley of Zephath, near Mareshah.
Then Asa cried out to the Lord his God, "Lord, it is not more difficult for you to help the one who has no strength than for the one who has a great army. Help us, Lord our God, for we have relied on you and have come in your name against this vast army. You are the Lord our God; let no one prevail against you!"
And the Lord struck the Ethiopians before Asa and before Judah, so that the Ethiopians fled.
And Asa and the people who were with him pursued them as far as Gerar; and so many Ethiopians fell that they had no more strength; for they were defeated before the Lord and before his army; and a very great amount of plunder was brought back.
They also attacked all the cities around Gerar, because the terror of the Lord was upon them; and they plundered all these cities; for there was in these cities a great deal of spoil.
They also cut down the tents of the flocks, and took away a large number of sheep and camels; after which they returned to Jerusalem.
Then the Spirit of God came upon Hazaria son of Hoded.
Therefore he went out to meet Asa and said to him, "Asa, and all Judah and Benjamin, listen to me. The Lord is with you while you are with him; if you seek him, he will be found by you, but if you forsake him, he will forsake you.”

But Israel has long been without the true God, without a teaching priest, and without the Law;

But when in their distress they turned to the Lord, the God of Israel, and sought him, they found him.

At that time there was no safety for those who travelled because there was great unrest among all the inhabitants of the country.

For one nation was trampled upon by another, and one city by another, because God had troubled them with all kinds of distress.

Therefore, be strong, and do not let your hands be sluggish; for there is a reward for your works.

Now when Asa heard these words, and the prophecy of Hod the prophet, he was strengthened, and he removed the abominations from all the land of Judah and Benjamin, and from the cities which he had taken in the hill country of Ephraim, and he renewed the altar of the Lord which was before the porch of the Lord.

Then he gathered together all Judah and all Benjamin, and those of Ephraim, Manasseh, and Simeon who were with them; for many of Israel had submitted to him, seeing that the Lord their God was with him.

So they assembled in Jerusalem in the third month of the fifteenth year of Asa's reign;

And on that day they sacrificed to the Lord seven hundred oxen and seven thousand sheep of the plunder they had brought.

And they returned to the covenant, to seek the Lord, the God of their fathers, with all their heart and with all their soul.

So much so that all those who did not seek the Lord, the God of Israel, both the small and the great; both men and women, were to be put to death.

And they swore to the Lord with a loud voice and with loud shouts of joy, to the sound of trumpets and horns.

And all Judah rejoiced over that oath, because they had sworn with all their heart and had sought the Lord with all their affection. Therefore they found him, and the Lord gave them rest on every side.

He even removed the regency from Mahaca, the mother of King Asa, because she had made a mockery for a grove. Furthermore, Asa tore the mockery she had made to pieces, smashed it, and burned it near the Kidron Valley.

But the high places were not taken from Israel, and nevertheless Asa's heart was upright all his life.

And he returned to the house of God the things which his father had consecrated, and which he himself had also consecrated, of silver, gold, and vessels.

And there was no war until the thirty-fifth year of Asa's reign.

In the thirty-sixth year of Asa's reign, Bahasa King of Israel came up against Judah and built Ramah, so that no one would go out or come in to Asa King of Judah.

And Asa took the gold and silver from the treasuries of the house of the Lord and of the royal house, and sent to Ben-Hadad, king of Syria, who was living in Damascus, to tell him:

There is a covenant between us, and between my father and yours; behold, I am sending you silver and gold; go, break the covenant that you have with Bahasa King of Israel, and let him depart from me.

And Benhadad agreed with King Asa, and sent the captains of his army against the cities of Israel, who struck Hijon, Dan, Abelmajim, and all the stores of the cities of Naphtali.

And it came to pass that as soon as Bahasa heard of it, he withdrew from building Rama, and stopped his work.

Then King Asa took all those from Judah, and they carried away the stones and timber from Ramah that Bahasa was building, and he built Gebah and Mizpah with them.

And at that time Hanani the Seer came to Asa King of Judah, and said to him, “Because you have relied on the King of Syria, and have not relied on the Lord your God, therefore the army of the King of Syria has escaped from your hand.” Were not the Ethiopians and Libyans a very large army, with chariots and a great number of horsemen? But because you relied on the Lord, he delivered them into your hands.

For the eyes of the Lord look throughout the earth, to show himself powerful on behalf of those whose hearts are pure toward him. You have done foolishly in this, for from now on you will always have wars.

And Asa was angry with the Seer, and put him in prison; for he was very indignant with him because of this. Asa also oppressed some of the people at that time. These are the acts of Asa, both the first and the last; they are written in the Book of the Kings of Judah and Israel.

And Asa was sick with his feet in the thirty-ninth year of his reign, and his illness was severe; yet he did not seek the Lord in his illness, but the physicians.

Then Asa slept with his fathers, and died in the forty-first year of his reign.

And they buried him in his tomb which he had dug for himself in the City of David, and they laid him in a bed which he had filled with aromatic things, and spices mixed by the art of perfumer, and they burned them on him in great abundance.

Then Jehoshaphat his son reigned in his place, and strengthened himself against Israel.

For he placed troops in all the fortified cities of Judah, and garrisons in the land of Judah, and in the cities of Ephraim which Asa his father had taken.

And the Lord was with Jehoshaphat, because he followed the first way of David his father, and did not seek the Baalites.

But he sought the God of his father, and walked in his commandments, and not in the ways of Israel.

The Lord therefore established the kingdom in his hands; and all those of Judah brought gifts to Jehoshaphat, so that he had great riches and great glory.

And applying his heart more and more to the ways of the Lord, he removed also the high places and the groves from Judah.

And in the third year of his reign, he sent some of his chief governors, namely Benhazil, Hobadiah, Zechariah, Nathanael, and Micaiah, to instruct [the people] in the cities of Judah;

And with them were Levites, [namely] Shemaiah, Nethaniah, Zebadiah, Hazael, Semiramoth, Jehonatham, Adonijah, Tobiah, and Tob-adonijah, Levites; and with them Elisamah and Jehoram, Priests;

They taught in Judah, having with them the Book of the Law of the Lord; and they went around to all the cities of Judah, teaching the people.

And the fear of the Lord was upon all the kingdoms of the countries that were all around Judah, so that they did not make war against Jehoshaphat.

Jehoshaphat was also brought gifts from the Philistines and tax money; and the Arabs brought him flocks, namely, seven thousand seven hundred sheep and seven thousand seven hundred goats.

Thus Jehoshaphat rose to the highest degree of glory; and he built castles and fortified cities in Judah.

He had great possessions in the cities of Judah, and in Jerusalem strong and valiant warriors.

And this is their census according to the house of their fathers. The leaders of the thousands of Judah were Hadna, captain, and with him three hundred thousand mighty men;

And after him, Johanan the captain, and with him two hundred and eighty thousand;

And after him Hamasiah son of Zicri, who had willingly offered himself to the Lord, and with him two hundred thousand mighty men;

And from Benjamin, Eliadah, a mighty and valiant man, and with him two hundred thousand men armed with bows and shields;

And after him Jehozabad, and with him one hundred and eighty thousand men equipped for battle.

These were the ones who served the King, besides those whom the King had placed in the fortified cities throughout the land of Judah.

Now Jehoshaphat, having great wealth and great glory, made an alliance with Ahab. And after some years he went down to Ahab in Samaria, and Ahab killed for himself and for the people who were with him a great number of sheep and cattle, and persuaded him to go up against Ramoth-Gilead.

For Ahab, King of Israel, said to Jehoshaphat King of Judah: Will you not come with me against Ramoth-gilead? And he [answered] him: Count on me as on yourself, and on my people as on your people; [we will go] with you to this war.

Jehoshaphat also said to the King of Israel: I beg you to inquire today of the word of the Lord.

And the King of Israel assembled four hundred Prophets, to whom he said: Shall we go to war against Ramoth-Gilead, or shall I refrain? And they answered: Go up; for God will deliver it into the hands of the King.

But Jehoshaphat said, "Is there no other prophet of the Lord here yet, so that we may inquire of him?"

And the king of Israel said to Jehoshaphat, "There is one more man through whom we can inquire of the Lord, but I hate him, because he never prophesies anything good about me, but always bad; he is Micaiah son of Imlah." And Jehoshaphat said, "Let not the king say such a thing."

Then the King of Israel summoned a eunuch and said to him, "Bring Micah son of Imlah quickly."

Now the King of Israel and Jehoshaphat King of Judah were sitting, each on his throne, clothed in his robes; they were sitting in the square near the entrance of the gate of Samaria, and all the Prophets were prophesying in their presence.

Then Zidkiah son of Kenahana made himself iron horns and said, "Thus says the Lord, you shall gore the Syrians with these horns until you have completely destroyed them."

And all the Prophets prophesied the same thing, saying: Go up to Ramoth-gilead, and you will prosper, and the Lord will deliver it into the hand of the King.

Now the messenger who had gone to summon Micaiah spoke to him, saying: Behold, the Prophets all with one voice predict happiness for the King, so I pray you that your word may be like that of one of them, and prophesy happiness for him.

But Micaiah answered, "As surely as the Lord lives, I will say whatever my God says."

So he came to the King; and the King said to him, Micaiah, shall we go to war against Ramoth-Gilead, or shall I refrain? And he answered, Go up, and you will prosper, and they will be delivered into your hands.

And the King said to him, "How many times shall I adjure you to tell me only the truth in the Name of the Lord?"

And [Micah] answered: I saw all Israel scattered on the mountains, like a flock of sheep without a shepherd; and the Lord said: These are without a lord; let each one return to his home in peace.

Then the King of Israel said to Jehoshaphat: Did I not tell you that he never prophesies anything good about me, but only bad?

And [Micah] said: Hear the word of the Lord. I saw the Lord sitting on his throne, and all the host of heaven standing on his right hand and on his left.

And the Lord said, "Who will entice Ahab king of Israel to go up and fall in Ramoth-gilead?" And he added, "One says one way, and another says another."

Then a spirit came forward and stood before the Lord and said, "I will bring him there." And the Lord said to him, "How?"

And he answered, "I will go out and be a lying spirit in the mouth of all his prophets." And [the Lord] said, "You will indeed entice him, and you will succeed; go out and do it.”

Therefore, behold, the Lord has put a lying spirit in the mouth of your prophets, and the Lord has pronounced evil against you.

Then Zidkiah son of Kenahana approached and struck Micaiah on the cheek and said to him, “By what way did the spirit of the Lord depart from me to speak to you?”

And Micaiah answered: Behold, you will see it on the day you go from room to room to hide.

Then the King of Israel said: Let Micaiah be taken, and let him be brought to Amon, the captain of the city, and to Joash the king's son;

And let them be told: Thus says the King: Put this man in prison, and give him only a little bread to eat and a little water [to drink], until I return in peace.

And Micaiah answered, “If you ever return in peace, the Lord will not have spoken through me.” He also said, “Hear this, all you people who are here.”

The King of Israel therefore went up with Jehoshaphat King of Judah against Ramoth-Gilead.

And the King of Israel said to Jehoshaphat, “Let me disguise myself and go to battle, but you put on your own clothes.” So the King of Israel disguised himself, and they went to battle.

But the King of the Syrians had commanded the captains of his chariots, saying: You shall fight against no one except the King of Israel.

So it came to pass that as soon as the chariot captains saw Jehoshaphat, they said, “This is the king of Israel!” and they surrounded him to fight. But Jehoshaphat cried out, and the Lord helped him; and God led them away from him.

But as soon as the chariot captains saw that it was not the King of Israel, they turned away from him.

Then someone shot with all his might from his bow; and he struck the King of Israel between the tassets and the harness; and [the King] said to his charioteer, Turn your hand, and take me out of the camp; for I am badly wounded.

There was a very fierce battle that day, and the King of Israel remained in his chariot, facing the Syrians, until evening, and he died around sunset.

And Jehoshaphat King of Judah returned safely to his house in Jerusalem.

And Jehu son of Hanani the Seer went out to meet King Jehoshaphat, and said to him, “Have you then given help to the wicked, and do you love those who hate the Lord?

Because of this, indignation is upon you from the Lord.”

But some good things were found in you; since you removed the thickets from the land, and you set your heart to seek God.

From that time Jehoshaphat remained in Jerusalem; however, he again reviewed the people from Beersheba to the hill country of Ephraim; and he brought them back to the Lord, the God of their fathers.

And he appointed judges throughout the land, in all the fortified cities of Judah, from city to city.

And he said to the judges, “Consider what you will do, for you are not exercising justice from a man, but from the Lord, who is in your midst in judgment.”

Now therefore let the fear of the Lord be upon you; take heed to this, [and] do it, for there is no iniquity with the Lord our God, nor partiality, nor acceptance of bribes.

Jehoshaphat also established some of the Levites, priests, and leaders of the fathers of Israel in Jerusalem for the judgment of the Lord and for the trials; for they returned to Jerusalem.

And he commanded them, saying: You shall act thus in the fear of the Lord, with faithfulness, and with integrity of heart.

And as for all the disputes that will come before you from your brothers who live in their cities, when it comes to judging between murder and murder, between law and commandment, between statutes and ordinances, you shall instruct them, so that they may not be found guilty before the Lord, and that his indignation may not be upon you and your brothers; you shall therefore act in this way, and you will not be found guilty.

And behold, Amariah the chief priest shall be over you in all matters concerning the Lord; and Zebadiah son of Ishmael shall be in charge of the house of Judah in all matters concerning the king; and the Levite officials shall be before you. Be strong, and do this, and the Lord will be with the righteous.

After these things the children of Moab and the children of Hammon came, for the Hammonites had joined with the Moabites to wage war against Jehoshaphat.

And they came and reported to Jehoshaphat, saying, "A great multitude of people have come against you from the parts of the sea and from Syria; and behold, they are at Hazazon-tamar, which is Hengedi."

Then Jehoshaphat was afraid, and resolved to seek the Lord, and proclaimed a fast throughout all Judah.

So Judah was gathered together to ask for help from the Lord; and people came from all the cities of Judah to call on the Lord.

And Jehoshaphat stood in the assembly of Judah and Jerusalem in the house of the Lord, before the new court.

And he said: O Lord! God of our fathers, are you not the God who is in heaven, and who rules over all the kingdoms of the nations? And indeed in your hand are strength and power, so that no one can resist you.

Is it not you, O our God, who drove out the inhabitants of this land from before your people Israel, and gave it forever to the descendants of Abraham, who loved you?

So they lived there and built a sanctuary for your Name, saying:

If any harm comes upon us, [namely] the sword of vengeance, or plague, or famine, we will stand before this house and in your presence; because your Name is in this house, we will cry out to you because of our distress, you will hear us, and you will deliver us.

Now here are the children of Hammon and Moab, and those of Mount Seir, among whom you did not allow the children of Israel to pass when they came from the land of Egypt, for they turned away from them, and they did not destroy them;

Behold, to reward us, they come to drive us out of your inheritance, which you have made us possess.

O our God! Will you not judge them? For we have no strength to stand against this great multitude that is coming against us, and we do not know what we should do; but our eyes are on you.

And all the people of Judah stood before the Lord, with their families, their wives, and their children.

Then the Spirit of the Lord came upon Jahaziel, son of Zechariah, son of Beneiah, son of Jehiel, son of Mattaniah, a Levite from among the descendants of Asaph, in the midst of the assembly.

And he said, "All you people of Judah, and you who live in Jerusalem, and you, King Jehoshaphat, listen carefully. This is what the Lord says to you: Do not be afraid or dismayed because of this vast army, for the battle is not yours, but God's."

Go down to them tomorrow; behold, they will come up by the ascent of Zitz, and you will find them at the end of the stream, opposite the desert of Jeruel.

It will not be for you to fight in this battle; stand up, stand firm, and see the deliverance the Lord will give you. Judah and Jerusalem, do not be afraid or discouraged; go out tomorrow to meet them, for the Lord will be with you.

Then Jehoshaphat bowed with his face to the ground, and all Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem fell down before the Lord, prostrating themselves before the Lord.

And the Levites from among the children of the Kohathites, and from among the children of the Korahites, stood up to praise the Lord, the God of Israel, with a loud and resounding voice.

Then they rose early in the morning and went out to the Desert of Tekoah. As they were going out, Jehoshaphat stood and said, "Judah and people of Jerusalem, listen to me: Believe in the Lord your God and you will be safe; believe his prophets and you will prosper.”

Then, having consulted with the people, he appointed men to sing to the Lord and to praise his holy majesty, [who], marching before the army, said: “Give thanks to the Lord, for his steadfast love endures forever.”

And at the hour when they began the song of triumph and praise, the Lord set ambushes against the children of Hammon, the Moabites, and those of Mount Seir, who came against Judah, so that they were defeated.

For the children of Hammon and the Moabites rose up against the inhabitants of Mount Seir, to destroy them in the manner of the forbidden, and to exterminate them; and when they had finished exterminating the inhabitants of Seir, they helped each other to destroy each other.

And those from Judah came to the place of Mizpah in the desert, and looking towards this multitude, behold, they were all bodies fallen on the ground, without one having escaped.

So Jehoshaphat and his people came to plunder their spoil, and they found great riches among the dead, and precious garments, and they took so much of it that they could no longer carry it; they plundered the spoil for three days, for there was plenty of it.

Then on the fourth day they gathered together in the valley [called] of blessing, because there they blessed the Lord; therefore that place has been called the valley of blessing to this day.

And all the men of Judah and Jerusalem, with Jehoshaphat leading the way, turned their faces to return to Jerusalem with joy: for the Lord had filled them with joy because of their enemies.

And they entered Jerusalem into the house of the Lord, with bagpipes, violins, and trumpets.

And the fear of God was upon all the kingdoms of that land, when they heard that the Lord had fought against the enemies of Israel.

Thus the kingdom of Jehoshaphat was at rest, because his God gave him rest all around.

Jehoshaphat therefore reigned over Judah. He was thirty-five years old when he began to reign, and he reigned twenty-five years in Jerusalem; his mother's name was Hazuba, and she was the daughter of Shili.

He followed the way of Asa his father, and did not turn aside from it, doing what was right before the Lord.

However, the high places were not removed, because the people had not yet disposed their hearts towards the God of their fathers.

Now the rest of the acts of Jehoshaphat, both the first and the last, are written in the Memoirs of Jehu son of Hanani, as it was recorded in the Book of the Kings of Israel.

After that Jehoshaphat King of Judah joined Ahaziah King of Israel, who was only concerned with doing harm.

And he partnered with him to build ships and send them to Tarshish; and they built these ships at Hezjongeber.

Then Eliezer son of Dodavah the Mareshite prophesied against Jehoshaphat, saying, “Because you have joined forces with Ahaziah, the Lord has destroyed your works.” So the ships were wrecked, and they could not go to Tarshish.

Then Jehoshaphat slept with his fathers and was buried with them in the City of David; and Joram his son reigned in his place.

He had brothers sons of Jehoshaphat, namely Hazaria, Jehiel, Zechariah, Hazaria, Michael, and Shephatiah; all these were sons of Jehoshaphat, King of Israel.

Now their father had given them great gifts of silver, gold, and exquisite things, with fortified cities in Judah; but he had given the Kingdom to Joram, because he was the firstborn.

And Joram, having risen to the kingdom of his father, strengthened himself, and killed with the sword all his brothers, and some of the leaders of Israel. Joram was thirty-two years old when he began to reign, and he reigned eight years in Jerusalem.

And he followed the ways of the Kings of Israel, as the house of Ahab had done; for Ahab's daughter was his wife; so he did what was displeasing to the Lord. However, the Lord did not want to destroy the house of David, because of the covenant he had made with David, and according to what he had said, that he would give him and his sons a Lamp forever.

In his time, the people of Edom rebelled against the obedience of Judah and established a king over them.

Therefore Joram marched [towards Zahir] with his captains and all the chariots he had, and having risen by night he defeated the Idumeans who were around him, and all the governors of the chariots.

Nevertheless, the Edomites rebelled against obedience to Judah, to this day. At that same time, Libnah rebelled against obedience to [Joram], because he had abandoned the Lord, the God of his fathers.

He also made high places in the mountains of Judah, and caused the inhabitants of Jerusalem to commit fornication, and he also drove Judah there.

Then a letter was brought to him from Elijah the Prophet, saying: This is what the Lord, the God of David your father, says: Because you have not followed the way of Jehoshaphat your father, nor the way of Asa king of Judah;

But you have followed the ways of the Kings of Israel, and you have caused those of Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem to commit fornication, just as the house of Ahab caused [Israel] to commit fornication, and you have even killed your brothers, your father's family, who were better than you;

Behold, the Lord is going to strike your people, your children, your wives, and all your livestock with great plagues.

And you will have serious illnesses, an intestinal disease, until your bowels come out due to the force of the disease, which will last two years.

So the Lord stirred up against Joram the spirit of the Philistines and of the Arabs who lived near the Ethiopians;

They came up against Judah and swept through the whole land and plundered all the riches that were found in the king's house, and even took his children and his wives captive; so that he had no son left except Jehoahaz, the youngest of his children. And after all these things the Lord struck him in his bowels with an incurable disease.

And it came to pass that one day after another, and as the time of two years came to expire, his bowels came forth by the force of the disease; thus he died with great pains; and the people did not burn aromatic things over him, as had been done over his fathers.

He was thirty-two years old when he began to reign, and he reigned eight years in Jerusalem; he departed without being mourned, and was buried in the City of David, but not in the tombs of the Kings.

And the inhabitants of Jerusalem made Ahaziah, the youngest of his sons, king in his place, because the troops, who had come with the Arabs in the form of a camp, had killed all those who were older than him; so Ahaziah, son of Joram, king of Judah, reigned.

Ahaziah was forty-two years old when he began to reign, and he reigned one year in Jerusalem; his mother's name was Hathaliah, and she was the daughter of Homri.

And he followed the ways of Ahab's house; for his mother was his counselor in doing evil.

So he did what was displeasing to the Lord, like those of the house of Ahab; because they were his advisers after the death of his father, to his harm.

Even governing himself according to their advice, he went with Joram son of Ahab,

King of Israel, to war at Ramoth-Gilead against Hazael King of Syria, where the Syrians struck Joram; Who returned to Jezrehel to be healed of the wounds he had received at Ramah, when he was waging war against Hazael King of Syria; and Hazarah son of Joram, King of Judah, went down to Jezrehel to see Joram the son of Ahab, because he was sick. And this was the complete ruin of Ahaziah, who proceeded from God, because he went to Joram; for after arriving there, he went out with Joram against Jehu son of Nimshi, whom the Lord had anointed to cut off the house of Ahab. For when Jehu was taking revenge on the house of Ahab, he found the leaders of Judah, and the sons of Ahaziah's brothers, who served Ahaziah, and killed them. And having sought Ahaziah, who had hidden himself in Samaria, they seized him and brought him to Jehu, and they killed him and buried him; for they said, "This is the son of Jehoshaphat, who sought the Lord with all his heart." So the house of Ahaziah was unable to preserve the kingdom. And Hathaliah, the mother of Ahaziah, having seen that her son was dead, arose and exterminated all the royal blood of the house of Judah. But Jehosabath, daughter of King Joram, took Joash, son of Ahaziah, and hid him from among the king's sons who were being put to death, and put him and his nurse in the bedchamber. Thus Jehosabath, daughter of King Joram and wife of Jehoiada the priest, hid him from the sight of Hathaliah, because she was the sister of Ahaziah, so that Hathaliah did not put him to death. And he was hidden with them in the house of God for six years; however, Hathaliah reigned over the land. But in the seventh year Jehoiada strengthened himself, and took with him some centurions; [namely] Hazaria son of Jeroham, Ishmael son of Jehohanan, Hazaria son of Hobed, Mahaseiah son of Hadaiah, Elisaphat son of Zichri, and made a covenant with them. And they went around Judah, and gathered together from all the cities of Judah the Levites, and the leaders of the fathers of Israel, and came to Jerusalem. And all this assembly made a covenant with the King in the house of God, and [Jehoiada] said to them, "Behold, the King's son shall reign as the Lord has spoken concerning the sons of David." This is what you will do: The third part of those of you who come in during the week, both the Priests and the Levites, will be at the gate of Sippim. And the third part shall stand at the house of the King; and the third part at the foundation gate; and let all the people be in the courts of the house of the Lord. No one shall enter the house of the Lord except the priests and the Levites who serve; they shall enter because they are consecrated; and the rest of the people shall keep watch for the Lord. And these Levites shall surround the King all around, each with his weapons in his hand; but whoever enters the house shall be put to death; and stand with the King when he goes out and when he enters. So the Levites and all those of Judah did everything that Jehoiada the Priest had commanded, and each took his men, both those who came in on the week and those who went out on the week; for Jehoiada the Priest had not given leave to the departments. And Jehoiada the priest gave to the centurions halberds, shields, and washers, which had belonged to King David, and which were in the house of God. And he arranged all the people around the King; each holding his weapons in his hand, from the right side of the Temple to the left side of the Temple, both for the altar and for the Temple. Then they brought in the King's son, and placed the crown and the testimony on him, and made him King; and Jehoiada and his sons anointed him, and said, Long live the King! And Hathaliah, hearing the noise of the people running and singing praises [to God] around the King, came to the people in the house of the Lord. And she looked, and behold, the King was near his pillar at the entrance, and the captains and the trumpeters were near the King, and all the people of the land were rejoicing, and trumpets were blowing; the singers also [were singing] with musical instruments, and showing how they should sing praises [to God]; and at this Hathaliah tore her clothes, and said: Conspiracy! Conspiracy! Then Jehoiada the priest brought out the centurions who were in charge of the army, and said to them, "Take her out of the ranks; and whoever follows her shall be put to death by the sword; for the priest had said, 'Do not put her to death in the house of the Lord.'"

So they made room for her; and she returned to the King's house by the entrance of the Horse Gate, and they killed her there.

And Jehoiada, all the people, and the King made this covenant, that they would be the people of the Lord.

Then all the people entered the house of Bahal, and they demolished it; they smashed its altars and its images, and killed Mattan, the priest of Bahal, before the altars.

Jehoiada also restored the offices of the house of the Lord, in the hands of the Levite priests, whom David had distributed for the house of the Lord, so that they might offer burnt offerings to the Lord, as it is written in the Law of Moses, with joy and with songs, according to the arrangement that David had made.

He also appointed gatekeepers at the gates of the house of the Lord, so that no one defiled for any reason might enter it.

He then took the centurions, the most important men, those who were appointed to authority over the people, and all the people of the land; and he brought the King down from the house of the Lord, and they entered through the middle of the high gate into the house of the King; then they made the King sit on the royal throne.

And all the people of the land rejoiced, and the city remained quiet, although Hathaliah had been put to death with the sword.

Joash was seven years old when he began to reign, and he reigned forty years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Zibiah, and she was from Beersheba.

Now Joash did what was right before the Lord, throughout all the days of Jehoiada the Priest.

And Jehoiada gave him two wives, by whom he had sons and daughters.

After that, Joash resolved to renew the house of the Lord.

And he assembled the Priests and the Levites, and said to them, Go throughout the cities of Judah, and collect money from all Israel, to repair the house of your God, year by year, and hasten this matter; but the Levites did not hasten it.

And the King summoned Jehoiada the chief priest and said to him, "Why have you not caused the Levites to bring from Judah, and Jerusalem, and all Israel, the tribute commanded by Moses the servant of the Lord, for the Tabernacle of the Testimony?"

For the wicked Hathaliah [and] her children had plundered the house of God, and they had even appropriated for the Bahalites all the things consecrated to the house of the Lord.

Therefore the King commanded that a chest be made, and that it be placed outside the door of the house of the Lord.

Then it was proclaimed in Judah and Jerusalem that they should bring to the Lord the tax that Moses the servant of God had imposed on Israel in the wilderness.

And all the leaders and all the people rejoiced; and they brought [the money], and threw it into the chest, until [the repair of the Temple] had been completed.

Now when the Levites carried the chest according to the King's order, which was done as soon as it was seen that there was a lot of money; the King's Secretary, and the Clerk of the chief Priest came, and emptied the chest, then they brought it back, and put it back in its place. They did this every day; and a large amount of money was amassed.

And the King and Jehoiada distributed it to those who were in charge of the work of the service of the house of the Lord, who hired stonemasons and carpenters to rebuild the house of the Lord, and workers working in iron and bronze to repair the house of the Lord.

Those who were in charge of the work labored, and it was fully completed through their efforts, so that they restored the house of God to its proper state and established it.

And as soon as they had finished, they brought before the King and before Jehoiada the rest of the silver, with which he made utensils for the house of the Lord; [namely] utensils for service and for offerings, and cups and other utensils of gold and silver; and they continually offered burnt offerings in the house of the Lord, throughout the days of Jehoiada.

Now Jehoiada, having grown old and full of days, died. He was one hundred and thirty years old when he died.

And they buried him in the City of David with the kings, because he had done good in Israel, toward God, and toward his house.

But after Jehoiada died, the leaders of Judah came and bowed down before the King; and the King listened to them.

And they abandoned the house of the Lord, the God of their fathers, and [attached themselves] to the service of the groves, and of false gods; therefore the anger of [the Lord was kindled] against Judah and against Jerusalem, because they had made themselves guilty in this.

And although he sent prophets to them to call them back to the Lord, and although [these prophets] warned them [to] return, they would not listen.

And the Spirit of God also clothed Zechariah son of Jehoiada the priest, so that he stood above the people and said to them, "God has said this: Why do you transgress the commandments of the Lord? For you shall not prosper; because you have forsaken the Lord, he will also forsake you."

And they conspired against him, and stoned him to death, by the command of the King, in the courtyard of the house of the Lord;

So King Joash did not remember the kindness that Jehoiada, Zechariah's father, had shown him; but he killed his son, who, as he died, said: May the Lord see him, and ask for him again!

And it came to pass that at the end of a year the army of Syria came up against him, and came to Judah and Jerusalem, and [the Syrians] destroyed all the leaders of the people, and sent all their plunder to the King in Damascus.

And although the army from Syria was small, the Lord nevertheless delivered a very large army into their hands, because they had forsaken the Lord, the God of their fathers. Thus [the Syrians] set Joash as an example of judgment.

And when they had withdrawn from him, because they had left him in great languor, his servants conspired against him, because of the murder of the sons of Jehoiada the Priest, and killed him on his bed; and so he died, and they buried him in the City of David, but they did not bury him in the tombs of the Kings.

And these were the ones who conspired against him: Zabad, son of Simhat, wife of Hammonite, and Jehozabad, son of Simrith, wife of Moabite.

Now concerning his children, and the great collection of money that had been made for him, and the rebuilding of the house of God, behold, these things are written in the Records of the Book of Kings; and Amaziah his son reigned in his place.

Amaziah began to reign at the age of twenty-five, and he reigned twenty-nine years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Jehohaddam, and she was from Jerusalem.

He did what was right before the Lord; but not from a perfect heart.

But it happened that after he was established in his kingdom, he put to death his servants who had killed his father the King.

But he did not put their children to death, according to what is written in the Law, in the Book of Moses, in which the Lord commanded, saying, "Fathers shall not die for their children, nor children die for their fathers; but each shall die for his own sin."

Then Amaziah assembled those of Judah; and established them according to the families of the fathers, according to the captains of thousands and of hundreds, throughout all Judah and Benjamin; and he took a census of them from the age of twenty years, and above; and there were found three hundred thousand elite men, marching in battle formation, and carrying the javelin and the shield.

He also took into his pay one hundred thousand strong and valiant men from those of Israel, for one hundred talents of silver.

But a man of God came to him and said, "O king, do not let the army of Israel march with you, for the Lord is not with Israel; they are all children of Ephraim."

Otherwise, go, do, strengthen yourself for the battle; [but] God will cause you to fall before the enemy; for God has the power to help and to cause to fall.

And Amaziah answered the man of God, "But what will become of the hundred talents that I gave to the troops of Israel?" And the man of God said, "The Lord has many more to give you."

So Amaziah separated the troops that had come to him from Ephraim, so that they might return to their own place; and their anger was very kindled against Judah, and they returned to their own place with great fierceness of anger.

Then Amaziah, having taken courage, led his people, and went to the Valley of Salt; where he defeated ten thousand men of the children of Seir.

And the children of Judah took ten thousand men alive, and having brought them to the top of a rock, they threw them down from the top of the rock, so that they all died.

But the troops that Amaziah had sent away, so that they would not come with him to war, attacked the cities of Judah, from Samaria to Beth-horon, and killed three thousand men, and carried off a large amount of plunder.

Now it came to pass that Amaziah, having returned from the defeat of the Idumeans, and having brought the gods of the children of Seir, he established them as gods; he bowed down before them, and made incense to them.

And the anger of the Lord was kindled against Amaziah, and he sent a prophet to him who said to him, "Why have you sought the gods of a people who have not delivered their people out of your hand?"

And as he was speaking to the King, the King said to him: Have you been appointed an advisor to the King? Stop; why should you let yourself be killed? And the Prophet stopped, and said to him: I know very well that God has decided to destroy you, because you have done this, and you have not obeyed my advice.

And Amaziah King of Judah, having taken counsel, sent to Joash son of Jehoahaz, son of Jehu, King of Israel, to say: Come, that we may see one another.

And Joash King of Israel sent word to Amaziah King of Judah: The thornbush that is in Lebanon sent word to the cedarbush that is in Lebanon: Give your daughter as a wife to my son; but the wild beasts that are in Lebanon have passed through and trampled the thornbush.

You said, "Behold, I have defeated Edom," and your heart was lifted up in pride. Now remain in your house; why should you engage in an evil into which you and Judah will fall?

But Amaziah did not listen to him; for this came from God, in order to deliver them into the hands of [Joash], because they had sought the gods of Edom.

So Joash King of Israel went up, and they saw each other, he and Amaziah King of Judah, at Beth-shemes, which is in Judah.

And Judah having been defeated by Israel, they fled each to their tents.

And Joash King of Israel took Amaziah King of Judah, son of Joash, son of Jehoahaz, at Beth-shemes; and brought him to Jerusalem, and he made a breach of four hundred cubits in the wall of Jerusalem, from the Ephraim Gate to the Corner Gate.

And having taken all the gold and silver, and all the ships which were found in the house of God under the direction of Hobed-edom, with the treasures of the Royal House, and some people as hostages, he returned to Samaria.

And Amaziah son of Joash king of Judah lived fifteen years after Joash son of Jehoahaz king of Israel died.

The rest of the events of Amaziah, both the first and the last, are these; are they not written in the Book of the Kings of Judah and Israel?

Now from the time that Amaziah had turned away from the Lord, a conspiracy was made against him in Jerusalem, and he fled to Lachish; but they sent after him to Lachish, and killed him there.

And they brought him on horses, and buried him with his ancestors in the city of Judah.

Then all the people of Judah took Hoziah, who was sixteen years old, and made him king in place of Amaziah his father.

He built Eloth, having restored it to the power of Judah, after the King had slept with his fathers.

Hozias was sixteen years old when he began to reign, and he reigned fifty-two years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Jecoliah, and she was from Jerusalem.

He did what was right before the Lord, just as his father Amaziah had done.

He applied himself to seeking God during the days of Zechariah, [a man] intelligent in the visions of God; and during the days that he sought the Lord, God made him prosper.

For he went out and made war against the Philistines, and broke through the wall of Gath, and the wall of Jabneh, and the wall of Ashdod; and he built cities [in the land] of Ashdod, and among the [other] Philistines.

And God gave him help against the Philistines, and against the Arabs who lived in Gur-bahal, and against the Mahunites.

Even the Hammonites gave gifts to Hozias, so that his reputation spread as far as the entrance to Egypt, for he had become very powerful.

And Hozias built towers in Jerusalem, on the Corner Gate, and on the Valley Gate, and on the Corner, and fortified them.

He also built towers in the desert and dug many wells, because he had many cattle in the plain and in the countryside, and farmers and vinedressers in the mountains and in Carmel, for he loved agriculture.

And Hozias had an army composed of men trained for war, who marched in battle in bands, according to the account of their census, made by Jehiel the scribe, and Mahaseia the provost, under the leadership of Hananiah, one of the King's chief captains.

The total number of the leaders of the fathers, among those who were strong and valiant, was two thousand six hundred.

And under their command was an army of three hundred and seven thousand five hundred combatants, all seasoned, strong and valiant men, to help the King against the enemy.

And Hozias prepared for them, [namely] for all that army, shields, javelins, helmets, breastplates, bows, and sling stones.

And in Jerusalem he made machines of an engineer's invention, so that they would be on the towers and on the corners, for launching arrows and large stones. Thus his reputation spread very far; for he was greatly helped until he became very powerful.

But as soon as he became very powerful, his heart was lifted up to his destruction, and he committed a [great] sin against the Lord his God; for he entered the Temple of the Lord to burn incense on the altar of incense.

But Hazaria the Priest went in after him, accompanied by the Priests of the Lord, eighty mighty men;

They opposed King Hoziah and said to him, "Hoziah, it is not for you to make incense to the Lord, but for the priests, the sons of Aaron, who are consecrated to make incense. Leave the sanctuary, for you have sinned, and this will not be to your credit in the sight of the Lord God."

Then Hoziah, who had the incense in his hand, became angry; and as he raged against the priests, leprosy broke out on his forehead in the presence of the priests, in the house of the Lord, near the altar of incense.

Then Hazaria the chief priest looked at him with all the priests, and behold, he had leprosy on his forehead, and they brought him out immediately; and he hurried out, because the Lord had struck him.

And so King Hoziah was a leper until the day he died; and he remained a leper in a secluded house; even he was cut off from the house of the Lord, and Jotham his son was in charge of the house of the King, judging the people of the land.

Now Isaiah son of Amoz, the Prophet, wrote the rest of the acts of Hoziah, both the first and the last.

And Hozias slept with his fathers, and was buried with them in the field of the tombs of the kings; for, they said, he is a leper; and Jotham his son reigned in his place.

Jotham was twenty-five years old when he began to reign, and he reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Jerusa, and she was the daughter of Zadok.

He did what was right before the Lord, as Hoziah his father had done, but he did not enter the Temple of the Lord [as he did]; nevertheless the people were still corrupting themselves.

He built the highest gate of the house of the Lord; he built much in the wall of Hophel.

He also built cities on the mountains of Judah, and castles and towers in the forests.

And he fought against the King of the Hammonites, and was the strongest; and that year the Hammonites gave him one hundred talents of silver, and ten thousand cores of wheat, and ten thousand of barley. The Hammonites gave him these things, even in the second and third years.

Jotham therefore became very powerful, because he had directed his ways before the Lord his God.

The rest of the acts of Jotham, and all his battles and his conduct, are written in the Book of the Kings of Israel and Judah.

He was twenty-five years old when he began to reign, and he reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem.

Then Jotham slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the City of David; and Ahaz his son reigned in his place.

Ahaz was twenty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem; but he did not do what was right before the Lord, as David his father had done.

But he followed the train of the Kings of Israel, and even made cast images for the Bahalins.

He also burned incense in the valley of the son of Hinnom, and burned some of his sons in the fire, according to the abominations of the nations that the Lord had driven out from before the children of Israel.

He also sacrificed and offered incense in the high places, and on the hillsides, and under every green tree.

Therefore the Lord his God delivered him into the hands of the King of Syria; so much so that [the Syrians] defeated him, and took from him a great number of prisoners, whom they brought to Damascus; he was also delivered into the hands of the King of Israel, who inflicted a great plague on [his Kingdom].

For Pekah son of Remaliah killed in one day six hundred thousand men of Judah, all valiant men, because they had forsaken the Lord, the God of their fathers.

And Zicri, a mighty man of Ephraim, killed Mahaseiah the king's son, and Hazrikam who was in charge of the house, and Elkanah who held the second rank after the king.

And the children of Israel took captive two hundred thousand people of their brothers, both women, sons and daughters, and they also took a great deal of plunder from them, and they brought the plunder to Samaria.

Now there was a prophet of the Lord there, named Hoded, who went out to meet the army as it was going to enter Samaria, and said to them, "Behold, the Lord, the God of your fathers, being angry with Judah, has delivered them into your hands, and you have killed them in fury, so that this has reached heaven."

And now you are planning to subjugate the children of Judah and Jerusalem as male and female servants; are you not the only ones guilty before the Lord your God?

Now therefore listen to me, and bring back the prisoners whom you have taken from among your brothers; for the fierceness of the Lord's anger is upon you.

Then some of the leaders of the Ephraimites, namely Hazarah son of Jehohanan, Berekiah son of Meshillemoth, Hezekiah son of Shallum, and Hamasah son of Hadlai, rose up against those returning from the war,

And they said to them, "You shall not bring these prisoners here, for you intend to make us guilty before the Lord, adding this to our sins and our crime, although we are very guilty, and the fierceness of [the Lord's] anger is great against Israel." Then the soldiers abandoned the prisoners and the spoils before the leaders and the whole assembly.

And these men who have been named by name, arose and took the prisoners, and clothed with the spoils all those among them who were naked; and when they had clothed and shod them, and given them food and drink, and anointed them, they led on donkeys all those who could not stand, and brought them to Jericho, the city of palms, to their brothers; then they returned to Samaria.

At that time King Ahaz sent to the King of Assyria, so that he might give him help. For besides that the Idumeans had come, and had defeated those of Judah, and had taken prisoners from them.

The Philistines also had attacked the cities of the countryside and of the South of Judah, and had taken Beth-shemesh, Aijalon, Gederath, Socoh, and the cities of its jurisdiction, Timnah, and the cities of its jurisdiction, and Gimzo, and the cities of its jurisdiction, and they lived there.

For the Lord had humbled Judah because of Ahaz king of Israel, because he had turned Judah away [from the service of God], and had devoted himself entirely to sinning against the Lord.

Thus Tillegath-Pilneser, King of Assyria, came to him, but he oppressed him, far from strengthening him.

For Ahaz took some of the treasures from the house of the Lord, and from the royal house, and from the leaders [of the people], and gave them to the King of Assyria; but he did not help him.

And in the time that they afflicted him, he continued to sin more and more against the Lord; it was [still] King Ahaz.

For he sacrificed to the gods of Damascus who had defeated him, and he said: Since the gods of the kings of Syria help them, I will sacrifice to them, so that they may also help me; but they were the cause of his downfall, and of that of all Israel.

And Ahaz took all the ships of the house of God, and smashed them, the ships, I say, of the house of God, and he shut the doors of the house of the Lord, and made altars for himself in all the corners of Jerusalem.

And he made high places in every city of Judah to burn incense to other gods; and he angered the Lord, the God of his fathers.

As for the rest of his deeds, and all his actions, both the first and the last, behold, all these things are written in the Book of the Kings of Judah and Israel.

Then Ahaz slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the City, in Jerusalem, but they did not put him in the tombs of the Kings of Israel, and Hezekiah his son reigned in his place.

Hezekiah began to reign at the age of twenty-five; and he reigned twenty-nine years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Abijah, and she was the daughter of Zechariah. He did what was right before the Lord, according to all that David his father had done.

In the first year of his reign, in the first month, he opened the doors of the house of the Lord and repaired them.

He summoned the priests and Levites and assembled them in the eastern square, And he said to them, "Listen to me, Levites; consecrate yourselves now, and consecrate the house of the Lord, the God of your fathers, and throw out the defiled things from the Sanctuary."

For our fathers sinned and did what was evil in the sight of the Lord our God, and forsook him; and turned their faces away from the pavilion of the Lord, and turned their backs on him.

They even shut the gates of the porch, and put out the lamps, and did not burn incense, and did not offer a burnt offering in the holy place to the God of Israel. That is why the Lord's indignation was upon Judah and Jerusalem, and he gave them up to be deported [from one place to another], and to be an object of astonishment and derision, as you see with your eyes.

For behold, our fathers have fallen by the sword; our sons, our daughters, and our wives are in captivity because of it.

Therefore, I now intend to make a covenant with the Lord, the God of Israel, and the fierceness of his anger will turn away from us.

But, my children, do not deceive yourselves; for the Lord has chosen you to stand before him to minister to him, and to be his ministers, and to make incense for him.

So the Levites stood up, [namely] Mahath son of Hamasai, and Joel son of Hazaria, from among the children of the Kohathites; and from the children of Merari, Kish son of Habdi, and Hazaria son of Jahalleleel; and from the Gershonites, Joah son of Zimmah, and Heden son of Joah;

And the children of Elizaphan, Shimri and Jehiel; and the children of Asaph, Zechariah, and Mattaniah;

And the children of Hemad, Jehiel, and Shimei; and the children of Jeduthun, Shemiah and Huziel.

They gathered their brothers together and consecrated themselves, and they entered according to the King's command, in accordance with the word of the Lord, to cleanse the house of the Lord.

So the priests entered the house of the Lord to cleanse it, and brought out to the courtyard of the house of the Lord all the unclean things that they found in the Temple of the Lord, which the Levites took to carry away to the Kidron Valley.

And they began to consecrate [the Temple] on the first day of the first month; and on the eighth day of the same month they entered the porch of the Lord, and consecrated the house of the Lord for eight days; and on the sixteenth day of that first month they had finished.

Then they went into the chamber of King Hezekiah, and said: We have cleaned the whole house of the Lord, and the altar of burnt offering, with its utensils; and the table of the bread of the Presence, with all its utensils.

And we have set up and consecrated all the utensils that King Ahaz had set aside during his reign, in the time when he sinned, and behold, they are before the altar of the Lord.

Then King Hezekiah got up early in the morning, assembled the leaders of the city, and went up to the house of the Lord.

And they brought seven calves, seven rams, seven lambs, and seven male goats without blemish, [to offer] as a sin offering, for the Kingdom, for the Sanctuary, and for Judah. Then [the King] told the priests, the sons of Aaron, to offer them on the altar of the Lord.

And so they slaughtered the calves, and the priests received their blood and sprinkled it on the altar. They also slaughtered the rams and sprinkled their blood on the altar; they also slaughtered the lambs and sprinkled their blood on the altar.

Then they brought the goats for sin before the King and the assembly, and they laid their hands on them.

Then the priests slaughtered them and offered their blood as an atonement to the altar, to make propitiation for all Israel; for the king had commanded this burnt offering and this sin offering for all Israel.

He also made the Levites stand in the house of the Lord with cymbals, bagpipes, and violins, according to the command of David, and of Gad the King's Seer, and of Nathan the Prophet; for this command [had been given] from the Lord, by his Prophets.

So the Levites attended with the instruments of David, and the Priests with the trumpets.

Then Hezekiah commanded that the burnt offering be offered on the altar; and at the hour when the burnt offering began, the song of the Lord began with the trumpets, and with the instruments ordered by David King of Israel.

And the whole assembly was prostrate, and the song was sung, and the trumpets sounded; and this continued until the burnt offering had been completed.

And when they had finished offering [the burnt offering], the King and all those who were with him bowed down and prostrated themselves.

Then King Hezekiah and the leaders told the Levites to praise the Lord according to the words of David and Asaph the Seer; and they praised [the Lord] until they exulted with joy, and they bowed down and prostrated themselves.

Then Hezekiah spoke, saying, "Now that you have consecrated your hands to the Lord, come near and offer sacrifices and praises in the house of the Lord." So the congregation offered sacrifices and praises, and all who were willing offered burnt offerings.

Now the number of burnt offerings that the assembly offered was seventy oxen, one hundred sheep, two hundred lambs, all as a burnt offering to the Lord.

And the [other] consecrated things were six hundred oxen and three thousand sheep.

But the priests were few in number, so that they could not skin all the burnt offerings; therefore the Levites, their brothers, helped them until this work was completed, and the [other] priests had sanctified themselves; because the Levites [were] of a more upright heart than the priests, to sanctify themselves.

And there were also a great many burnt offerings, with the fat of the peace offerings, and with the sprinkling of the burnt offerings. Thus the service of the house of the Lord was restored.

And Hezekiah and all the people rejoiced that God had prepared the people; for the thing was done quickly.

Then Hezekiah sent word to all Israel and Judah, and he also wrote letters to Ephraim and Manasseh, so that they might come to the house of the Lord in Jerusalem to celebrate the Passover to the Lord, the God of Israel.

For the King and his chief officials, with the whole assembly, had held council in Jerusalem to celebrate the Passover in the second month;

Because they had not been able to celebrate it at the ordinary time, because there were not enough sanctified priests, and because the people had not been assembled in Jerusalem.

And the thing pleased the King and the entire assembly so much,

They decided to proclaim throughout all Israel from Beersheba to Dan that they should come and celebrate the Passover to the Lord, the God of Israel, in Jerusalem; for they had not celebrated it for a long time in the manner prescribed.

So the messengers went with letters from the King and his chief officials throughout Israel and Judah, according to what the King had commanded, saying: Children of Israel, return to the Lord, the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Israel; and he will return to the remnant of you who have escaped from the hands of the kings of Assyria.

And do not be like your fathers, nor like your brothers, who sinned against the Lord, the God of their fathers; therefore he gave them up as a public horror, as you see. Now do not be stiff-necked, as your fathers were; stretch out your hands to the Lord, and come to his sanctuary, which he has consecrated forever, and serve the Lord your God; and the fierceness of his anger will turn away from you.

For if you return to the Lord, your brothers and your children will find favor with those who took them captive, and they will return to this land, because the Lord your God is compassionate and merciful; and he will not turn his face away from you if you return to him.

So the messengers went from town to town through the land of Ephraim and Manasseh, and they even went as far as Zebulun; but they were mocked and ridiculed.

However, some of Asher, Manasseh, and Zebulun humbled themselves and came to Jerusalem.

The hand of the Lord was also upon Judah, to give them one heart, so that they might carry out the command of the king and of the princes, according to the word of the Lord.

Therefore a great people gathered in Jerusalem to celebrate the solemn feast of unleavened bread in the second month, so that there was a very large assembly.

And they arose and removed the altars that were in Jerusalem; they also removed all the tabernacles in which incense was burned, and threw them into the Kidron Valley. Then they slaughtered the Passover lamb on the fourteenth day of the second month; for the priests and the Levites had been ashamed and had sanctified themselves, and had brought burnt offerings into the house of the Lord.

Therefore they stood in their place, according to their office, in accordance with the Law of Moses, the man of God; and the priests sprinkled the blood, taking it from the hands of the Levites.

For there were a great many in that assembly who had not sanctified themselves; therefore the Levites were charged with slaughtering the Passover lambs for all those who were not clean, in order to sanctify them to the Lord.

For a large part of the people, namely most of those from Ephraim, Manasseh, Issachar, and Zebulun, had not cleansed themselves, and they ate the Passover meal differently than it is written; but Hezekiah prayed for them, saying, "The Lord, who is good, considers atonement complete,

Of whoever has turned all their heart to seek God, the Lord, the God of their fathers, although they have not [cleansed] themselves according to the purification of the Sanctuary.

And the Lord answered Hezekiah's prayer and healed the people.

The children of Israel who were in Jerusalem celebrated the solemn feast of unleavened bread for seven days with great joy; and the Levites and the priests praised the Lord every day with instruments that resounded in praise of the Lord.

And Hezekiah spoke to all the Levites who were understood in all that [concerns the service of] the Lord, [he spoke to them, I say], according to their hearts; and they ate [sacrifices] in the solemn feast for seven days, offering peace offerings, and praising the Lord, the God of their fathers.

And the whole assembly resolved to celebrate for seven more days; and so they celebrated for seven [more] days with joy.

For Hezekiah King of Judah presented to the assembly a thousand calves and seven thousand sheep, and the leaders also presented to the assembly a thousand calves and ten thousand sheep; and many priests consecrated themselves.

And all the assembly of Judah rejoiced, with the priests and the Levites, and all the assembly that had come from Israel, and the foreigners who had come from the land of Israel, and who lived in Judah.

And there was great joy in Jerusalem; for since the days of Solomon son of David king of Israel, nothing like this had been done in Jerusalem.

Then the Levite priests stood up and blessed the people; and their voice was heard, for their prayer reached heaven, the holy dwelling place of the Lord.

Now as soon as all these things were finished, all those of Israel who were there went through the cities of Judah, and broke down the statues, and cut down the groves, and demolished the high places, and the altars of all Judah and Benjamin, and they did the same in Ephraim and Manasseh, until they had destroyed everything; then all the children of Israel returned each to his possession in his cities.

Hezekiah also restored the departments of the Priests and Levites, according to the departments which had been made, each according to his ministry, both the Priests and the Levites, for the burnt offerings, and for the peace offerings, in order to minister, to celebrate, and to sing praises [to God] at the gates of the camp of the Lord.

He also issued an ordinance by which the King would be charged with a contribution taken from his treasury for burnt offerings, [namely] for the morning and evening burnt offerings, and for the burnt offerings of the Sabbaths, and of the new moons, and of the solemn feasts, as it is written in the Law of the Lord.

And he said to the people, [namely] to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, that they should give the portion of the Priests and Levites, so that they might take courage [to observe] the Law of the Lord.

And as soon as the matter was announced, the children of Israel brought in abundance the firstfruits of wheat, wine, oil, honey, and all the produce of the fields; they brought, [I say], the tithes of all these things in abundance.

And the children of Israel and Judah, who lived in the cities of Judah, also brought the tithes of the herd and the flock, and the tithes of the holy things, which were consecrated to the Lord their God; and put them in heaps.

They began in the third month to make the first heaps, and in the seventh month they finished them.

Then Hezekiah and the leaders came, saw the heaps, and blessed the Lord and his people Israel.

Then Hezekiah inquired of the Priests and Levites concerning these heaps.

And Hazaria the chief priest, who was of the family of Zadok, answered him, and said to him, "Since they began to bring offerings into the house of the Lord, we have eaten and been satisfied, and there is still a great abundance left over; for the Lord has blessed his people, and this great quantity is what was left over."

Then Hezekiah commanded that rooms be prepared in the house of the Lord; and they prepared them.

Then they faithfully brought into it the offerings, and the tithes, and the consecrated things, and Conaniah the Levite was in charge of it, and Shimei his brother was appointed under him.

And Jehiel, Hazaziah, Nahath, Hasael, Jerimoth, Jozabad, Eliel, Ismacia, Mahath, and Benaiah were appointed under the direction of Conaniah, and Shimei his brother, by the command of King Hezekiah, and of Hazariah, governor of the house of God.

And Korah son of Jimnah the Levite, who was gatekeeper to the east, was in charge of the things that were voluntarily offered to God to provide the Lord's exalted offering, and the most holy things.

And he had under his command Heden, Minjamin, Jesuah, Shemahia, Amariah, and Shecania, in the cities of the Priests, having this charge ordinarily, to distribute the portions to their brothers, both to the lesser and to the greater.

Besides this, a census was taken according to the genealogies of the males among them, from those three years old and above, [namely] of all those who entered the house of the Lord, to do what needed to be done there each day, according to their ministry and their responsibilities, according to their departments.

And besides the census that was taken of the Priests according to their genealogy and according to the house of their fathers, and of the Levites, from those twenty years old and above, according to their departments;

They also took a census according to their genealogies of all their families, their wives, their sons, and their daughters, for the whole assembly, and in all sincerity they carefully sanctified themselves.

And as for the sons of Aaron the priests, who were in the countryside and in the suburbs of their cities, in each city there were people appointed by name, to distribute the portion to all the males of the priests, and to all those of the Levites who had been counted according to their genealogy.

Hezekiah did this throughout all Judah, and he did what was good, and right, and true, in the sight of the Lord his God.

And he labored with all his heart in all the work which he undertook for the service of the house of God, and in the Law, and in the commandments, seeking his God; and he prospered.

After these things, and when they were well established, Sennacherib, King of the Assyrians, came and entered Judea, and encamped against the fortified cities, intending to separate them in order to take them one after the other.

And Hezekiah saw that Sennacherib had come, and that his face was set against Jerusalem to wage war against it;

He consulted with his principal officers and his most valiant men to block the waters of the fountains that were outside the city; and they helped him to do so.

For a great people gathered together, and they stopped up all the springs and the stream that flowed through the land, saying, "Why should the kings of Assyria find an abundance of water when they come?"

He also fortified himself, and rebuilt the entire wall where it had been breached, and raised it up to the towers; and he [built] another wall outside, and repaired Millo in the city of David, and made many javelins and shields.

And he appointed war captains over the people, and assembled them around him in the square of the city gate, and spoke to them according to their hearts, saying:

Be strong and courageous; do not be afraid or terrified because of the King of Assyria and all the multitude with him; for one mightier than all with him is with us.

The arm of flesh is with him, but the Lord our God is with us, to help us, and to lead our battles; and the people were reassured by the words of Hezekiah King of Judah.

After these things, Sennacherib King of the Assyrians, being [still] before Lachish, and having with him all the forces of his Kingdom, sent his servants to Jerusalem, to Hezekiah King of Judah, and to all the Jews who were in Jerusalem, to tell them:

Thus said Sennacherib, King of the Assyrians: On what basis do you assure yourself that you remain in Jerusalem to be besieged there?

Is not Hezekiah enticing you to expose yourselves to death by famine and thirst, saying, "The Lord our God will deliver us from the hand of the King of Assyria?"

Did not this Hezekiah remove the high places and the altars of the Lord, and did not he command Judah and Jerusalem, saying, You shall worship before one altar, and burn your sacrifices on it?

Do you not know what I and my ancestors have done to all the peoples of various countries? Have the gods of the nations of [various] countries been able in any way to deliver their lands from my hand?

Which of all the gods of these nations that my ancestors completely destroyed, who delivered their people from my hand, [to believe] that your God can deliver you from my hand?

Now therefore, let Hezekiah not deceive you, nor seduce you in this way, and do not believe him; for if no God, of any nation, or of any kingdom, has been able to deliver his people from my hand, nor from the hand of my ancestors, how much less will your God be able to deliver you from my hand?

His servants spoke again against the Lord God, and against Hezekiah his servant. He also wrote letters to blaspheme the Lord, the God of Israel, and to speak thus against him: As the gods of the nations of [various] countries could not deliver their people from my hand, so the God of Hezekiah will not be able to deliver his people from my hand.

[These messengers] also shouted aloud in the Jewish language to the people of Jerusalem who were on the walls, to make them fear and terrify them, in order to take the city.

And they spoke of the God of Jerusalem, as of the gods of the peoples of the earth, who are only the work of human hands.

That is why King Hezekiah and Isaiah the Prophet son of Amoz prayed [to God] about this matter, and cried out to Heaven.

And the Lord sent an angel, who utterly destroyed all the mighty men, the officers, and the commanders who were in the camp of the king of Assyria, so that he returned in disgrace to his own land. And when he entered the house of his God, his own sons killed him with the sword.

So the Lord delivered Hezekiah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem from the hand of Sennacherib king of the Assyrians, and from the hand of all these peoples, and gave them the means to go everywhere around [in safety].

And many brought gifts to the Lord in Jerusalem, and exquisite things to Hezekiah King of Judah; so that after this he was exalted in the sight of all the nations.

In those days Hezekiah was sick to the point of death, and he prayed to the Lord, who answered him and gave him a sign.

But Hezekiah was not grateful for the benefit he had received; for his heart was proud, therefore there was indignation against him, and against Judah and Jerusalem.

But Hezekiah humbled himself because he had lifted up his heart, both he and the inhabitants of Jerusalem; therefore the wrath of the Lord did not come upon them during the days of Hezekiah.

Hezekiah therefore had great riches and great glory, and amassed treasures of silver, gold, precious stones, spices, shields, and all kinds of precious tableware.

And he made storehouses for the harvest of wheat, wine, and oil; and stables for all kinds of animals, and rows in the stables.

He also established cities for himself and acquired abundant flocks and herds, for God had given him very great riches.

Hezekiah also blocked the upper channel of the Gihon River and diverted its waters straight down to the west of the City of David. Thus Hezekiah prospered in all that he did.

But when the ambassadors of the Princes of Babylon, who had sent to him to inquire about the miracle that had occurred on earth, [came to him], God left him to test him, in order to know all that was in his heart.

The rest of the acts of Hezekiah, and his acts of kindness, are written in the vision of Isaiah the prophet son of Amoz, besides what is written in the Book of the Kings of Judah and Israel.

Then Hezekiah slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the highest of the tombs of the sons of David; and all Judah and Jerusalem honored him at his death, and Manasseh his son reigned in his place.

Manasseh was twelve years old when he began to reign, and he reigned fifty-five years in Jerusalem.

And he did what was evil in the sight of the Lord, according to the abominations of the nations which the Lord had driven out before the children of Israel.

For he rebuilt the high places which Hezekiah his father had demolished, and restored the altars of the Bahalites, and made hedges, and bowed down before all the host of heaven, and served them.

He also built altars in the house of the Lord, of which the Lord had said: My Name shall be in Jerusalem forever.

He built, [I say], altars to all the host of heaven in the two courts of the house of the Lord.

He made his sons pass through the fire in the valley of the son of Hinnon, and he predicted the weather, and used divination and sorcery; and he set up a spirit of Python, and had fortune-tellers; in short, he devoted himself extremely to doing what displeased the Lord in order to anger him.

He also set up a carved image that he had made for a representation in the house of God, of which God had said to David and to Solomon his son: I will put my Name forever in this house, and in Jerusalem, which I have chosen out of all the Tribes of Israel.

And I will not again bring Israel out of the land that I assigned to their fathers, provided only that they take care to do all that I commanded them through Moses, [that is] all the Law, and the statutes, and the ordinances.

Manasseh therefore led Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem astray, to do worse than the nations that the Lord had exterminated from before the children of Israel. And the Lord spoke to Manasseh and to his people, but they would not listen.

Therefore the Lord brought against them the captains of the army of the King of Assyria, who captured Manasseh in the thickets, bound him with double bronze chains, and took him to Babylon.

And when he was in distress, he pleaded with the Lord his God, and humbled himself greatly before the God of his fathers.

So he addressed his supplications to him, and [God], moved by his prayers, granted his supplication, and brought him back to Jerusalem to his Kingdom; and Manasseh acknowledged that the Lord is he who is God.

After that he built the outer wall for the City of David west of Gihon, in the valley, and as far as the entrance of the Fish Gate, and he surrounded Hophel, and greatly exalted it; then he appointed captains of the army in all the fortified cities of Judah.

And he removed from the house of the Lord the idol, and the gods of the foreigners, and all the altars which he had built on the mountain of the house of the Lord, and in Jerusalem, and threw them out of the city.

Then he rebuilt the altar of the Lord, and sacrificed peace offerings and praises on it, and he commanded Judah to serve the Lord, the God of Israel.

However, the people still sacrificed in the high places, but only to the Lord their God.

The rest of the acts of Manasseh, and the prayer that he made to his God, and the words of the seers who spoke to him in the name of the Lord, the God of Israel, are all these things [written] among the acts of the kings of Israel.

And his prayer, and how [God] was moved by his prayers, all his sin, and his crime, and the places in which he built high places, and set up groves, and carved images, before he had humbled himself, behold, all these things are written in the words of the Seers.

Then Manasseh slept with his ancestors, and they buried him in his house; and Amon his son reigned in his place.

Amon was twenty-two years old when he began to reign, and he reigned two years in Jerusalem.

And he did what was displeasing to the Lord, as Manasseh his father had done; for Amon sacrificed to all the carved images that Manasseh his father had made, and served them.

But he did not humble himself before the Lord, as his father Manasseh had humbled himself, but became more and more guilty.

And his servants conspired against him and killed him in his house.

But the people of the land struck down all those who had conspired against King Amon; and the people of the land appointed Josiah his son as king in his place.

Josiah was eight years old when he began to reign, and he reigned thirty-one years in Jerusalem.

He did what was right before the Lord, and followed the way of David his father, and did not turn aside to the right or to the left.

And in the eighth year of his reign, when he was young, he began to seek the God of David his father, and in the twelfth year he began to cleanse Judah and Jerusalem of the high places, the groves, and the carved and cast images.

And in his presence they demolished the altars of the Bahalins, and they broke into pieces the tabernacles that were above them; he also cut down the groves, and smashed the carved and cast images, and having reduced them to powder, he scattered this powder on the tombs of those who had sacrificed to them.

He also burned the bones of the priests on their altars; and purified Judah and Jerusalem.

He did the same thing in the cities of Manasseh, Ephraim, and Simeon, and as far as Naphtali, all around, with their own hammers.

He cut down the altars and the groves, and smashed the images to powder, and broke into pieces all the tabernacles throughout the land of Israel; then he returned to Jerusalem.

And in the eighteenth year of his reign, after he had cleared the land and the Temple, he sent Shaphan son of Azaliah, and Mahaseiah the captain of the city, and Joah son of Jehoahaz, clerk of the registers, to repair the house of the Lord his God;

And they came to Hilkiyah the high priest, and the money that was brought into the house of God was delivered, which the Levites, keepers of the ships, had collected from the hand of Manasseh, and Ephraim, and all the remnant of Israel, and all Judah, and Benjamin; then they returned to Jerusalem;

It was delivered, [I say], into the hands of those who had charge of the work, [and] who were appointed over the house of the Lord; and those who had charge of the work, [and] who worked in the house of the Lord, distributed it to rebuild and repair the Temple.

And they distributed it to the carpenters and masons, to buy dressed stone, and wood for paneling, and to floor the houses that the Kings of Judah had ruined.

And these people faithfully applied themselves to this work. Now Jahath and Hobadiah, Levites from among the children of Merari, were appointed over them; and Zechariah and Meshullam, from among the children of Kohath, [had the charge] of urging them [to work]; and these Levites were all skilled in musical instruments.

[There were] also [who were appointed] over those who carried the loads, and solicitors over all those who were engaged in work in any service whatsoever; the Scribes, the provosts, and the gatekeepers were from among the Levites.

Now as they were taking out the money that had been brought into the house of the Lord, Hilkiyah the Priest found the Book of the Law of the Lord, which was given by Moses.

Then Hilkiyah spoke up and said to Shaphan the secretary, "I have found the Book of the Law in the house of the Lord." And Hilkiyah gave the Book to Shaphan.

And Saphan brought the Book to the King; and he reported everything to the King, saying, "Your servants are doing everything that they have been given to do."

And they collected the money that was found in the house of the Lord, and delivered it into the hands of the commissioners, and into the hands of those in charge of the work.

Saphan the Secretary also made it heard by the King, saying: Hilkiyah the Priest has given me a Book; and Saphan read it before the King.

And it came to pass that as soon as the King heard the words of the Law, he tore his clothes;

And he commanded Hilkiyah, Ahikam son of Shaphan, Habdon son of Mica, Shaphan the Secretary, and Hasaiah servant of the King, saying:

Go, inquire of the Lord for me and for what remains in Israel and Judah, concerning the words of this Book that was found; for the anger of the Lord is great, and it has fallen upon us, because our fathers did not keep the word of the Lord, to do according to all that is written in this Book.

Hilkiah then and the King's people went to Hulda the Prophetess, wife of Sallum, son of Tokhath, son of Hasra, Keeper of the Garments, who was staying at the college in Jerusalem, and spoke to her according to these things.

And she answered them, "This is what the Lord, the God of Israel, says: Tell the man who sent you to me:

Thus says the Lord: Behold, I am going to bring disaster on this place and on its inhabitants, [namely] all the curses of the oath which are written in the Book which was read before the King of Judah.

Because they have forsaken me, and have burned incense to other gods, provoking me to anger with all the works of their hands, my wrath has poured forth upon this place, and it will not be quenched.

But as for the King of Judah who sent you to inquire of the Lord, you shall say to him thus: The Lord, the God of Israel, says thus concerning the words that you have heard;

Because your heart was soft, and you humbled yourself before God when you heard these words against this place and its inhabitants, and you humbled yourself before me, tore your clothes, and wept before me, I have also heard you, says the Lord.

Behold, I will take you away with your fathers, and you shall be taken away in your graves in peace, and your eyes shall not see all this evil that I am going to bring on this place and on its inhabitants; and they reported all this to the King.

Then the king sent to assemble all the elders of Judah and Jerusalem.

And the King went up to the house of the Lord with all the men of Judah, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and the priests and the Levites, and all the people, from the greatest to the least, and they read before them all the words of the Book of the Covenant, which had been found in the house of the Lord.

And the King stood in his place, and made this covenant before the Lord; that they would follow the Lord, and keep his commandments, his testimonies, and his statutes, [each] with all his heart, and with all his soul, by doing the words of the covenant written in this Book.

And he made all those who were found in Jerusalem and in Benjamin stand up; and those who were in Jerusalem did according to the covenant of God, the God of their fathers.

Josiah therefore removed all the abominations from all the lands belonging to the children of Israel; and made all who were found in Israel serve the Lord their God; and they did not turn away from the Lord, the God of their fathers, while he lived. Now Josiah celebrated the Passover to the Lord in Jerusalem, and the Passover lamb was slaughtered on the fourteenth day of the first month.

And he appointed the priests to their offices, and encouraged them in the service of the house of the Lord.

He also said to the Levites who taught all Israel, and who were holy to the Lord: Leave the holy Ark in the Temple which Solomon son of David king of Israel built; you no longer have the burden of carrying it on your shoulders, now serve the Lord your God, and his people Israel;

And arrange yourselves according to the houses of your fathers, according to your departments, and according to the description which was made by David King of Israel, and the description made by Solomon his son.

And help your brothers, the children of the people, in the Sanctuary, according to the departments of the houses of the fathers, and according to how each family of the Levites is divided.

And slaughter the Passover lamb. Consecrate yourselves, therefore, and prepare some for your brothers, so that they may observe it according to the word that the Lord gave through Moses.

And Josiah presented to those of the people who were there a flock of lambs and kids, numbering thirty thousand, all for the Passover, and three thousand oxen; and these things were the King's property.

His chief officials also willingly made a present for the people, to the priests and the Levites; and Hilkiah, Zechariah, and Jehiel, leaders of the house of God, gave to the priests, to celebrate the Passover, two thousand six hundred [lambs or kids], and three hundred oxen.

And Conaniah, Shemaiah, and Nathanael his brothers, and Hasabiah, Jehiel, and Jozabad, who were the chief of the Levites, presented five thousand to the others to celebrate the Passover, and five hundred oxen.

Thus, the service being fully prepared, the Priests stood in their places, and the Levites in their departments, according to the King's command.

Then they slaughtered the Passover lamb, and the priests poured out [the blood, taking it] from their hands, and the Levites skinned it.

And as they distributed them according to the departments of the houses of the fathers of those of the people, they set aside the burnt offering to offer to the Lord, according to what is written in the Book of Moses; and they made oxen of it. So they roasted the Passover over the fire, according to the custom, but they cooked the consecrated things in cauldrons, pots, and pans, and made them circulate among all the people.

Then they prepared [what was needed] for themselves and for the priests; for the priests, the sons of Aaron, [had been occupied] until night in the offering of burnt offerings and fats; therefore the Levites prepared [what was needed] for themselves and for the priests, the sons of Aaron.

And the singers, the sons of Asaph, stood in their place, according to the command of David and Asaph, with [the sons] of Heman and Jeduthun the King's Seer; the gatekeepers also were at each gate, and there was no need for them to turn away from their ministry, for the Levites, their brothers, were preparing [what was needed] for them.

And so all the service of the Lord on that day was arranged to celebrate the Passover, and to offer burnt offerings on the altar of the Lord, according to the commandment of King Josiah.

The children of Israel who were there celebrated the Passover at that time, and they also celebrated the solemn feast of unleavened bread for seven days.

Now no Passover like this had been celebrated in Israel since the days of Samuel the Prophet; and none of the Kings of Israel had ever celebrated such a Passover as Josiah did, with the Priests and Levites, and all Judah and Israel, who were there with the inhabitants of Jerusalem.

This Passover was celebrated in the eighteenth year of Josiah's reign.

After all this, and after Josiah had restored [the order of the Temple], Neco King of Egypt went up to wage war against Carchemish on the Euphrates; and Josiah went to meet him.

But Neco sent messengers to him, saying, "What have we to do with you, King of Judah? As for you, I am not against you today, but against a house that is waging war against me, and God has told me to hurry. So do not come against God, who is with me, lest he destroy you."

But Josiah refused to turn away from him, instead disguised himself to fight against him, and he did not listen to the words of Neco [which came] from the mouth of God. So he came to fight in the field of Megiddo.

And the archers shot at King Josiah, and the King said to his servants, "Get me out of here; I have been badly wounded."

And his servants took him out of the chariot and put him on a second chariot that he had, and brought him to Jerusalem, where he died; and he was buried in the tombs of his fathers, and all those of Judah and Jerusalem mourned for Josiah.

Jeremiah also lamented over Josiah, and all the male and female singers spoke of him in their lamentations over Josiah, and these [lamentations] have been preserved to this day, having been given as a decree to Israel. These things are written in the Lamentations.

And the rest of the acts of Josiah and his righteous deeds, according to what is written in the Law of the Lord;

His deeds, [I say], the first and the last, are written in the Book of the Kings of Israel and Judah.

Then the people of the land took Jehoahaz son of Josiah, and they made him king in Jerusalem in place of his father.

Jehoahaz was twenty-three years old when he began to reign, and he reigned three months in Jerusalem.

And the King of Egypt deposed him in Jerusalem, and condemned the country to a fine of one hundred talents of silver, and one talent of gold.

And the King of Egypt appointed Eliakim, brother of [Jehoahaz], as king over Judah and Jerusalem, and changed his name to Jehoiakim; then Neco took Jehoahaz, brother of Jehoiakim, and brought him to Egypt.

Jehoiakim was twenty-five years old when he began to reign, and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem, and did what was displeasing to the Lord his God.

Nebuchadnezzar King of Babylon came up against him, and bound him with double bronze chains to take him to Babylon.

Nebuchadnezzar also carried ships from the house of the Lord to Babylon and put them in his Temple in Babylon.

Now the rest of the acts of Jehoiakim, and his abominations, which he did, and what was found in him, these things are written in the Book of the Kings of Israel and Judah, and Jehoiachin his son reigned in his place.

Jehoiachin was eight years old when he began to reign, and he reigned three months and ten days in Jerusalem, and he did what was evil in the sight of the Lord.

And the following year King Nebuchadnezzar sent and had him taken to Babylon with the precious vessels of the house of the Lord, and appointed Zedekiah his brother as king over Judah and Jerusalem.

Zedekiah was twenty-one years old when he began to reign, and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem.

He did what was displeasing to the Lord his God, and did not humble himself for [all that] Jeremiah the Prophet told him, who spoke to him from the Lord.

And he even rebelled against King Nebuchadnezzar, who had made him swear by [the Name of] God; and he stiffened his neck, and obstinate his heart, not to return to the Lord, the God of Israel.

Likewise, all the chief priests and the people continued to sin more and more grievously, according to all the abominations of the nations, and defiled the house which the Lord had sanctified in Jerusalem.

But the Lord, the God of their fathers, had summoned them by his messengers, whom he had sent with all diligence, because he had compassion on his people and on his dwelling place.

But they mocked God's messengers, they despised his words, and they called his prophets deceivers, until the Lord's fury was so kindled against his people that there was no remedy.

Therefore he brought against them the King of the Chaldeans, who killed their young men with the sword in the house of their Sanctuary, and he was not moved to compassion for the young men, nor for the girls, nor for the old and decrepit; he delivered them all into his hands.

And he brought to Babylon all the vessels of the house of God, great and small, and the treasures of the house of the Lord, and the treasures of the King, and those of his chief officials.

They also burned the house of God, they demolished the walls of Jerusalem; and they set fire to all its palaces, and they ruined all that was exquisite.

Then [the king of Babylon] brought to Babylon all those who had escaped from the sword; and they were slaves to him and his sons until the time of the Persian Monarchy.

So that the word of the Lord, spoken by Jeremiah, might be fulfilled, until the land had taken pleasure in its Sabbaths and all the days that it lay desolate, it rested, to fulfill the seventy years.

Now in the first year of Cyrus king of Persia, in order that the word of the Lord spoken by Jeremiah might be fulfilled, the Lord stirred up the spirit of Cyrus king of Persia, that he proclaimed throughout his kingdom, and also by letters, saying: This is what Cyrus, King of Persia, said: "The Lord, the God of heaven, has given me all the kingdoms of the earth, and he himself has commanded me to build him a temple in Jerusalem, in Judea. Who among you, from all his people, is willing to undertake this task? May the Lord his God be with him, and let him go up."

In the first year of Cyrus king of Persia, in order that the word of the Lord spoken by Jeremiah might be fulfilled, the Lord stirred up the spirit of Cyrus king of Persia, so that he sent a proclamation throughout his kingdom, and also by letter, saying:

Thus says Cyrus, King of Persia: The Lord the God of heaven has given me all the kingdoms of the earth, and he himself has commanded me to build him a house in Jerusalem, which is in Judea.

Who among you from all his people [is willing to do this?] May his God be with him, and let him go up to Jerusalem, which is in Judea, and rebuild the house of the Lord, the God of Israel, the God who dwells in Jerusalem.

And as for all those who remain behind, wherever they may be staying, let the people of the place where they are staying relieve them of silver, gold, goods, and mounts, besides what is offered voluntarily for the house of the God who dwells in Jerusalem.

Then the leaders of the fathers of Judah, of Benjamin, of the priests and of the Levites, arose to lead all those whose spirit God had stirred, to go up to rebuild the house of the Lord, which dwells in Jerusalem.

And all those around them encouraged them, providing them with silver and gold vessels, goods, mounts, and exquisite things, besides everything that was offered voluntarily.

And King Cyrus took the ships from the house of the Lord, which Nebuchadnezzar had brought out of Jerusalem, and which he had put in the house of his God.

And Cyrus, King of Persia, brought them out by Mithredath, the treasurer, who delivered them by account to Shebazzar, Prince of Judah.

And this is their number: thirty gold basins, a thousand silver basins, twenty-nine knives,

Thirty gold dishes, four hundred and ten silver dishes of the second order, and thousands of other utensils.

All the gold and silver utensils numbered 5,400. Shebazzar had them all brought back when the people who had been transported from Babylon were brought up to Jerusalem.

Now these are those from the province who came up from captivity, from among those who had been transported, whom Nebuchadnezzar King of Babylon had transported to Babylon, and who returned to Jerusalem and to Judea; each to his own city;

Who came with Zerubbabel, Jeshua, Nehemiah, Seraiah, Rehelaiah, Mordecai, Bilshan, Mispar, Bigvai, Rehun, and Bahana; the number, [I say], of the men of the people of Israel was [the following];

The children of Parrhos, two thousand one hundred and seventy-two.

The children of Sephatia, three hundred and seventy-two.

The children of Arah, seven hundred and seventy-five.

 The children of Magbis, one hundred and fifty-six.
 The children of another Helam, one thousand two hundred and fifty-four.
 Harim's children, three hundred and twenty.
 The children of Lod, Hadid, and Ono, seven hundred and twenty-five.
 The children of Jericho, three hundred and forty-five.
 The children of Senaa, three thousand six hundred and thirty.
 Priests. The descendants of Jedehiah, of the house of Jeshua, nine hundred and seventy-three.
 The children of Immer, one thousand and fifty-two.
 The children of Pasur, one thousand two hundred and forty-seven.
 The children of Harim, one thousand and seventeen.
 The Levites. The descendants of Jeshua and Kadmiel, from among the descendants of Hodaviah, seventy-four.
 Singers. The sons of Asaph, one hundred and twenty-eight.
 The children of the gatekeepers. The children of Sallum, the children of Ater, the children of Talmon, the children of Hakkub, the children of Hatita, the children of Sobai, all one hundred and thirty-nine.
 The Nethinim. The descendants of Ziha, the descendants of Hasupha, the descendants of Tabbathoth.
 The children of Keros, the children of Sihaha, the children of Padon,
 The children of Lebana, the children of Hagaba, the children of Hakkub,
 The children of Hagab, the children of Samlai, the children of Hanan,
 The children of Guiddel, the children of Gahar, the children of Réaja.
 The children of Rezin, the children of Nekoda, the children of Gazam,
 The children of Huza, the children of Paseah, the children of Besai,
 The children of Asna, the children of Mehunim, the children of Nephusim,
 The children of Bakbuk, the children of Hakupha, the children of Harhur,
 The children of Barkos, the children of Sisra, the children of Temah,
 The children of Netsiah, the children of Hatipha.
 The descendants of Solomon's servants; the descendants of Sotai, the descendants of Sophereth, the descendants of Peruda, hatsébajim, the children of Ami.
 The children of Jahala, the children of Darkon, the children of Guiddel,

All the Nethinim, and the children of Solomon's servants, [were] three hundred and ninety-two.

Now these are those who came up from Telmelah, Tel-harsah, Cherub, Adan, and Immer; who could not show the house of their fathers, nor their race, [and show] whether they were of Israel.

The children of Delahaiah, the children of Tobiah, the children of Nekoda, six hundred and fifty-two.

The children of the priests; the children of Habaiah, the children of Koz, the children of Barzillai, who, having taken as his wife one of the daughters of Barzillai Gileadite, was called by their name.

These men sought their records, searching for their genealogy, but they were not found there; therefore they were rejected from the priesthood.

And Attirsatha told them not to eat most holy things, while the Priest would attend with the Urim and Thummim.

The whole people together numbered forty-two thousand three hundred and sixty; Without their male and female servants, who were seven thousand three hundred and thirty-seven; and they had two hundred singers.

They had seven hundred and thirty-six horses, and two hundred and forty-five mules, Four hundred and thirty-five camels, and six thousand seven hundred and twenty donkeys.

And some of the leaders of the fathers, after they had come to rebuild the house of the Lord who dwells in Jerusalem, offered willingly for the house of God, to restore it to its former state,

They gave to the treasury of the work, according to their ability, sixty-one thousand drachmas of gold, and five thousand minas of silver, and one hundred priests' robes.

And so the priests, the Levites, some of the people, the singers, the gatekeepers, and the temple servants, lived in their cities, and all the Israelites also in their cities.

Now the seventh month was approaching, and the children of Israel were in their cities, the people assembled in Jerusalem as though they were one man.

Then Jeshua son of Jehozadak arose with his fellow priests, and Zerubbabel son of Shealtiel with his fellow priests, and they built the altar of the God of Israel to offer burnt offerings on it, as it is written in the Law of Moses, the man of God.

And they set up the altar of God on its base, because they were afraid of the peoples of the land, and they offered burnt offerings to the Lord on it, the burnt offerings of the morning and of the evening.

They also celebrated the solemn Feast of Tabernacles, in the manner which is written [in the Law]; and they [offered] burnt offerings each day, as much as was required, according to the custom of each day;

After that, the continual burnt offering, and those of the new moons, and of all the solemn feasts of the Lord, which were sanctified, and of all those who presented a freewill offering to the Lord.

From the first day of the seventh month they began to offer burnt offerings to the Lord, although the Temple of the Lord had not yet been built.

But they gave money to the stonecutters and carpenters, [they gave] also food and drink, and oil, to the Sidonians and Tyrians, so that they would bring cedar wood from Lebanon to the sea of Jappho, according to the permission that Cyrus, King of Persia, had given them.

And in the second year of their arrival in the house of God in Jerusalem, in the second month, Zerubbabel son of Shealtiel, and Jeshua son of Jehozadak, and the rest of their brothers, the priests, and the Levites, and all those who had come out of captivity to Jerusalem, began [to found the Temple]; and they appointed Levites, from the age of twenty years and above, to hasten the work of the house of the Lord.

And Jesuah was assisting with his sons and brothers, and Kadmiel with his sons, children of Judah, to urge those who were doing the work in the house of God; [and] the sons of Hemadad, with their sons and brothers, Levites.

And when those who were building laid the foundation of the Temple of the Lord, the priests were brought in to attend, wearing their robes and carrying their trumpets; and the Levites, the children of Asaph, with cymbals, to praise the Lord, according to the institution of David, King of Israel.

And they answered one another, praising and celebrating the Lord, [singing]: How good he is, for his steadfast love endures forever upon Israel. And all the people shouted with a great shout of joy, praising the Lord, because the foundation of the house of the Lord was being laid.

But many of the priests and Levites, and of the elders who had seen the first house on its foundation, imagining this house, wept aloud; but many raised their voices with shouts of joy and gladness.

And the people could not distinguish the sound of the shouts of joy and gladness from the sound of the people's weeping; however, the people shouted loudly for joy, so that the sound was heard far away.

Now the enemies of Judah and Benjamin heard that those who had returned from captivity were rebuilding the Temple to the Lord, the God of Israel;

They came to Zerubbabel and to the Chiefs of the fathers, and said to them: [Let] us build with you; for we will invoke your God as you [do]; also we have sacrificed to him since the time of Ezarhaddon King of Assyria, who brought us up here.

But Zerubbabel, and Jeshua, and the other leaders of the fathers of Israel [answered them]: It is not fitting that you and we should build the house to our God; but we who are here together will build for the Lord the God of Israel, as King Cyrus King of Persia commanded us.

That is why the people of the land made the hands of the people of Judah weak, and frightened them when they built.

And they even had people in their pay who gave them advice in order to thwart their plan, throughout the time of Cyrus King of Persia, until the reign of Darius King of Persia.

For during the reign of Ahasuerus, at the beginning of his reign, they wrote a slanderous accusation against the inhabitants of Judah and Jerusalem.

And in the time of Artaxerxes, Bislam, Mithredat, Tabeel, and the others of his company wrote to Artaxerxes, King of Persia. The writing of the copy of the letter was in Syriac script, and it was written in the Syriac language.

Rehum, therefore, President of the council, and Simsai, the Secretary, wrote a Letter concerning Jerusalem to King Artaxerxes, as follows.

Rehum President of the council, and Simsai the Secretary, and the others of their company, Dinians, Apharsatkians, Tarpelians, Arphasians, Arkevians, Babylonians, Susankians, Dehavians, [and] Helamites;

And the other peoples whom the great and glorious Osnapar had transported and made to live in the city of Samaria, and the others who were from this side of the river; from such and such a date.

This, then, is the content of the letter they sent him. To King Artaxerxes. Your servants, the people from this side of the river, and of such and such a date.

Let the King be warned that the Jews who came up from him to us have come to Jerusalem, [and] that they are rebuilding the rebellious and wicked city, and laying the foundations of the walls, and raising them up.

Therefore, let the King now be warned that if this city is rebuilt, and its walls founded, they will no longer pay taxes, nor salt taxes, nor tolls, and it will thus cause a great loss to the King's revenues.

And because we are in the King's pay, it would be unseemly for us to see this contempt from the King; that is why we have sent to the King, and we are letting him know;

Let him search in the Book of Memoirs of his fathers, and he will find it written in that Book of Memoirs, and he will learn that this city is a rebellious city, and pernicious to Kings and provinces; and that plots have always been made there, and that because of this this city has been destroyed.

We therefore inform the King that if this city is rebuilt, and its walls founded, he will no longer have any share in what is this side of the river.

And this is the reply that the King sent to Rehum, President of the Council, and to Shimsai the Secretary, and to the others of their company who lived in Samaria, and to the others on this side of the river. May you be well, and from such and such a date.

The content of the letters you sent us was presented and read aloud in my presence. And I gave orders, and it was sought and found, that this city has always risen up against Kings, and that rebellions and plots have been made there.

And that there were also powerful kings in Jerusalem who ruled over all those beyond the river, and that taxes, duties, and tolls were paid to them.

Therefore, give an order to stop these people, so that this city may not be rebuilt until I give the order.

And beware of failing in this; [for] why should the harm increase to the detriment of Kings?

Now when the content of King Artaxerxes' patents had been read in the presence of Rehum, and Simsai the Secretary, and those of their company, they went with diligence to Jerusalem to the Jews, and made them stop with force.

Then the work of the house of God, which dwells in Jerusalem, ceased, and it remained in that state until the second year of the reign of Darius King of Persia.

Then Haggai the Prophet, and Zechariah, son of Hiddo the Prophet, were prophesying to the Jews who were in Judah and Jerusalem, in the Name of the God of Israel, [who had sent them] to them.

And Zerubbabel son of Shealtiel, and Jeshua son of Jehozadak, arose and began to rebuild the house of God, which dwells in Jerusalem; and they had with them the Prophets of God, who helped them.

At that time Tattenai, Governor of this side of the river, and Setharboznai, and their companions came to them and spoke to them thus: Who commanded you to rebuild this house, and to lay the foundations of these walls?

And they also spoke to them in this way: What are the names of the men who are building this building?

But because the eye of their God was upon the Elders of the Jews, they were not made to stop until the matter reached Darius, and then they brought back Letters about it.

The content of the Letters that Tattenai Governor of this side of the river, and Setharboznai, and his companions Apharsekians, who were from this side of the river, sent to King Darius.

They sent him an account of the event, and it read: Peace be to King Darius.

Let the King be notified that we have gone to the province of Judea, to the house of the great God, which is being built with large stones, and even the framework is being laid on the walls, and this building is being constructed diligently, and is advancing in their hands.

And we questioned the elders who were there, and we spoke to them thus: Who commanded you to rebuild this house, and to lay the foundations of these walls?

And we also asked them for their names, to make them known to the King, so that we might write down the names of the principal ones among them.

And they answered us in this way, saying: We are servants of the God of heaven and earth, and we are rebuilding the house which was built long ago, which a great King of Israel built and founded.

But after our fathers had provoked the God of heaven to anger, he delivered them into the hands of Nebuchadnezzar, the Chaldean king of Babylon, who destroyed this house and transported the people to Babylon.

But in the first year of Cyrus, King of Babylon, King Cyrus commanded that this house of God be rebuilt.

And even King Cyrus brought out of the Temple of Babylon the gold and silver vessels of the house of God, which Nebuchadnezzar had taken from the Temple which was in Jerusalem, and which he had brought to the Temple of Babylon, and they were delivered to a man named Shebazzar, whom he had appointed Governor.

And he said to him, "Take these utensils and go, and have them carried to the Temple that was in Jerusalem, so that the house of God may be rebuilt in its place."

Then Shebazzar came and laid the foundations of the house of God, which dwells in Jerusalem; and from that time until now it is being built, and it is not yet finished.

Now therefore, if it seems good to the King, let them search in the house of the King's treasury which is in Babylon, if it is true that there was an order given by Cyrus to rebuild this house of God in Jerusalem; and let the King make known to us his will on this matter.

Then King Darius gave his orders, and they searched the place where the records were kept, [and] where the treasures were stored in Babylon.

And a scroll was found in a chest in the Royal Palace, which was in the province of Media; and this Memorandum was written there.

In the first year of King Cyrus, King Cyrus ordered that the house of God in Jerusalem should be rebuilt as a place for sacrifices, and that its foundations should be strong enough to support its weight, with a height of sixty cubits and a length of sixty cubits.

And [that] three rows of large stones would be built, and one row of new wood, and that the expense would be provided from the King's household.

And as for the gold and silver articles of the house of God, which Nebuchadnezzar had taken from the Temple that was in Jerusalem, and brought to Babylon, that they should be returned, and that they should be put back in the Temple that was in Jerusalem, [each] in its place, and that they should be brought into the house of God.

Now therefore, you Tattenai, Governor beyond the river, and Setharboznai, and your companions Apharsekians, [who are] beyond the river, withdraw from there;

Let the work on this house of God be done, [and] let the Governor of the Jews and their Elders rebuild this house of God in its place.

And this order is made by me concerning what you will have to do, with the Elders of these Jews to rebuild this house of God, is that from the King's funds which come back from the taxes beyond the river, the expenses be immediately provided to these people, so that they are not made idle.

And as for what is needed, whether calves, sheep, or lambs for burnt offerings to the God of heaven, whether wheat, salt, wine, or oil, as the priests in Jerusalem shall say, let it be given to them daily, without fail.

So that they may offer pleasing sacrifices to the God of heaven, and pray for the life of the King and his children.

I also order that whoever changes this, a tree will be uprooted from his house and erected there, so that he may be exterminated, and that because of this his house will be made into a road.

And may God, who has placed his Name there, destroy every king and every people who extend their hand to alter and destroy this house of God which dwells in Jerusalem.

I, Darius, have given this order; let it therefore be carried out immediately.

Then Tattenai, Governor of this side of the river, and Setharboznai, and his companions had him executed immediately, because King Darius had written to them in this way.

Now the elders of the Jews were building, and they prospered according to the prophecy of Haggai the prophet, and of Zechariah, son of Hiddo. So they built, having laid the foundations by the command of the God of Israel, and by the order of Cyrus and Darius, and also of Artaxerxes, King of Persia.

And this house of God was completed on the third day of the month of Adar, in the sixth year of the reign of King Darius.

And the children of Israel, the Priests, the Levites, and the rest of those who had returned from captivity, celebrated the dedication of this house of God with joy.

And they offered for the dedication of this house of God, one hundred calves, two hundred rams, four hundred lambs, and twelve young goats as sin offerings for all Israel, according to the number of the Tribes of Israel.

And they established the priests in their ranks, and the Levites in their departments, for the service to God in Jerusalem, according to what is written in the Book of Moses.

Then those who had returned from captivity celebrated Passover on the fourteenth day of the first month.

For the priests had purified themselves with the Levites, so that they were all clean; therefore they slaughtered the Passover lamb for all those who had returned from captivity, and for their fellow priests, and for themselves.

So it was eaten by the children of Israel who had returned from captivity, and by all those who had withdrawn to them from the defilement of the nations of the land, to seek the Lord, the God of Israel.

And they joyfully celebrated the solemn feast of unleavened bread for seven days, because the Lord had given them cause for joy, having turned the heart of the King of Assyria toward them, to strengthen their hands in the work of the house of God, the God of Israel.

Now after these things, [and] during the reign of Artaxerxes, King of Persia, Ezra son of Seraiah, son of Hazarah, son of Hilkiah,

Son of Sallum, son of Zadok, son of Ahitub,

Son of Amariah, son of Hazarah, son of Meraioth,

Son of Zerachiah, son of Huzi, son of Bukki,

Son of Abisuhah, son of Phinehas, son of Eleazar, son of Aaron the First Priest;

Ezra, I say, who was a scribe well trained in the Law of Moses, which the Lord the God of Israel had given, came up from Babylon, and the king granted him all his request, according to the hand of the Lord his God, which was upon him.

Some of the children of Israel, priests, Levites, singers, gatekeepers, and temple servants, went up to Jerusalem in the seventh year of King Artaxerxes.

And [Ezra] arrived in Jerusalem in the fifth month of the seventh year of the king.

For on the first day of the first month they began to set out from Babylon; and on the first day of the fifth month he arrived in Jerusalem, because the hand of his God was good to him.

For Ezra had set his heart on studying the Law of the Lord, and on doing it, and on teaching among the people of Israel the statutes and the ordinances.

Now this is the content of the letters patent that King Artaxerxes gave to Ezra, Priest and Scribe, Scribe of the words of the commandments of the Lord and of his ordinances, among the Israelites.

Artaxerxes King of Kings, to Ezra the Priest and Scribe of the Law of the God of heaven, be perfect health; and from such and such a date.

I command that all those of my Kingdom who are of the people of Israel, and of its Priests and Levites, who will present themselves voluntarily to go to Jerusalem, shall go with you;

Because you are sent by the King and his seven advisors to inquire in Judea and Jerusalem about the Law of your God, which is in your hand.

And to carry the silver and gold that the King and his advisors have willingly offered to the God of Israel, whose dwelling place is in Jerusalem;

And all the silver and gold that you find in all the province of Babylon, with the freewill offerings of the people and the priests, offering willingly to the house of their God who dwells in Jerusalem.

So that you may soon buy with that money calves, rams, lambs, with their cakes and their sprinklings, and offer them on the altar of the house of your God, who dwells in Jerusalem.

And do according to the will of your God, whatever seems good to you and your brothers to do with the rest of the silver and gold.

And as for the utensils that are given to you for the service of the house of your God, hand them over to the God of Jerusalem.

And as for the rest that will be needed for the house of your God, as much as you need to use, you shall take it from the house of the King's treasury.

And from me, Artaxerxes the King, it is ordered to all the treasurers who are beyond the river, that everything that Ezra the Priest [and] Scribe of the Law of the God of heaven asks of you be done immediately.

Up to one hundred talents of silver, and up to one hundred cores of wheat, and up to one hundred vats of wine, and up to one hundred vats of oil; and salt without number.

Let everything that is commanded by the God of heaven be done quickly in the house of the God of heaven; lest there be indignation against the Kingdom, and against the King and his children.

Furthermore, we inform you that no tax, no toll, no charge may be imposed on any Priest, or Levite, or singer, or gatekeeper, or Nethinim, or minister of this house of God.

And as for you, Ezra, appoint magistrates and judges according to the wisdom of your God, with which you are endowed, so that they may do justice to all this people who are beyond the river; [that is], to all those who know the laws of your God, and so that you may teach him who does not know them.

And as for all those who do not observe the Law of your God, and the Law of the King, let them be judged immediately, either to death, or to banishment, or to a monetary fine, or to imprisonment.

Blessed be the Lord, the God of our fathers, who has put this thing in the heart of the King, to honor the house of the Lord, who dwells in Jerusalem;

And that is why I found favor in the sight of the king, his advisors, and all the king's powerful gentlemen. So, having grown strong, as the hand of the Lord my God was upon me, I gathered the leaders of Israel to go up with me.

These are the heads of the fathers, with the census which was made according to the genealogies, of those who came up with me from Babylon, during the reign of King Artaxerxes;

The descendants of Phinehas, Gershom; the descendants of Ithamar, Daniel; the descendants of David, Hattus;

The descendants of Secaniah, who were descendants of Parhos, Zechariah, and with him, counting by their genealogy according to the males, one hundred and fifty men.

From the children of Pehath-Moab, Eliehohenai son of Zerahiah, and with him two hundred men;

Some of the children of Shecaniah, the son of Jahaziel, and with him three hundred men;

Some of the children of Hadin, Hebed son of Jonathan, and with him fifty men;

From the children of Helam, Isaiah, son of Hathaliah, and with him seventy men;

From the children of Sephariah, Zebadiah son of Michael, and with him eighty men;

Some of Joab's descendants, Habadiah son of Jehiel, and with him two hundred and eighteen men;

Children of Selomith, the son of Josiphia, and with him one hundred and sixty men;

Some of the descendants of Bebai, Zechariah son of Bebai, and with him twenty-eight men;

Children of Hazgad, Johanan, son of Katan, and with him one hundred and ten men;

The descendants of Adonicham, the last of them, whose names are Eliphelet, Jehiel, and Shemaiah, and with them sixty men.

Children from Bigvai, Huthai, Zabbud, and with them seventy men.

And I gathered them together by the river that flows into Ahavah, and we stayed there three days. Then I looked over the people and the priests, and I found none of the children of Levi there.

And so I sent from among the chief Eliezer, Ariel, Shemahia, Elnathan, Jarib, Elnathan, Nathan, Zechariah, and Mesullam, with Jojarib and Elnathan, teachers.

And I gave them orders for Iddo, the chief prince, [who lived] in the place of Casiphia; and I put in their mouths the words that they were to say to Iddo, [and] to his brother, the Nethinians, in the place of Casiphia, so that they would bring us ministers for the house of our God.

And they brought us, according to the good hand of our God upon us, an intelligent man from among the descendants of Mahli, son of Levi, son of Israel; [namely] Sherebiah, with his sons and his brothers, [who were] eighteen men.

And Hasabiah, and with him Isaiah, from among the descendants of Merari, his brothers, and their descendants, twenty men.

And of the Nethinim, whom David and the leaders of the people had appointed for the service of the Levites, two hundred and twenty Nethinim, who were all named by name.

And I proclaimed there the fast by the river Ahava, in order to humble ourselves before our God, praying to Him to grant us a safe journey for ourselves, and for our families, and for all our possessions.

For I was ashamed to ask the King for troops and horsemen to defend us from the enemies on the road; because we had said to the King in express terms: The hand of our God is favorable to all who call upon him; but his power and his wrath are against those who forsake him.

So we fasted, and we implored [the help] of our God because of this; and he was moved by our prayers.

Then I separated twelve of the chief priests; with Serebiah, Hasabiah, and with them ten of their brothers.

And I weighed out to them the silver and the gold and the utensils, which were the offering that the King, his counselors, his gentlemen, and all those of Israel who were there, had made to the house of our God.

So I weighed them out, and gave them six hundred and fifty talents of silver, and silver dishes weighing one hundred talents, and one hundred talents of gold.

And twenty gold dishes [amounting] to a thousand drachmas, and two utensils of shining, fine copper, as precious as if they had been of gold.

And I said to them, "You are consecrated to the Lord, and the utensils are consecrated, and this silver and gold is a freewill offering to the Lord, the God of your fathers."

Keep an eye on them and guard them until you weigh them in the presence of the chief priests and Levites, and before the leaders of the fathers of Israel in Jerusalem, in the chambers of the house of the Lord.

The priests and the Levites received the weight of the silver, and the gold, and the utensils, to bring them to Jerusalem, to the house of our God.

And we set out from the river Ahava on the twelfth day of the first month, to go to Jerusalem; and the hand of our God was upon us; and he delivered us from the hand of the enemies, and from [their] ambushes on the way.

Then we arrived in Jerusalem, and after resting for three days,

On the fourth day we weighed the silver and gold, and the utensils in the house of our God, and we delivered them to Meremoth, son of Uriah the priest, with whom was Eleazar son of Phinehas; and with them Jozabad son of Jeshua, and Nohadiah son of Binui, Levites.

According to the number and weight of all these things, and the whole weight was then written down.

And those who had been deported, [and] who had returned from captivity, offered for all Israel, as a burnt offering to the God of Israel, twelve calves, ninety-six rams, seventy-seven lambs, [and] twelve male goats for sin; all of them as a burnt offering to the Lord.

And they delivered the King's ordinances into the hands of the King's satraps and governors who were on this side of the river, who favored the people and the house of God.

Now as soon as these things were completed, the leaders of the people approached me, saying, The people of Israel, and the Priests, and the Levites have not separated themselves from the peoples of these lands, [as they should have done] because of their abominations, [namely] the Canaanites, the Hittites, the Perizzites, the Jebusites, the Hammonites, the Moabites, the Egyptians, and the Amorites.

For they took some of their daughters for themselves and for their sons; and the holy seed was mixed with the peoples of those countries; and even there are some of the leaders of the people, and [several] magistrates, who were the first to commit this sin.

And as soon as I heard this, I tore my clothes and my cloak, and I pulled out the hair from my head and [the hairs] from my beard, and I sat down in despair.

And all those who trembled at the words of the God of Israel gathered around me because of the sin of those in captivity, and I sat in utter desolation until the evening offering.

And at the time of the evening offering I arose from my affliction, and with my clothes and cloak torn, I knelt down and stretched out my hands to the Lord my God, And I say: My God! I am ashamed, and I am too confused to lift up, O my God! my face to you; for our iniquities are multiplied above our heads, and our sin has risen to the heavens.

From the days of our fathers until today we are exceedingly guilty; and we have been delivered because of our iniquities, we, our Kings, and our Priests, into the hands of the Kings of the countries, to be put to the edge of the sword, taken captive, plundered, and exposed to disgrace, as it appears today.

But now the Lord our God has shown us grace, as in a moment, so that he has caused some [of us] to remain, and he has given us a nail in his holy place, so that our God might enlighten our eyes, and give us some respite from our bondage.

For we are slaves, and yet our God has not abandoned us in our bondage; but he has granted us favor in the sight of the kings of Persia, to give us respite, in order to rebuild the house of our God, and to restore its desolate places, and to give us a partition in Judah, and in Jerusalem.

But now, O our God! What shall we say after these things? For we have abandoned your commandments,

Which you have given through your servants the Prophets, saying: The land which you are about to enter to possess is a land defiled by the defilement of the peoples of those lands, because of the abominations with which they have filled it from one end to the other with their impurities.

Therefore, do not give your daughters to their sons, nor take their daughters for your sons, nor seek their peace or their wealth forever; so that you may be established and eat the bounty of the land and pass it on to your sons forever.

Now after all the things that have happened to us because of our evil works, and the great crime that was found in us; [and] because, O our God! you have remained [in your punishments] below what our sins [deserved], and you have given us such a remnant as this;

Would we return to disobeying your commandments and making alliances with these abominable peoples? Would you not be angry with us, until you consumed us, leaving no remnant or resource?

O Lord God of Israel, you are righteous, for we are left behind, as is evident today. Behold, we stand before you with our iniquity, though there is no way we can stand before you because of what we have done.

And as Ezra prayed and made this confession, weeping and prostrating himself on the ground before the house of God, a very great multitude of men, women, and children of the people of Israel gathered around him; and the people wept bitterly.

Then Shecaniah son of Jehiel, one of the descendants of Helam, spoke up and said to Ezra: We have sinned against our God by taking foreign wives from among the peoples of this land; but now there is hope for Israel in this.

Therefore let us now make a covenant with our God, that we shall bring out all the women, and all that is born of them, according to the counsel of the Lord, and of those who tremble at the commandment of our God; and let it be done according to the Law.

Get up, because this matter concerns you, and we will be with you; so take courage, and act.

Then Ezra arose and made the chief priests, the Levites, and all Israel swear an oath that they would do according to this word; and they swore.

Then Ezra got up from in front of the house of God, and went to the chamber of Johanan son of Eliashib, and entered it; and he ate no bread, nor drank any water, because he was mourning for the sin of those in captivity.

Then a proclamation was made throughout the land of Judah and in Jerusalem to all those who had returned from captivity, that they should assemble in Jerusalem.

And that whoever did not go there in three days, according to the opinion of the principals and the Elders, all his property would be put under interdict, and that he would be separated from the assembly of those in captivity.

So all those from Judah and Benjamin assembled in Jerusalem within three days, which was in the ninth month on the twentieth day of the month; and all the people stood before the square of the house of God, trembling about this, and because of the rains.

Then Ezra the Priest stood up and said to them, "You have sinned by taking foreign wives among you, thus increasing the guilt of Israel."

But now confess [your sin] to the Lord, the God of your fathers, and do his will, and separate yourselves from the peoples of the land, and from the foreign women.

And the whole assembly answered, and said aloud: It is our duty to do what you have said;

But the people are many, and this weather is very rainy, therefore there is no way to stay outside, and this matter is not a matter of one day or two; for we are many who have sinned in this.

Therefore let all the leaders among us appear before the whole assembly, and let all those who are in our towns who have taken foreign wives into their homes come at a certain time, and let the elders of each town and its judges be with them; until we turn away from us the fierceness of the anger of our God, [and] until this is finished.

And Jonathan son of Hazeiel, and Jahzeia son of Tikvah were appointed for this matter; and Mesullam and Sabethai, Levites, assisted them.

And those who had returned from captivity did likewise, so that Ezra the Priest was chosen, [and] those who were the Heads of the fathers according to the houses of their fathers, all [named] by their names, who began their sessions on the first day of the tenth month, to inquire about the matter.

And on the first day of the first month they had finished with all those who had taken foreign wives into their homes.

Now as for the sons of the priests who had taken foreign wives into their homes, there were among the children of Jeshua, son of Jozadak and his brothers, Mahaseiah, Eliezer, Jarib, and Gedaliah;

Who gave their hands to send away their wives; and admitting that they were guilty, [they offered] for their crime a ram from the flock.

Children of Immer, Hanani, and Zebadiah;

And the children of Harim, Mahaseja, Elie, Shemahia, Jehiel, and Huzija;

And the children of Pashur, Eliohenai, Mahaseiah, Ishmael, Nathanael, Jozabad, and Elhasah;
And of the Levites, Jozabad, Shimei, Kelaiah (which is the same as Kelita), Pethahiah, Judah, and Eliezer;
And singers, Eliasib; and gatekeepers, Sallum, Telem, and Uri.
And from those of Israel; from the children of Parhos, Ramiah, Izijah, Malkijah, Mijamin, Elhazzar, Malkijah and Benaiah;
And the children of Helam, Mattaniah, Zechariah, Jehiel, Habdi, Jeremoth, and Elijah;

And the children of Zattu, Eliohenai, Eliasib, Mattaniah, Jeremoth, Zabad, and Haziza;
And the children of Bebai, Johanan, Hananiah, Zebbai, and Hathlai;
And the children of Bani, Mesullam, Malluch, Hadaiah, Jasub, Seal, and Ramoth;
And of the children of Pahath-Moab, Hadnah, Kelal, Benaiah, Mahasiah, Mattaniah, Bethsaleel, Binnui, and Manasseh;
And the children of Harim, Eliezer, Isiyah, Malkijah, Shemahi, Simeon;
Benjamin, Malluc [and] Semaria;
[And] the children of Masum, Mattenai, Mattata, Zabad, Eliphelet, Jeremai, Manasseh, and Shimei;
[And] children from Bani, Mahadaï, Hamram, Uël, Bénaja, Bédéja, Kéluhu, Vania, Meremoth, Eliasib, Mattaniah, Mattenai, Jahasai, Bani, Binnui, Simhi, Selemia, Nathan, Hadaja, Mabnadbai, Sasai, Sarai, Hazareel, Selemia, Semaria, Sallum, Amaria, and Joseph;
[And] the children of Nebo, Jehiel, Mattitiah, Zabad, Zebina, Jaddan, Joel, and Benaiah.

All of them had taken foreign wives; and there were some of them who had children by these women.

The deeds of Nehemiah, son of Hacaliah. It happened in the month of Kislev, in the twentieth year, while I was in Susan, the capital city, Hanani, one of my brothers, and some people, came from Judah; and I inquired of them concerning the surviving Jews, who were left of the captivity, and concerning Jerusalem.

And they said to me, "Those who remained out of captivity are here in the province, in great misery and disgrace; and the wall of Jerusalem remains torn down, and its gates burned with fire."

Now it came to pass that as soon as I had heard these words, I sat down, I wept, I mourned for a few days, I fasted, and I offered my prayer before the God of heaven; And I say: I pray to you, O Eternal One! God of heaven, who are the Strong, the Great and the Awesome, who keeps the covenant and the gift to those who love you and keep your commandments!

I pray you, let your ear be attentive, and let your eyes be open to hear the prayer of your servant, which I present to you at this time day and night, for the children of Israel your servants, confessing the sins of the children of Israel, which we have committed against you; even I and my father's house have sinned.

Certainly we are guilty before you, and we have not kept the commandments, nor the ordinances, nor the judgments that you prescribed to Moses, your servant.

[But] I beg you, remember the word which you entrusted to Moses, your servant, saying: You will commit crimes, and I will scatter you among the peoples;

Then you will return to me, and you will keep my commandments, and do them; and if there are any of you who have been driven to the ends of the heavens, I will gather you from there, and I will bring you back to the place that I will choose to make my Name dwell there.

But these are your servants and your people, whom you have redeemed by your great power and by your mighty hand.

I pray to you, Lord, that your ear may now be attentive to the prayer of your servant, and to the supplication of your servants, who delight in fearing your Name; and grant, I pray, that your servant may prosper today, and that he may find favor with this man; for I was cupbearer to the King.

And it came to pass in the month of Nisan, in the twentieth year of King Artaxerxes, that the wine was brought before him, and I took the wine and presented it to the king. Now I had never had a bad countenance before him.

And the King said to me: Why do you look so sad, since you are not sick? This comes only from a bad disposition. Then I was very afraid;

And I answered the King: May the King live forever! How can my face not be sad, since the city, which is the place of the tombs of my fathers, remains desolate, and its gates have been consumed by fire?

And the King said: What do you ask of me? Then I prayed to the God of heaven;

And I said to the King, "If it pleases the King, and if your servant is pleasing to you, send me to Judea, to the city of the tombs of my fathers, to rebuild it."

And the King said to me, and also to his wife, who was sitting beside him: How many would you be on your journey, and when would you return? And after I had declared the time to the King, he was pleased to give me my leave.

Then I said to the King: If the King is pleased, let letters be given to me for the Governors beyond the river, so that they may send me across until I arrive in Judea;

And letters to Asaph, the keeper of the king's park, asking him to give me timber for the carpentry of the gates of the fortress that adjoins the house [of God], and for the gates of the city walls, and for the house into which I will enter. And the king granted it to me, according to the good hand of my God toward me.

So I went to the Governors who are on this side of the river, and I gave them the King's packages. Now the King had sent with me some war captains and horsemen.

When Samballat the Horonite and Tobiah the Hammonite servant heard about this, they were very displeased that someone had come to bring good to the children of Israel.

So I arrived in Jerusalem, and I was there three days.

Then I got up at night, I and a few people with me; but I did not tell anyone what my God had put in my heart to do in Jerusalem; and there was no other mount with me except the one I had mounted.

So I went out by night through the Valley Gate, and [I came] before the Dragon Fountain, to the Dung Gate; and I considered the walls of Jerusalem, how they [lay] fallen down, and how its gates had been consumed by fire.

From there I went to the fountain gate, and towards the King's pond; and there was no place where I could pass with my mount.

And I went up by night by the stream, and I considered the wall; then, turning back, I returned by the gate of the valley; and so I returned.

But the magistrates did not know where I had gone, nor what I was doing; therefore I had not declared anything until then, neither to the Jews, nor to the priests, nor to the principals, nor to the magistrates, nor to the rest of those who handled the affairs.

Then I said to them, "You see our misery, how Jerusalem lies desolate, and its gates burned with fire. Come, let us rebuild the walls of Jerusalem, so that we will no longer be a disgrace."

And I told them that the hand of my God was good to me, and I also told them the words that the King had spoken to me. Then they said, "Let us rise up and build." So they strengthened their hands to do good work.

But when Samballat the Horonite, Tobiah the Hammonite servant, and Gesem the Arab heard about it, they mocked us and despised us, saying, "What are you doing? Are you not rebelling against the king?"

And I answered them with this word, and said to them: the God of heaven is the one who will make us prosper; therefore we, who are his servants, will arise and build; but you have no part, no right, no memorial, in Jerusalem.

Eliasib then, the high priest, arose, with his brothers the priests, and they rebuilt the gate of the sheepfold, which they consecrated, and they set up its gates there, and they consecrated it as far as the tower of Meah, as far as the tower of Hananel.

And beside him the people of Jericho rebuilt; and beside them Zaccur, son of Imri, rebuilt.

And the children of Sena rebuilt the Fish Gate, which they floored, and put in its doors, its locks, and its bars.

And beside them he repaired Meremoth, son of Uriah, son of Koz; and beside them he repaired Meshullam, son of Berekiah, son of Mezezabeel, and beside them he repaired Zadok, son of Bahana.

And alongside them the Tekohites made repairs; but the most important among them did not join in the work of their Lord.

And Jehoiada, son of Paseah, and Mesullam, son of Besodiah, repaired the old gate, which they floored, and they put in its doors, its locks, and its bars.

And beside them repaired Melatia Gibeonite, and Jadon Meronothite, from Gibeon and Mizpah, near the seat of the Governor on this side of the river.

And beside this [seat] Huziel, son of Harhaia, one of the goldsmiths, repaired; and beside it Hananiah, son of Harakkahim, repaired; and so they rebuilt Jerusalem up to the broad wall.

And beside them repaired Rephaia, son of Hur, captain of half a quarter of Jerusalem;

And beside them he repaired Jedajah, son of Harumaph, even at the site of his house; and beside him he repaired Hattus, son of Hasabneia.

And Malkijah, son of Harim, and Hasub, son of Pahath-Moab, repaired as much, and also the tower of the furnaces.

And beside them Sallum, son of Lobes, captain of the other half of Jerusalem, repaired, he and his daughters.

And Hanun and the inhabitants of Zanoah repaired the gate of the valley, they rebuilt it, and put in its gates, its locks, and its bars, and [they built] a thousand cubits of wall, up to the dung gate,

And Malkijah, son of Rechab, captain of the district of Beth-kerem, repaired the dung gate; he rebuilt it, and put in its doors, its locks, and its bars.

And Sallum, son of Col-Hoze, captain of the district of Mizpah, repaired the gate of the fountain; he rebuilt it, and covered it, and put in its gates, its locks, and its bars; and [he also repaired] the wall of the pool of Selah, extending toward the King's garden, and as far as the steps that go down from the City of David.

After him, Nehemiah son of Hazbuk, captain of the half-district of Beth-Zur, repaired the area of David's tombs, and the pool that had been repaired, and the house of the strongmen.

After him, Nehum son of Bani repaired the Levites; and beside him, Hasabiah, captain of the half-district of Keilah, repaired those of his district.

After him their brothers made amends, [namely], Bavvai, son of Henadad, captain of [the other] half-district of Kehila.

And beside him Hezer, son of Jeshua, captain of Mizpah, repaired as much, at the place by which one goes up to the armory at the corner.

After him Baruch, son of Zaccai, took courage, and repaired as much, from the corner to the entrance of the house of Eliashib, the high priest.

After him Meremoth, son of Uriah, son of Koz, repaired as much, from the entrance of Eliashib's house to the end of Eliashib's house.

And after him the priests, inhabitants of the countryside, made amends.
After them, Benjamin and Hasub repaired at the site of their house. After them, Hazaria, son of Mahaseiah, son of Hananiah, repaired near his house.
After him, Binnui, son of Henadad, repaired as much, from the house of Hazaria, to the corner, even to the corner.
[And] Palal, son of Uzai, from the corner and the tower that juts out of the King's high house, which is near the court of the prison. After him, Pedaiah, son of Parhos.

And the Nethinimians, who dwelt in Hophel, [repaired] towards the East, as far as the place of the water gate, and towards the tower which goes out outside.
After them, the Tekohites repaired as many, from the place of the great tower that stands out outside, to the wall of Hophel.

And the priests repaired the horses from above the gate, each in the place of his house.

After them, Zadok son of Immer repaired the site of his house. And after him, Shemaiah son of Shecaniah, the keeper of the eastern gate, repaired it.
After him, Hananiah son of Selemiah, and Hanun the sixth son of Zalaph, repaired the same. After them, Meshullam son of Berekiah repaired the site of his chamber.
After him, Malkijah, son of Zoreph, repaired as far as the house of the Nethinim, and of the merchants, and the place of the gate of Miphkad, and as far as the ascent of the corner.

And the goldsmiths and the dealers made repairs between the corner hill and the door of the fold.

Now it came to pass that Samballat, having heard that we were rebuilding the wall, was very indignant and very angry; and he mocked the Jews.

For he said in the presence of his brothers and the Samaritan warriors: "What are these languishing Jews doing? Will they be allowed to continue? Will they offer sacrifices and complete everything in one day? Can they even bring back the stones from the heaps of gunpowder, since they are burned?"

And Tobiah the Hammonite, who was with him, said: Even though they build, if a fox comes up, it will break down their stone wall.

O our God! Hear how we are despised, and turn their reproach back on their own heads, and make them prey in a land of captivity.

And do not cover up their iniquity, and let not their sin be blotted out before your face; for they have used sharp words, clinging to the builders.

So we rebuilt the wall, and the whole wall was joined up to its half; for the people had their hearts in the work.

But when Samballat and Tobiah, and the Arabs, the Hammonites, and the Ashdodites heard that the wall of Jerusalem had been rebuilt, and that what had been broken had been started to be rebuilt, they were very angry;

And they all conspired together to come and wage war against Jerusalem, and to thwart [its purpose].

So we prayed to our God, and being afraid of them, we posted guards against them day and night.

And Judah said: The strength of the builders is weakened, and there is much ruin, so that we cannot build the wall.

But our enemies had said: Let them know nothing about it, and let them see nothing about it, until we enter among them, and put them to death, and stop the work.

But it happened that the Jews who remained among them, having come to us, said to us ten times: Beware of all the places by which you might turn towards us.

That is why I arranged the people from below, behind the wall, on high places, according to their families, with their swords, their javelins, and their bows.

Then I looked and stood up; and I said to the leaders and the officials, and to the rest of the people: Do not be afraid of them; remember the Lord, who is great and awesome, and fight for your brothers, for your sons and for your daughters, for your wives and for your houses.

And when our enemies learned that we had been warned, God thwarted their plan; and we all returned to the walls, each to his work.

From that day on, half of my people worked, and the other half carried javelins, shields, bows, and breastplates; and the governors followed each family of Judah. Those who built the wall, and those who loaded the porters, each worked with one hand, and with the other they held the sword.

For each of those who were building had a sword girded around his waist, and they were building thus [equipped]; and the trumpeter was near me.

For I say to the leaders and the magistrates, and to the rest of the people: The work is great and extensive, and we are separated on the wall, far from one another.

So wherever you hear the sound of the trumpet, run to us; our God will fight for us.

So that was how we worked; but half of them held javelins from daybreak until the stars rose.

And at that time I said to the people: Let each one with his servant spend the night in Jerusalem, so that they may serve us by night to keep watch, and by day to work.

And I, my brothers, my servants, and the men of the guard who follow me, will not leave our clothes: let each one [come with] his sword, and [with] water.

But there was a great outcry from the people and their wives against the Jews, their brothers.

For there were some who said, "Let several of us [hire] their sons and daughters to take in wheat, so that we may eat and live."

And there were others who said: we are putting up our fields, our vineyards, and our houses, to get wheat to combat the famine.

There were also those who said: we are borrowing money for the King's tax, on our fields and on our vineyards.

However, our flesh is like the flesh of our brothers, and our sons are like their sons; and behold, we subject our sons and our daughters to be slaves; and some of our daughters are already subjected, and are no longer in our power; and our fields and our vineyards belong to others.

But I was very angry when I heard their cry and those words.

And I consulted within myself; then I rebuked the principals and the magistrates, and I said to them, "You are strictly enforcing what each of you has imposed on his brother"; and I summoned the great assembly against them.

And I said to them, "We have redeemed, to the best of our ability, our Jewish brothers who had been sold to the nations, and would you yourselves sell your brothers, or would they be sold to us?" Then they were silent and did not know what to say.

And I said, "You are not doing right; do you not want to walk in the fear of our God, rather than be a reproach to the nations who are our enemies?"

We could also demand money and wheat, I, my brothers, and my servants; [but] let us, I pray you, leave them this debt.

Give them back today, I pray you, their fields, their vineyards, their olive groves and their houses, and besides that, one hundredth of the money, wheat, wine, and oil that you demand from them.

And they answered: We will return them, and we will not ask anything of them; we will do as you say; then I called the Priests, and I made them swear that they would do it [thus].

And I shook my breast and said, "May God so shake from his house and from his work every man who has not put this word into practice, and may he be so shaken and emptied." And all the assembly answered, "Amen!" And they praised the Lord; and the people did according to this word.

And even from the day on which [the King] commanded me to be their Governor in the land of Judah, which is from the twentieth year to the thirty-second year of King

Artaxerxes, the span of twelve years, I and my brothers did not take what was assigned to the Governor for his meal.

Although the first Governors who had been before me had charged the people, and had taken from them bread and wine, besides forty shekels of silver, and had also ruled over the people; but I did not do so, because of the fear of [my] God.

And I even repaired part of this wall, and we did not buy any field, and all my servants were assembled there after the work.

And, besides that, the Jews and the Magistrates, numbering one hundred and fifty men, and those who came to us from the nations that [were] around us, were at my table.

And what was prepared each day was an ox and six chosen sheep. Poultry was also prepared for me; and every ten days [I was presented] with all kinds of wine in abundance; and notwithstanding all this, I did not ask for the dish that was assigned to the Governor; for it would have been a harsh burden for this people.

O my God! Remember me with goodness, [according to] all that I have done for this people.

Now it came to pass that when Samballat, Tobijah, and Gesem the Arab, and the rest of our enemies had learned that I had rebuilt the wall, and that no breach had remained in it, although until that time I had not yet put the doors in the gates;

Samballat and Gesem sent word to me, saying, "Come, let us meet together in the villages in the countryside of Ono." But they had plotted to harm me.

But I sent messengers to them, saying, "I am undertaking a great work, and I cannot come down. Why should the work cease if I were to leave it and come down to you?"

And they told me the same thing four times; and I answered them in the same way.

Then Samballat sent his servant to me, to speak to me the same thing a fifth time; and he had in his hand an open letter;

In which it was written: It is heard among the nations, and Gasmu says it, that you and the Jews are thinking of rebelling, and that is why you are rebuilding the wall, and that you are going to be King, according to what is being said;

And you have even appointed prophets to praise you in Jerusalem, and to say, "He is king in Judah." Now, these same things will be brought to the king's attention; come now so that we may consult together.

And I sent back to him, to tell him: What you say is not true, but you are inventing it yourself.

For they all terrified us, saying, "Their hands will abandon the work, so that it will not be done." Now therefore, [O God!] strengthen my hands.

Besides this, I went to the house of Shemaiah son of Delaiah, son of Mehetabel, who was being held captive. And he said to me, "Let us assemble in the house of God, in the Temple, and shut the doors of the Temple; for they are going to come to kill you, and they will come by night to kill you."

But I replied: Would a man like me flee? And who is like me, who enters the Temple to save his life? I will not enter.

And so I knew that God had not sent him, but that he had spoken this prophecy against me, and that Samballat and Tobiah were giving him a pension.

Because he was their lodger to frighten me, and to force me to act in this way, and to commit this fault, so that they would have something bad to reproach me for.

O my God! Remember Tobiah and Samballat, according to their deeds; and also Nohadia the prophetess, and the rest of the prophets who tried to frighten me.

Nevertheless, the wall was completed on the twenty-fifth day of the month of Elul, in fifty-two days.

When all our enemies heard of it, and all the nations around us saw it, they were utterly appalled within themselves, and they knew that this work had been done by the help of our God.

But also in those days the leaders of Judah sent letter after letter to Tobiah; and Tobiah's letters came to them.

For there were several in Judea who had bound themselves to him by oath, because he was the son-in-law of Shechaniah, son of Arah, and Johanan, his son, had taken the daughter of Meshullam, son of Berecia.

And they even recounted his good deeds in my presence, and reported my speeches to him; and Tobiah sent letters to frighten me.
Now, after the wall had been rebuilt, and I had put in place the gates, and a review of the singers and the Levites had been done;
I commanded Hanani my brother, and Hananiah captain of the fortress of Jerusalem; for he was such as a faithful man [should] be, and he feared God more than many [others];

And I said to them, "The gates of Jerusalem shall not be opened until the heat of the sun; and when those who stand there have shut the gates, examine them: and let watchmen be set from among the inhabitants of Jerusalem, each according to his watch, and each opposite his house."

Now the city was spacious and large, but there were few people, and its houses were not built.

And my God put it into my heart to assemble the leaders and the officials, and the people, to take a census of them according to their genealogies; and I found the register of the census according to the genealogies of those who had gone up the first time; and I found it written thus:

These are those from the Province who came up from captivity, from among those who had been transported, whom Nebuchadnezzar King of Babylon had transported, and who returned to Jerusalem and to Judea, each to his own city;
Who came with Zerubbabel, Jesuah, Nehemiah, Hazaria, Rahamia, Nahamani, Mordecai, Bishan, Mizpereth, Begvai, Nehum, and Bahana; the number, [I say], of the men of the people of Israel [is such.]

The children of Parhos, two thousand one hundred and seventy-two.

The children of Sephatia, three hundred and seventy-two.

The children of Arah, six hundred and fifty-two.

The people of Ramah and Gebah, six hundred and twenty-one.

The Micmas people, one hundred and twenty-two.

The people of Bethel and Hai, one hundred and twenty-three.

The people of the other Nebo, fifty-two.

The children of another Helam, one thousand two hundred and fifty-four.

Harim's children, three hundred and twenty.

The children of Jericho, three hundred and forty-five.
 The children of Lod, Hadid and Ono, seven hundred and twenty-one.
 The children of Senaa, three thousand nine hundred and thirty.
 Of the Priests: The descendants of Jedehiah, of the house of Jeshua, nine hundred and seventy-three.
 The children of Immer, one thousand and fifty-two.
 The children of Pashur, one thousand two hundred and forty-seven.
 The children of Harim, one thousand seventeen.

 The children of Batslith, the children of Mehida, the children of Harsa,
 The children of Barkos, the children of Sisra, the children of Temah,
 The children of Netsiah, the children of Hatipha.
 The children of Solomon's servants: The children of Sotai, the children of Sophereth, the children of Perida,
 All the Nethinimians, and the children of Solomon's servants, were three hundred and ninety-two.
 Now these are those who came up from Telmelah, Tel-Harsa, Cherub, Addon, and Immer, who could not show the house of their fathers, nor their race, [to know] whether they were of Israel.
 The children of Delahaiah, the children of Tobiah, the children of Nekoda, six hundred and forty-two.
 And of the Priests: The descendants of Habaiah, the descendants of Koz, the descendants of Barzillai, who took as his wife one of the daughters of Barzillai Gileadite, and was called by their name.
 They searched for their register by looking for their genealogy, but they were not found there; therefore they were excluded from the Priesthood.
 And Attirsatha said to them, "Let them not eat of the most holy things until the Priest attends with the Urim and Thummim."
 The entire assembly numbered forty-two thousand three hundred and sixty; Without their male and female servants, who were seven thousand three hundred and thirty-seven; and they had two hundred and forty-five female singers.
 They had seven hundred and thirty-six horses, two hundred and forty-five mules; Four hundred and thirty-five camels, and six thousand seven hundred and twenty donkeys.
 Now some of the Chiefs of the fathers contributed to the work. Attirsatha gave to the treasury a thousand gold drachmas, fifty basins, five hundred and thirty priestly robes.

And some others from among the Chiefs of the fathers gave for the treasury of the work, twenty thousand drachmas of gold, and two thousand two hundred minas of silver.

And what the rest of the people gave was twenty thousand drachmas of gold, and two thousand minas of silver, and sixty-seven priestly robes.

And so the priests, the Levites, the gatekeepers, the singers, some of the people, the temple servants, and all the Israelites lived in their cities; so that when the seventh month approached, the Israelites were in their cities.

Now all the people gathered together, as though they were one man, in the place that was before the Water Gate; and they told Ezra the Scribe to bring the Book of the Law of Moses, which the Lord had commanded Israel.

And so on the first day of the seventh month Ezra the Priest brought the Law before the assembly, composed of men and women and all who were able to hear, so that they might listen to it.

And he read from the Book in the place before the Water Gate, from dawn until noon, in the presence of men and women and those who could hear; and the ears of all the people were attentive to the reading of the Book of the Law.

So Ezra the Scribe stood on a high place built of wood, which had been erected for this purpose; and he had with him Mattitia, Shemah, Hanaiah, Urijah, Hilkihah and Mahaseia, at his right hand; and at his left were Pedaiah, Misael, Malkijah, Hasum, Hasbadduna, Zechariah, and Mesullam.

And Ezra opened the Book before all the people; for he was above all the people; and as soon as he had opened it, all the people stood up.

Then Ezra blessed the Lord, the great God; and all the people answered, "Amen! Amen!" while lifting up their hands. Then they bowed down and worshiped before the Lord with their faces to the ground.

Also Jesuah, Bani, Serebhiyah, Jamin, Hakkub, Sabethai, Hodijah, Mahaseiah, Kelita, Hazariah, Jozabad, Hanan, Pelaiah, and the [other] Levites, explained the Law to the people, the people standing in their place.

And they read from the Book of the Law of God, they explained it, and gave understanding of it, making it comprehensible through the Scripture itself.

Now Nehemiah, who is Attirsatha, and Ezra the priest and scribe, and the Levites who instructed the people said to all the people, "This day is holy to the Lord our God; do not mourn or weep." For all the people wept when they heard the words of the Law.

Then they were told, "Go, eat the fattest things and drink the sweetest things, and send some to those who have nothing prepared. This day is holy to our Lord, so do not grieve, for the joy of the Lord is your strength."

And the Levites made all the people be silent, saying, "Be silent, for this day is holy, and do not grieve."

So all the people went away to eat and drink, and to send gifts, and to celebrate with great joy, because they had fully understood the words that had been taught to them.

And on the second day [of the month], the leaders of the fathers of all the people, the priests, and the Levites, assembled around Ezra the scribe, to have understanding of the words of the Law.

They found therefore written in the Law which the Lord had ordained through Moses, that the children of Israel should dwell in tabernacles during the solemn feast in the seventh month.

This they made known and proclaimed throughout all their cities, and in Jerusalem, saying, "Go up to the mountain and bring olive branches and branches of other oil trees, myrtle branches, palm branches, and boughs of wood, to make tabernacles, as it is written.

So the people went [upon the mountain], and they brought [branches], and made themselves tabernacles, each on his roof, and in the courtyards [of their houses], and in the courts of the house of God, and in the place of the Water Gate, and in the place of the Ephraim Gate.

So the whole assembly of those who had returned from captivity made tabernacles and sat in them. Now the Israelites had not made any such tabernacles from the days of Joshua son of Nun until that day, and there was great joy.

And they read from the Book of the Law of God every day, from the first day to the last. Thus they celebrated the solemn feast for seven days, and there was a solemn assembly on the eighth day, as it had been ordained.

And on the twenty-fourth day of the same month, the children of Israel assembled, fasting, clothed in sackcloth, and with dust upon them.

And the race of Israel separated themselves from all the foreigners, and they presented themselves, confessing their sins and the iniquities of their fathers.

So they stood up in their places, and the Book of the Law of the Lord their God was read for the fourth part of the day, and for another fourth part they confessed their sins and worshiped the Lord their God.

And Jesuah, Bani, Kadmiel, Shebaniah, Bunni, Serebiah, Bani and Kenani stood up at the place that had been raised for the Levites, and cried out with a loud voice to the Lord their God.

And the Levites, [namely], Jeshua, Kadmiel, Bani, Hasabneiah, Serebiah, Hodijah, Shebaniah, and Pethaiah, said: Arise, bless the Lord your God from age to age; and let them bless, [O God!] the Name of your glory; and let it be exalted above all blessing and praise!

You alone are the Lord; you made the heavens, even the highest heavens, and all their host; the earth, and all that is in it; the seas, and all things in them. You give life to all these things, and the host of heaven worships you.

You are the Lord God, who chose Abram, and brought him out of Ur of the Chaldeans, and gave him the name Abraham.

You found his heart faithful before you, and you made this covenant with him, that you would give the land of the Canaanites, the Hittites, the Amorites, the Perizzites, the Jebusites, and the Girgashites, that you would give it to his descendants; and you have fulfilled what you promised, because you are righteous. For you have seen the affliction of our fathers in Egypt, and you have heard their cry by the Red Sea;

And you performed wonders and miracles against Pharaoh and all his servants and all the people of his land, because you knew that they had risen up proudly against them, and you acquired a name for yourself, such as [it appears] today.

You also divided the sea before them, and they passed through the sea on dry ground; and you threw those who pursued them into the depths, like a stone into the rushing waters.

You even led them by day in a pillar of cloud, and by night in a pillar of fire, to give them light on the way they were going.

You also descended on Mount Sinai, you spoke to them from heaven, you gave them right ordinances, and true laws, just statutes and commandments.

You taught them your holy Sabbath; and you gave them the commandments, the statutes, and the Law through Moses your servant.

You also gave them bread from heaven for their hunger, and you brought forth water from the rock for their thirst, and you told them to enter and possess the land over which you had raised your hand, which you would give to them.

But they and our fathers have proudly exalted themselves and stiffened their necks, and have not listened to your commandments.

They refused to listen and did not remember the wonders you had performed for them; but they stiffened their necks, and in their rebellion they planned to appoint a leader to return to their servitude. But because you are a forgiving, merciful, compassionate, slow to anger, and abundant in grace, you did not abandon them.

And when they made for themselves a molten calf, and said, "This is your God who brought you up out of Egypt," and they committed great outrages against you; Yet you did not abandon them in the desert by your great mercies; the pillar of cloud did not withdraw from above them by day to guide them along the way, nor the pillar of fire by night to light the way they were to go.

And you gave them your good Spirit to make them wise; and you did not take your manna away from their mouths, and you gave them water for their thirst.

So you fed them for forty years in the desert, so that they lacked nothing. Their clothes did not grow old, and their feet were not trampled.

And you gave them the kingdoms and the peoples, and divided them among them by lands; for they possessed the land of Sihon, [namely] the land of the King of Heshbon, and the land of Hog, King of Bashan.

And you multiplied their children like the stars of heaven, and brought them into the land of which you had told their fathers, that they would enter to possess it.

So their children entered it and took possession of the land; and you subdued before them the Canaanites, the inhabitants of the land, and delivered them into their hands, along with their kings and the peoples of the land, so that they might do with them as they pleased.

So they took the fortified cities and the fertile land, and possessed the houses full of all goods, the wells that had been dug, the vineyards, the olive groves, and the fruit trees in abundance, from which they ate and were satisfied; they were fattened, and they indulged themselves in your great wealth.

But they angered you and rebelled against you; they cast your Law behind their backs, they killed the Prophets who urged them to return to you, and they committed great outrages against you.

That is why you delivered them into the hands of their enemies, who afflicted them; but in the time of their distress they cried out to you, and you answered them from heaven, and according to your great mercy you gave them deliverers, who delivered them from the hand of their enemies.

But as soon as they had rest, they returned to doing evil in your presence; therefore you abandoned them to the hands of their enemies who ruled over them. Then they returned and cried out to you, and you answered them from heaven. Thus you delivered them according to your mercies, many times and at different times.

And you summoned them to return to your Law, but they were proud and did not obey your commandments; but they sinned against your ordinances, which, if a person fulfills them, he will live by them. They always held their shoulders back and stiffened their necks, and did not listen.

And you waited patiently for them for many years, and you summoned them by your Spirit through the ministry of your Prophets; but they did not listen to them; therefore you delivered them into the hands of the peoples of the [foreign] countries.

Nevertheless, by your great mercies, you have not destroyed them, nor have you entirely abandoned them; for you are the [God] Strong, merciful, and compassionate. Therefore, O our God! The strong, the great, the mighty and the awesome, keeping the covenant and the gift; let not this affliction which has befallen us, our kings, our leaders, our priests, our prophets, our fathers and all your people, from the days of the kings of Assyria until today, be considered small before you.

Surely you are righteous in all things that have happened to us; for you have acted according to the truth, but we have acted criminally.

Neither our kings, nor our leaders, nor our priests, nor our ancestors have indeed put forth your law, and have not paid attention to your commandments, nor to your summons with which you summoned them.

For they did not serve you during their reign, nor during the great blessings you bestowed upon them, even in the spacious and bountiful land you gave them to be at their disposal, and they did not turn away from their evil deeds.

Behold, we are slaves today, even in the land that you gave to our fathers to eat its fruit and goods; behold, we are slaves there.

And it brings abundant revenue to the kings whom you have set over us because of our sins, and who rule over our bodies and our animals at their will, so that we are in great distress.

Therefore, because of all these things, we enter into a firm covenant, and we write it down; and our leaders, our Levites, and our Priests affix their signatures to it.

Those who affixed their signatures were Nehemiah, who is Attirsatha, son of Hachaliah, and Zedekiah.

As for the rest of the people—the priests, the Levites, the gatekeepers, the singers, the temple servants, and all those who had separated themselves from the peoples of the countries to [perform] the Law of God, their wives, their sons, and their daughters, all those who were capable of knowledge and understanding,

They fully adhered to their brothers, the most important among them, and took an oath with execration and swore to walk in the Law of God, which had been given through Moses the servant of God, and to keep and do all the commandments of the Eternal our Lord, his judgments and his ordinances;

And not to give any of our daughters to the people of the land, nor to take their daughters for our sons;

And not to take anything on the Sabbath day, or any other holy day, from the peoples of the land, who bring merchandise and all kinds of goods on the Sabbath day to sell; and to forsake the seventh year, with all the right to demand what is due.

We also made ordinances, charging ourselves to give each year a third part of a shekel, for the service of the house of our God;

For the showbread, for the continual cake, and for the continual burnt offering; and for those of the Sabbaths, of the new moons, and of solemn feasts; for the holy things, and for the sin offerings, to reconcile Israel; finally, for all that was done in the house of our God.

We also cast lots concerning the wood for the offerings, both the priests and the Levites, as well as the people; in order to bring it into the house of our God, according to the houses of our fathers, and at the appointed times, year after year, to burn on the altar of our God, as it is written in the Law.
[We also ordered] that we should bring into the house of the Lord, year after year, the first fruits of our land, and the firstfruits of all the fruits of all the trees;

And [that we would redeem] the firstborn of our sons and of our animals, as it is written in the Law; and that we would bring into the house of our God, to the priests who minister in the house of our God, the firstborn of our oxen and of our flocks. And that we would bring the firstfruits of our dough, our offerings, the fruits of all the trees, the wine, and the oil to the Priests, in the chambers of the house of our God, and the tithe of our land to the Levites, and that the Levites would take the tithes from all the cities of our plowing;

And that there would be a Priest, the son of Aaron, with the Levites to tithe the Levites, and that the Levites would bring the tithe of the tithe into the house of our God, into the chambers, in the place where the granaries were.
(for the children of Israel and the children of Levi were to bring into the chambers the offering of wheat, wine, and oil; and there were the utensils of the Sanctuary, and the priests who minister, and the gatekeepers, and the singers) and that we would not abandon the house of our God.

And the leaders of the people became accustomed to Jerusalem, but all the rest of the people cast lots, so that one of the ten parties should become accustomed to Jerusalem the holy City, and that the nine [other] parties should remain in the [other] cities.

And the people blessed all those who voluntarily presented themselves to become accustomed to Jerusalem.

Now it was the leaders of the province who settled in Jerusalem; the others settled in the cities of Judah, each in his own possession, according to his cities, [namely] the Israelites, the Priests, the Levites, the Nethinim, and the children of Solomon's servants.

So those from Judah and Benjamin settled in Jerusalem; from the children of Judah Hathajah son of Huziah, son of Zechariah, son of Amariah, son of Shephatiah, son of Mahalalel, of the children of Perez.

And Mahaseiah son of Baruch, son of Colozeh, son of Hazaiah, son of Hadaiah, son of Jehoiarib, son of Zechariah, son of Shiloni.

All these were descendants of Peres, who settled in Jerusalem, four hundred and sixty-eight valiant men.

And these were from among the children of Benjamin; Sall, son of Meshullam, son of Johed, son of Pedaiah, son of Kolaiah, son of Mahaseiah, son of Ithiel, son of Isaiah;

And after him Gabbai, Sallai, nine hundred and twenty-eight.

And Joel son of Zichri was appointed over them; and Judah son of Senua was Lieutenant of the city.

Priests: Jehahiah son of Jehoiarib, Jachin, Seraiah, son of Hilkiyah, son of Mesullam, son of Zadok, son of Meraioth, son of Ahitub, Leader of the house of God;

And their brothers, who served in the house, eight hundred and twenty-two. And Hodaiah son of Jeroham, son of Pelaliah, son of Amzi, son of Zechariah, son of Pashur, son of Malkijah.

And his brothers, the heads of the fathers, two hundred and forty-two. And Hamasai, son of Hazareel, son of Ahzai, son of Meshillemoth, son of Immer;

And their brothers, strong and valiant, one hundred and twenty-eight; and Zabdiel, son of Gedolim, [was] commissioned over them.

And of the Levites: Shemaiah, son of Hasub, son of Hazrikam, son of Hasabiah, son of Bunni.

And Sabbetai and Jozabad were in charge of the outside work for the house of God, [being] among the leaders of the Levites.

Mattaniah, son of Micah, son of Zabdi, son of Asaph, was the chief [of the singers], who began first to sing praises in the prayer. Bakbukiah was the second among his brothers, then Habda, son of Shammuah, son of Galal, son of Jeduthun.

All the Levites [who settled in] the holy City were two hundred and eighty-four.

And gatekeepers Hakkub, Talmon, and their brothers who guarded the gates, one hundred and seventy-two.

And the rest of the Israelites, the priests, and the Levites were in all the cities of Judah, each in his own inheritance.

But the Nethinim dwelt in Hophel; and Ziha and Gispah were appointed over the Nethinim.

And the one who was in charge of the Levites in Jerusalem was Huzi son of Bani, son of Hasabiah, son of Mattaniah, son of Micah, one of the descendants of Asaph, singers for the work of the house of God.

For there was also a commandment from the King concerning them, and there was a guaranteed position for the singers every day.

And Pethahiah, son of Meshezabeel, one of the descendants of Zerach, son of Judah, was the king's commissioner in all matters concerning the people.

Now as for the villages with their territories, some of the children of Judah lived in Kiriath-arbah, and in the places surrounding it; in Dibon, and in the places surrounding it; in Jekabzeel, and in the places surrounding it;

In Jesuah, in Molada, in Beth-Pélet.

In Hatsar-Sual, in Beer-Sebah, and in the places within its jurisdiction;

In Tsiklag, in Mecona, and in the places within its jurisdiction;

At Hen-rimmon, at Zorah, at Jarmuth,

In Zanoah, in Hadullam, and in their villages; in Lachish, and in its territories; and in Hazeka, and in the places within its jurisdiction. And they settled from Beer-Sebah to the Valley of Hinnom.

And the children of Benjamin [dwelt] from Gebah, in Michmas, Hajah, Bethel, and in the places within its jurisdiction;

To Hanathoth, Nob, Hanania,

Hatsor, Rama, Guittajim,

Hadid, Tsebohim, Neballat,

Lod, and Ono, the valley of maneuvers.

And some of the Levites [lived] in their allotments of Judah and Benjamin.

Now these are the priests and Levites who went up with Zerubbabel son of Shealtiel and with Jeshua: Seraiah, Jeremiah, Ezra,

Amaria, Malluc, Hattus,

Secania, Rehum, Meremoth

Hiddo, Guinnethoi, Abija,

Mijamin, Mahadia, Bilga,

Semahia, Jojarib, Jedahia

Sallu, Hamok, Hilkihah, and Jedaiah. These were the chief priests and their brothers in the time of Jesus.

And as for the Levites, there were Jesuah, Binnui, Kadmiel, Serebiah, Judah, and Mattaniah, who was in charge of praises, he and his brothers.

And Bakbukia, and Hunni, their brothers, were opposite them in their charge.

Now Jesuah begat Jehoiakim, and Jehoiakim begat Eliasib, and Eliasib begat Jehoiadah,

And Jehoiadah begat Jonathan, and Jonathan begat Jadduah.

And these in the time of Jehoiakim were Priests, Heads of the fathers; for Seraiah, Meraiah; for Jeremiah, Hananiah;

For Ezra, Mesullam; for Amariah, Johanan;

For Mélicu, Jonathan; for Sébania, Joseph;
For Harim, Hadna; for Merajoth, Helkai;
For Hiddo, Zacharie; for Guinnethon, Mésullam;
For Abija, Zicri; for Minjamin and Mohadia, Piltaï;
For Bilga, Sammuah; for Semahiah, Jonathan;
For Jojarib, Mattenai; for Jedahia, Huzi;
For Sallai, Callai; for Hamok, Heber;
For Hilkiah, Hasabiah; for Jedehiah, Nathanael.

As for the Levites, the leaders of their fathers, from the time of Eliasib, Jehoiada, Johanan and Jadduah are recorded with the Priests, until the reign of Darius of Persia.

So the children of Levi, the heads of the fathers, were recorded in the Book of Chronicles, up to the time of Johanan, the grandson of Eliashib.

The leaders of the Levites were Hasabiah, Serebiah, and Jesuah, son of Kadmiel, and their brothers were opposite them, to praise and celebrate [the Name of God], according to the commandment of David, the man of God, one rank corresponding to the other.

Mattania, Bakbukia and Hobadia, Mesullam, Talmon, and Hakkub were in charge of the gatekeepers who stood guard in the assemblies of the gates.

These were in the days of Jehoiakim, son of Jezuah, son of Jehozadak, and in the days of Nehemiah the Governor, and of Ezra the Priest and Scribe.

Now at the dedication of the wall of Jerusalem, the Levites were summoned from all their places, to be brought to Jerusalem, so that the dedication might be celebrated with joy, with thanksgiving, and with songs on cymbals, bagpipes, and violins.

So they gathered together those who were of the race of singers, both from the countryside around Jerusalem, and from the villages of the Netophathians.

And from the place of Gilgal, and from the territories of Gebah and Hazmaveth; for the singers had built villages around Jerusalem.

So the priests and the Levites purified themselves, and they also purified the people, the gates, and the wall.

Then I brought up the leaders of Judah on the wall, and I established two large bands to sing praises [to God], and the path [of one] was on the right, on the wall leading towards the Dung Gate.

And after them walked Hoshaiah, with half of the leaders of Judah;
[knowledge] Hazaria, Ezra, Mesullam,
Judah, Benjamin, Shemaiah and Jeremiah;

And some of the priests' sons with the trumpets. Then Zechariah son of Jonathan, son of Shemaiah, son of Mattaniah, son of Micahiah, son of Zaccur, son of Asaph,
And his brothers, Shemaiah, Hazareel, Milalai, Gilalai, Mahai, Nathanael, Judah, and Hanani, with the instruments of the songs of David, the man of God; and Ezra the sieve walked before them.

And they came to the Fountain Gate, which was opposite them, and went up the steps of the City of David, by the ascent of the wall, from the house of David, to the Water Gate, toward the east.

And the second band of those who sang praises [to God] went in the opposite direction, and I went after them, with [the other] half of the people, going on the wall, over the oven tower, to the wide wall;

And towards the Ephraim Gate, and towards the Old Gate, and towards the Fish Gate, [towards] the Tower of Hananel, and [towards] the Tower of Meah, as far as the Sheep Gate, and they stopped at the Prison Gate.

Then the two groups of those who sang praises [to God] stopped in the house of God. [I also stopped] with half of the magistrates who were with me;

And the Priests, Eliakim, Mahaseiah, Minjamin, Micaiah, Eliohenai, Zechariah, and Hananiah, with the trumpets;

And Mahaseiah, Shemahiah, Elhaza, Huzi, Johanan, Malkijah, Helam, and Hezer. Then the singers, under Izrahia's command, raised their voices.

They also offered great sacrifices that day, and rejoiced, because God had given them great cause for joy: even the women and children rejoiced; and the joy of Jerusalem was heard from afar.

And on that day men were appointed over the treasures, the offerings, the firstfruits, and the tithes; to gather from the territory of the cities the portions ordained by the Law for the Priests and Levites; for Judah rejoiced because of the Priests and Levites who were there;

Because they had kept the charge given to them by their God, and the charge of purification. [They also appointed] singers and gatekeepers, according to the commandment of David and Solomon his son.

For formerly, in the days of David and Asaph, leaders of the singers were appointed, and songs of praise and thanksgiving to God.

That is why all the Israelites in the days of Zerubbabel and in the days of Nehemiah gave the portions of the singers and the gatekeepers, [that is], what was needed each day, and consecrated them to the Levites, and the Levites consecrated them to the children of Aaron.

At that time the Book of Moses was read aloud to all the people, and it was found written in it that the Hammonites and the Moabites were never to enter into the assembly of God.

Because they had not come to meet the children of Israel with bread and water, and had hired Balaam to curse them, but our God turned the curse into a blessing.

That is why it happened that as soon as the Law was heard, all mixture was separated from Israel.

Now, before this happened, Eliasib, the priest who had been appointed over the chambers of the house of our God, had allied himself with Tobiah;

And he had prepared a large room for him, where previously they had kept the cakes, the incense, the utensils, and the tithes of wheat, wine, and oil, which were ordained for the Levites, for the singers, and for the gatekeepers, with what was raised for the Priests.

But I was not in Jerusalem during all this: for in the thirty-second year of Artaxerxes, King of Babylon, I returned to the King; and after some time I was asked again of the King.

So I returned to Jerusalem, and then I heard of the evil that Eliashib had done concerning Tobiah, setting up a room for him in the courtyard of the house of God. This displeased me greatly; and I threw all the furniture from Tobiah's house out of the room.

And the rooms were cleaned as I had ordered, and I had the utensils of the house of God, the cakes, and the incense brought back to them.

I also heard that the Levites' portions had not been given to them; so the Levites, and the singers who performed the service, had each withdrawn to the property they had in the fields.

And I rebuked the magistrates, saying to them, "Why have they abandoned the house of God?" So I gathered them together and restored them to their places.

And all those of Judah brought the tithes of wheat, wine, and oil to the granaries.

And I appointed Selemiah the priest and Zadok the scribe as receivers of the granaries; and from among the Levites, Pedaiah; and to assist them, Hanan son of Zaccur, son of Mattaniah; because they were considered to be very faithful; and their charge was to distribute what was needed to their brothers.

My God! Remember me concerning this; and do not blot out what I have done with good and sincere affection for the house of my God, and for what is ordained to be done there.

In those days I saw some in Judah treading winepresses on the Sabbath day, and others bringing sheaves of grain, loading wine, grapes, figs, and all kinds of other loads onto donkeys, and bringing them to Jerusalem on the Sabbath day; and I commanded them on the day they sold the provisions, [not to do so again].

Also, the Tyrians who lived in Jerusalem brought fish and many other goods, and sold them to the children of Judah in Jerusalem on the Sabbath day.

So I rebuked the leaders of Judah and said to them, "What wrong do you not do by violating the Sabbath day?"

Did not your fathers do the same thing, and is that not why our God has brought all this evil upon us and upon this city? And you increase the fierceness of [the Lord's] anger against Israel by violating the Sabbath.

Therefore, as soon as the sun had set from the gates of Jerusalem before the Sabbath, they closed the gates, by my command. I also commanded that they not be opened until after the Sabbath; and I stationed some of my men at the gates, so that no cargo would enter on the Sabbath day.

And the merchants, and those who sold all kinds of goods, spent one or two nights outside Jerusalem.

And I commanded them [to do this again], and I said to them, "Why are you spending the night in front of the wall? If you go back there, I will lay my hands on you." So from that time on, they no longer came on the Sabbath day.

I also told the Levites to purify themselves and to come and guard the gates to keep the Sabbath day holy. Therefore, O my God, remember me concerning this, and forgive me according to the greatness of your mercy.

In those days I saw Jews who had married Ashdodite, Hammonite and Moabite women; So their children spoke partly Ashdodian, and did not know how to speak Jewish; but they spoke the language of various peoples.

That is why I rebuked them and blamed them; I even beat some of them and pulled out their hair, and made them swear by [the name of] God that they would not give their daughters to the sons [of foreigners], and that they would not take any of their daughters for their sons, or for themselves.

Did not Solomon, the King of Israel, sin by this means? Although among many nations there was no King like him, and he was loved by his God, and God had established him as King over all Israel: nevertheless, foreign women caused him to sin.

Would we then allow you to do all this great evil, by committing this crime against our God, by taking foreign wives?

Now there was even one of the descendants of Jehoiada, son of Eliashib, the high priest, who was the son-in-law of Samballat Horonite, whom I drove out of my presence for that reason.

My God! Remember them, because they have defiled the priesthood, the covenant, I say, of the priesthood and of the Levites.

So I cleansed them of all foreigners, and I restored the offices to the Priests and Levites, to each according to what he had to do.

And [I commanded what should be done] concerning the wood for the offerings at the appointed times, and concerning the first fruits. My God! Remember me with kindness.

Now it came to pass in the days of Ahasuerus, who reigned from India to Ethiopia, over one hundred and twenty-seven provinces;

[It happened, I say], at that time, that King Ahasuerus was sitting on the throne of his reign in Susan, the capital city;

In the third year of his reign, he held a feast for all the principal Lords of his countries, and for his servants, so that the power of Persia and Media, [namely] the greatest Lords, and the Governors of the provinces were before him;

To show the riches of the glory of his Kingdom, and the splendor of the excellence of his greatness, for many days; [namely] one hundred and eighty days.

And at the end of those days, the King held a feast for seven days in the courtyard of the Royal Palace garden for all the people who were in Susan, the capital city, from the greatest to the least.

[The tapestries] of white, green and purple were held with cords of fine linen and scarlet to silver rings, and to marble pillars; the beds were of gold and silver on a pavement of porphyry, marble, alabaster, and speckled marble.

And drinks were served in gold vessels, which were of various kinds; and there was plenty of royal wine, according to the king's wealth.

And the way they drank was as ordered. No one was forced; for the King had expressly commanded all his stewards to do as each person wished.

And Queen Vashti also held a feast for the women in the royal house, which belonged to King Ahasuerus.

Now on the seventh day, when the king's heart was merry with wine, he commanded Mehuman, Bizta, Harbona, Bigtha, Abagtha, Zethar, and Carcas, the seven eunuchs who served before King Ahasuerus,

Let them bring Queen Vasti before him, wearing the royal crown, so that her beauty might be shown to the people and the lords; for she was beautiful to behold.

But Queen Vasti refused to come to the command that the King had given her by the Eunuchs; and the King became very angry, and his anger burned within him.

Then the King said to the Wise Men who had knowledge of the times, (for the King communicated in this way with all those who knew the laws and the right;

And then Carsena, Sethar, Admatha, Tarshish, Meres, Marsena, and Memucan, seven lords of Persia and Media, were near him, who saw the face of the king, and they held the highest seats in the kingdom.

What is the law to be done to Queen Vashti, for not having carried out the command that King Ahasuerus sent her to perform through the eunuchs?

Then Memucan spoke in the presence of the King and the Lords, [saying]: Queen Vashti has not only acted badly against the King, but also against all the Lords, and against all the peoples who are in all the provinces of King Ahasuerus.

For the Queen's actions will become known to all women, to make them despise their husbands, when they say: King Ahasuerus commanded that the Queen be brought to him, but she did not come.

And today the Ladies of Persia and Media, having learned of the Queen's reply, will respond [in this way] to all the Lords [of the countries] of the King; and as this will be a mark of contempt, it will also be a cause for anger.

If the King therefore finds it good, let a Royal Edict be issued by him, and let it be written between the ordinances of Persia and Media, and let it be irrevocable; [namely] that Vashti shall no longer come before King Ahasuerus; and that the King shall give his Kingdom to his companion, [who shall be] better than she.

And the Edict, which the King will have made, having been known throughout his Kingdom, however great it may be, all women will honor their husbands, from the greatest to the least.

And this word pleased the King and the Lords; and the King did according to the word of Memucan.

He sent letters throughout all the King's provinces, to each province according to its own writing style, and to each people according to its own language, so that each one might be master in his own house, and speak according to the language of his people.

After these things, when King Ahasuerus' anger had subsided, he remembered Vashti, and what she had done, and what had been decreed against her.

And the young men who served the King said: Let them seek for the King young virgins, and beautiful to behold;

And let the King establish commissioners in all the provinces of his Kingdom, who assemble all the young girls, virgins and beautiful to behold, in Susan, the capital city, in the women's hotel under the charge of Hegai, the King's Eunuch, the guardian of the women, that they be given their preparations.

And the young woman who pleases the King will reign in place of Vashti. And the King was pleased with this, and he did it so.

[Now] there was in Susan, the capital city, a Jewish man, whose name was Mordecai, son of Jair, son of Shimei, son of Kish, a Benjamite;

Which had been transported from Jerusalem, with the prisoners who had been taken captive with Jeconiah, King of Judah, whom Nebuchadnezzar, King of Babylon, had transported.

And he was nursing Hadassah, who is Esther, his uncle's daughter; for she had neither father nor mother; and the young girl was of fine stature, and very beautiful to see; and after the death of her father and mother Mordecai had taken her for his daughter.

And when the word of the King and his edict became known, and several young women had been assembled at Susan the capital city, under the charge of Hegai, Esther also was brought into the house of the King, under the charge of Hegai, guardian of the women.

When he saw the young girl, she pleased him and won his favor, so that he immediately had her preparations expedited, and he ordered her to her position and seven young girls, such as he had to order them from the King's house, and made her and all the young girls change [the apartment, and lodged] in one of the finest apartments in the women's hotel.

[But] Esther did not declare her people, nor her kinship, because Mordecai had instructed her not to declare anything.

And Mordecai walked around every day in front of the courtyard of the women's inn to find out how Esther was doing, and what would be done with her.

Now when the turn of each young woman came to enter into the presence of King Ahasuerus, having completed all that was required of her to do according to what was commanded concerning the women, for twelve months; (for this was how the days of their preparations were fulfilled, [namely] for six months, with oil and myrrh, and for [another] six months with aromatic things, and [other] preparations of women; So in this state the young girl entered towards the King;) everything she asked for was given to her to go with her from the women's quarters to the King's quarters. She would enter it in the evening, and in the morning she would return to the second women's house under the care of Sahasgaz, the King's eunuch, guardian of the concubines; [and] she would no longer enter near the King unless the King wanted her, and she was called by name.

When the turn came for Esther, daughter of Abihail, Mordecai's uncle, whom [Mordecai] had taken for her own daughter, to go to the King, she asked nothing except what Hegai, the King's eunuch, who was in charge of the women, would say; and Esther won the favor of all who saw her.

So Esther was brought to King Ahasuerus, in his royal palace, in the tenth month, which is the month of Tebeth, in the seventh year of his reign.

And the King loved Esther more than all the [other] women, and she won his favor and his goodwill more than all the virgins; and he put the crown of the Kingdom on her head, and established her as Queen in place of Vashti.

Then the King held a great feast for all the principal lords of his lands, and for his servants, [namely] the feast of Esther; and he relieved the provinces, and gave gifts according to the royal opulence.

Now while the virgins were being assembled for the second time, and Mordecai was sitting at the king's gate;

Esther did not disclose her kinship or her people, as Mordecai had instructed her; for she was doing what Mordecai told her, as when she was being raised in his house.

In those days, Mordecai was sitting at the King's gate, and Bigthan and Teres, two of the King's eunuchs who were guarding the entrance, mutinied and sought to seize King Ahasuerus.

When Mordecai learned of this, he informed Queen Esther; then Esther told the King from Mordecai.

And they inquired about it, and found [that it was true]. And the two eunuchs were both hanged on a gallows, and this was written in the Book of Chronicles in the presence of the King.

After these things King Ahasuerus paid great honors to Haman son of Hammedatha Agagien, he exalted him, and placed his throne above all the Lords who were with him.

And all the king's servants who were at the king's gate bowed down and prostrated themselves before Haman, for the king had commanded it. But Mordecai did not bow down or prostrate himself [before him].

And the King's servants who were at the King's gate said to Mordecai, "Why are you violating the King's command?"

So it came to pass that after they had told him for several days, and he had not listened to them, they reported it to Haman, to see whether the words of Mordecai would be true; because he had declared to them that he was a Jew.

And Haman saw that Mordecai did not bow down or prostrate himself before him; and he was filled with anger.

But he did not deign to lay hands on Mordecai alone; but because it had been reported to him what nation Mordecai belonged to, he sought to exterminate all the Jews who were throughout the whole Kingdom of Ahasuerus, as being the nation of Mordecai.

And in the first month, which is the month of Nisan, in the twelfth year of King Ahasuerus, Pur was cast, that is, the lot, before Haman, for each day, and for each month, [and the lot fell on] the twelfth month, which is the month of Adar.

And Haman said to King Ahasuerus: There is a certain people scattered among the peoples, throughout all the provinces of your kingdom, and yet they keep themselves apart, whose laws are different from those of every other people, and they do not do the laws of the king, so it is not expedient for the king to let them go as they are.

If it pleases the King, let a letter be written to destroy them, and I will deliver ten thousand talents of silver into the hands of those who handle affairs, to be placed in the King's treasury.

Then the King took his ring from his hand and gave it to Haman son of Hammedatha Agagien, oppressor of the Jews.

Besides this, the King said to Haman: This money is given to you, along with the people, to do with them as you please.

And on the thirteenth day of the first month the King's secretaries were summoned; and a letter was written according to Haman's command, to the King's satraps, to the governors of each province, and to the leaders of each people; to each province according to its own writing style, and to each people according to its own language; all of it was written in the name of King Ahasuerus, and sealed with the King's signet ring.

And the letters were sent by couriers to all the King's provinces, so that all the Jews, both young and old, little children and women, would be exterminated, killed and destroyed on one day, which was the thirteenth of the twelfth month, which is the month of Adar, and their spoils would be plundered.

The patents that were written stipulated that this ordinance would be published in each province, and that it would be proposed publicly to all peoples, so that they would be ready for that day.

[Thus] the messengers, urged on by the King's command, departed. The decree was also published in Susan, the capital city. But the King and Haman were sitting and drinking, while the city of Susan was in perplexity.

But when Mordecai heard of all that had been done, he tore his clothes, covered himself with sackcloth and ashes, and went out through the city, crying out with a loud and bitter cry.

And he came right up to the front of the King's gate; (for it was not permitted to enter the King's gate wearing sackcloth).

And in every province, in the places where the word of the King and his ordinance reached, the Jews mourned greatly, fasting, weeping, and wailing; and many lay on sackcloth and ashes.

Now Esther's ladies-in-waiting and her eunuchs came and told her these things, and the queen was greatly distressed, and she sent clothes to clothe Mordecai and to take off his sackcloth; but he did not take them.

Then Esther summoned Hath, one of the king's eunuchs, whom he had appointed to serve her, and she charged him with finding out from Mordecai what this was, and why he was doing this.

So Hatach went out to Mordecai in the city square, which was in front of the King's gate.

And Mordecai told him everything that had happened to him, and the offer of the cash that Haman had promised to deliver to the King's treasury, because of the Jews, so that they might be destroyed.

And he gave her a copy of the ordinance which had been written down, and which had been published in Susan, in order to exterminate them, to show it to Esther, and to make her understand the whole thing, and to recommend that she go to the King to ask for mercy, and to petition him for her nation.

So Hath returned and reported to Esther the words of Mordecai.

And Esther said to Hath, and commanded him to tell Mordecai:

All the King's servants and the people of the King's provinces know that no man or woman enters the King's inner court unless summoned, and that it is one of his laws to put them to death unless the King extends the golden scepter to them, for in that case they live; but it has been thirty days since I was summoned to enter the King's presence.

So Esther's words were reported to Mordecai.

And Mordecai said that this answer was given to Esther: Do not think in your heart that you alone of all the Jews have escaped into the king's house.

But if you remain completely silent at this time, the Jews will breathe and be delivered by some other means; but you and your father's house will perish. And who knows whether you have not come to the kingdom for such a time as this?

Then Esther said that this was the answer given to Mordecai:

Go, gather together all the Jews who are found at Susan, and fast for me, and neither eat nor drink for three days, night nor day; and I and my ladies shall fast likewise; then I shall go thus to the King, which is not according to the Law; and if it should happen that I perish, let me perish.

So Mordecai went away and did as Esther had commanded him.

And it came to pass that on the third day Esther clothed herself in royal robes, and stood in the inner court of the king's palace [which was] in front of the king's house, and the king was sitting on the throne of his kingdom in the royal palace, opposite the palace gate.

Now as soon as the King saw Queen Esther standing in the courtyard, she won his favor; so the King extended to Esther the golden scepter that was in his hand; and Esther approached, and touched the tip of the scepter.

And the King said to her, "What is it, Queen Esther? And what is your request? Even if it were up to half the kingdom, it shall be given to you."

And Esther replied, "If it pleases the King, let the King and Haman come today to the feast I have prepared for him."

Then the king said, "Bring Haman quickly, to fulfill Esther's request." So the king and Haman came to the banquet Esther had prepared.

And the King said to Esther over the wine at the banquet, "What is your petition? It shall be granted to you. And what is your prayer? [If you were to ask me] up to half of the kingdom, it shall be done."

Then Esther answered, and said: My request, and my prayer is,

If I have found favor with the King, and if the King is pleased to grant my request and fulfill my petition, then let the King and Haman come to the feast that I will prepare for them, and tomorrow I will do according to the King's word.

And Haman went out that day, joyful and cheerful. But as soon as he saw at the gate of King Mordecai, who did not rise or move for him, Haman was filled with anger against Mordecai.

However, Haman forced himself to go to his house; then he sent for his friends, and Zerez his wife.

Then Haman told them of the glory of his riches, and the excellence of his children, and all the things in which the King had exalted him, and how he had raised him above the chief Lords and Servants of the King.

Then Haman said: And even Queen Esther only brought me and the King to the feast she held, and I am invited again tomorrow by her and the King.

But all this is of no use to me, while I see Mordecai, that Jew, sitting at the King's gate.

Then Zerez, his wife, and all his friends answered him, "Let a gallows be made fifty cubits high, and in the morning tell the king to hang Mordecai on it; and go joyfully to the banquet with the king." And the idea pleased Haman, and he made the gallows. That night the King could not sleep; and he ordered that the Book of Memoirs, that is to say the Chronicles, be brought to him; and they were read in front of the King. And he found written that Mordecai had given notice [of the conspiracy] of Bigthana and Teres, two of the King's eunuchs, among those who guarded the entrance, who had sought to lay hands on King Ahasuerus.

Then the King said, "What honor and distinction has been bestowed upon Mordecai for this?" And the King's servants answered, "Nothing has been done for him."

And the King said: Who is in the court? Now Haman had come to the court of the King's palace, to tell the King to hang Mordecai on the gallows that he had prepared for him.

And the King's people answered him, "There is Haman in the courtyard," and the King said, "Let him come in."

So Haman went in, and the King said to him, "What should be done to a man whom the King delights to honor?" (But Haman said to himself, "To whom would the King wish to show more honor than to me?")

And Haman answered the King: As for the man whom the King delights in honoring, let them bring him the royal garment, which the King wears, and [let them bring him] the horse that the King rides, and let them put the royal crown on his head.

And then let this garment and this horse be given to one of the principal [and] greatest Lords who are with the King, and let the man whom the King takes pleasure in honoring be clothed in it, and let him be made to ride through the streets of the city; and let it be shouted before him: This is how one should do to the man whom the King takes pleasure in honoring.

Then the King said to Haman, "Hurry, take the garment and the horse, as you have said, and do this to Mordecai the Jew who sits at the King's gate; omit nothing of all that you have said."

So Haman took the garment and the horse, and dressed Mordecai, and made him ride through the streets of the city, and he shouted before him: This is how one should do to the man whom the King delights to honor.

Then Mordecai returned to the King's gate; but Haman quickly withdrew to his house, deeply distressed, with his head covered.

And Haman told Zerez his wife and all his friends everything that had happened to him. Then his wise men and Zerez his wife answered him: If Mordecai (before whom you have begun to fall) is of the race of the Jews, you will not prevail against him, but you will certainly fall before him.

And while they were still talking with him, the king's eunuchs came and hastened to bring Haman to the feast that Esther had prepared.

The King and Haman then came to the feast with Queen Esther.

And the King said to Esther again on the second day, at the wine reception: What is your petition, Queen Esther? and it shall be granted to you; and what is your prayer? even to the half of the kingdom, it shall be done.

Then Queen Esther answered, and said: If I have found favor in your sight, O King! and if the King is pleased, let my life be given to me at my request, and let my people be given to me at my prayer.

For we were sold, I and my people, to be exterminated, killed, and destroyed. If we had been sold to be servants, I would have remained silent; although the oppressor would not repay the King for the harm it would cause.

And King Ahasuerus spoke and said to Queen Esther: Who is this man, and where is he, who has been so rash as to do this?

And Esther replied: "The oppressor and the enemy is this wicked Haman here." Then Haman was troubled by the presence of the King and Queen.

And the angry King rose from the wine of the banquet, and entered the garden of the palace; but Haman remained, in order to pray for his life to Queen Esther; for he saw well that the King was determined to destroy him.

Then the King returned from the palace garden to the place where the wine for the reception had been served; (now Haman had thrown himself on the bed where Esther was) and the King said: Would he still dare to force the Queen in this house before my very eyes? As soon as the word left the King's mouth, Haman's face was covered.

And Harbona, one of the eunuchs, said in the presence of the King: "Look, the gallows that Haman made for Mordecai, who gave this good advice to the King, is already erected in Haman's house, fifty cubits high." And the King said: "Hang him on it." And they hanged Haman on the gallows he had prepared for Mordecai; and the king's anger was appeased.

That same day King Ahasuerus gave Queen Esther the house of Haman, the oppressor of the Jews. And Mordecai stood before the King, for Esther had declared what was his. And the King took back his signet ring which he had taken from Haman, and gave it to Mordecai; and Esther appointed Mordecai over the house of Haman.

And Esther continued to speak in the presence of the King, and throwing herself at his feet she wept, and she begged him to let the malice of Haman Agagien, and what he had plotted against the Jews, have no effect.

And the King extended the golden scepter to Esther. Then Esther arose and stood before the King.

And she said: If it pleases the King, and if I have found favor in his sight, and if the matter seems reasonable to the King, and if I am pleasing to him, let a letter be written to revoke the letters concerning the plot of Haman son of Hammedatha Agagien, which he had written to destroy the Jews who are in all the King's provinces.

For how could I see the evil that would befall my people, and how could I see the destruction of my relatives?

And King Ahasuerus said to Queen Esther and to Mordecai the Jew, "Behold, I have given the house of Haman to Esther, and he was hanged on the gallows, because he had stretched out his hand against the Jews."

Therefore, you may write in the King's name on behalf of the Jews as you please, and seal the writing with the King's signet ring; for the writing, which is written in the King's name and sealed with the King's signet ring, cannot be revoked.

And at that same time, on the twenty-third day of the third month, which is the month of Sivan, the King's secretaries were summoned, and a letter was written to the Jews, as Mordecai commanded; and to the satraps, and to the governors, and to the principals of the provinces, which were from India to Ethiopia, [namely] one hundred and twenty-seven provinces, to each province according to its own writing style, and to each people according to its own language, and to the Jews according to their own writing style, and according to their own language.

So they wrote letters in the name of King Ahasuerus, and sealed them with the king's ring; then they sent them by messengers, riding on horses, camels, and mules;

[Knowing] that the King had granted to the Jews who were in each city to assemble, and to defend themselves for their lives, in order to exterminate, kill, and destroy any assembly of people, of any people and of any province whatsoever, who might be found armed to oppress the Jews, [to exterminate] them and their little children, and their wives, and to plunder their spoils.

On one day in all the provinces of King Ahasuerus; [namely], the thirteenth [day] of the twelfth month, which is the month of Adar.

The patents that were written stated that this ordinance would be published in every province and publicly proposed to all peoples, so that the Jews would be ready on that day to take revenge on their enemies.

[Thus] the couriers, mounted on horses [and] mules, set out, hurrying and rushing for the word of the King; the ordinance was also published in Susan, the capital city.

And Mordecai came out from before the King in royal robes of purple and white, with a great crown of gold, and a robe of fine linen and scarlet; and the city of Susan shouted for joy, and was filled with gladness.

And there was prosperity, joy, gladness, and honor for the Jews.

And in every province and in every city, in the places where the word of the King and his ordinance had reached, there was gladness and joy for the Jews, feasts and days of celebration; and even many of the peoples of the countries became Jews, because the fear of the Jews had seized them.

The twelfth month, therefore, which is the month of Adar, on the thirteenth day of this month, on which the word of the King and his ordinance was to be executed, on the day that the enemies of the Jews hoped to be masters of it, instead of the opposite happening, [namely] that the Jews would be masters of those who hated them;

The Jews gathered in their cities throughout all the provinces of King Ahasuerus to lay hands on those who were seeking their destruction; but no one could stand firm against them, because the fear of them had seized all the peoples.

And all the principal men of the provinces, and the satraps, and the governors, and those who handled the king's affairs, supported the Jews, because the fear of Mordecai had seized them.

For Mordecai was great in the King's house, and his fame spread throughout all the provinces; because this man Mordecai was increasing in stature.

So the Jews struck down all their enemies with the sword, and made a great slaughter of them, so that they treated those who hated them according to their desires.

And even in Susan, the capital city, the Jews killed and caused the deaths of five hundred men.

They also killed Parsandata, Dalphon, and Aspatha.

Poratha, Adalia, Aridatha.

Parmastha, Arisai, Aridai, and Vajezatha;

Ten sons of Haman, son of Hammedatha, the oppressor of the Jews; but they did not lay their hands on the plunder.

And on that day the number of those who had been killed in Susan, the capital city, was reported to the King.

And the King said to Queen Esther: In Susan the capital city, the Jews have killed and destroyed five hundred men, and the ten sons of Haman, what have they done to the rest of the King's provinces? However, what is your petition? And it shall be granted to you; and what is your prayer? And it shall be done.

And Esther answered: If it pleases the King, let it be permitted again tomorrow for the Jews who are at Susan to do as was commanded today, and let the ten sons of Haman be hanged on the gallows.

And the King commanded that it be done thus; so the ordinance was published in Susan, and the ten sons of Haman were hanged.

The Jews who were in Susan gathered together again on the fourteenth day of the month of Adar, and killed three hundred men in Susan; but they did not lay their hands on the plunder.

And the rest of the Jews who were in the King's provinces gathered together and defended themselves for their lives, and they had rest from their enemies, and killed seventy-five thousand men of those who hated them; but they did not lay their hands on the plunder.

[This took place] on the thirteenth day of the month of Adar, but on the fourteenth of the same [month] they rested, and they celebrated it as a day of feasting and joy.

And the Jews who were in Susan assembled on the thirteenth and fourteenth days of the same month, but they rested on the fifteenth, and celebrated it as a day of feasting and joy.

That is why the Jews of the towns, who live in unwall'd cities, spend the fourteenth day of the month of Adar in rejoicing, in feasting, as a day of celebration, and in sending gifts to one another.

For Mordecai wrote these things, and sent the letters to all the Jews who were in all the provinces of King Ahasuerus, both near and far;

Ordering them to celebrate on the fourteenth day of the month of Adar, and on the fifteenth day of the same [month] each year.

According to the days when the Jews had rest from their enemies, and according to the month when their distress was turned into joy, and their mourning into a day of celebration, so that they might celebrate them as days of feasting and joy, and by sending gifts to one another, and presents to the poor.

And each of the Jews submitted to do what had been begun, and what Mordecai had written to them.

Because Haman son of Hammedatha Agagien, the oppressor of all the Jews, had plotted against the Jews to destroy them, and had cast Pur, that is, the lot, to defeat them, and to destroy them.

But when Esther came before the King, he commanded by letters that the wicked plot that [Haman] had made against the Jews should fall back on his own head, and that he and his sons should be hanged on the gallows.

That is why these days are called Purim, from the name of Pur. And according to all the words of this dispatch, and according to what they had seen concerning it, and what had happened to them,

The Jews established and submitted themselves, they and their descendants, and all who would join them, to observe these two days in their season every year, according to what had been written.

And [they ordained] that the memory of these days should be celebrated and solemnized in every age, in every family, in every province and in every city; and that these days of Purim should not be abolished among the Jews, and that the memory of these days should not be erased in their posterity.

Queen Esther, daughter of Abihail, along with Mordecai the Jew, wrote everything that was required to authorize this Purim patent, for the second time.

And letters were sent to all the Jews in the 127 provinces of the Kingdom of Ahasuerus, with words of peace and truth;

To establish these days of Purim in their season, as Mordecai the Jew, and Queen Esther had established it; and as they had established them for themselves, and for their posterity, to be monuments of [their] fasts, and of their cry.

Thus Esther's edict authorized that decree of Purim; as it is written in this Book.

Then King Ahasuerus imposed a tribute on the land and on the islands of the sea.

Now, as for all the exploits of his strength and power, and as for the description of the magnificence of Mordecai, with which the King honored him, are these things not written in the Book of the Chronicles of the Kings of Media and Persia?

For Mordecai the Jew was second only to King Ahasuerus, and he was great among the Jews, and pleasing to the multitude of his brethren, procuring good for his people, and speaking for the prosperity of all his descendants.

In the land of Huz there was a man called Job; and that man was blameless and upright, fearing God, and turning away from evil.

He had seven sons and three daughters.

And his livestock consisted of seven thousand sheep, three thousand camels, five hundred pairs of oxen, and five hundred donkeys, with a large number of servants; so that this man was the most powerful of all the Orientals.

Now his sons would go and hold feasts in each other's houses, each on his own day, and they would send and invite their three sisters to eat and drink with them.

Then, when the days of their feasting were over, Job would send word to them and consecrate them, and rising early in the morning, he would offer burnt offerings according to the number of his children; for Job said, "Perhaps my children will have sinned and blasphemed against God in their hearts." And Job always did this.

Now it came to pass one day that the children of God came to present themselves before the Lord, and Satan also came in among them.

The Lord said to Satan, "Where have you come from?" And Satan answered the Lord, saying, "I have been running here and there on the earth, and walking around on it."

And the Lord said to him, "Have you not considered my servant Job, who has no equal on earth, a blameless and upright man, one who fears God and turns away from evil?"

And Satan answered the Lord, saying, "Does Job fear God in vain?"

Have you not put a wall all around him, and around his house, and around everything that belongs to him? You have blessed the work of his hands, and his livestock has greatly multiplied on the earth.

But now stretch out your hand and touch everything that belongs to him; [and you will see] if he does not blaspheme you to your face.

And the Lord said to Satan, "Very well, all that he has is in your power; only do not lay a hand on him." And Satan went out from the presence of the Lord.

So it came to pass one day, as the sons and daughters [of Job] were eating and drinking in the house of their eldest brother,

A messenger came to Job and said, "The oxen were plowing, and the donkeys were grazing nearby;

And those from Sheba rushed upon them, and took them, and struck down the servants with the edge of the sword; and I alone escaped to tell you.

While he was still speaking, another came and said, "The fire of God fell from heaven and burned up the sheep and the servants and consumed them; and I alone have escaped to tell you."

While he was still speaking, another arrived and said, "The Chaldeans, arranged in three bands, fell upon the camels, and captured them, and struck the servants with the edge of the sword; and I alone have escaped to tell you."

While he was still speaking, another came and said, "Your sons and daughters used to eat and drink in their eldest brother's house,

And behold, a great wind arose from beyond the desert, and struck the four corners of the house, and it fell upon those young men, and they died; and I alone escaped to tell you.

Then Job arose, tore his robe, shaved his head, and fell to the ground in worship.

And he said, "Naked I came from my mother's womb, and naked I will return there. The Lord gave him, and the Lord has taken him away; blessed be the name of the Lord!"

In all this Job did not sin, nor did he attribute anything to God that was unworthy of him.

Now it came to pass one day that the children of God came to present themselves before the Lord, and Satan also came in among them to present himself before the Lord.

And the Lord said to Satan, "Where have you come from?" And Satan answered the Lord, saying, "I have been running on the earth and walking around on it."

And the Lord said to Satan, "Have you not considered my servant Job, who has no equal on earth, a truthful and upright man, one who fears God and turns away from evil? He still maintains his integrity, though you have incited me against him to destroy him without cause."

And Satan answered the Lord, saying, "Each of you will give skin for skin, and all that you have for your life."

But now stretch out your hand and strike his flesh and bones, [and you will see] if he does not blaspheme to your face.

And the Lord said to Satan, "Behold, he is in your hand; only do not touch his life."

So Satan went out from the presence of the Lord, and struck Job with painful boils from the sole of his foot to the crown of his head.

And Job took a test to scrape himself off; and sat upon the ashes.

And his wife said to him: Will you still retain your integrity? Bless God, and die.

And he answered her, "You speak like a foolish woman. What! Shall we receive good things from God, and not bad things?" In all this Job did not sin with his lips.

Now three of Job's close friends, Eliphaz the Temanite, Bildad the Shuhite, and Zophar the Nahamathite, having heard of all the evils that had befallen him, came each from the place of their dwelling, having agreed together on a day to come and condolence to him, and to comfort him.

And lifting their eyes from afar they did not recognize him, and raising their voices they wept; and they tore each of their cloaks, and scattered dust on their heads [by throwing it] toward the heavens.

And they sat on the ground with him for seven days and seven nights, and none of them said anything to him, because they saw that his pain was very great.

After that, Job opened his mouth and cursed his day.

For when he spoke, he said:

May the day on which I was born perish, and the night on which it was said, "A male child is born!"

May that day be nothing but darkness; may God not seek it from on high, and may it not be illuminated by light!

May darkness and the shadow of death defile him; may clouds remain upon him; may he be made dreadful like the day of those for whom life is bitter!

Let darkness cover that night; let it not rejoice to be among the days of the year, nor be counted among the months!

So, let this night be solitary, let no one rejoice in it!

Let those who are accustomed to cursing the days and those who are ready to renew their mourning, curse it!

May the stars of her twilight be obscured; may she wait for the light, but there may be none, and may she not see the rays of the dawn of day!

Because she did not close the womb that bore me, and she did not hide the torment from my eyes.

Why did I not die in the womb; why did I not expire as soon as I came out of [my mother's] womb!

Why were my knees received? Why were my breasts presented to me so that I might suckle them?

For now I would be lying down, resting, and sleeping; and there would have been rest for me,

With the Kings and Governors of the earth, who build themselves solitudes;

Or with the princes who had gold, [and] who filled their houses with silver.

Or that I had been like a hidden stillborn child, like little children who have not seen the light!

There the wicked no longer torment [anyone], and there those who have lost their strength rest.

Likewise, those who had been in chains enjoy rest there, and no longer hear the voice of the tax collector.

The small and the great are there; [and there] the slave is no longer subject to his master.

Why is light given to the wretched, and life to those whose hearts are bitter?
Those who await death, and it does not come, and who seek it more than treasures;
Who would be filled with joy and gladness if they had found the tomb?

[Why, I say, is light given] to the man from whom the way is hidden, and whom God has enclosed on all sides?

For before I eat, my sigh comes, and my roars flow like waters.

Because what I feared most happened to me, and what I dreaded came to pass.

I have had no peace, no rest, no calm, since this trouble came to me.

Then Eliphas Temanites spoke up and said:

If we start talking to you, will you get angry? But who could stop talking?

There you go, you've taught several, and you've strengthened the loose hands.

Your words have strengthened those who were faltering, and you have fortified the knees that were bending.

And now that this has happened to you, you're angry! It has affected you, and you're all troubled.

Has not your piety been your hope? And the integrity of your ways your expectation?

Please remember, in your mind, where is the innocent person who ever perished, and where have righteous men ever been exterminated?

But I have seen that those who plow iniquity and sow insults reap them.

They perish by the breath of God, and they are consumed by the wind from his nostrils.

[He stifles] the roar of the lion, and the cry of a great lion, and he pulls out the teeth of the lion cubs.

The lion perished for lack of prey, and the cubs of the old lion were scattered.

But as for me, a word was spoken to me in secret, and my ear heard a little of it.

During the various thoughts and visions of the night, when a deep sleep overtakes men,

A fear and a trembling seized me that astonished all my bones.

A spirit passed before me, [and] my hair stood on end.

He stood there, but I did not know his face; a representation was before my eyes, and I heard a low voice [saying]:

Will man be more just than God? Will man be purer than his Maker?

Behold, he does not trust in his servants, but gives light to his angels:

How much less will it be for those who dwell in houses of clay; for those whose foundation is in the dust, and who are consumed at the sight of a worm?

From morning till night they are broken, and, without anyone noticing, they perish forever.

Has not the excellence that was in them been taken away? They die without being wise.

Cry out now; will anyone answer you? And to which of the saints will you turn?

Surely anger kills the madman, and spite kills the fool.

I saw the madman taking root, but I immediately cursed his dwelling.

Far from finding safety, her children are crushed at the gates, and no one delivers them.

Their harvest is devoured by the hungry, who even snatches it from among the thorns; and the thief swallows up their possessions.

But torment does not come from the dust, and labor does not sprout from the earth;

Although man is born to be restless, like sparks to fly upwards.

But I would turn to the Mighty God, and I would address my words to God,

Who does things so great that they cannot be fathomed, [and] so many wonderful things that it is impossible to count them.

Who sends rain upon the face of the earth, and who sends waters upon the fields.

He who raises up those who are low, and who makes those who mourn safe in a high retreat.

It dispels the thoughts of cunning men, so that they cannot succeed in their schemes.

He catches the wise in their cunning, and the counsel of the wicked is overthrown. By day they encounter darkness, and they grope their way at midday, as if it were night.

But he delivers the poor from [their] sword, from their mouth, and from the hand of the powerful man.

Thus the poor man's hope comes to pass, but wickedness has its mouth shut.

Behold, how blessed is he whom God punishes! Therefore, do not reject the punishment of the Almighty.

For it is he who inflicts the wound, and who binds it up; he injures, and his hands heal.

He will deliver you from six afflictions, and in the seventh no harm will touch you.

In times of famine he will protect you from death, and in times of war [he will preserve you] from the sword.

You will be safe from the scourge of the tongue, and you will not fear plunder when it comes;

You will laugh during plunder and famine, and you will not be afraid of wild beasts.

You will even be at peace with the stones of the field, you will be at peace with the wild beasts.

You will know that prosperity will be in your tent; you will provide for your dwelling, and you will not be deceived there.

And you will see your offspring and descendants grow like the grass of the earth.

You will enter the grave in old age, like a heap of sheaves gathered in its season.

There you have it, we have examined this, and it is so; listen to it, and know it for your own good.

But Job answered, and said:

Would to God that my indignation were properly weighed, and that my calamity were placed together in a balance!

For it would be heavier than the sand of the sea; therefore my words are swallowed up.

Because the arrows of the Almighty are within me; my spirit sucks their venom; the terrors of God rise up in battle against me.

Will the wild donkey bray for grass, and the ox low for fodder?

Can we eat bland food without salt? Can we find flavor in the white of an egg?

But for me, things I wouldn't even want to touch are filth that I have to eat.

Would to God that what I ask for would come to me, and that God would give me what I expect;

And that God would want to crush me, and [that he would] let go of his hand to finish me off!

But I still have this consolation, although the pain consumes me, and does not spare me, that I have not kept silent about the words of the Saint.

What is my strength, that I can endure [such great evils]? And what is [its] end, that I can prolong my life?

Is my strength the strength of stone, and my flesh of steel?

Am I not deprived of help, and is not all support far from me?

To him who melts [under the heat of evil, is due] the compassion of his friend; but he has abandoned the fear of the Almighty.

My brothers have missed me like a torrent, like the rushing course of passing torrents;

Which cannot be seen because of the ice, and on which the snow piles up;

Which, when the heat hits them, faint; when they feel the heat, they disappear from their place;

Those which, winding here and there along the paths, are reduced to nothing, and are lost.

The troops of travelers from Tema were thinking about it, those who go to Seba were expecting it;

[But] they are ashamed that they hoped for it; they went there, and they were ashamed.

Indeed, you have become useless to me; you have seen my astonishing calamity, and you have been horrified by it.

Did I tell you: Bring me gifts from your possessions?

And deliver me from the hand of the enemy, and redeem me from the hand of the terrible?

Teach me, and I will be silent; and make me understand where I have erred.

Oh, how powerful are words of truth! But what is the purpose of your censorship?

Do you think that words alone are enough to censure; and that the words of one who is without hope are nothing but wind?

You even attack an orphan, and you stab your close friend.

But now I beg you, look at me closely, if I am lying in your presence!

Please come back, [and] let there be no injustice [in you]; yes, come back again; for I am not guilty in this.

Is there iniquity in my tongue? And does my palate not know how to discern my calamities?

Is there not a time of war limited to man on earth? And are not his days like the days of a mercenary?

Like a servant longs for the shade, and like a worker waits for his wages;

Thus, months were given to me as my portion, bringing me nothing; and nights of labor were assigned to me.

When I lie down, I say, when shall I get up? And when will the night be done? And I am full of anxiety until the break of day.

My flesh is covered with worms and heaps of dust; my skin is cracking and dissolving.

My days have passed more lightly than a weaver's shuttle, and they are consumed without hope.

Remember, [O Eternal One!] that my life is but a wind, and that my eye will never again see good.

The eyes of those who look at me will no longer see me; your eyes will be on me, and I will be no more.

[As] the cloud dissipates and departs, so he who goes down to the grave will not come up again.

He will never return to his home, and his place will no longer recognize him.

Therefore I will not restrain my mouth; I will speak in the anguish of my spirit, I will discourse in the bitterness of my soul.

Am I a sea, or a whale, that you put guards around me?

When I say: My bed will relieve me; rest will lessen some of my complaint;

Then you astonish me with dreams, and you trouble me with visions.

That is why I would choose to be strangled and die, rather than [keep] my bones.

I am weary [of life, too] shall I not live forever. Depart from me, for my days are but vanity.

What is it about [mortal] man that you regard him as something great? And that you cherish him?

And that you visit it every morning; that you experience it at every moment?

How long will you not leave me? Will you not allow me to swallow my saliva?

I have sinned; what shall I do to you, Keeper of men? Why have you made me your target; and why am I a burden to myself?

And why do you not take away my sin, and do you not blot out my iniquity? For soon I will sleep in the dust; and if you seek me [in the morning], I will be no more.

Then Bildad Suhite spoke up and said:

How long will you speak like this, and will the words of your mouth be like a rushing wind?

Would the Mighty God overturn justice, and would the Almighty overturn righteousness?

If your children have sinned against him, he has also delivered them into the hand of their sin.

[But] if you seek the [God] Mighty early in the morning, and ask for mercy from the Almighty;

If you are pure and upright, surely he will awaken for you, and make the dwelling of your righteousness prosper.

And your beginning will have been small, but your final condition will be greatly increased.

For I beg you, inquire into the previous generations, and apply yourself to learning carefully about their fathers.

For we are but of yesterday, and we know nothing; for our days on earth are like a shadow.

Will not these teach you, will not speak to you, and will not bring forth words from their hearts?

Will the rush grow without silt? Will the marsh grass grow without water?

Will it not wither even before any other herb, though it is still green, and is not picked?

So it will be with the ways of all who forget the Mighty God; and the hope of the hypocrite will perish.

His hope will be frustrated, and his confidence will be [like] a spider's web.

He will lean on his house, but it will not be firm; he will grasp it with his hand, but it will not stand.

But [the upright man] is full of vigor when exposed to the sun, and his shoots grow over his garden.

Its roots intertwine near the fountain, and it embraces the stone building.

Shall we cause him to be no longer in his place, and [the place where he was] to renounce him, [saying]: I did not see you?

Behold, what joy he has in his way, even from the dust others will spring up.

Behold, the Mighty [God] does not reject the blameless man; but he does not support the hand of the wicked.

So that he will fill your mouth with laughter, and your lips with songs of joy.

Those who hate you will be clothed with shame, and the tabernacle of the wicked will be no more.

But Job answered, and said:

Certainly I know that this is so; and how could mortal man justify himself before the Mighty God?

If [God] wants to plead with him, he cannot answer him on a single one of a thousand articles.

[God] is wise in heart and mighty in power. Who has opposed him and fared well?

He moves mountains, and when he overturns them in his fury, they know nothing of it.

It stirs up the earth in its place, and its pillars are shaken.

He speaks to the sun, but the sun does not rise; and it is he who holds the stars under his seal.

He alone stretches out the heavens; he treads upon the heights of the sea;

Who made the chariot, and Orion, and the Poussinière, and the signs that are in the depths of the South;

Who does things so great that they cannot be fathomed; and so many wonderful things that they cannot be counted.

Behold, he will pass by me, but I will not see him; and he will pass by again, but I will not perceive him.

If he steals, who will make him return it? And who will say to him, "What are you doing?"

God does not withdraw his anger, and the proud men who come to the aid are struck down by him.

How much less would I answer him, and how much less would I adjust my words against him?

I will not answer him, even if I were just, [but] I will ask for mercy from my judge.

If I call upon him, and he answers me, [still] shall I not believe that he has listened to my voice.

For he crushed me in the midst of a whirlwind, and he added wound upon wound, without my deserving it.

It doesn't allow me to catch my breath, but it fills me with bitterness.

If it is a question of who is the strongest, behold, he is strong; and if it is a question of going to court, who will bring me to trial?

If I justify myself, my own mouth will condemn me; [if I make myself] perfect, he will convict me of guilt.

When I was perfect, I wouldn't care about living, I would disdain life.

Everything comes down to one; that is why I said that it consumes both the righteous and the wicked.

[At least] if the plague [with which it strikes] caused immediate death; [but] it laughs at the ordeal of the innocent.

[It is through him that] the earth is given into the hands of the wicked; it is he who covers the faces of the judges of the [earth]; and if it is not he, who then is it?

But my days have passed more quickly than a messenger; they fled from it, and saw no good.

They passed by [like] mail boats; like an eagle flying after its prey.

If I say: I will forget my complaint, I will renounce my anger, I will be strong;

I am terrified by all my torments. I know that you will not judge me innocent.

I will be found wicked; why should I work in vain?

If I wash myself in snow water, and cleanse my hands in purity,

Then you will plunge me into a ditch, and my clothes will horrify me.

For he is not a man like me, that I should answer him, [and] that we should go together into judgment.

[But] there was no one who knew about the cause that would be between us, [and] who laid hands on us both.

Let him remove his rod from me, and let the fear I have of him no longer trouble me.

I will speak, and I will not be afraid; but in the state I am in, I am not myself.

My soul is weary of my life; I will give myself over to my complaint, I will speak in the bitterness of my soul.

I will say to God: Do not condemn me; show me why you are pleading against me?

Do you delight in oppressing me, and in scorning the work of your hands, and in blessing the designs of the wicked?

Do you have eyes of flesh? Do you see as a [mortal] man sees?

Are your days like the days of man [mortal?]? Are your years like the days of man?

That you seek out my iniquity, and that you inquire into my sin!

You know that I have not committed a crime, and that there is no one who can deliver me from your hand.

Your hands formed me, and they arranged all the parts of my body; and you would destroy me!

Remember, I pray you, that you formed me like clay, and that you will turn me back into dust.

Didn't you melt me like milk? And didn't you curdle me like cheese?
 You clothed me with skin and flesh, and you made me of bones and sinews.
 You gave me life, and you have shown mercy to me, and [by] your continual care you have preserved my spirit.
 And yet you kept these things in your heart; but I know that they were with you.
 If I have sinned, you have also noticed me; and you have not held me free from my iniquity.
 If I have done wickedly, woe to me! If I have been righteous, I will not lift my head high. I am filled with shame; but look at my affliction.
 It is increasing; you chase after me, like a great lion, and you return; you show yourself wonderful against me.
 You renew your witnesses against me, and your indignation increases against me. Fresh troops come against me.
 And why did you bring me forth from the womb? Why did I not perish there, so that no eye might have seen me!
 And that I had been as though I had never been, and that I had been carried from [my mother's] womb to the grave!
 Are not my days few? Cease then and withdraw from me, and [allow] me to grow a little stronger.
 Before I go to the place from which I will never return; to the land of darkness and the shadow of death;
 Land of great darkness, like the darkness of the shadow of death, where there is no order, and where nothing shines but darkness.
 Then Zophar Nahamathite spoke up and said:
 Will we not respond to so much talk, and [will it be necessary] only to be a great talker, to be justified?
 Will your lies silence people? And when you have mocked them, will no one be able to shame you?
 For you have said: My teaching is pure, and I am clean before your eyes.
 But certainly, it would be desirable for God to speak, and to open his lips [to argue] with you.
 For he would reveal to you the secrets of wisdom, [namely], that he should redouble the conduct that he maintains towards you; know therefore that God requires of you much less than your iniquity [deserves].
 Will you find [the depths of] God by searching Him? Will you know the Almighty perfectly?
 These are the heights of heaven, what will you do there? These are things deeper than the depths, what will you understand there?
 Its extent is longer than the earth, and wider than the sea.
 If he stirs, and tightens, or gathers, who can turn him away?
 For he knows treacherous men, and having seen oppression, will he not take heed?
 But the senseless man becomes intelligent, although man is born like a wild donkey.
 If you prepare your heart, and stretch out your hands towards him;
 If you remove from yourself the iniquity that is in your hand, and if you do not allow wickedness to dwell in your tents;
 Then you will certainly be able to lift up your face, [as being] spotless; you will be steadfast, and you will not fear anything.
 You will forget [your] works, and you will not remember them any more than the waters [that] have flowed away.
 And the time [of your life] will rise higher than at noon; you will shine, [and] be like the very morning.
 You will be full of confidence, because there will be hope [for you]; you will dig, and you will rest securely.
 You will lie down, and no one will frighten you, and many will court you.
 But the eyes of the wicked will be consumed, and there will be no refuge for them, and their hope will be to breathe their last.

But Job answered, and said:

Truly, you are a whole people; and will wisdom die with you?

I have just as much common sense as you, and I am not inferior to you; and who does not know such things?

I am a man ridiculed by his friends, [but] he who calls upon God, and God will answer him. A righteous and upright man is mocked.

He whose feet are ready to slip, according to the thought of one who is at ease, is a torch that is no longer taken into account.

It is the tents of thieves that prosper, and those who provoke the Mighty God to anger are assured, and they are those to whom God entrusts everything.

And indeed, I beg you, ask the animals, and [each of them] will teach you; or the birds of the air, and they will tell you;

Or speak to the earth, and it will teach you; even the fish of the sea will tell you;

Who is there who does not know all these things, [and] that it is the hand of the Lord that has done this?

[For it is he] in whose hand is the life of all that lives, and the spirit of all human flesh.

Does not the ear discern speech, just as the palate savors meat?

Wisdom resides in the elderly, and understanding [is the fruit] of a long life.

But in him are wisdom and strength; to him belong counsel and understanding.

Behold, he will demolish it, and it will not be rebuilt; if he shuts it on anyone, it will not be opened.

Behold, he will hold back the waters, and everything will become dry; he will release them, and they will overturn the earth.

In him are strength and understanding; to him belongs the one who goes astray, and the one who leads him astray.

He strips the advisors, and he deprives the judges of their senses.

He loosens the belts of kings, and he fastens their loins with straps.

He strips those in authority naked, and he overthrows the strong.

He silences those who are most confident in their speeches, and he deprives the elders of their senses.

He spreads contempt on the leaders; he weakens the belt of the strong.

It brings to light the things that were hidden in darkness, and it brings to light the shadow of death.

He multiplies nations and destroys them; he scatters nations to and fro, and then brings them back.

He takes away the heart of the leaders of the peoples of the earth, and makes them wander in deserts where there is no path.

They grope in the darkness, without any light, and he makes them stagger like drunken people.

Behold, my eye has seen all these things, [and] my ear has heard them and heard them.

As you know, I know them too; I am not inferior to you.

But I will speak to the Almighty, and I will take pleasure in telling my reasons to the Mighty God.

And indeed you invent lies; you are all useless doctors.

Would to God that you remained entirely silent; and that would be considered wisdom.

Now listen to my reasoning, and pay attention to the defense on my lips:

Would you allege unjust things in favor of the Mighty God, and would you say some falsehood about him?

Will you show him any consideration if you plead the cause of the Mighty God?

Will he take it well if he probes you? Will you play with him as one plays with a mortal man?

He will certainly censor you, even if you secretly show favoritism.

Will not His majesty terrify you? And will not his terror fall upon you?

Your memorable speeches are sentences of ashes, and your eminences are eminences of mud.

Be silent before me, and let me speak; and let whatever may happen to me be.

Why do I carry my flesh between my teeth, and hold my soul in my hands?

Even if he kills me, I will still hope [in him]; and I will defend my conduct in his presence.

And what's more, he himself will be my deliverance; but the hypocrite will not come before his face.

Listen carefully to my speeches, and pay attention to what I am about to tell you.

There, as soon as I have deduced my right in order, I know that I will be justified.

Who wants to argue with me? For if I remain silent now, I shall die.

Only do not do these two things to me, [and] then I will not hide from your face;

Take your hand away from me, and let your fear not trouble me.

Then call me, and I will answer; or I will speak, and you will answer me.

How many iniquities and sins have I committed? Show me my crime and my sin.

Why do you hide your face, and consider me your enemy?

Will you exert your strength against a leaf that the wind carries away? Will you pursue dry stubble?

That you would pronounce bitter judgments against me, and make me bear the punishment for the sins of my youth?

And that you place my feet among the vines, and observe all my paths? And that you follow the traces of my feet?

For he [whom you pursue in this way] goes away in pieces like rotten wood, and like a garment eaten by moths.

The man born of woman is short-lived, and full of restlessness.

It springs up like a flower, then it is cut down, and it flees like a shadow that does not stop.

However, you have opened your eyes to him, and you are implicating me in your presence.

Who will bring the pure out of the impure? No one.

A man's days are determined, the number of his months is in your hands; you have prescribed his limits, and he shall not pass beyond them.

Withdraw from him, so that he may have rest, until, like a mercenary, he has finished his day.

For if a tree is cut down, there is hope, and it will grow again, and will not lack shoots;

Although its root has grown old in the earth, and its trunk is dead in the dust;

As soon as it senses water, it will sprout again and produce branches, like a newly planted tree.

But man dies, and loses all his strength; he expires; and then where is he?

[As] the waters flow from the sea, and a river dries up and runs dry;

So man lies on the ground and does not rise again; until there are no more heavens they will not awake, nor will they be awakened from their sleep.

Oh, that you would hide me in a pit beneath the earth, that you would conceal me there until your anger had passed, [and] that you would grant me a time; after which you would remember me!

If a man dies, will he live again? I will [therefore] wait every day of my struggle, until change comes to me.

Call to me, and I will answer you; do not despise the work of your hands.

But now you count my steps, and you do not excuse any of my sins.

My sins are sealed away as if in a suitcase, and you have sewn my iniquities together.

For [as] a mountain falls and crumbles, and [as] a rock is removed from its place;
And as the waters wear down the stones, and carry away the dust of the earth with all that it has produced, so you destroy the hope of mortal man.

You always prove stronger than him, and he goes away; [and] having changed his countenance, you send him far away.

His children will be advanced, and he will not know it; or they will be humbled, and he will not care.

Only his flesh, [while it is] on him, has pain, and his soul grieves [while it is] in him.

Then Eliphaz Temanites spoke up and said:

Will a wise man utter in his answers knowledge as light as the wind, vain opinions; and will he fill his belly with the wind from the East?

Arguing with speeches that serve no purpose, and with words from which no benefit can be derived?

Surely you abolish the fear [of God], and you gradually destroy the prayer that should be offered to the Mighty [God].

For your mouth has made known your iniquity, and you have chosen a deceitful language.

It is your own mouth that condemns you, not me; and your lips testify against you.

Were you the first man born? Or were you formed before the mountains?

Have you been instructed in the secret counsel of God, and do you alone possess wisdom?

What do you know that we don't know? What knowledge do you have that we don't have?

There are also among us men with white hair, and people of very great old age, there are even some older than your father.

Do the consolations of the Mighty God seem too small to you? And do you have something hidden within yourself?

What is it that breaks your heart, and why are you blinking?

That you breathe out your breath against the Mighty God, and that you utter such words from your mouth?

What does it matter to a mortal man to be pure, or to one born of a woman to be righteous?

Behold, [the mighty God] does not trust in his saints, and the heavens are not found pure before him;

And how much more is the man who drinks iniquity like water, how abominable and unclean?

I will teach you, listen to me, and I will tell you what I have seen;

To know what the wise men have declared, and have not hidden; what they had [received] from their fathers;

They alone were given the land, and the stranger has not passed among them.

The wicked man is [as] in child labor all his days, and a [small] number of years is reserved for the violent man.

A cry of terror is in his ears; in the midst of peace [he believes] that the destroyer is hurling itself upon him.

He does not believe he can emerge from the darkness; and he is always watched by the sword.

He runs after the bread, [saying]: where is it? He knows that the day of darkness is very near, and he touches it as with his hand.

Anguish and adversity terrify him, and each overwhelms him, like a king prepared for battle.

Because he raised his hand against the Mighty [God], and stiffened his stance against the Almighty;

He will jump at his collar, [and] on the thickness of his big shields.

Because the fat will have covered her face, and it will have made folds on her stomach.

And that he will have lived in the destroyed cities, and in houses where no one remained, and which were reduced to heaps of stones.

But he will not be any richer, for his possessions will not last, nor will their accumulation spread over the earth.

He will not be able to escape from the darkness; the flame will wither his still tender branches; he will depart by the breath of the mouth of the [Almighty].

Therefore, let him not rely on the vanity by which he was seduced, for his change will be of no use to him.

It will be over for him before his time; his branches will never turn green again.

Its sour grapes will be plucked from it as from a vine; and its buds will be made to fall off as from an olive tree.

For the band of hypocrites will be desolate; the fire will devour the tents of [those who receive] gifts.

They conceive of labor, and they give birth to torment, and they plot frauds in the heart.

But Job answered, and said:

I have often heard such talk; you are all tiresome comforters.

Will there be no end to words as light as the wind, and what do you think you're doing to reply like that?

Would I speak as you do, if you were in my place? Would I gather words against you, or shake my head against you?

I would strengthen you with my words, and the movement of my lips would ease [your pain].

If I speak, my pain will not be relieved; and if I remain silent, what will I suffer less?

Indeed, he has now overwhelmed me; you have devastated my entire troop;

You have covered me with wrinkles, which are a testimony [of the evils I suffer]; and a thinness has arisen in me which also testifies to it on my face.

His fury tore me apart, he declared himself my enemy, he gnashes his teeth at me, and having become my enemy he gleams with his eyes against me.

They open their mouths against me, they slap me on the cheek to insult me, they gang up together against me.

The Mighty God has confined me with the unjust; he has made me fall into the hands of the wicked.

I was at rest, and he crushed me; he seized me by the collar, and broke me, and made me a mound for himself.

His archers surrounded me, he pierced my back, and did not spare me; he poured my gall on the ground.

He broke me by inflicting wound upon wound, he ran at me like a powerful man.

I sewed a sack onto my skin, and I tarnished my glory in the dust.

My face is covered in mud from crying, and a shadow of death hangs over my eyelids;

Although there is no iniquity in my hands, and my prayer is pure.

O earth! Do not hide the blood I have shed; and let there be no place for my cry.

But now behold, my witness is in heaven, my witness is in the high places.

My friends are haranguers; but my eye melts into tears before God.

Oh, if only man reasoned with God as a man with his closest friend!

For the years of my account will [end], and I am entering a path from which I will not return.

My spirits are fading, my days are about to end, the grave [awaits me].

Indeed, there are only mockers around me, and my eye watches all night over the sorrows they cause me.

Give me, I pray you, [give me] a guarantee from you; [but] who will touch my hand?

Because you have hidden understanding from their hearts, therefore you will not raise them up.

And even the eyes of the children of the one who speaks flatteringly to his close friends will be consumed.

He has set me to be the people's fable, and I am [like] a drum before them.

My eye is clouded with despair, and all the members of my body are like a shadow.

Upright men will be astonished by this, and innocence will awaken against the hypocrite.

However, the righteous will stand firm in their way, and the one who has clean hands will be strengthened.

Therefore, all of you, turn back and come again, I beg you; for I find no wise person among you.

My days are past, my plans are broken, [and] the thoughts of my heart [are dissipated].

They turn me into night, and make light near darkness.

Indeed, I have nothing left to wait for but the tomb, which will be my home; I have made my bed in the darkness.

I cried out to the pit: you are my father; and to the worms: you are my mother and my sister.

And where will the things I have awaited be, and who will see those things that have been the subject of my expectation?

They will descend to the bottom of the grave; indeed, they will rest together [with me] in the dust.

Then Bildad Suhite spoke up and said:

When will you finish these speeches? Listen, and then we'll talk.

Why are we regarded as beasts, [and] why do you consider us unclean?

[O you!] who tears yourself apart in your fury, will the earth be abandoned because of you, [and] will the rocks be removed from their place?

Surely, the light of the wicked will be extinguished, and the spark of their fire will not shine.

The light will be darkened in each of their tents, and the lamp [that shone] above them will be extinguished.

His forces will be tightened, and his council will overthrow him.

For his feet will be caught in the nets, and he will walk on the snares.

The shoelace will catch his heel, and the thief who seizes it will have the upper hand.

His trap is hidden in the earth, and his trap is hidden on his path.

Terrors will besiege him on all sides, and make him trot here and there on his feet.

His strength will be famished, and calamity will always be at his side.

The firstborn of death will devour what sustains its skin, it will devour, [I say], what sustains it.

The things in which he placed his trust will be torn from his tent, and he will be led to the King of terrors.

People will live in his tent, though it will no longer belong to him; and sulfur will be scattered on his pleasure house.

Its roots will dry out below, and its branches will be cut off at the top.

His memory will perish on earth, and his name will no longer be spoken of in the public squares.

He will be driven from the light into darkness, and he will be exterminated from the world.

He will have neither son nor grandson among his people, nor will he have anyone to survive him in his dwellings.

Those who come after him will be astonished at his day; and those who came before him will be horrified by it.

Surely such will be the dwellings of the wicked, and such will be the place of him who has not acknowledged the Mighty [God].

But Job answered, and said:
How long will you afflict my soul, and overwhelm me with words?
You have already tried ten times to shame me. Aren't you ashamed to be so hard on yourself against me?
But if it were true that I had sinned, the fault would be mine.
But if you absolutely want to speak haughtily against me, and reproach me for my disgrace;
Know then that it is God who has overthrown me, and who has spread his net around me.

Behold, I cry out because of the violence done to me, and I am not heard; I cry out, and there is no justice.
He has closed my way so that I cannot pass; and he has put darkness on my paths.
He has stripped me of my glory, he has taken the crown from my head.
He has destroyed me on all sides, and I am going away; he has destroyed my hope like that of a tree [that is uprooted].
He flew into a rage against me and treated me like one of his enemies.
His troops came together, and they prepared their way against me, and camped around my tent.
He has removed my brothers from me; and those who knew me have gone far from me.
My loved ones have abandoned me, and those I knew have forgotten me.
Those who stayed in my house and my maids regarded me as a stranger, [and] considered me a foreigner.
I called to my servant, but he did not answer me, though I begged him with my own mouth.
My breath has become odious to my wife; though I beg her by the children of my womb.

Even the little ones despise me, and if I stand up they speak against me.
All those to whom I confided my secrets abhorred me; and all those whom I loved turned against me.
My bones are attached to my skin and flesh, and only the skin of my teeth remains intact.
Have pity on me, have pity on me, you my friends; for the hand of God has struck me.

Why do you pursue me like the Mighty God, without being able to satisfy your hunger for my flesh?

Would to God that my words were now written down! Would to God that they were engraved in a book;

With a touch of iron, and on lead, [and] that they were hewn from a rock in perpetuity!

For I know that my Redeemer lives, and that he will remain at the end on earth.

And when, after my skin has been eaten away, this will be eaten away, I will see God in my flesh.

I myself will see it, and my eyes will see it, and not another. My loins are wasting away within me.

You should rather say: Why do we persecute him? since the basis of my words is found in me.

Be afraid of the sword; for the fury [with which you persecute me] is [among] the iniquities that attract the sword; therefore know that there is a judgment.

Then Zophar Nahamathite spoke up and said:

It is because of this that my various thoughts compel me to respond, and that this promptness is within me.

I heard the rebuke you want to shame me for, but my mind will draw the answer from my intelligence.

Don't you know that from time immemorial, [and] ever since [God] placed man on the earth,

The triumph of the wicked is short-lived, and the joy of the hypocrite is but a moment?

Even if its height were to reach to the heavens, and its head to the clouds,
He will perish forever like his dung; and those who have seen him will say: Where is he?

It will have flown away like a dream, and will not be found; and it will flee like a vision of the night.

The eye that saw it will see it no more; and its place will behold it no more.
His children will court the poor; and his hands will restore what he has stolen by violence.

Her bones will be full of the punishment [for the sins] of her youth, and she will rest with him in the dust.

If evil is sweet to his mouth, and if he hides it under his tongue;

If he spares him, and does not reject him, but keeps him in his palace;

What he eats will turn into asp gall in his guts.

He has swallowed up the riches, but he will vomit them up, and the Mighty [God] will throw them out of his belly.

He will suck the asp's venom, and the viper's tongue will kill him.

He will not see the streams of the rivers, nor the torrents of honey and butter.

He will return [what he has acquired through] vexations, and he will not swallow it up; [he will return it] according to its true value, and he will not rejoice in it.

Because he will have trampled on the poor and abandoned them, he will have ruined his house, far from building it up.

Certainly he will feel no satisfaction in his stomach, and he will save nothing of what he so desired.

He will have nothing left to eat, which is why he will no longer expect anything good from him.

After the measure of his possessions has been filled, he will be in misery; all the hands of those he has oppressed will fall upon him.

If he has had enough to fill his stomach, [God] will make him feel the heat of his anger, and [it] will rain down upon him [and] upon his flesh.

If he flees from the iron weapons, the bronze bow will pierce him.

The arrow aimed at him will come out through his body, and the gleaming iron will come out of his gall; all kinds of terror will walk upon him.

All darkness will be confined within its most secret dwellings; a fire that has not been kindled will consume it; the man who remains in his tent will be miserable.

The heavens will uncover his iniquity, and the earth will rise up against him.

The income from his house will be diverted; everything will flow away on the day of God's wrath [against him].

This is the portion that God reserves for the wicked man, and the inheritance that he will have from God for his words.

But Job answered, and said:

Listen carefully to my speech, and that will serve as consolation from you.

Bear with me, and I will speak, and after I have spoken, mock me.

Is my speech addressed to a man? If so, how could my mind not fail?

Look at me, and be amazed, and put your hand over your mouth.

When I think about [my condition], I am quite astonished, and a trembling seizes my flesh.

Why do villains live, [and] grow old, and even why are they the most powerful?

Their race remains in their presence with them, and their offspring rise before their eyes.

Their homes enjoy peace, free from fear; the rod of God is not upon them.

Their cow conceives, and does not fail; their young cow gives birth to her calf, and does not abort.

They bring out their little ones before them, like a flock of sheep, and their children jump.

They jump to the sound of the drum and the violin, and rejoice to the sound of the organ.

They spend their days in pleasure, and in a moment they descend to the grave.

However, they said to the Mighty God: Depart from us; for we do not care for the knowledge of your ways.

Who is the Almighty that we should serve him? And what good will we gain from having invoked him?

Behold, their good is not in their power. May the counsel of the wicked be far from me!

How often does it happen that the lamp of the wicked is put out, and the storm comes upon them! [God] will distribute to them their portions in his anger.

They will be like straw exposed to the wind, and like chaff that is blown away by the whirlwind.

God will reserve for the children of the wicked the punishment for his violence; he will repay them, and he will know it.

His eyes will see his ruin, and he will drink [the cup of] the wrath of the Almighty.

And what pleasure will he have in his home, which he leaves behind, since the number of his months will have been taken away?

Would one teach knowledge to the Almighty, to him who judges those who are exalted?

One dies in his full vigor, peaceful and at rest;

His vessels are filled with milk, and his bones are nourished with marrow.

And the other dies in the bitterness of his soul, having never enjoyed a good meal.

And yet they are also lying in the dust, and the worms cover them.

There you have it, I know your thoughts, and the judgments you make against me.

For you say: Where is the house of this powerful man, and where is the tent in which the wicked dwelt?

Have you never inquired about the travelers, and have you not learned from the reports they have given you?

Is the wicked reserved for the day of ruin, for the day when wrath is sent?

But who will rebuke him for his conduct? And who will repay him for the evil he has done?

He will nevertheless be carried to the tomb, and he will remain in the tomb.

The hillocks of the valleys are pleasing to him; and everyone follows him in a line, and countless people march before him.

How then can you offer me vain consolations, since there is always prevarication in your answers?

Then Eliphaz Temanites spoke up and said:

Will man bring any profit to the Mighty God? Rather, a wise man brings profit to himself.

Does the Almighty receive any pleasure if you are righteous? Or any gain if you walk in integrity?

Does he rebuke you, [and] enter into judgment with you because of the fear he has of you?

Is not your wickedness great? And are not your injustices endless?

For you have taken your brothers' pledge without cause; you have stripped the naked of their robes.

You did not give water to drink to the one who was weary [from the journey]; you withheld your bread from the one who was hungry.

The land belonged to the powerful man, and the one who was respected lived there.

You sent the widows away empty-handed, and the arms of the orphans were broken.

That is why the nets are stretched around you, and why a sudden fear terrifies you.

And darkness [is all around you], so that you cannot see; and the overflowing waters cover you.

Does not God dwell in the highest heavens? Look then at the height of the stars; [and] how high they are.
But you said: What does the Mighty One [God] know? Will he judge through the dark clouds?
The clouds hide us from his sight, and he sees nothing; he walks around the circle of the heavens.
[But] have you not noticed the old path in which unjust men have walked?
[And did you not notice] that they were cut off before the time; and that on which they relied has flowed away like a river.
They said to the Mighty God: "Depart from us." But what was the Almighty doing to them?
He had filled their house with possessions. May the counsel of the wicked be far from me!
The righteous will see it and rejoice, and the innocent will mock them.
Certainly our state has not been abolished, but fire has consumed their excellence.
Cling to him, I beg you, and remain at rest; by this means good will come to you.
Receive, I pray you, the law from his mouth, and lay up his words in your heart.
If you return to the Almighty, you will be restored. Drive iniquity far from your tent.
And you will place gold on the dust, and the gold of Ophir on the rocks of the streams.
And the Almighty will be your gold, and the silver of your strength.
For then you will find your delight in the Almighty, and you will lift up your face to God.
You will sway him with your prayers, and he will answer you, and you will grant him your vows.
If you have any plan, it will succeed, and light will shine upon your ways.
When someone has been humbled, and you have said, "Let him be exalted," then [God] will deliver the one who kept his eyes downcast.
He will deliver the one who is not innocent, and he will be delivered by the purity of your hands.
But Job answered, and said:
Even today my complaint is full of bitterness, and the hand that struck me weighs heavily [on me] beyond my groaning.
Oh, if I knew how to find him, I would go all the way to his throne.
I would present my case before him, and I would fill my mouth with evidence.
I would know what he would answer me, and I would hear what he would say to me.
Would he contest with me by the greatness of [his] strength? No; he would only propose [his reasons] against me.
That is where an upright man would reason with him, and where I would be freed forever from my judge.
So, if I go forward, he is not there; if I go backward, I will not see him there.
If he makes himself heard on the left, I cannot grasp him; he hides on the right, and I do not see him there.
[But] when he has known the way I have taken, [and] when he has tested me, I will come forth like gold [comes forth from the crucible].
My foot has followed in his footsteps; I have kept to his path, and I have not turned aside from it.
I have not strayed so far from the command of his lips; I have held fast to the words of his mouth, more than my usual provision.
But if he has made a plan, who can turn him away from it? And what his soul desires, he does.
He will therefore complete what he has resolved concerning me; and there are many such things in him.
That is why I am troubled because of his presence; and when I consider him, I am afraid because of him.

For the Mighty One has melted my heart, and the Almighty has astonished me;
However, I have not been cut off from the darkness; and he has hidden the darkness behind me.

How could the times [of vengeance] not be hidden [from the wicked] by the Almighty, since even those who know Him do not perceive the days of His [punishment upon them]?

They move the boundary markers back, they plunder the animals of the herd, and then they make them go out to pasture.

They take the orphans' donkey, they take the widow's ox as a pledge.

They remove the poor from the road, and the wretched of the land [are forced to] hide.

Behold, [there are some who are like] wild donkeys in the desert; they go out to do their work, rising up early in the morning for the prey; the desert provides them with bread for their children.

They will cut the fodder in the fields, but it will be only very late that they will go and ravage the vineyard of the wicked.

They make those they have stripped spend the night without clothing, and who have nothing to cover themselves with during the cold;

Those who are soaked by the heavy mountain rains, and who, having no refuge, sleep in the hollows of the rocks.

They take the child away from the breast, and take pledges from the poor man.

They strip the man they have robbed, and they take away from those who had nothing to eat what they had gleaned.

Those who make oil within their walls, and those who tread the grapes in the vats, suffer from thirst.

They make the people in the city groan, [and] the soul of those they have killed cries out; and yet God does nothing unworthy of him.

They are among those who oppose him to the light; they have not known his ways, nor have they remained in his paths.

The murderer rises at daybreak, and he kills the poor and the needy, and at night he is like a thief.

The eye of the adulterer watches in the evening, saying: No eye will see me; and it covers its face.

They break through the darkness the houses they had marked by day; they hate the light.

For the morning light is like the shadow of death to all of them; if anyone recognizes them, it is a deadly fear to them.

He will pass by faster than the surface of the waters; their portion will be cursed on the earth; he will not see the path of the vineyards.

[As] drought and heat consume the snow waters, [so] the tomb [will ravish] the sinners.

The womb [that carried him] will forget him; the worms will eat [his] body which was so dear to it; he will no longer be remembered; the unjust will be broken like wood.

He mistreated the barren woman who could not bear children; and he did no good to the widow;

And he attracted the powerful by his strength; when he rose up, his life was not assured.

[God] gives him the means to be assured, and he relies on that; however, his eyes watch their ways.

They are raised up in a short time, and then they are no more; they are brought down, they are carried away like all the others, and are cut off like the tip of an ear of corn.

If that is not the case, who will convince me that I am lying, and who will refute my words?

Then Bildad Suhite spoke up and said:

Kingdom and terror belong to God; he maintains peace in his high places.

Can his armies be counted? And on whom does his light not rise?

And how can mortal man justify himself before the Mighty God? And how can one born of woman be pure?

Behold, [one may go] to the moon, and it shall not shine; the stars shall not be pure before his eyes.

How much less man, who is but a worm; and the son of man, who is but a worm!

But Job answered, and said:

Oh, how great you have been to the man deprived of strength; and how you have upheld the arm that had no strength.

Oh! how you have given [good] advice to the man who lacked wisdom; and you have shown him understanding.

To whom did you speak these words? And whose spirit has departed from you?

Inanimate things are formed below the waters, and also the [fish] that live in the waters.

The abyss is exposed before him, and the chasm has no cover.

He spreads the north wind over the void, and he suspends the earth over nothingness.

He holds the waters in his clouds, and the cloud does not split beneath them.

He maintains the exterior of [his] throne, and he spreads his cloud over it.

He marked out boundaries on the waters all around, until there was neither light nor darkness.

The pillars of heaven trembled and were astonished at his threat.

He cleaves the sea with his power, and he strikes the rising waves with his intelligence.

He adorned the heavens with his Spirit, and his hand formed the serpent crossing.

These are the edges of its roads; but how small is the portion we know of it? And who can comprehend the resounding roar of its power?

And Job continued, resuming his sententious discourse, and said:

The Mighty God, who has set aside my rights, and the Almighty who has filled my soul with bitterness, lives,

For as long as there is breath in me, and the Spirit of God is in my nostrils,

My lips will not utter anything unjust, and my tongue will not speak a false word.

God forbid that I should recognize you as righteous! As long as I live, I will not abandon my integrity.

I have kept my righteousness, and I will not forsake it; and my heart will not reproach me in my days.

May it be to my enemy as to the wicked; and to him who rises against me, as to the unjust!

For what will be the expectation of the hypocrite, when God takes his soul from him, if he has indulged in committing extortion?

Will the Mighty God hear his cries when calamity comes upon him?

Will he find his delight in the Almighty? Will he call upon God at all times?

I will teach you the works of the Mighty One, and I will not hide from you what is with the Almighty.

There you have it, you have all seen [these things], and how is it that you [allow yourselves] to indulge in vain thoughts?

This will be the portion of the wicked man, which the Mighty God reserves for him, and the inheritance which the violent receive from the Almighty;

If his children multiply, it will be for the sword; and his descendants will not even have enough bread.

Those who remain will be well buried after their death, but their widows will not mourn them.

Even if he were to heap up silver like dust, and heap up clothes like mud,
He will hoard them, but the righteous will wear them, and the innocent will share the money.

He built himself a house like a moth, and like the keeper of the vineyards builds his hut.

The rich man will fall, and he will not be raised up; he will open his eyes, and he will find nothing.

Terrors will overwhelm him like floods; the whirlwind will sweep him away by night.
The east wind will carry it away, and it will go away; it will sweep it away, I say, from its place like a whirlwind.

The Almighty will attack him and will not spare him; [and being pursued] by his hand, he will not cease to flee.

They will clap their hands against him, and they will hiss at him from the place where he used to sit.

Certainly silver has its vein, and gold has a place [from which it is extracted] to refine it.

Iron is extracted from dust, and when stone is melted, it yields bronze.

He has brought darkness to an end, so that the ends of all things are revealed, even the most hidden stones, which are in the shadow of death.

The torrent, overflowing from near an inhabited place, flows into places where no one sets foot anymore, [but its waters] dry up and flow away through [the work] of men.

It is from the earth that the bread comes forth, and underneath it is overturned, [and it is] on fire.

Its stones are the place from which sapphires are extracted; gold dust is also found there.

The bird of prey did not know its path, and the eye of the kite did not look at it.

The lion's fans did not march there, the old lion did not pass by there.

[The man] puts his hand to the stones, and overturns mountains down to their roots.

He makes the streams pass through the split rocks, and his eye sees all that is precious there.

He stops the flow of rivers, and he draws out and exposes to the light what is hidden.

But where will wisdom be found? And where is the place of intelligence?

Man does not know his worth, and it is not found in the land of the living.

The abyss says, "It is not in me," and the sea says, "It is not with me."

It is not sold for fine gold, nor can it be bought by the weight of silver.

It cannot be exchanged for the gold of Ophir, nor for precious Onyx, nor for Sapphire.

Neither gold nor diamonds can approach its price, and it cannot be given in exchange for a vase of fine gold.

They will not speak of coral or precious stones; and the price of wisdom is higher than that of pearls.

Ethiopian topaz will not approach its price, nor will it be exchanged for pure gold.

Where then does wisdom come from? And where is the place of intelligence?

It is covered from the sight of every living man, and it is hidden from the birds of the air.

The abyss and death say: We have heard with our own ears about her.

God knows the way, and knows where she is.

For it is he who sees to the ends of the earth, and who looks under all the heavens.

When he put the weight to the wind, and weighed the waters by measure;

When he prescribed a law to the rain, and the way to the lightning of thunder;

Then he saw it, and revealed it; he prepared it, and even he searched it to its depths.

Then he said to the man, "Behold, the fear of the Lord is wisdom, and to turn away from evil is understanding."

And Job, continuing, resumed his sententious discourse, and said:

Oh! who would make me be as I once was, as I was in those days when God kept me.

When he shone his lamp upon my head, and when I walked in darkness, [illuminated] by his light.

As I was in the days of my autumn, when the secret of God was in my tent.

When the Almighty was still with me, and my people around me.

When I washed my feet in butter, and streams of oil flowed for me from the rock.

When I went out towards the gate through the city, and had a seat prepared for me in the square,

The young men who saw me hid, the old men got up and stood.

The leaders refrained from speaking, and put their hands over their mouths.

The drivers held their voices, and their tongues were tied to the roofs of their mouths.

The ear that heard me said I was blessed, and the eye that saw me testified in my favor.

For I delivered the afflicted who cried out, and the orphan who had no one to help him.

The blessing of the one who was about to perish came upon me, and I made the heart of the widow sing for joy.

I was clothed with righteousness, it served as my garment, and my justice was like a cloak and a tiara.

I served as eyes to the blind man, and feet to the lame man.

I was the father of the poor, and I diligently inquired into the cause which was unknown to me.

I broke the unjust man's big teeth, and I snatched the prey from between his teeth.

That is why I said: I will die in my bed, and I will multiply my days like grains of sand.

My roots were open to the waters, and the dew remained all night on my branches.

My glory was renewed within me, and my bow was strengthened in my hand.

They listened to me, and waited [until I had spoken]; and when I had given my opinion, they remained silent.

They did not reply after what I said, and my word fell upon them [like dew].

They were waiting for me like one waits for rain; they opened their mouths, as if after the rain of the last season.

Was I laughing with them? They did not believe it; and they did not make the serenity of my face disappear.

Did I want to go with them? I was sitting at the high end, I was among them like a King in his army, and like a man who comforts the afflicted.

But now those who are younger than me mock me; [those same ones] whose fathers I would not have deigned to put with the dogs of my flock.

And indeed, what good would the strength of their hands have done me? Old age had perished in them.

From famine and hunger they kept apart, fleeing to arid, dark, desolate, and deserted places.

They cut wild grasses near the shrubs, and juniper roots for fuel.

They were driven out from among men, and people shouted after them as if they were thieves.

They lived in the hollows of the torrents, in the holes in the earth and rocks.

They were making noise among the bushes, and they were gathering among the thistles.

They are men of nothingness, and without name, who have been brought lower than the earth.

And now I am the subject of their song, and the topic of their conversation.

They abhor me; they stay far from me; and they are not afraid to spit in my face.
Because [God] loosened my rope and afflicted me, they shook the brake before me.
Young men, newly born, stand at my right; they push my feet, and I am the target of their malice.
They ruin my path, they increase my affliction, without anyone needing to help them.

They come [against me] as if through a wide breach, and they have rushed [at me] because of my desolation.
Terrors have turned against me, [and] like a wind they pursue my soul; and my deliverance has vanished like a cloud.
That is why now my soul melts within me; the days of affliction have overtaken me.
He pierced my bones by night, and my arteries have no respite.
He has changed my garment by the greatness of his power, and he clings to me closely, like the opening of my tunic.
He threw me into the mud, and I am like dust and ashes.
I cry out to you, but you do not answer me; I stand, but you do not look at me.
You are without compassion for me; you treat me as an enemy by the force of your hand.
You raised me up [as] on the wind, and you made me ride on it as on a chariot, and then you melt all my substance.
So I know that you will lead me to death and into the house assigned to all the living.
But he will not reach out his hand to the tomb. When he has killed them, will they cry out?
Did I not weep for him who was having a bad day; and was not my soul grieved because of the poor?
However, when I expected good, evil came to me; and when I hoped for light, darkness came.
My insides are in great turmoil, and cannot be calmed; the days of affliction have preceded me.
I walk all blackened, but not by the sun; I get up, I shout in the middle of the assembly.
I became the brother of dragons, and the companion of owls.
My skin has turned black on me, and my bones are dried up by the heat [that consumes me].
That is why my harp has turned into lamentations, and my organs into mournful sounds.

I had made peace with my eyes; how could I have fixed my gaze on a virgin?
And what would have been the portion that God would have sent me from on high, and what would have been the inheritance that the Almighty would have sent me from the high places?
Is not perdition for the unjust, and strange accidents for the workers of iniquity?
Has he not himself seen my ways, and has he not counted all my steps?
If I have walked in falsehood, and if my foot has hastened to deceive,
Let me be weighed in fair scales, and God will know my integrity.
If my steps have turned aside from the [right] path, and if my heart has followed my eyes, and if some stain has clung to my hands,
Let me sow, and let another eat [what I have sown]; and let all that I have caused to grow be uprooted!
If my heart has been seduced by some woman, and if I have lain in wait at my neighbor's door,
Let my wife be dishonored by another, and let her be prostituted to others!
Since it is a premeditated act of wickedness, one of those iniquities which are all judged.
Because it is a fire that devours until it consumes, and which would have uprooted all my income.

If I have refused to grant justice to my male or female servant when they have disputed with me;

For what would I have done, when the Mighty God had risen up? And when he had asked me to account for it, what would I have answered him?

He who formed me in the womb, did he not also make them? And did he not form us all in the same way in the womb?

If I have denied the poor what they desired; if I have caused the widow's eyes to fail;

If I have eaten my own morsels, and the orphan has not eaten any;

(For from my youth he was brought up with me, as [with his father], and from my mother's womb I led the orphan.)

If I have seen a man perish for lack of clothing, and the poor for lack of covering;

If his loins have not blessed me, and he has not been warmed by the wool of my lambs;

If I raised my hand against the orphan, when I saw at the door that I could help him;

May the bone in my shoulder fall out and may my arm be broken and separated from the bone to which it is joined!

For I was afraid of the storm of the [God] Mighty, and I could not [stand] before his majesty.

If I have put my hope in gold, and if I have said to fine gold: You are my trust;

If I rejoiced that my possessions were multiplied, and that my hand had found them abundantly;

If I have looked at the sun when it shone brightest, and the moon walking nobly;

And if my heart has been secretly seduced, and if my hand has kissed my mouth;

(This is also a fully judged iniquity; for I would have denied the God who is above.)

If I rejoiced at the misfortune of him who hated me; if I leaped for joy when harm came to him.

I did not even allow my tongue to sin, by calling for its death with an imprecation.

And the people of my house did not say, "Who will give us some of his flesh? We cannot be satisfied with it."

The stranger did not spend the night outside; I opened my door to the passerby.

If I have hidden my sin like Adam, to cover my iniquity by flattering myself.

Although I could inspire fear in a great multitude, nevertheless the least in families inspired fear in me, and I remained silent, and did not leave the door.

Oh, if only someone would hear me! My only desire is that the Almighty would answer me, and that my adversary would write [against me].

If I do not wear it on my shoulder, and if I do not fasten it like a crown.

I would tell him about every step I took, I would approach him as if he were a Prince.

If my land cries out against me, and if its furrows weep;

If I ate its fruit without money; if I tormented the spirit of those who possessed it.

Let her produce thorns for me instead of wheat, and tares instead of barley. This is the end of the words of Job.

Then these three men stopped answering Job, because he considered himself a righteous man.

And Elihu son of Barachel, the Buzite, of the family of Ram, was filled with anger against Job, because he was justifying himself more than he was justifying God.

His anger was also kindled against his three friends, because they had not found anything to answer, and yet they had condemned Job.

Now Elihu had waited until Job had spoken, because they were all older than he. But when Elihu saw that there was no answer from the mouths of these three men, he was consumed with anger.

Therefore Elihu son of Barachel Buzite spoke up and said: I am younger than you, and you are very old; therefore I was afraid and I was afraid to tell you my opinion. I said [to myself]; the days will speak, and the multitude of years will reveal wisdom.

The mind is indeed in man, but it is the inspiration of the Almighty that makes them intelligent.

The powerful are not always wise, and the elders do not always understand the law. That's why I say: Listen to me, and I'll give my opinion too.

Behold, I waited until you had spoken; I listened to all that you wished to say, until you had examined the speeches.

I have, I say, considered you well, and behold, there is not one of you who has convinced Job, and who has answered his words.

So that it does not happen to you to say: We have found wisdom; [knowing], that it is the Mighty [God] who pursues him, and not a man.

But since he did not tailor his speeches against me, I will not answer him according to your words.

They were astonished, they stopped responding, they were silenced.

And I waited until they said nothing more; for they remained silent, and they did not reply again;

I will therefore answer for myself and give my opinion.

Because I am heavy with talking, and the spirit with which I feel filled presses upon me.

Behold, my belly is like a wine vessel without air; and it would burst like new vessels.

I will speak, and I will set myself free; I will open my lips, and I will answer. God forbid that I should show favoritism, I will not use veiled words when speaking to a man.

For I do not know how to use veiled words; he who made me would take me away at once.

Therefore, Job, please listen to my speech, and pay attention to all my words.

Now, here I am, opening my mouth, my tongue speaking in my palate.

My words will correspond to the uprightness of my heart, and my lips will speak pure doctrine.

The spirit of the Mighty God made me, and the breath of the Almighty gave me life.

If you can, answer me, stand up against me, remain steadfast.

Behold, I am for the Mighty [God]; as you have spoken; I too was formed from the earth [just like you].

Behold, my fear will not trouble you, and my hand will not fall upon you.

In any case, you said, and I heard you, and I heard the voice of your words, [saying]:

I am pure, [and] without sin; I am clean, and there is no iniquity in me.

Behold, he has sought to break with me; he considers me his enemy.

He has put my feet to the vines, he spies on all my paths.

Behold, I tell you that in this you have not been just; for God will always be greater than man [mortal].

Why then did you plead against him? For he does not give an account of all his actions.

Although the Mighty God speaks once, and a second time to him who did not heed the first;

Through dreams, through visions of the night, when deep sleep falls upon men, and when they sleep in their beds;

Then he opens men's ears, and seals their punishment.

In order to turn man away from [evil] action, and to humble man's pride.
 [Thus] he secures his soul from the pit, and his life from the sword.
 The man is also punished with pains in his bed, and all his bones [are broken].
 So his life made him loathe bread, and his soul despised desirable meat.
 His flesh is so consumed that it is no longer visible; and his bones are so broken that nothing can be discerned about them.
 His soul is approaching the grave, and his life, the things that bring death.
 If there is a messenger for that man, who speaks on his behalf, (one among a thousand) who shows that man his duty,
 Then he will have pity on him, and will say: Protect him, so that he does not go down to the pit; I have found a way to atone.
 His flesh will become more delicate than it was in his childhood, and he will be rejuvenated.
 He will move God with his prayers, and God will be gracious to him, and will let him see his face with joy, and will grant him his justice.
 He will look at men and say: I had sinned, I had perverted justice, and it had not benefited me.
 [But God] has guaranteed my soul, so that it will not pass through the pit, and my life sees the light.
 Behold, the Mighty God does all these things, two and three times toward man;
 To raise his soul from the grave, so that it may be illuminated by the light of the living.
 Pay attention, Job, listen to me; be silent, and I will speak.
 And if you have something to say, answer me, speak; for I desire to vindicate you.
 Otherwise, listen to me, be silent, and I will teach you wisdom.
 Elihu then spoke again, and said:
 You wise men, listen to my words; you who have understanding, give ear to me.
 For the ear judges speeches, just as the palate savors what one eats.
 Let us choose [what we shall dispute as in] judgment, [then] we shall know among ourselves what is good.
 For Job said: I am righteous, and yet the Mighty One has rejected my right.
 Would I lie to my own justice? My arrow is deadly, without my having committed any crime.
